II. OBJECTIONS TO BANKBUPT'S DISCHARGE, 550.

III. HEARING AND PROOF, 553. IV. DETERMINATION, 555.

I. GENERALLY.

Congress may prescribe any regulations concerning discharges in bankruptcy that are not so grossly unreasonable as to be incompatible with the fundamental law. Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, (1902) 186 U. S. 181, 22 S. Ct. 857, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 1113, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Dresser, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 383, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Construction - Statute to be liberally construed. - The adjudged cases favor a liberal construction of section 14 in the matter of the discharge of honest bankrupts. Hardie v. Swafford Bros. Dry Goods Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 588, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457.

Statutory provisions regulating the condi-tions on which bankrupts may be discharged are remedial in their nature with respect to the bankrupts or to their creditors, or to both, and the strict rules of construction or interpretation appropriate to retroactive or retrospective laws are inapplicable to them. In re Scott, (D. C. Del. 1904) 126 Fed. 981, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 327.

Sections 14 and 17 should be construed together. Each hears upon a different subject; the one relating to the discharge, the other to the debts from which such discharge will relieve the debtor. The matters and things which will prevent a discharge in bankruptcy are different from those set out in the section which will not relieve from liability in case there is a discharge of the bankrupt. bankrupt may be discharged and still be held liable for the classes of debts mentioned in section 17 of the Act; and in seeking to hold a party liable, who has been discharged in bankruptcy, the ground for such liability must be found in section 17, and not in section 14, which enumerates the grounds upon which a discharge shall be refused. Katzenstein v. Reid, (Tex. 1905) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740. Construction with regard to purpose.—
The well-settled and uniformly recognized purpose of the bankruptcy law is to secure to the creditors of an insolvent person, coming within the terms of the act, a full and honest disclosure and an equitable distribution of his property, and, this being accomplished, to give to the honest debtor a full discharge. This twofold purpose should be kept in view in construing and enforcing the provisions of the statute. In re James, (E. D. N. C. 1910) 175 Fed. 894, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703.

The right to a discharge is determined by the good faith of the bankrupt; and the effect of a discharge is to be determined in accordance with a proper recognition of his civil liability for the acts of partners and other agents. Frank v. Michigan Paper Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 261.

Governed by law at time of filing petition.

—A bankrupt's right to a discharge is governed by the law as it stood at the time he filed his petition. Matter of Petersen, (D. C.

Minn. 1903) 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355.

Moral turpitude involved.—It is noticeable that, of the six reasons for refusing a discharge, recited in section 14b, all except the last two (which stand by themselves on a ground that affects the administration of the law) imply moral turpitude on the part of the bankrupt. Klein v. Powell, (C. C. A 3d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 640, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 494.

II. OBJECTIONS TO BANKBUPT'S DISCHARGE.

Who may object to granting of discharge.

— Under section 14b, an objection to the granting of a discharge must be made by "the trustees or other parties in interest." This includes creditors. In re Frice, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 96 Fed. 611, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 674; In re Maples, (D. C. Mont. 1901) 105 Fed. 919, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426; In re Brown, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 49 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252; In re Levey, (N. D. N. Y. 1904) 133 Fed. 572, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 312; In re Conroy, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 134 Fed. 764, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249; In re Chandler, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 637, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 512; In re Servis, (N. D. Ia. 1905) 140 Fed. 222, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 271; In re Harr, (E. D. Mo. 1906) 143 Fed. 421, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213; In re Hendrick, (D. C. Conn. 1906) 143 Fed. 647, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218; In re Carton, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 148 Fed. 63, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 343; In re Nathanson, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 645, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56; Talcott v. Friend, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1909) 179 Fed. 676; In re Westbrook, (N. D. Ala. 1911) 186 Fed. 414.

Need not prove claim in order to object to discharge.— A creditor of a bankrupt having a claim, dischargeable in bankruptcy and provable in the pending proceeding, may oppose the bankrupt's discharge, though the claim is not proved. In re Nathanson, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 645, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56. See also In re Conroy, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 134 Fed. 764, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249.

One who has a suit pending against a bankrupt for the recovery of a debt, which is contested, is a party in interest, and entitled to contest the bankrupt's right to a discharge. In re Conroy, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 134 Fed. 764, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249.

Creditor barred by limitation.— The fact that a creditor's claim is barred by limitation at the time he files objections to the bankrupt's discharge does not deprive him of a subsisting cause of action so as to bar his right to object. In re Westbrook, (N. D.

Ala. 1911) 186 Fed. 414.

Objection in behalf of dissolved partnership. — Where a partnership, which had proved a claim against a bankrupt estate, was dissolved pending the proceedings, without any disposition of the claim being made as between the partners, it was held that in order to maintain objections to the bankrupt's discharge it was necessary to show affirmatively that all of the partners assented. In re Hendrick, (D. C. Conn. 1906) 143 Fed. 647, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218.

Debts not provable in, or unaffected by, bankruptcy. — If a creditor of a bankrupt, cpposing his discharge, has a debt not provable, or which the discharge would not affect, the bankrupt's remedy is by a motion to expunge the claim or strike out the specifications. In re Nathanson, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 645, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56.

Effect of failure to object to allowance of claim. — The bankrupt has an equitable right to insist that objection shall be made to illegal claims, and his failure to exercise such right by requesting the trustee to make such objection estops him to deny the standing of a creditor, whose claim is allowed without objection, to file objections to his discharge. In re Carton, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 148 Fed. 63, 17

Am. Bankr. Rep. 343.

Specification of objections - General requisites. — The specification of objections to a discharge is in the nature of a pleading, and the allegations thereof must be distinct, specific, and definite, and set forth with almost the exactness of an indictment, particularly where the offense charged is one included in section 29, so that the bankrupt may be advised of the acts charged, which bring him within the inhibition of the statute, so far as it relates to his discharge. In re Holman, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 92 Fed. 512, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600; In re Thomas, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 92 Fed. 912, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515; In re Hixon, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 93 Fed. 440, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610: In re Idzall, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 96 Fed. 314, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 741; In re Hirsch, (W. D. Tenn. 1899) 96 Fed. 468, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Rhutassel, (N. D. Ia. 1899) 96 Fed. 597, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697; In re Kaiser, (D. C. Minn. 1899) 99 Fed. 689, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 767; In re Wetmore, (E. D. Pa. 1900) 99 Fed. 703, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; In re Peacock, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 101 Fed. 560, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136; In re Quackenbush. (N. D. N. Y. 1900) 102 Fed. 282, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 274; In re McGurn, (D. C. Nev. 1900) 102 Fed. 743, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459; In re Pierce, (D. C. Wash. 1900) 102 Fed. 977, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 489; In re Pierce, (N. D. N. Y. 1900) 103 Fed. 64; In re

Mudd, (W. D. Mo. 1900) 105 Fed. 348, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242; Bragassa v. St. Louis Cycle, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 77, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700; In re Steed, (E. D. N. C. 1901) 107 Fed. 682, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73; In re Brown, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 49, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252; In re Beebe, (E. D. Pa. 1902) 116 Fed. 48, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 597; In re Crist, (S. D. Ala. 1902) 116 Fed. 1007, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Blalock, (D. C. S. C. 1902) 118 Fed. 679, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266; In re Peck, (D. C. Conn. 1903), 120 Fed. 972, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747; In re Patterson, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 121 Fed. 921, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371; In re Parish, (N. D. Ia. 1903) 122 Fed. 553, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548; In re Milgraum, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 129 Fed. 827, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306; In re Ginsburg, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 130 Fed. 627, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459; In re Levey, (N. D. N. Y. 1904) 133 Fed. 572, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317; In re Taplin, (N. D. Ia. 1905) 135 Fed. 861, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360; In re Chandler, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 637, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 512; In re Servis, (N. D. Ia. 1905) 140 Fed. 222, Am. Bankr. Rep. 271; Troeder v. Lorsch, Must show objector to be party in interest. - Where the specification fails to show that the party making the same is a party in interest who will be affected by the discharge, but affirmatively shows that he will not be, the court itself may take notice of this, although the specification is not excepted to; for opposition to a discharge will not be heard or determined at the instance of one who does not show in his specification that he is a party in interest, and therefore entitled to oppose the same. In re Servis, (N. D. Ia. 1905) 140 Fed. 222, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 271.

An objection to a bankrupt's discharge, reciting that the objector "being interested as a creditor in the estate of [the bankrupt], does hereby oppose," etc., sufficiently shows that petitioner is "a party interested" in the bankrupt's estate. In ro Nathanson, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 645, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56.

Statutory language insufficient. - So-called specifications of objection to the discharge of a bankrupt which merely state the grounds for refusing a discharge, in the language of the statute, without any attempt to specify any particular act of the bankrupt, are, as a general rule, wholly insufficient, and no evidence can be received thereunder, nor do they afford any basis for amendment. In re Peck, (D. C. Conn. 1903) 120 Fed. 972, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747. See also In re Hirsch, (W. D. Tenn. 1899) 96 Fed. 468, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Wetmore, (E. D. Pa. 1900)

99 Fed. 703, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; In re Levey, (N. D. N. Y. 1904) 133 Fed. 572, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317; Remmers v. Mer-chants'-Laclede Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 173 Fed. 484, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78. And see generally the annotation of each statutory objection under subdivisions (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), and (6) of this (14b) subsection, infra, pp. 557-568.

Duplicity.—A charge that the bankrupt made a false oath in the proceeding, and that he has concealed assets from the trustee, is objectionable as including two grounds in one specification. Matter of Wetmore, (W. D. N. Y. 1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703.

Several creditors may join in same specification. - Where several creditors of a bankrupt desire to urge the same objections to the bankrupt's discharge, they are not required to sign separate specifications of objection, but are entitled to join in the same specification. In re Milgraum, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 129 Fed. 827, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306.

Proceeding on specification abandoned by another creditor. - One creditor of a bankrupt may adopt and prosecute the objections filed by another to the bankrupt's discharge, when the latter has declared his intention to abandon the same. In re Guilbert, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 154 Fed. 676, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 830; Matter of Wetmore, (W. D. N. Y. 1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703.

A slaim by a creditor, whose objections to a discharge are held to be insufficient, of the right to proceed under objections filed on behalf of another creditor, who did not appear on the hearing, should be passed upon by the district judge, and not the referee. Matter of Wetmore, (W. D. N. Y. 1901) 6 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 703.

Must allege statutory objection. — It is incumbent on a creditor, opposing a bankrupt's discharge, to allege in his specification of objections at least one of the statutory grounds for withholding the discharge; objections not specified in the act being unavailable. In re Griffin, (S. D. Ala. 1907) 154 Fed. 537, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78; In re Taylor, (N. D. Ala. 1911) 188 Fed. 479; Matter of Wetmore, (W. D. N. Y. 1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703. The grounds of refusing a discharge in bankruptcy are statutory and limited, and do not cover general dishonesty or unfair and sharp dealing with creditors, or oral mis-representations made in obtaining property on credit, or even false oaths, unless they relate to matters material to the bankruptcy proceedings. In re Chamberlain, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 180 Fed. 304.

That a bankruptcy petition was filed to defeat the claims of a judgment of an objecting creditor against the bankrupt is no ground for denying a discharge. In re Taylor, (N. D. Ala. 1911) 188 Fed. 479.

The omission of creditors from the schedule of a bankrupt is not ground for refusing his discharge. In re Blalock, (D. C. S. C. 1902) 118 Fed. 679, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266.

Larceny. - A creditor cannot procure the denial of the bankrupt's discharge because of the alleged offense of larceny, or larceny as bailee, committed by the bankrupt against the objecting creditor more than a year before the petition was filed. In re Wolf, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 159 Fed. 299, 20 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 304.

Owing nondischargeable debts. — It is no ground for refusing a bankrupt's application for discharge that the creditor objecting thereto holds a judgment against him for wilful and malicious injury to property, or a claim founded upon the fraud of the bankrupt for his misfeasance as a fiduciary. Such debts will not be affected by the discharge when granted, but they do not defeat the bankrupt's right to be discharged. In re Carmichael, (N. D. Ia. 1899) 96 Fed. 594, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815. Verification.— The authorities are practically unanimous to the effect that specifications of objection to the discharge of a bankrupt are pleadings, and should be verified as required by section 18c of the Bankruptcy Act; but the failure so to verify them is amendable. In re Brown, (5th Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 49, 50 C. C. A. 118; In re Baerheopf, (E. D. Pa. 1902) 117 Fed. 975, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 133; In re Glass, (W. D. Tenn. 1902) 119 Fed. 520; In re Peck, (D. C. Conn. 1903) 120 Fed. 972, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747; In re Robinson, (D. C. R. I. 1903) 123 Fed. 844, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477; E. H. Godshalk Co. v. Sterling, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 580, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; In re Milgraum, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 129 Fed. 827, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306; In re Gift, (M. D. Pa. 1904) 130 Fed. 230, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244; In re Meurer, (E. D. Pa. 1906) 144 Fed. 445, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 823; In re Nathanson, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 645, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56; In re Randall, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 159 Fed. 298, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305.

But it has been held that a specification of objections to the discharge of a bankrupt is not a pleading within the meaning of section 18c, and that such specification need not be verified. In re Jamieson, (N. D. III. 1903) 120 Fed. 697, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681.

Who should verify. - Specifications of objection to a bankrupt's discharge should be verified by the objecting creditors, and not by his counsel, unless some reason is given why the oath is not taken by the creditor. In re Randall, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 159 Fed. 298, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305. See also In re Baerncopf, (E. D. Pa. 1902) 117 Fed. 975, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 133; In re Milgraum, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 129 Fed. 827, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306.

Sufficient verification. - Affidavits to speci-'fications of objection to a bankrupt's discharge, sworn to "to the best of affiant's knowledge, information, and belief," are sufficiently verified. In re Milgraum, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 129 Fed. 827, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306.

Special master may allow amendment. A special master, to whom was referred a bankrupt's application for discharge, has power to permit the amendment of specifications of objection filed in behalf of a number of creditors, but signed and verified only by an agent of one, by allowing the same to be signed and verified by one of the other creditors. In re Hanna, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 238, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 843.

Waiver of objection to perification.—Where no objection to the want of verification of a petition for a bankrupt's discharge was made until after the evidence on the application was heard before the referee, it was held that it was too late. In re Taylor, (N. D. Ala.

Time to file specifications. - The time for filing objections to a bankrupt's discharge is governed by rule 32 of the general orders in bankruptcy, which provides that "a creditor opposing the application of a bankrupt for his discharge . . . shall enter his appearance in opposition thereto on the day when the creditors are required to show cause, and shall file a specification in writing of the grounds of his opposition within ten days thereafter, unless the time shall be enlarged by special order of the judge." In re Frice, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 96 Fed. 611, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 674; In re Albrecht, (E. D. Pa. 1909) 104 Fed. 974, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 223; In re Clothier, (E. D. Pa. 1901) 108 Fed. 199, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 203; In re Ginsburg, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 130 Fed. 627, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459; In re Grant, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 889, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 398; In re Nathanson, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 152 Fed. 585, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252, and see to the same effect under a former statute In re Grefe, (S. D. N. Y. 1868) 2 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 329, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,794; In re Levin, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1910) 176 Fed. 177, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Extension of time. — The judge may, in his discretion, extend the time for entering an appearance as well as for filing the specification; and may do so after the time has expired, as well as before. In re Levin, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1910) 176 Fed. 177, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 845.

But a creditor has no right to enter an appearance after return day, and should not be allowed to do so, except for good cause shown in excuse of the delay. In re Ginsburg, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 130 Fed. 627, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459; In re Grant, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 889, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 398.

Amendment. — The specification of objections to the granting of a discharge may be amended with the same liberality as is allowed in the case of other pleadings in bank-ruptcy proceedings. In re Hixon, (S. D. Is. 1899) 93 Fed. 440, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610; In re Morgan, (W. D. Ark. 1900) 101 Fed. 982, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 402; In re Quacken-bush, (N. D. N. Y. 1900) 102 Fed. 282, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 274; In re Pierce, (N. D. N. Y. 1900) 103 Fed. 64, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 554; In re Mudd, (W. D. Mo. 1900) 105 Fed. 348, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242; In re Eaton, (N. D. N. Y. 1901) 110 Fed. 731, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531; In re Osborne, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1902)
115 Fed. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; In re
Carley, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1902) 117 Fed. 130,
8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720; In re Glass, (W. D. Tenn. 1902) 119 Fed. 509, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 391; In re Peck, (D. C. Conn. 1903) 120 Fed. 972, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747; Kentucky Nat. Bank v. Carley, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1963) 121 Fed. 822, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 375; In re Gift, (M. D. Pa. 1994) 139 Fed. 230, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244; In re Hendrick, (D. C. Conn. 1905) 138 Fed. 473, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 795; In re Knaszak, (W. D. N. Y. 1967) 151 Fed. 503, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187; In re Nathanson, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 152 Fed. 585, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56; In re Wittenberg, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 160 Fed. 991, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 398; In re Gross, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 271.

Thus it has been held that where specifications of objection to a bankrupt's discharge. alleging perjury by the bankrupt in his examination before the referee, are not suffi-ciently definite, they will not be wholly disregarded, but the creditor may be given an opportunity to cure the defect by amendment. In re Nathanson, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 645, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56; In re Wittenberg, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 160 Fed. 991, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 399.

So also it has been held that an opposing ereditor may amend his specifications of objection to a bankrupt's discharge, by supplying allegations that the acts relied upon were knowingly and fraudulently committed by the bankrupt, at any time before the evidence is closed. In re Knaszak, (W. D. N. Y. 1907) 151 Fed. 503, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187.

It has also been held that, under certain circumstances, the specifications may be amended to conform to the proofs. In re Lesser, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 108 Fed. 205; In re Knaszak, (W. D. N. Y. 1907) 151 Fed. 508, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187. See also In re Pierce, (N. D. N. Y. 1900) 103 Fed. 64.

And that specifications opposing a bankrupt's discharge, though entirely defective, may be amended at the discretion of the court. In re Glass, (W. D. Tenn. 1902) 119

Fed. 509, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 391.

Who may allow amendment. — Leave to amend the specifications, filed in opposition to the discharge of a bankrupt, can only be granted by the judge. In re Peck, (D. C. Conn. 1903) 120 Fed. 972, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Must be something to amend. - It has been held that specifications of objection to the discharge of a bankrupt which are in the language of the statute without more, and contain no statement of facts, are not amendable. In re Pierce, (N. D. N. Y. 1900) 103 Fed. 64; In ro Mudd, (W. D. Mo. 1900) 105 Fed. 348; In ro Peck, (D. C. Conn. 1903) 120 Fed. 972; In re Bromley, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 152 Fed. 493, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 227.

A new issue cannot be presented by amendment. - Objections to the application of a bankrupt for a discharge cannot be amended so as to present a new issue, after the evidence is in and the objections have been overruled. In re Pierce, (N. D. N. Y. 1900) 103 Fed. 64.

Time of allowance. - The court undoubtedly has the right to amend the specifications at any stage of the case. In re Knaszak, (W. D. N. Y. 1907) 151 Fed. 503, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187.

Rule 32 in bankruptcy does not operate as a statute of limitations to prevent the court, in its discretion, from permitting creditors to file amended specifications of objection to a bankrupt's discharge after the expiration of ten days. In re Nathanson, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 152 Fed. 585, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56.

But it has been held that an amendment of objections to the discharge of a bankrupt in matters of substance is only allowable, after the time within which objections are required to be filed, where the amendment is no more than an amplification, by the supplying of details, of charges which are substantially stated in the original. In re Gift, (M. D. Pa. 1904) 130 Fed. 230, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Waiver of defects in specification. — It has been held in several cases that the right to take advantage of a defective specification of objections may be waived by the failure to take prompt exception thereto. In re Osborne, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; In re Baerncopf, (E. D. Pa. 1992) 117 Fed. 875, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 133; In re Baldwin, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 119 Fed. 796, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591; In re Robinson, (D. C. R. I. 1903) 123 Fed. 844, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477; E. H. Godshalk Co. v. Sterling, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 580, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302.

Total failure to state ground of objection not cured by waiver. - But where specifications of objection to the discharge of a bankrupt wholly fail to state any statutory ground for the refusal of a discharge, their insufficiency is not waived by the bankrupt by failing to except thereto, and they may be disregarded. In re McCarthy, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 170 Fed. 859, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 499

Answering specifications of objection. The bankrupt may answer, or plead otherwise in resistance of the specification of objections; but he is not obliged to do so. In re Logan, (D. C. Ky. 1900) 102 Fed. 876, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525; In re Crist, (S. D. Ala. 1902) 116 Fed. 1007, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Hendrick, (D. C. Conn. 1905) 138 Fed. 473, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 795.

The bankrupt's failure to answer, or plead to specifications of objection to the granting of a discharge, is not an admission of their legal sufficiency; nor does it preclude the bankrupt from relying on the fact that the proof thereunder is insufficient to prevent his discharge. In re Crist, (S. D. Ala. 1902) 116

Fed. 1007, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

Prosecution of objection in forma pauperis. -A creditor who objects to the discharge of a bankrupt may prosecute his objections in forma pauperis by virtue of the Act of July 20, 1892, c. 209, 27 Stat. L. 252, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 294, which gives any citizen entitled to commence "any suit or action in any court of the United States" such right on making the required showing. In re Guilbert, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 154 Fed. 676, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 830.

III. HEARING AND PROOF.

Necessity of hearing. — A motion for a bankrupt's discharge cannot be granted until specifications of objection have been disposed of. In re Randall, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 159 Fed. 298, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305.

Hearing must be had before judge. — An application for a discharge in bankruptcy, with such briefs and pleas as may be made in opposition thereto, must be heard and determined by the judge of the court of bankruptcy. The decision of the question whether or not a discharge shall be granted cannot be delegated to a referee. In re McDuff, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 241, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 110; In re Baldwin, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 119 Fed. 796, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591; In re Goodhile, (N. D. Ia. 1904) 130 Fed. 782, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 380; In re Randall, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 159 Fed. 298, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305.

It is an irregularity for a referee to take testimony on an application for discharge against which an objection has been filed, before returning the same to the court; but where both parties appear, so that no prejudice can result, testimony so taken will not be stricken out. In re Goodhile, (N. D. Ia. 1904) 130 Fed. 782, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 380. See also In re Polakoff (N. D. N. Y. 1899) 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358.

In the northern district of New York, it is settled practice to require all objections to the sufficiency of specifications of objection to the discharge of a bankrupt, to be raised before the judge on motion, within a specified time. In re Baldwin, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 119

Fed. 796, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591.

Reference to special master. — As the District Court is invested with jurisdiction, under section 2, both at law and in equity, to enable it to exercise original jurisdiction in bankruptcy proceedings, such court has power to order a reference of an issue made by creditors by filing objections to a bankrupt's petition for discharge; and, in such cases, the court may avail itself of preliminary assistance by the appointment of a special master to hear and report on the facts, as in other proceedings in equity; and this course is usually pursued. In re Kaiser, (D. C. Minn. 1899) 99 Fed. 689, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 767; In re McDuff, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 241, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 110; Fellows v. Freudenthal, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 731, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 490; In re Steed, (E. D. N. C. 1901) 107 Fed. 682, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73; In re Knaszak, (W. D. N. Y. 1907) 151 Fed. 503, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187; In re Eldred, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 152 Fed. 491, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243; In re McKane, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 674, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 103; In re Murray, (D. C. Conn. 1908) 162 Fed. 983, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700; In re Gillardon, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 187 Fed. 289: In re Rauchenplat, (D. C. Porto Rico 1903) 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 763.

Under rule 41 in the eastern district of New York, it is the duty of objecting creditors to see that the objections to a bankrupt's application for discharge are referred to a special master, and to arrange for the hearing thereon. In re Eldred, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 152 Fed. 491, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243.

It is the duty of a special master to whom have been referred a bankrupt's petition for discharge and specifications of objection thereto, to take and report all the testimony offered, with his rulings as to its admissibility. In re Knaszak, (W. D. N. Y. 1907) 151 Fed. 503, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187.

A finding by a special commissioner, to whom were referred a bankrupt's application for discharge, and objections thereto, should be followed; unless there is no evidence to support it. In re McKane, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 674, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 103.

Bankrupt must attend hearing.—The bankrupt's attendance on the hearing of objections to his application for a discharge, if demanded by the creditors, cannot be dispensed with by the referee, under the requirements of section 7a (1). In re Shanker, (M. D. Pa. 1905) 138 Fed. 862, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 109.

Specifications of objection must be proved. — The opposition to a discharge is in the nature of a new suit, and requires proof in support of the allegations presented. The burden of proof is on the opposing creditors, and they must satisfy the conscience of the court that the grounds of objection urged are true, and that the bankrupt is not entitled to a discharge, because of having committed some one of the offenses specified in the several subdivisions of section 14b. Bluthen-thal v. Jones, (1908) 208 U. S. 64, 28 S. Ct. 192, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 390, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 288; In re Idzall, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 96 Fed. 314, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 741; In re Phillips, (S. D. N. Ky. 1908) 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251.

Clear, positive, and direct proof required.

The burden of proof is upon an opposing creditor to establish the ground for refusing a discharge by clear, positive, and direct evidence. In re Chamberlain, (W. D. N. Y. 1903) 125 Fed. 629, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 95.

Evidence must be clear and convincing .-On an application for a bankrupt's discharge, the burden of proof is on the opposing creditors to establish the truth of the objections set out in the specification, by clear and convincing evidence. In re Hamilton, (W. D. N. Y. 1904) 133 Fed. 823, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 333; Garry v. Jefferson Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 461.

Evidence to satisfy conscience of court sufficient. — The strict rules applicable to the trial of the bankrupt under an indict-ment should not be applied in the case of discharge proceedings. It is sufficient ground for refusing a discharge, if the conscience of the court is satisfied by proper and sufficient evidence that the bankrupt is not entitled to receive it. In re Gross, (S. D. N. Y. 1901)

5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 271.

Proof need not preclude reasonable doubt. - A creditor objecting to the discharge of a bankrupt is not bound to prove his specifica-tions beyond a reasonable doubt. In re Greenberg, (D. C. Conn. 1902) 114 Fed. 773, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94.

Suspicion of fraud insufficient. - The burden of proof rests upon the creditor, and while the acts charged may be established by inference from the facts proved, it is not sufficient that such facts justify a suspicion of fraud, but they must be inconsistent with honesty and good faith. In re Kolster, (D. C. Nev. 1906) 146 Fed. 138, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52.

Where question of law is presented. — Though generally the burden is on the creditor to sustain his opposition to the bankrupt's discharge, that rule does not apply where the question presented is one of law, e. g., the construction of a statute, and not one of fact. In re Gilpin, (E. D. Pa. 1908)

160 Fed. 171, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 374. Evidence. — The ordinary rules of evidence are applicable in a contest of the bankrupt's right to be discharged. Garry v. Jefferson Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 461.

Testimony given by the bankrupt, under section 7a (9), may be used to defeat his application for discharge. In re Leslie, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 119 Fed. 406, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 561; In re Goodhile, (N. D. Ia. 1904) 130 Fed. 782, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 380. See also

In re Bard, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 108 Fed. 208; In re Wilcox, (2d Cir. 1900) 109 Fed. 628, 48 C. C. A. 567; Shaffer v. Koblegard Co., (C.
C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 71.

But the testimony of third persons, given under section 21a before the referee, is not directed to a defined issue, and is inadmissible on a subsequent hearing of specifications against the bankrupt's application for discharge. In re Wilcox, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1900) 109 Fed. 628, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362; In re Goodhile, (N. D. Ia. 1904) 130 Fed.

782, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 380.

Testimony given at other hearings must be duly proved. - It has been held that a referee, acting as a special master on a hearing in proceedings for a discharge, must confine himself to the evidence produced before him as such special master; and that he cannot, in the determination of such hearing, base his findings upon testimony given before him as a referee. In re Hendrick, (D. C. Conn. 1905) 138 Fed. 473, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 795; In re Walder, (D. C. Conn. 1907) 152 Fed. 489, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; In re Murray, (D. C. Conn. 1908) 162 Fed. 983, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700.

IV. DETERMINATION.

When discharge should be granted. — It has been held that it is the duty of the court to grant a bankrupt his discharge, unless the commission of one of the acts specified in the several subdivisions of section 14b has been committed by him, and such commission has been duly proved. Bluthenthal v. Jones, (1908) 208 U. S. 64, 28 S. Ct. 192, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 390, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 288; In re Marshall Paper Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 872, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 468; In re Eades, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 143 Fed. 293, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30; In re Wolf, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 159 Fed. 299, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 304; In re James, (E. D. N. C. 1910) 175 Fed. 894, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703.

Discharge not discretionary. - The refusal to grant a discharge does not rest in the discretion of the judge, but the applicant is entitled to a discharge as a matter of right, unless he is found guilty of some one of the prescribed offenses. In re Marshall Paper Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 872, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 468; In re James, (E. D. N. C. 1910) 175 Fed. 894, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703.

The fact that a bankrupt is a nonresident of the district does not affect his right to a discharge. In re Goodale, (N. D. N. Y. 1901) 109 Fed. 783, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 493. See also In re Clisdell, (N. D. N. Y. 1900) 101 Fed. 246, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 95.

Only such grounds as are specified by the objecting creditors will be considered in opposition to the discharge of a bankrupt. In re Adams, (N. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 72, 4

Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

But it has been held that the judge is not confined to the consideration of those objections which are set forth by the creditors, and that he should investigate the merits of the application. In re Marshall Paper Co.,

(D. C. Mass. 1899) 95 Fed. 419, 2 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 653.

The court is not required to grant a discharge to a bankrupt, knowing at the time that facts exist which would render such discharge revocable for fraud had they first come to light after it was granted, although no cause for refusing it is shown under section 14b. In re Luftig, (D. C. Mass. 1905) 162 Fed. 322, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773.

The Bankruptcy Act is liberal in its provisions for a discharge of the bankrupt from his debts, and that spirit must be observed and carried out in the consideration of objections thereto. If it plainly appears, however, that the applicant has intentionally and substantially violated the Act, in either of the particulars stated in section 14b, the duty of the court is equally clear to deny the benefits of a discharge. In re McBachron, (E. D. Wis. 1902) 116 Fed. 783, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732.

Dismissal of petition for discharge because of failure to prosecute. - Where a bankrupt filed a petition for discharge, but took no further steps in the matter for a year thereafter, it was held that he was chargeable with an abuse of the proceedings for the purpose of delaying creditors; and that, proper application by a creditor, his petition for discharge should be dismissed. In re Lederer, (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 125 Fed. 96, 10

Am. Bankr. Rep. 492.

The specification of objections may be disregarded where the objector does not appear on the hearing of the application for a discharge. In re Chase, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 186

Fed. 408.

So, also, it has been held that it is the duty of objecting creditors to bring the matter on for hearing; otherwise the court is warranted in dismissing the specifications. In re Fritz, (E. D. N. Y. 1909) 173 Fed. 560,

23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84.

But see In re Wolff, (N. D. Cal. 1904) 132 Fed. 396, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 95, wherein it was held that a court of bankruptcy is not authorized to dismiss a bankrupt's petition for discharge, filed in due time, because of delay in bringing the matter to a hearing after specifications of objection have been filed.

Withholding decision. - A claimant holding a lien against garnishees indebted to a bankrupt is entitled to a stay of the bankrupt's discharge for a reasonable time to enable such claimant to enforce his rights against the garnishees, and the sureties on a bond to dissolve the garnishment. In re Maher, (N. D. Ga. 1909) 169 Fed. 997, 22

Am. Bankr. Rep. 290.

Stay to determine rights. - Where creditors of a bankrupt hold obligations containing a waiver of the right of exemption, the bankruptcy proceedings may be stayed until the rights of such creditors have been determined in a state court. In re Allen, (W. D. Va. 1904) 134 Fed. 320, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518. And see to the same effect Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, (1903) 190 U. S. 294, 23 S. Ct. 751, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1061, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107; B. F. Roden Grocery Co. v. Bacon,

(C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 515, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; In re Castleberry, (N. D. Ga. 1905) 143 Fed. 1018, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159; In re Olansky, (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 163 Fed. 428, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780.

And where it was contended that a bankrupt was not entitled to retain property claimed as against a judgment for breach of a marriage promise, and the only way in which the judgment creditor could test the question was by proceedings in the state courts, it was held that the bankrupt's discharge should be withheld until the judgment creditor was afforded a reasonable oppor-tunity to test her rights. In re Brumbaugh, (D. C. Pa. 1904) 128 Fed. 971, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204.

So, also, it has been held that where there seems to be probable cause for opposition to the petitioner's discharge in bankruptcy, on the ground that his petition did not contain a full, true, and correct statement of assets or financial condition, a discharge will be refused until the charge can be regularly investigated, and the record submitted to a proper tribunal, where he may be tried and punished if guilty as the Act prescribes. In re Steed, (E. D. N. C. 1901) 107 Fed. 682,

6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73.

A court of bankruptcy will not stay its decision upon a bankrupt's application for discharge, to await the result of a pending action in a state court, where the issues are not identical, and the decree of the state court would not determine the right of the bankrupt to be discharged. In re Cornell, (S. D.

N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 29.

A motion to withhold the bankrupt's discharge, in order that a creditor may pursue a remedy for the collection of a judgment lien in the state court, will be denied where it appears that the discharge cannot, under the law of the state, affect the rights of such judgment creditor with respect to the collection of his lien. In re Hartsell, (N. D. Ala. 1905) 140 Fed. 30, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 177; In re Weaver, (N. D. Ga. 1904) 144 Fed. 229, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265.

The purpose of the penalties of the bankruptcy statute is to prevent bankrupts from concealing their property and defrauding their creditors. Ordinary questions of contumacy or contempt of court can be disposed of directly, and of themselves are not to be corrected by the withholding of a discharge. In re Fanning, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 701, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

Amendment of discharge. — A court of bankruptcy has power, after the term at which a discharge has been granted, to amend the same; and also to permit the amendment of the application for discharge, when necessary, to set out correctly and more specifically the character of the debts scheduled and provable, and upon which the discharge operated. In re Kaufman. (E. D. N. Y. 1905) 136 Fed. 262, 14 Am. Bankt. Rep. 393.

Res judicata. — An adjudication refusing a discharge in bankruptcy finally determines for all time and in all courts, as between those parties or privies to it, the facts upon which the refusal was based. Bluthenthal v. Jones,

But where the subsequent proceeding is in a different district, a creditor who claims immunity therefrom because of a former proceeding must plead such former proceeding. Bluthenthal v. Jones, (1907) 208 U. S. 64, 28 S. Ct. 192, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 390, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 288.

Refusal to grant discharge as affecting subsequent bankruptcy proceedings. - A bankrupt who has been refused a discharge is not debarred from filing a second petition and obtaining a discharge thereunder; and such discharge, when granted, will be made general, leaving its effect as to debts proved under the first petition, but not under the second, to be determined whenever the occasion may arise. In re Claff, (D. C. Mass. 1901) 111 Fed. 506, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128.

Court may limit discharge in second proceeding. — Where a bankrupt is not entitled to a discharge as to certain debts scheduled in a former proceeding, the court has power to limit a subsequent discharge so as to exclude such claims. In re Westbrook, (N. D.

Ala. 1911) 186 Fed. 414.

The denial of the application of a bankrupt for a discharge renders the issue as to his right to a discharge res judicata as to debts which were provable in that proceeding; and where in a subsequent voluntary proceeding the bankrupt schedules the same debts and the same assets, the second proceeding is a manifest attempt to evade the effect of the former, and the bankrupt should be restrained by the court from prosecuting a second application for a discharge; but where a considerable time has elapsed and new debts are also scheduled, the bankrupt has the right to maintain the proceeding as to those, and an order granting a stay should be limited accordingly. In re Kuffler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 151 Fed. 12, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 16, reversing (E. D. N. Y. 1906) 144 Fed. 445, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305. See also In re Kuffler, (E. D. N. Costs. — The power to award costs against a creditor who files specifications of objection in opposition to a bankrupt's discharge is inherent in a District Court as a court of equity, and may be exercised in proper cases, equity, and may be exercised in proper cases, although such power is not specifically conferred by the Bankruptcy Act. See Bragassa v. St. Louis Cycle, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 77, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700; In re. Guilbert, (E. D. Pa. 1997) 154 Fed. 676, 18

(1) [Commission of offense.] committed an offense punishable by imprisonment as herein provided; or [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 550.]

Commission of offense. — Under section 14b. (1) the bankrupt must be denied a discharge where it has been proven that he has committed an offense punishable by imprisonment as provided by the bankruptcy statute. The offenses to which the Act refers are those specified in the several subdivisions of section 29 and have been considered generally there-

Making false oath. - A bankrupt who has made a false oath or account in, or in relation to, any bankruptcy proceedings will be denied a discharge; the making of such oath being an offense set out in section 29b (2). In re Becker, (N. D. N. Y. 1901) 106 Fed. 54, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438; In re Steed, (E. D. N. C. 1901) 107 Fed. 682, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73: In re Royal. (E. D. N. C. 1901) 112 Fed. 135, 7 Am. Bankr. A bankrupt who has intentionally testified falsely respecting a material fact, at the first meeting of creditors, is not entitled to a discharge, even though he could not be convicted of perjury because of the provisions of section 7a (9). In re Gaylord, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 668, 7 Am. Bankr.

Subsequent correction ineffective. — Where a bankrupt knowingly omitted certain assets from his schedules, the fact that he listed the property and amended his schedules after his attempt to conceal such assets, and after the fact that he had made a false oath, had been discovered, is insufficient to relieve him of the consequences of his acts and entitle him to a discharge. In re Breiner, (N. D. Ia. 1904) 129 Fed. 155, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 684.

False oath in another proceeding. — The making of a false oath by a bankrupt in a proceeding in bankruptcy, not against him, but against the corporation of which he was an officer and stockholder, is not ground for refusing his discharge. In re Blalock, (D. C. S. C. 1902) 118 Fed. 679, 9 Am. Bankr.

Offense must be knowingly and fraudu-leatly committed. — In order to render the commission of an offense, as provided by section 29, available as an objection to the granting of a discharge, under section 14b (1), it must be alleged and proved that such offense was committed knowingly and fraudulently. Thus it has been held that while certain interests in the estate of the bankrupt's father should have been included in the schedule of assets, it does not necessarily follow that the bankrupt knowingly and fraudulently made a false oath when he verified the schedule and did not mention them. In re McCrea, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 246, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412. The fact that a bankrupt, after the filing of the petition against him, procured the buying up of a creditor's claim, and furnished the money therefor, with intent to defeat the Bankruptcy Act, is not ground for refusing his discharge, where it is not shown that the creditor knew that the bankrupt furnished the money, so as to render him guilty of an offense under section 29b (4). In re Luftig, (D. C. Mass. 1905) 162 Fed. 322, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773.

Where a bankrupt firm did not anticipate any reversion in certain lumber which it transferred to a creditor, and one of the partners testified that the firm was morally certain that the creditor would not realize near the amount of the firm's debt, it was held that such partner's oath to the schedules, omitting such reversionary interest, was insufficient to bar his discharge. In re Hamilton, (W. D. N. Y. 1904) 133 Fed. 823, 13

Am. Bankr. kep. 333.

And where a proposed voluntary bankrupt, who had no property except such as was exempt, borrowed fifty dollars wherewith to pay the fees and costs of his attorney, just be-fore filing his petition, it was held that he was not required to list the amount so borrowed in his schedule of assets, and his omission to do so was not a sufficient ground of opposition to his discharge. Sellers v. Bell, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 94 Fed. 801, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529.

Specifications of objection to the discharge of a bankrupt, where they attempt to charge the commission of a crime, must state the facts constituting such crime with substantially the same particularity and exactness required in an indictment, and the acts set out must be charged as having been knowingly and fraudulently done. In re Hirsch, (W.D. Tenn. 1899) 96 Fed. 468; In re Mudd, (W. D. Mo. 1900) 105 Fed. 348; In re Beebe, (E.

Objections to Bankrupt's Discharge.

Alleging false oath. - Where it is specified, as an objection to the discharge of a bankrupt, that he has committed the crime of perjury in his testimony before the referee. the objection must set out the testimony alleged to be false, together with the facts relied on to prove its falsity, so as to present a specific issue. In re Goodale, (N. D. N. Y. 1901) 109 Fed. 783, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 493; Troeder v. Lorsch, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 710, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

Evidence. — To justify the denial of a bankrupt's discharge on the ground that he made a false oath to his schedules, the evidence must be of a sufficiently clear and convincing character in order to overcome the presumption of his honesty; but it is not required to be of the high degree necessary to sustain a conviction for perjury. Remmers v. Merchants'-Laclede Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 173 Fed. 484, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78: In rs Berner, (S. D. Ohio) 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383. And see supra, p. 553, annotation III. Hearing and Proof.

The burden is upon the creditors to prove the crime charged by clear and positive proof. In re Cohen, (W. D. N. Y. 1907) 149 Fed. 908, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84.

On the hearing of an objection to a bankrupt's discharge on the ground that he has committed an offense punishable by imprisonment, while the opposing creditor is not required to establish such offense beyond a reasonable doubt, the evidence must be sufficient to overcome the opposing presumptions as well as the opposing evidence. Troeder v. Lorsch, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 710, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

(2) [Concealment of financial condition.] with intent to conceal his financial condition, destroyed, concealed, or failed to keep books of account or records from which such condition might be ascertained; or [(Amended 1903) 32 Stat. L. 797.]

Concealment of financial condition. — A bankrupt who has destroyed, concealed, or failed to keep books of account or records, from which his financial condition may be ascertained, with the intent to conceal such financial condition, will not be granted a discharge in bankruptcy proceedings. Effect of concealment immaterial. — Any failure by a bankrupt to keep books "with intent to conceal his financial condition" defeats his right to a discharge, whatever its actual effect on creditors may have been. In re Schachter, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 170 Fed. 683, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389.

Entry of loans made prior to enactment of bankruptcy law. - The fact that loans made to a bankrupt and not entered by him in his regular account books were made before the Bankruptcy Act was passed does not excuse his failure to enter them as required by the Act. In re Feldstein, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 259, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Where books are unnecessary. - The bankrupt's omission to keep books of account cannot be made a ground of opposition to his discharge, when it appears that, since a time more than three years prior to the passage of the Bankruptcy Act, he has not been engaged in any business to which the keeping of books would be necessary or appropriate. Sellers v. Bell, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 94 Fed. 801, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529.

So when a bankrupt is merely an employee, and not engaged in any business of his own, his failure to keep books showing his financial condition does not indicate a fraudulent intent which justifies the refusal of his discharge. In re McCrea, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 246, 20 Am. Bankr.

Intention to conceal. - In order that the destruction or concealment of books or records, or the failure to keep them, may constitute a valid objection to the granting of a discharge in bankruptcy, it is necessary that such destruction or concealment of books of accounts or records, or failure to keep them, be done with the intent to conceal the bankrupt's financial condition. Thus it has been held that where a book entry was made for the purpose of deceiving the general creditors into a belief that an ordinary sale had been made to an unsecured creditor, whereas in fact the transaction was an unlawful preference, while such conduct is reprehensible, it is not sufficient to bar a discharge, where there was no intention to conceal the bankrupt's financial condition. In re

Hamilton, (W. D. N. Y. 1904) 133 Fed. 823, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 333. Intent must be shown. — Where a creditor seeks to prevent a discharge on the ground of failure to keep books of account, etc., the burden is on him not only to show that the bankrupt failed to keep books of account, but that his omission to do so was with the intent to conceal his financial condition. In re Garrison, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 178, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 831. See also In re Halsell, (N. D. Tex. 1904) 132 Fed. 562, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107.

Mere negligence immaterial. — A refusal of a discharge to a bankrupt on the ground that he failed to keep books is not warranted, unless there is evidence from which, at least, it can fairly be inferred that there was an actual intent to conceal his condition. Mere negligence in the keeping of books is not sufficient. In re Haskell, (S. B. N. Y. 1908) 164 Fed. 301, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 914.

Need not be a fraudulent intent. — But the failure of a bankrupt to keep correct books of account, "with intent to conceal his financial condition," debars him from the right to a discharge, whether his intent was fraudulent or not. In re Hanna, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 238, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 843.

The fraud of a partner in so keeping the firm books, of which he had sole charge, as to conceal from his partner as well as creditors withdrawals of money by himself, cannot be imputed to the innocent partner, so as to defeat his right to a discharge. In re Schultz, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 109 Fed. 264, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91.

But to entitle a member of a partnership to a discharge, netwithstanding the fact that the firm failed to keep proper books with the intent on the part of some member to conceal its financial condition, the burden rests on him to prove that he was innocent of participation therein. In re Schachter, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 170 Fed. 683, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 380

Intention presumed.—Prima facie a man must be held to intend the natural and probable consequence of his acts; and where the inevitable consequence of an omission to keep books of account is the concealment of such financial condition, the intent to conceal must be presumed; though such presumption may be rebatted. In re Pomerantz, (E. D. Pa. 1909) 168 Fed. 444; In re Keelle, (E. D. Pa. 1909) 171 Fed. 257, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515.

Thus, where a bankrupt, who was a man of business experience, failed to keep any books whatever from which his financial condition might be ascertained, it was held that it must be presumed that he intended to conceal such condition, and that he was not entitled to a discharge. In re Alvord, (D. C. Conn. 1905) 135 Fed. 236, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 264.

The specification of objections to the discharge of a bankrupt on the ground that he, with fraudulent intent to conceal his trace financial condition, failed to keep books of secount, is sufficient if made in the language of the Act. In re Patterson, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 124 Fed. 921, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371; E. H. Godshalk Co. v. Sterling, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 580, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392; In re Ginsburg, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 120 Fed. 627, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459; In re Nathanson, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 645, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56; In re Lewis, (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 163 Fed. 137, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 711; In re Brod, (N. D. Ga. 1909) 166 Fed. 1011, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426; In re Pomerantz, (E. D. Pa. 1909) 168 Fed. 444, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 857.

But see In re Milgraum, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 129 Fed. 827, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306, wherein it was held that a specification of objection in the statutory language was insufficient.

Particularity of description not required.—A specification of objection to the bankrupts' discharge, alleging that the bankrupts with intent to conceal their financial condition, did destrey, through the agency of their regularly authorized bookkeeper, canceled checks drawn by the bankrupts, together with stubs of such checks, from which such condition might be ascertained, is not objectionable for the failure to more definitely describe the checks and stubs alleged to have been destroyed. E. H. Godshalk Co. v. Sterling, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 580, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302.

Allegation of intent necessary.—An objection to the discharge of a bankrupt because of his failure to keep proper books of account, which does not state that such failure was with intent to conceal his financial condition, is insufficient, but such a defect is amendable. In re Bradin, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 768.

False statement in writing. — Where a bankrupt has obtained money or property on credit upon a materially false statement in writing, made by him to any person or his representative for the purpose of obtaining credit from such person, he will not be entitled to a discharge. The statute applies to any false statement which has to do with the extension of credit affecting the bankruptcy proceeding. In re Berg, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 183 Fed. 855.

Good faith immaterial. - Where a creditor relied on a bankrupt's statement, which was materially false in fact, in selling him goods on credit, it was held that the bankrupt was not entitled to a discharge, though the mistake was made in good faith and was not intentional. In re Shaffer, (N. D. W. Va. 1909) 169 Fed. 724, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 147.

Credit must have been extended on faith of statement. - Where it appears that credit was not extended because of an alleged false statement, but that the creditor refused to act thereon, and required the giving of security, before the credit was extended, the statement is not sufficient to bar the bankrupt's discharge. In re Kaplan, (E. D. Pax 1905) 141 Fed. 463, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 534.

Creditor estopped with respect to false statement. — An agreement by a creditor, based on a valuable consideration, which recites that one of its purposes is to cancel and surrender certain written statements made by a debtor on which he obtained credit, the truthfulness of which was in controversy between the parties, and by which the creditor expressly cancels and "agrees to surrender up the same, and concedes that any inaccuracies therein . were inadvertent and without wrongful intent," debars the creditor from using such statements as a ground of objection to the debtor's discharge in bankruptcy. In re Russell, (C, C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 176 Fed. 253, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 850.

A written financial statement made by a business firm to a commercial agency, reciting that it is made as a basis for credit with the associate members of such agency, and which is communicated to members, who extend credit on the faith of it, is equivalent to one made directly to them, and, if materially false, will debar the debtor firm from the right to a discharge. In re Pincus, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 147 Fed. 621, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 331. See also In re Augspurger, (S. D. Ohio 1909) 181 Fed. 174.

Where a bankrupt made a false statement to a commercial agency in order to prevent "unfavorable reports" being given out concerning him, and later attempted to correct such statement by another, which was also false, and he referred to the same and was granted credit on the basis thereof, it was held that he was guilty of wilfully making a false statement for credit, which was sufficient to deprive him of the right of discharge, In re Kyte, (M. D. Pa. 1909) 174 Fed. 867, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414

But it has been held that it is not a valid objection to a bankrupt's discharge that he made a false statement concerning his financial condition to a commercial agency, on the faith of which credit was extended, where it does not appear that such statement was made directly to such creditors, and the bankrupt does not make the commercial agency his representative for the purposes of communicating such statement. In re Foster, (S. D. Miss. 1910) 186 Fed. 254.

And see In re Russell, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 176 Fed. 253, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 850, wherein it was said that if the bankrupt gave to the reporter of a commercial agency a report to be filed with said agency for the purpose of securing a rating, and not for the purpose of obtaining property on credit, such statement is not within the language of section 14b (3). But if the circumstances were such that the bankrupt knew that a certain proposed creditor was making inquiries at the agency concerning him, then the giving of such false statement to the reporter was equivalent to authorizing the commercial agency to repeat such statement to the proposed creditor; and although the latter never saw the original statement, the copy which was sent to it by the commercial agency would be as effective to bind the bankrupt as if he had signed and delivered it personally. In that event, however, the "materially false statement in writing" would be the one which was delivered to the proposed creditor, and upon which it relied.

Berrowing money is obtaining "property" on credit within the meaning of section 14b (3). In re Gilpin, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 160 l ed. 171, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 374, disapproving In re Pfaffinger, (W. D. Ky. 1907) 154 Fed. 528, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 807.

Statement as continuing representation. -A financial statement made by a bankrupt for credit, to a commercial agency, is a continuing representation for a reasonable time that the facts stated therein are true. In re Kyte, (M. D. Pa. 1909) 174 Fed. 867, 23

Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

But the omission by a bankrupt to state an item of indebtedness, in a statement made at the request of a wholesale house to which he had previously sent an order for goods, cannot be considered as rendering it a materially false statement, made for the purpose of obtaining other goods which were not ordered until eight months thereafter — the goods ordered at the time having been paid for in the meantime, so as to defeat the right to a discharge. In re Allendorf, (N. D. Ia. 1904) 129 Fed. 981, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320.

Statement made by mistake. — A statement of assets and liabilities, made by a merchant from his books and believed by him to be correct, will not warrant a denial of his discharge in bankruptcy, although it was in fact materially erroneous by reason of the failure of his bookkeeper, through illness, to enter on the books certain liabilities which existed at the time the statement was made, and which were in consequence omitted therefrom. In re Collins, (E. D. Ark. 1907) 157 Fed. 120, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 688.

False statement made by partner. — A materially false statement in writing made by a partner in the ordinary course of business of the partnership in buying merchandise for the purpose of obtaining goods on credit, and by means of which they were so obtained by the firm, is not ground for refusing a discharge in bankruptcy to another partner who did not participate in the wrongful act and had no knowledge of it. Hardie v. Swafford Bros. Dry Goods Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 588, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457, reversing (W. D. Tex. 1906) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313.

The bar to a discharge by reason of a false

statement in writing is confined to such person or persons as actually made such statement with the intention to deceive, and to the partnership entity of which such person is a member. Frank v. Michigan Paper Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 776; In re Cotton, (S. D. Ga. 1910) 183 Fed. 181.

Intent - Guilty knowledge essential. - It is clear that the plain language of section 14b (3) requires that the written statement made by the bankrupt, for the purpose of obtaining credit, etc., should be knowingly and intentionally untrue, in order to constitute a bar to the discharge of the bankrupt. In other words, "false statement" denotes a guilty scienter on the part of the bankrupt. In re Taplin, (N. D. Ia. 1905) 135 Fed. 861, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360; In re Dresser, (S. D. N. The false statement in writing which is enough to deny a discharge implies a statement knowingly false, or made recklessly, without an honest belief in its truth, and with a purpose to mislead or deceive, and thereby obtain from the person to whom it is made property upon credit. Gilpin v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, (3d Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 607, 611, 91 C. C. A. 445, 449, 20 L. R. A. N. S. 1023; Firestone v. Harvey, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 574, 23 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 468.
In In re Collins, (E. D. Ark. 1907) 157 Fed. 120, it was held that a discharge can only be refused where the bankrupt has been guilty of such acts as would sustain a civil action for fraud or deceit, and where the statements were either knowingly false or fraudulent, or made so recklessly as to warrant a finding that the bankrupt acted fraudulently.

All presumptions are in favor of honesty, and if the actions of a party are such that the presumption of honesty is as strong as that of wrong, the law requires that the theory of honesty, rather than that of guilt, be adopted. In re Collins, (E. D. Ark. 1907)

The word "false," as used in section 14b (3), means more than merely erroneous or untrue, being used in its primary legal sense as importing an intention to deceive; and such a statement, in order to constitute a bar to a discharge, must have been knowingly and intentionally untrue. Gilpin v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 607, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 429; Frank v. Michigan Paper Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 776, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 261.

In order to be "false" so as to bar a dis charge, the representations made by a bankrupt to obtain credit must have been wilfully or intentionally misleading. In re Kyte, (M. D. Pa. 1909) 174 Fed. 867, 23 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 414.
Who may object. — The right to oppose a discharge on the ground that the bankrupt has obtained property on credit from any person upon a materially false statement in writing, made to such person for the purpose of obtaining such property on credit, is not limited to the creditor defrauded, but might be roperly pleaded by any creditor of the bank-rupt. Necessity of transfer being within fourmonths period. — The statute requires that a fraudulent transfer, in order to prevent a discharge, must be made within four months. In re Brumbaugh, (D. C. Pa. 1904) 128 Fed. 971, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204. See also In re Dauchy, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 532, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511.

Continuing concealment. - The word "concealed" is sufficiently elastic in its meaning to include a continuous concealment; and a bankrupt who concealed property from his creditors while insolvent before the fourmonths' period, and kept the same concealed until within the four months, and until it was discovered by another, is not entitled to a discharge. In re James, (E. D. N. C. 1910) 175 Fed. 894, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703, affirmed (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 476. See also In re Jacobs, (D. C. Ore. 1906)

Property conveyed in fraud of oreditors prior to four months period.—The failure of a bankrupt to include in his petition and schedules real estate which he caused to be conveyed to another some years before for the purpose of defrauding his then creditors, and which is still held by the grantee on a secret trust for the bankrupt, is a fraudulent concealment of property from his trustee. In re Wilcox, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1900) 109 Fed. 628, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362. See also In re Olansky, (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 163 Fed. 428, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780.

What constitutes concealment, removal, or destruction of property - Transfer to bankrupt's wife. - Where a debtor, four months prior to filing his petition in bankruptcy, transfers real and personal property to his wife, without consideration, and with intent to defraud his creditors, and then states in his schedule that he has no property of any kind, he is guilty of knowingly and fraudulently concealing from his trustee property belonging to his estate in bankruptcy, and is not entitled to be discharged. In re Skinner, (N. D. Ia. 1899) 97 Fed. 190, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163.

So, also, where the bankrupt has an interest in real estate which stands in his wife's name, he should include such interest in his schedules; and his failure to do so is ground for refusing his discharge. In re Borg, (D.

C. Minn. 1910) 184 Fed. 640.

But the fact that a bankrupt did not schedule or turn over to his trustee the produce of lands which he claimed were owned by his wife, where there was no concealment of the property, and the claim was openly made, does not constitute a knowing and fraudulent concealment of property which will defeat his right to a discharge, although the property may have been, as matter of law, a part of his estate. In re Marsh, (D. C. Vt. 1901) 109 Fed. 602.

So, also, it has been held that the fact that a bankrupt transferred property to his wife before the passage of the bankruptcy law, and that he failed to schedule such property, constitutes no ground for refusing him a discharge, when it does not appear that the wife holds the property in secret trust for his benefit. In re Goodale, (N. D. N. Y. 1901) 109 Fed. 783, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 493.

Transfer to bankrupt's children. — Where, on an application by a bankrupt for a discharge, it appears that he considered a large portion of his legal liabilities to be unjust, that in view of bankruptcy he contemplated transferring considerable property directly to his daughter, but was deterred from doing so by being warned that such proceeding would probably get him into trouble, and that he then, by a series of questionable trades, so manipulated his property that his children were benefited to the extent of several thousand dollars, at the expense of his estate, it was held that his discharge should be denied. In re Schenck, (D. C. Wash. 1902) 116 Fed. 554, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727.

Property conveyed to relative. — If a bankrupt, while insolvent, conveys property to a near relative without consideration, and afterwards fails to disclose the existence of such property in his schedules, he is prima facie guilty of concealing assets from his trustee, although the conveyance may have been made more than four months before the petition was filed. But if his innocence is made to appear, the conveyance, and the subsequent omission of the property from the schedules, will interpose no obstacle to the bankrupt's discharge. In re McCann, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 575.

Property held in trust for bankrupt. — The intentional omission by a bankrupt to schedule or bring to the attention of his trustee an interest in real estate which a short time prior to his bankruptcy he conveyed in trust, the income to be paid to another during life, and the property then to be held for his own benefit, constitutes ground for refusing him a discharge. In re Stoddart, (D. C. Wash. 1902) 114 Fed. 486, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762.

So, also, where a bankrupt's mother bequeathed one-half the residue of her estate to the bankrupt's wife, in trust, to pay the interest and income to the bankrupt free from the claims of creditors, and to pay from time to time to the bankrupt so much of the principal as the trustee should deem proper, in such manner as to free it from the claims of creditors, it was held that, before he could secure a discharge, the bankrupt must assign his interest in the income to his trustee in bankruptcy, though his right to the principal, being conditioned on the option of the trustee, need not be so assigned. In re Fleishman, (N. D. III. 1902) 120 Fed. 960, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 557.

The failure to schedule a resulting trust amounts to a fraudulent concealment of property from the trustee, and justifies the court in refusing a discharge. Hudson v. Mercantile Nat. Bank. (8th Cir. 1902) 119 Fed. 346, 56 C. C. A. 250, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 432.

Concealment of valueless property. — But it is no ground for refusing a bankrupt's application for discharge that he omitted to list in his schedule a leasehold interest in realty, under a yearly lease, where there is no evidence that the use of the property was worth more than the rent. In re Hirsch, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 571, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344.

And where a bankrupt failed to schedule a piece of real estate of small and uncertain value it was held not to justify the withholding of his discharge. In re Neely, (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 134 Fed. 667, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 407. See also In re Todd, (D. C. Vt. 1901) 112 Fed. 315, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770. Transfer by chattel mortgage. — Where, on Transfer by chattel mortgage. — Where, on the hearing of objections to the discharge of bankrupt partners on the ground of having fraudulently concealed property from their trustee, it was shown that they aided and assisted in a transfer of the partnership property to a creditor by means of the foreclosure of a chattel mortgage previously given by them more than four months prior to the bankruptcy, the question whether such acts were sufficient in law to bar their discharge depends on the validity of the chattel mortgage and its foreclosure, and a discharge will not be granted until that question has been determined in a proper proceeding therefor. In re Olansky, (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 163 Fed. 428, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780.

Property which does not pass to trustee. -The fact that a bankrupt does not schedule or turn over to his trustee property which forms no part of the estate in bankruptcy, cannot be said to be a concealment of such property, and does not bar the bankrupt's right to a discharge. And see generally the annotation under the several subdivisions of section 70a, as to what property passes to the trustee in bankruptcy.

Property acquired after the adjudication does not vest in the trustee, and the fact that such property has not been scheduled does not constitute a defense to a petition for discharge. In re Parish, (N. D. Ia. 1903) 122 Fed. 553, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548.

Exempt property.—A bankrupt who, in the schedules accompanying his petition, declares that he has no property, but later on as a part of his state exemption, claims certain property, is not on this account to be charged with concealing such property so as to lose his right to a discharge. In re Semmel, (M. D. Pa. 1902) 118 Fed. 487, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351. See also In re Todd, (D. C. Vt.

A claim for alimony, made by a married woman in a suit for divorce, which was pending at the time of her bankruptcy, is not property which she could have disposed of, such as would vest in her trustee; and her failure to schedule the same is not a concealment of property which defeats her right to a discharge; nor is her refusal to convey to the trustee property subsequently awarded to her as alimony, and which she claims under the statute as her homestead, sufficient ground for refusing a discharge. Intent alone insufficient. — While intent is a material inquiry on an issue as to the concealment of the assets by a bankrupt, nevertheless a fraudulent intent alone does not justify a refusal of a discharge; it is necessary that assets belonging to the estate were actually concealed or withheld. Vehon v. Ullman, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 694, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

Advice of counsel.—The failure to schedule, or to turn over to the trustee, certain assets, upon the advice of counsel, to whom the facts have been fully disclosed, and whose advice is sought, received, and acted upon in good faith, and not with the intention of evading the bankruptcy law, will tend to relieve the bankrupt in so far as that such failure will not bar his discharge. Thus where the question whether a bankrupt's interest in his grandfather's estate was vested or contingent was difficult of solution, and the bankrupt had previously been advised by counsel that he had no interest in his grandfather's estate on which he could raise money, it was held that his failure to schedule such interest as a part of his estate in bankruptcy did not preclude his discharge. Woods v. Little, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1905) 134 Fed. 229, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 742.

So where a bankrupt had borrowed the full surrender value on his life insurance, and had been advised by counsel that it was not necessary to mention the policies in his schedules, whereupon he gave them to his wife, it was held that he was not guilty of a fraudulent concealment of assets. In rehyte, (M. D. Pa. 1909) 174 Fed. 867, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

Specification of objections.— The specification of objections should state the nature of the ground relied on, and give a description of the property concealed from the trustee, the names of the persons holding the title, the name of the transfer, and other facts necessary to identify the transaction. In reParish, (N. D. Ia. 1903) 122 Fed. 553, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548; In re Ginsburg, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 130 Fed. 627, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459.

But it has also been held that, since the amendment of 1903, it is not necessary to allege that the transfer was "knowingly and fraudulently" made. In re Gift, (M. D. Pa. 1904) 130 Fed. 230, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

1904) 130 Fed. 230, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244. Sufficient specification.— The specification of objection to the bankrupts' discharge alleging that, within four months immediately preceding the filing of the petition, the bankrupts transferred, removed, destroyed, or concealed their property, with intent to defraud their creditors, in that, about a week prior to the filing of the petition, and at other times, they concealed large quantities of merchandise in a certain house, with intent to hinder, delay, and defraud their creditors, and thereafter, on a day specified, removed from their place of business and concealed other large quantities of merchandise with like intent, was held to be sufficient. In re Milgraum, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 129 Fed. 827, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306.

So, also, it has been held that specifications of objection to the discharge of a bankrupt, alleging that, within four months prior to the filing of his petition, in contemplation of bankruptcy, and with intent to defraud his creditors, he purchased certain household goods specified, which he transferred to a woman to whom he expected to be, and was afterward, married, and which were not included in his schedules, are legally sufficient In re Gift, (M. D. Pa. 1904) 130 Fed. 230, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

And it has been held that objections to the discharge of a bankrupt, charging in effect a fraudulent transfer of the bankrupt's property within the four months period, are sufficient. In re Bradin, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 768.

Insufficient specification.— A specification of objections to a bankrupt's discharge, that at the time of filing his petition he was the owner of a stock of drugs and general merchandise, no part of which was ever delivered to the trustee in bankruptcy, and that the bankrupt now has possession thereof, has been held to be insufficient in the absence of an allegation that he concealed the same, or in any manner prevented the trustee from taking possession thereof. In re Taplin, (N. D. Ia. 1905) 135 Fed. 861, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360.

Evidence — Burden of proof on opposing creditors. — Creditors opposing the bankrupt's application for a discharge, on the ground of his having concealed property from his trustee in bankruptcy, must establish the fact by satisfactory and sufficient evidence, or their opposition will be overruled and the discharge granted. Preponderance of evidence sufficient.—On specifications of objection to a bankrupt's petition for discharge, it is not necessary to establish concealment of assets beyond a reasonable doubt. A fair preponderance of credible testimony is sufficient. In re Delmour, (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 161 Fed. 589, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 405.

Suspicion not enough.—An objection to a bankrupt's discharge because of the fraudulent concealment of assets must be established by clear and convincing proof, and is not the subject of mere suspicion or inference. Property in bankrupt must be shown.— Specifications in opposition to a bankrupt's application for discharge, on the ground of his having concealed property from his trustee in bankruptcy, must be supported by evidence showing the existence of property in the bankrupt, or in trust for his use, at the time of filing the petition in bankruptcy. In re Cornell, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 29.

account for the same; and if he fails to do so, the presumption is that he sold them and conceals the proceeds. Seigel v. Cartél, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 691, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140.

Creditor concluded by judgment of state court. — The judgment of a state court, in a suit brought by a bankrupt's trustee, refusing to set aside a transfer of property made by the bankrupt, as fraudulent, concludes creditors, who cannot, therefore, set up the same ground to defeat the bankrupt's discharge. In re Tiffany, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 147 Fed. 314, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310.

(5) [Discharge in voluntary proceedings.] in voluntary proceedings been granted a discharge in bankruptcy within six years; or [(Inserted 1903) 32 Stat. L. 798.]

Discharge within six years. - A bankrupt is not entitled to be discharged, under section 14b (5), where he has previously been discharged in voluntary proceedings within the preceding six years. In re Neely, (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 134 Fed. 667, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 407; In re Seaholm, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 144, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 292; In re Haase, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 553, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; In re Chase, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 186 Fed. 408; In re Vaine, (N. D. N. Y. 1911) 186 Fed. 535.

Section 14b (5) was intended to prevent the filing of voluntary petitions in bank-ruptcy by the same person oftener than once in six years, and not merely to space discharges to the same person six years apart. In re Vaine, (N. D. N. Y. 1911) 186 Fed. 535.

Section 140 (5) is not retroactive, but applies only to cases begun after amendment took effect (Feb. 5, 1903). In re Neely, (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 134 Fed. 667, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 407; In re Seaholm, (C. C. A. lst Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 144, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 292.

The words "in voluntary proceedings" refer to the proceedings in which the prior discharge was granted, and not to the proceedings in which the second discharge is sought. In re Seaholm, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 144, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 292.

The limitation refers to the time between the first and the second discharge, and not between the first discharge and the filing of the second petition; and hence it is imma-terial to the right of a person to be adjudged an involuntary b nkrupt that he has previously been discharged in bankruptcy within six years. In re Little, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 521, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 640.

The six years is measured backward from the time of the hearing on the application for the second discharge, and not from the time of the commencement of the second proceed-In re Haase, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Ing. 173 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528. See also In re Little, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 521, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 640; In re Jordan, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 142 Fed. 292, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449.

Discharge refused under former law immaterial. - An order refusing to discharge a bankrupt, under the Bankruptcy Act of 1867, does not estop the bankrupt from applying for a discharge upon the same facts, and as to the same debt, under the Act of 1898. In re Herrman, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 102 Fed. 753.

(6) [Refusal to obey lawful orders.] in the course of the proceedings in bankruptcy refused to obey any lawful order of, or to answer any material question approved by the court: [(Inserted 1903) 32 Stat. L. 798.]

Duty to answer questions generally, see section 7a, (9), supra, p. 524, and section 21a, infra, p. 589.

Duty to comply with all lawful orders, see section 7a, (2), supra, p. 519. Refusal to obey lawful orders or to appear and testify, as contempt, see the several subdivisions of section 41a, infra, p. 668.

To come within the phrase "approved by the court," as used in section 145 (6), no more formal approval is required from the referee than the overruling of objections, if any are made, and the allowance of the questions. In re Weinreb, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 363, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387.

Refusal to answer proper questions. — The refusal of a bankrupt on his examination to answer a question as to what was done with a large sum of money drawn by him from the bank a short time before the bankruptcy is sufficient to warrant the refusal of a discharge, although, after such objection to the discharge was made, he offered to answer the question. In re Weinreb, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 363, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387.

Refusal under claim of privilege.—The fact that the refusal of a bankrupt to answer material questions, in the course of the proceedings which were approved by the referee, was based on the claim of his constitutional privilege not to incriminate himself, does not deprive the court of the right to deny him a discharge because of such refusal. The proeeeding for a discharge is not a criminal proceeding, and the constitutional protection extends to the protection of the witness in criminal proceedings only. In re Dresser, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 383, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 561.

Evasive answers. - While evasive and disingenuous testimony by a bankrupt is not a ground for refusing a discharge, it is a material consideration in determining his credibility when testifying as to what became of certain money. In re Leslie, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 119 Fed. 406, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 561.

But where a bankrupt did not wilfully conceal testimony preventing his creditors from obtaining property, the fact that he apparently gave evasive and disrespectful answers to questions concerning the same is not ground for denying his discharge. In re

Fanning, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 701, 19 Am, Bankr. Rep. 55. And see to the same effect In re Cohen, (W. D. N. Y. 1907) 149 Fed. 908, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84.

[When trustee may interpose objections.] Provided, That a trustee shall not interpose objections to a bankrupt's discharge until he shall be authorized so to do at a meeting of creditors called for that purpose. [(Inserted 1910) 36 Stat. L. 840.]

c [Confirmation of composition.] The confirmation of a composition shall discharge the bankrupt from his debts, other than those agreed to be paid by the terms of the composition and those not affected by a discharge. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 550.]

The effect of the confirmation of a composition has been considered under sec. 12c, supra, p. 545, and compositions generally are treated under the other subdivisions of sec.

12, supra, p. 540. The setting aside of a composition is annotated under sec. 13, supra, p. 546.

Sec. 15. Discharges, when Revoked.—a The judge may, upon the application of parties in interest who have not been guilty of undue laches, filed at any time within one year after a discharge shall have been granted, revoke it upon a trial if it shall be made to appear that it was obtained through the fraud of the bankrupt, and that the knowledge of the fraud has come to the petitioners since the granting of the discharge, and that the actual facts did not warrant the discharge. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 550.]

Revocation of discharge. — Where it appears that a bankrupt has obtained his discharge through fraud the court may, upon a proper showing presented in due time, revoke such discharge where the actual facts did not authorize the granting thereof. In re Dietz, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 563, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 316; In re Meyers, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 100 Fed. 775, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722; In re Shaffer, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 104 Fed. 982, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728; In re Hansen, (D. C. Ore. 1901) 107 Fed. 252, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747; In re Roosa, (N. D. Ia. 1902) 119 Fed. 542, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531; In re Oliver, (D. C. N. J. 1905) 133 Fed. 832, 13 Am. Va. 1908) 163 Fed. 900, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59.

When power to revoke may be exercised.—
It is to be borne in mind that the power of the judge to revoke a discharge is confined and limited. It must be exercised (a) upon application of parties in interest; (b) within one year after it has been granted; (c) upon a trial in which it must be shown by petitioners that they have (d) not been guilty of undue laches; (e) that the discharge was obtained through the fraud of the bankrupt; (f) that the knowledge of said fraud has come to the petitioners since the granting of the discharge; and (g) that the actual facts did not warrant the discharge. In each and every one of these particulars the burden of proof is upon the petitioners, and each requirement of the statute is absolutely essential to be proven. In re Mauzy, (N. D. W. Va. 1908) 163 Fed. 900, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Inducing oreditor to withdraw opposition.—Where a creditor who has filed specifications in opposition to the discharge of a bankrupt is induced to withdraw the same, and suffer the discharge to be granted, in consideration of part payment of his claim made to him by a friend of the bankrupt, it was held to be a fraud upon the Act, and ground for vacating the discharge, although it was done without the procurement or participation of the bankrupt, if he was privy to the arrangement and consented to it. In re Dietz, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 563, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 316.

The omission to schedule a debt is not ground for setting aside the discharge. In re Monroe, (D. C. Wash. 1902) 114 Fed. 398, 7

Rep. 334; In re Wright, (W. D. N. Y. 1910) 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437.

Absence of laches must clearly appear. — Where a mortgage given by the bankrupt, covering substantially all his personal property, was shown by his schedules, but its validity was not questioned by any creditor during the pending of the case, and until nearly a year after the bankrupt's discharge, the court is not justified in then entertaining a petition for the revocation of the discharge, on the ground that such mortgage was fraudulent, unless it is made clear that the creditor filing it has not been guilty of laches, and that cannot be done by general averments of conclusions to the effect that he has not been guilty of negligence or has acted with due diligence. In re Oleson, (N. D. Ia. 1901) 110 Fed. 796, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22. Failure to prove elaim.—The fact that a creditor of a bankrupt failed to file or prove his claim within a year after the adjudication and was thereby precluded from thereafter proving it, or sharing in any dividend which might be declared if the discharge was va-cated, does not deprive him of the right to move to vacate such discharge as a party in interest; since, if the discharge were vacated, the creditor would be entitled to collect his elaim from any property acquired by the bankrupt after bankruptcy. In re Bimberg, (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 121 Fed. 942, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601.

But see Arrington v. Arrington, (E. D. N. C. 1904) 132 Fed. 200, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89, wherein it was held that a claimant against the estate is not entitled to have the bankrupt's discharge set aside on account of a claim which was not proved in the bankruptey proceedings, of which he had notice.
Failure to object to granting of discharge.

- A creditor who had ample opportunity during the pendency of the proceedings to fully examine the bankrupt as to all matters, and who appeared in opposition to his discharge, and was given time to file specifications of objection, but failed to do so, and permitted the discharge to be granted without further objection, is guilty of such undue laches as will prevent his being heard on a subsequent application to revoke the discharge. In re Upson, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 124 Fed. 986, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 758.

Knowledge of trustee chargeable to oreditors. - The revocation of a discharge for an alleged fraud, which is shown to have come to the knowledge of the petitioner since the discharge was granted, will not be allowed where the trustee had knowledge of all the facts prior to the granting of the discharge; such knowledge being deemed to be that of the creditors whom he represents. In re Hansen, (D. C. Cre. 1901) 107 Fed. 252, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747.

Application for revocation. — The application for the revocation of a discharge should tion for the revocation of a discharge should set forth sufficient facts to warrant the revocation under section 15. In re Oliver, (D. C. N. J. 1905) 133 Fed. 832, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582; Vary v. Jackson, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 840, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 334.

Must show interest of petitioners.—An averment in a petition for the revocation of the discharge of a harbyrum marshy that the discharge of a bankrupt, merely that petitioners are "creditors" of the bankrupt, is insufficient to show that they are "parties in interest," entitled to object to the discharge or to file such petition. In re Chandler, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 637, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 512.

An amendment of such petition may be allowed as in other cases. In re Oliver, (D. C. N. J. 1905) 133 Fed. 832, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582; In re Chandler, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 637, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 512; In re Griffin, (S. D. Ala. 1907) 154 Fed. 537, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78.

But a petition to revoke a discharge cannot be amended after the expiration of one year from the time of the discharge. In re Wright, (D. C. N. Y. 1910) 24 Am. Bankr.

Who may reveke discharge. — No one but must be done in the manner prescribed by the statute. In re Shaffer, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 104 Fed. 982, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728

Revocation by court on its own motion. A court of bankruptcy has the general power to amend its decrees in its discretion; and, on its own motion, to vacate a discharge, in the furtherance of justice, before the expiration of a year after it was granted. Sec. 16. Co-Debtors of Bankrupts. — a The hability of a person who is a co-debtor with, or guarantor or in any manner a surety for, a bankrupt shall not be altered by the discharge of such bankrupt. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 560. ]

Construction of section 16.— Section 16, if intended to be in derogation of common-law rights and of the express statutory provision of the state where the question arises, should have a strict rather than a liberal construction; so that its effect will be limited rather closely to its terms. Matter of Benedict, (N. D. N. Y. 1907) 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604.

Statute refers to codebtors for original debt. — The Bankrupt Act manifestly refers to codebtors, guarantors, or sureties for the bankrupt on the same or original debt — the debt on which the release is given by the discharge. Klipstein v. Allen-Miles Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 385, 14 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 15.

A guaranter for the payment of rent is not relieved from liability by the discharge of the tenant in bankruptcy proceedings; and this is true even though the tenant's adjudication as a bankrupt so far terminated the relationship of landlord and tenant as to relieve the tenant from further liability for rent. Witthaus v. Zimmermann, (1904) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314, 91 App. Div. 202, 86 N. Y. S. 315.

Rep. 314, 91 App. Div. 202, 86 N. Y. S. 315. Surety on appeal bond.—If one is bound as surety for another to pay any judgment that may be rendered in a specified action, and the judgment is defeated by the bankruptcy of the person for whom the obligation is assumed, the surety will be released. The obvious reason is that the event has not happened on which the liability of the surety was to depend. Of this class of obligations are the ordinary bonds in attachment suits to dissolve an attachment, appeal bonds, and the like. Goyer Co. v. Jones, (Miss. 1901) 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; House v. Schnadig, (1908) 235 Ill. 301, 85 N. E. 395, affirming 138 Ill. App. 498.

Garnishment bonds.—The liability of the surety on a dissolving garnishment bond is not altered by the discharge of the bankrupt defendant; but the discharge generally prevents the happening of the contingency on which that liability depends. Klipstein v. Allen-Miles Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 385, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 15. See also National Surety Co. v. Medlock, (Ga. 1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654.

Fidelity bond. — Sureties on the fidelity bond of an insurance agent are not discharged by the discharge of their principal after judgment on the bond and pending writ of error. Boyd v. Agricultural Ins. Co., (1904) 20 Colo.

App. 28, 76 Pac. 986.

Release by act of parties remains unaffected. — Section 16 only applies to the "discharge" in bankruptcy, and cannot be held to refer to, and have in view, any act of the parties effecting a release of liability at common law or in equity. Matter of Benedict, (N. D. N. Y. 1907) 18 Am. Bankr. Rep.

SEC. 17. DEBTS NOT AFFECTED BY A DISCHARGE. — a A discharge in bankruptcy shall release a bankrupt from all of his provable debts, except such as [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 550.]

Discharge of liability of officers, directors, or stockholders of corporation, see section 4b, supra, p. 501.

What constitute provable debts, see the several subdivisions of section 63.

The right to a discharge, and its effect, are wholly distinct questions. In re Marshall Paper Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 872, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 468; In re McCarty, (N. D. Ill. 1901) 111 Fed. 151, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re Eisenberg, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 148 Fed. 325, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 776; Matter of Cooper, (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634.

Sections 14 and 17 should be construed together. Each bears upon a different subject; the one relating to the discharge, the other to the debts from which such discharge will relieve the debtor. The matters and things which will prevent a discharge in bankruptcy are different from those which cause a debt to remain effective against the person discharged. Thus the bankrupt may be discharged and still be held liable for the classes of debts mentioned in section 17, subdivisions (1), (2), (3), and (4); and in seeking to hold a party liable, who has been discharged in bankruptey, the ground for such liability must be found in section 17, and not in section 14, which enumerates grounds upon which a discharge shall be refused. Katzenstein v. Reid, (Tex. 1905) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740. See also In re Tinker, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 99 Fed. 79, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 580.

All provable debts released. — A discharge in bankruptcy, under the provisions of the statute, discharges the bankrupt from all such debts as were, under section 63, provable against his estate in bankruptcy, excepting such as fall within subdivisions (1), (2), (3). and (4) of section 17. What constitute provable debts has been fully considered under the several subdivisions of section 63.

A discharge thus means, subject to qualification with respect to demands due or owing to the United States, the release of the bankrupt from all of the debts, demands and claims against him which are provable in bankruptcy except such of them as are by the Act excepted. The exception necessarily relates to provable demands, and, to indulge in tautology, is equivalent to the phraseology, "except such provable debts, demands and claims against the bankrupt as are by the Act excepted." In re United Button Co., (D. C., Del. 1906) 140 Fed. 495, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 390.

Discharge not limited to any particular territory. — A discharge in bankruptcy which discharges the debts of the bankrupt in one state discharges them in all the states. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. v. Hudson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 232, 10

Am. Bankr. Rep. 225.

Debt need not have been allowed.— The fact that a claim against the bankrupt estate was disallowed does not render it a nonprovable debt; and such claim will be barred by a discharge, notwithstanding its allowance, if its was capable of having been proved, as, for instance, where its disallowance results from a valid defense thereto. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. v. Hudson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 232, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Assignment of future wages. — It has been held that the right to earn wages is not property that passes to the trustee or receiver, and in fact is not property at all, in the sense that the bankruptcy statute uses the term, but a mere right to create property; and therefore an assignment of such wages does not create a lien upon any existing property. Hence a discharge in bankruptcy, which discharges the consideration for the assignment, discharges the assignment also. In re West, (D. C. Ore. 1904) 128 Fed. 205; In re Home Discount Co., (D. C. Ala. 1906) 147 Fed. 538; Leitch v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (1905) 95 Minn. 35, 5 Ann. Cas. 63, 103 N. W. 704.

But it has also been held that a duly recorded assignment of wages, to be earned in the future in an existing employment, executed to secure a valid subsisting debt, may be enforced by the creditor notwithstanding the subsequent discharge of the assignor in bankruptcy. Citizens' Loan Assoc. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (1907) 196 Mass. 528, 13 Ann. Cas. 365, 82 N. E. 696.

The bankruptcy law supersedes the ordinances and fire regulations of a city, requiring members of the city's fire department to pay promptly all necessary personal and household expenses, and making the failure to do so ground for discharge, in so far as it affects debts of a fireman dischargeable in a bankruptcy proceeding pending against him. In re Hicks, (N. D. N. Y. 1905) 133 Fed. 739, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654.

Judgments. — When it is necessary to consider whether a judgment is released by a discharge in bankruptcy the fact must be determined by the record, and not by any allegation or proof outside of it. Burnham v. Pidcock, (1901) 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590, 58 App.

Div. 273, 68 N. Y. S. 1007.

The New York Code of Civil Procedure (§ 1268) which provided that "if it appears upon the hearing that he has been discharged from the payment of that judgment or the debt upon which said judgment was recovered, an order must be made directing said judgment be canceled and discharged of record," was held to apply only to judgments entered before a discharge in bankruptcy, for the reason that any other holding would conflict with the doctrine of res judicata. Howe v. Noyes, (1905) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 103, 47 Misc. 338, 93 N. Y. S. 476.

One who has been twice adjudged a bankrupt cannot, in the second proceeding, be discharged from debts which were provable in a first proceeding wherein the bankrupt failed to obtain his discharge; and it is immaterial whether, in the first proceeding, the discharge was formally refused or whether the petition therefor was dismissed for want of prosecution. An unliquidated claim, which might have been liquidated and proved against a bankrupt under the provisions of section 63b, but which was voluntarily withheld until after the expiration of the time for proving claims, should be treated as a provable debt, from which the bankrupt will be released by a discharge, under section 17. Revival of discharged debt. — A debt is not extinguished by a discharge in bankruptcy. The remedy upon the debt, and the legal, but not the moral, obligation to pay are at an end. The obligation itself is not canceled. Gruenberg v. Trainor, (N. Y. 1903) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 776; Citizens' Loan Assoc. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (Mass. 1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650.

Oral promise sufficient. — To revive a debt which has been paid by judgment in bankruptcy, an oral promise is sufficient, but it must be clear and unequivocal. If such promise is based upon a condition, then it must be shown that such a condition has been complied with. Smith v. Stanchfield, (Minn. 1901) 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498. See also Mutual Reserve Fund L. Assoc. v. Beatty, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1899) 93 Fed. 747, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244; In re Shaffer, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 104 Fed. 982, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728.

But a written promise, if required by a local statute, seems to be necessary to revive a debt which has been discharged in bank-ruptcy. Mandell v. Levy, (N. Y. 1905) 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549.

Promise must have been accepted. - To revive a debt which has been discharged in bankruptcy, a conditional promise thereafter to pay the original obligation in instalments must be accepted by the creditor. Smith v. Stanchfield, (Minn. 1901) 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498; International Harvester Co. v. Lyman. (Minn. 1903) 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450.

Time of making promise to pay. - In an action brought upon an account, where the plaintiff seeks to avoid the effect of the defense of a discharge in bankruptcy by setting up a promise to pay since the discharge was granted, it is incumbent upon him to show that the promise was made both after the discharge was granted and before the suit on the account was brought. ## I. FALSE PRETENSES OR REPRESENTATIONS.

Liability for obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations. - As the bankruptcy law was originally enacted it provided for an exception from the discharge of "judgments" in an action for obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations. The amendment of 1903 substituted the word "liabilities" for the word "judg-ments," so that now a discharge in bankruptcy does not relieve the person discharged as to such "liabilities" as are created by obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations. Question for court. - The amendment of 1903, by substituting the word "liabilities" for the word "judgments," has imposed upon the court of bankruptcy the duty of determining whether the debt sought to be excepted is, or is not, a liability for obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations. Gleason v. Thaw, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 345.

False representations need not be in writing. - There is no requirement in section 17 as to the manner in which the false pretenses or false representations shall be conveyed to the defrauded party; and it was not intended that such pretenses or representations should be in writing, or that such intention should be read from section 14b (3) into section 17a (2). Katzenstein v. Reid, (Tex. 1905) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740.

Statute refers to property, not to services. The language used in section 17a (2), by which liabilities for obtaining property by false pretenses are excepted from the provable debts discharged in bankruptcy, is the usual and most general language for describing a specific crime. It refers to substantive things—to a res—and not to services rendered. Gleason v. Thaw, (C. C. A. 3d Cir.

Reduction of liability to judgment immaterial. - The character of the "liability," as that word is used in section 17a (2), is not changed by the fact that the liability has been reduced to judgment. Boynton v. Ball, (1887) 121 U. S. 457, 466, 7 S. Ct. 981, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 985; Tinker v. Colwell, (1904) 193 U. S. 473, 24 S. Ct. 505, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 754, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 568; Peters v. U. A false representation by one partner, by means of which property was obtained by the firm, will be imputed to the other partners to the extent of holding them civilly liable for the debt, and their discharge in bank-ruptcy will not discharge their liability for such debt. Frank v. Michigan Paper Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 776, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 261.

Fraud. - A private banker who accepts deposits with full knowledge of his insolvency, concealing the fact from the depositor, is guilty of fraud; and his discharge in bankruptcy is no defense to an action to recover the amount deposited. Frey v. Torrey, (1902) 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 196, 70 App. Div. 166, 75 N. Y. S. 40, affirmed (1903) 175 N.

Y. 501, 67 N. E. 1082.

Judgment for fraud.—The record of a judgment, which is claimed to be an exception from discharge under section 17a (2) as a debt recovered for fraud, should show that the action was for the cause therein specified. Matter of Benoit, (1908) 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270, 124 App. Div. 142, 108 N. Y. S. 889.

The real question is, was the relief granted in the judgment based upon actual, as distinguished from constructive, fraud of the bankrupt? If the judgment is thus founded, whatever the form of the action, it is the intent and purpose of the law that the bankrupt shall not be discharged from it, but shall still rest under its obligation, so far as the bankruptcy law is concerned. Bullis v. O'Beirne, (1904) 195 U. S. 606, 25 S. Ct. 118, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 340, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 108

Liability under section 70e. — The liability of a bankrupt to the trustee of another bankrupt, under section 70e, for the value of property transferred to him by the latter while insolvent, in fraud of his creditors, is one based upon his own fraud, from which he is not released by a discharge. Mackel t. Rochester, (D. C. Mont. 1905) 135 Fed. 904,

14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 429.

Constructive fraud. - The debts excepted from the operation of a discharge, under section 17a (2), because of having accrued by the procurement of property by false pretenses or representations, do not include debts based upon a constructive or implied fraud. The statute extends only to positive fraud, or fraud in fact, which involves moral turpitude or intentional wrong. In re Blumberg, (E. D. Tenn. 1899) 94 Fed. 476, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; Western Union Cold Storage Co. v. Hurd, (W. D. Mo. 1902) 116 Fed, 442, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; In re Wenham, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 153 Fed. 910, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690; Gleason r. Thaw, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 345; Matter of Arkell, (1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650, 65 App. Div. 130, 72 N. Y. S. 555; Gee v. Gee, (Minn. 1901) 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500; Matter of Floyd, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 277; Johnson v. Bruckheimer, (N. Y. 1909) 22

Am. Bankr. Rep. 242.

Effect of waiving the tort. — Where a claimant waives the tort growing out of a false pretense or representation and proceeds on the implied contract, his claim is one that is provable in bankruptcy, under section 63; and, consequently, is not within the exception provided for by section 17a (2). Tindle v. and, consequently, is not within the exception provided for by section 17a (2). Tindle v. Birkett, (1907) 205 U. S. 183, 27 S. Ct. 493, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 762, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 121, affirming (1902) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 179, 171 N. Y. 520, 64 N. E. 210; Hargadine-McKittsiek Dry Goods (b. g. Hudden) 17 P. McKittrick Dry Goods Co. v. Hudson, (E. D. Mo. 1901) 111 Fed. 361, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 657; In re Ennis, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 755, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; Talcott v. Friend, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 676; Fechter r. Postel, (1906) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 316, 114 App. Div. 776, 100 N. Y. S. 207; Strauch v. Flynn, (Minn. 1909) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 246.

Claims for damages arising out of false and fraudulent representations, inducing sales of merchandise, may be proved under the Bankruptcy Act, as debts "founded upon an open account or upon a contract, expressed or implied," if the sellers see fit to waive the tort and take their places with the other creditors of the bankrupt estate; and are, therefore, barred by a discharge in bank-ruptcy. Tindle v. Birkett, (1907) 205 U. S. 183, 27 S. Ct. 493, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 762, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 121, affirming (1902) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 179, 171 N. Y. 520, 64 N. E.

Creditor bound by his election to waive tort. - Where brokers, by fraud, induced a customer to authorize them to purchase stocks for him and to deposit margins therefor, and afterwards converted such stocks and became bankrupt, it was held that the customer had his option either to sue for a rescission of the contract on the ground of fraud, or for the conversion; and that when he did the latter he waived the fraud and affirmed the contract, and had no standing to claim that the bankrupt's liability was one for obtaining property by false pretenses. In re Ennis, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 755, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679, Inducing the rendition of legal services by false representations is not the obtaining of property" by false representations within the meaning of section 17a (2). Gleason v. Thaw, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 345.

A fine imposed by a state court for con-tempt, committed by wilfully presenting to the court false affidavits, is not released by a discharge in bankruptcy. In re Koronsky, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 719, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 851; In re Hall, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 170 Fed. 721, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498.

A judgment obtained by a railroad company against a ticket agent for money collected by him for tickets sold, and misappropriated to his own use, is not one for a debt which is a liability for obtaining property by false pre-tenses or false representations. In re Wenham, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 153 Fed. 910, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690.

A debt arising from an overpayment, made to the bankrupt through mistake, which he refused to refund, is not created by his fraud, within the meaning of the act, and is released by his discharge; although his denial of liability, when advised of the mistake, may have been a mere pretense. Western Union Cold Storage Co. v. Hurd, (W. D. Mo. 1902) 116 Fed. 442, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633.

II. WILFUL AND MALICIOUS INJURIES.

Wilful and malicious injuries. — Liability for wilful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another is not released by a discharge in bankruptcy. Tinker v. Colwell, (1904) 193 U. S. 473, 485, 24 S. Ct. 505, 508, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 754, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 568; In re Colaluca, (D. C. Mass. 1904) 133 Fed. 255, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 292; Thompson v. Judy, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 169 Fed. 553, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154; In re Ennis, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 755, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; Leicester v. Hoadley, (Kan. 1903) 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318; McDonald v. Brown, (1902) 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58, 23 R. I. 546, 51 Atl. 213; McChristal v. Clisbee, (1906) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 838, 190 Mass. 120, 5 Ann. Cas. 769, 76 N. E. 511; Bond v. Milliken, (1906) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 811, 134 Ia. 447, 109 N. W. 774; Flanders v. Mullin, (1907) 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 708, 80 Vt. 124, 66 Atl. 789; National Surety Co. v. Medlock, (Ga. 1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654; Kavanaugh v. MoIntyre, (1908) 21 Am. Bankr, Rep. 327, 128 App. Div. 722, 112 N. Y. S. 987; Tompkins v. Williams, (N. Y. 1910) 23 Am. Bankr, Rep. 886; Peters v. U.

S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1910) 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206; Bever v. Swecker, (1908) 138 Ia. 721, 116 N. W. 704.

Wilful and malicious injury defined. -Wilful and malicious injury, in the Bankruptcy Act and everywhere in the law, does not necessarily involve hatred or ill will as a state of mind, but arises from a wrongful act, done intentionally, without just cause or excuse. In order to come within that meaning as a judgment for a wilful and malicious injury to person or property, it is not necessary that the cause of action be based upon special malice, so that without it the action could not be maintained. Tinker v. Colwell, (1904) 193 U. S. 473, 485, 24 S. Ct. 505, 508, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 754, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 568.

The phrase "wilful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another" must be held to cover all cases in which the facts of intent and malice are judicially ascer-tained by direction of the law, however the act may be characterized by the allegation. Flanders v. Mullin, (1907) 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 708, 80 Vt. 124, 66 Atl. 789.

The wrong must be both "wilful and malicious," in order that an action founded thereon shall survive the discharge in bank-ruptcy of the wrongdoer. Flanders r. Mullin, (1907) 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 708, 80 Vt. 124, 12 Ann. Cas. 1010, 66 Atl. 789; Kavanaugh v. McIntyre, (1908) 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 327, 128 App. Div. 722, 112 N. Y. S. 987.

Injury to person and property means causing damage to the subject-matter of the rights, not depriving the owner of them. In re Ennis, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 755, 22

Am. Bankr. Rep. 679.

Statute relates to torts. — It is evident that the statutory exception relates to torts, and not to breaches of contract. Bond v. Milliken, (1906) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 811, 134 Ia. 447, 109 N. W. 774.

Not restricted to physical injury. - The injuries contemplated in section 17a (2) are not restricted to those which are inflicted upon the physical person of the party, but extend to those inherent rights of the person which stand in the same class as his right to security from violence done to his body. Thompson v. Judy, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 169 Fed. 553, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154.

Injury caused by dog bite.—In In re Lorde, (E. D. N. Y. 1906) 144 Fed. 320, it was held that a judgment against the landlord of an apartment house for damages for injuries caused by the bite of a vicious dog kept by a tenant was dischargeable in bankruptcy.

False imprisonment and malicious prosecution are wilful and malicious injuries; and liabilities therefor are not affected by a discharge in bankruptcy. McChristal v. Clisbee. (1906) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 838, 190 Mass.

120, 5 Ann. Cas. 769, 76 N. E. 511.

But where, in an action for false imprisonment, it appears that the defendant honestly believed that the person arrested had committed the crime, and promptly withdrew the charge upon the discovery that such person was innocent, the action is not so obviously against good morals, and does not involve such moral turpitude, as to compel the court to disregard the fundamental characteristics of such an action for the purpose of bringing it within the exception of section 17a (2), especially where malice has neither been alleged nor proved. Johnson v. Bruckheimer, (N. Y. 1909) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242.

(N. Y. 1909) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242.

Assault and battery.— A judgment for injury occasioned by an assault and battery is not released by a discharge in bankruptcy proceedings. In re Colaluca, (D. C. Mass. 1904) 133 Fed. 255, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 292; McChristal v. Clisbee, (1906) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 838, 190 Mass. 120, 5 Ann. Cas. 769, 76 N. E. 511.

Effect of giving bond for discharge as poor person. — Where a defendant against whom a judgment has been obtained for an assault, on being arrested on execution makes application to take the poor debtor's oath, and gives a recognizance therefor, such recognizance is merely a cumulative security for the original judgment, and a judgment subsequently rendered thereon constitutes a liability for a wilful and malicious injury to the person which is not released by a discharge in bankruptcy. In re Colaluca, (D. C. Mass. 1904) 133 Fed. 255, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 292.

A conversion of property is not a "wilful and malicious injury to person or property," within the meaning of section 17a (2); consequently a liability therefor is released by a discharge in bankruptey proceedings. Crawford v. Burke, (1904) 195 U. S. 176, 25 S. Ct. 9, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 147, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659; Tindle v. Birkett, (1907) 205 U. S. 185, 27 S. Ct. 430, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 762, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 121; In re Adler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 422, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240; In re Wenham, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 153 Fed. 910, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690; In re Ennis, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 755, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; Burnham v. Pidcock, (1901) 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590, 58 App. Div. 273, 68 N. Y. S. 1007; Fechter v. Postel, (1906) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 316, 114 App. Div. 776, 100 N. Y. S. 207; Lewis v. Shaw, (1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 868, 122 App. Div. 96, 106 N. Y. S. 1012; Kavanaugh v. McIntyre, (1908) 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 327, 128 App. Div. 722, 112 N. Y. S. 987; Maxwell v. Martin, (1909) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93, 130 App. Div. 80, 114 N. Y. S. 349.

See Kavanaugh v. McIntyre, (1908) 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 327, 128 App. Div. 722, 112 N. Y. S. 987, wherein it was said that a conversion which shows a design or willingness to inflict a wrong upon another, or a reckless disregard of the rights of another, rests on a different basis from the ordinary mere conversion of property.

A liability on account of a libel is not released by a discharge in bankruptcy. McDonald v. Brown, (1902) 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58, 23 R. I. 546, 51 Atl. 213; National Surety Co. v. Medlock, (Ga. 1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654.

A judgment for slander is not a liability from which a bankrupt is discharged; such judgment being within the exceptions provided for by section 17a (2) Sanderson v. Hunt, (1903) 116 Ky. 435, 3 Ann, Cas. 168, 76 S. W. 179,

III. MISCELLANEOUS.

Liabilities for alimony, due or to become due, are not released by a discharge of the debtor in bankruptcy proceedings. Audubon v. Shufeldt, (1901) 181 U. S. 575, 21 S. Ct. 735, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1009, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 829; Wetmore v. Markoe, (1904) 196 U. S. 68, 25 S. Ct. 172, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 390, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Shepard, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 187, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 837; In re Nowell, (D. C. Mass. 1900) 99 Fed. 931, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 837; Turner v. Turner, (D. C. Ind. 1901) 108 Fed. 785, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289; In re Smith, (N. D. N. Y. 1899) 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 67; Deen v. Bioomer, (1901) 191 111. 416, 61 N. E. 131; Welty v. Welty, (1902) 195 Ill. 335, 63 N. E. 161; People v. Grell, (1900) 65 N. Y. S. 522.

Judgment on decree of another state.—
It has been held that where a divorce has been decreed in one state, and alimony has been allowed therein, a judgment procured in another state, based upon such right to alimony is merely a money judgment which is released by a discharge in bankruptcy proceedings. In re Williams, (1909) 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 394, 118 N. Y. S. 562.

Support of wife or child. — Liabilities due for the maintenance or support of the bankrupt's wife or children are not affected by his discharge. Dunbar v. Dunbar, (1903) 190 U. S. 340, 23 S. Ct. 757, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1084, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139; In re Baker, (D. C. Kan. 1899) 96 Fed. 954, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101; In re Shepard, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 187; In re Hubbard, (N. D. Ill. 1899) 98 Fed. 710, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; McKittrick v. Cahoon, (1903) 10 Am, Bankr. Rep. 139 note, 89 Minn. 383, 95 N. W. 223.

The phrase "for maintenance or support of wife or child" refers only to the involuntary liability under the common law for support of wife and children, and to any one who relieves their want; and to liabilities accruing under bonds or the like, given for such support by requirement of courts and magistrates. Schellenberg v. Mullaney, (1906) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 542, 112 App. Div. 384, 98 N. Y. S. 432.

An agreement by a man to pay to his divorced wife an annuity so long as she remains unmarried, for her support and that of their children, is not dischargeable in bankruptcy. Dunbar v. Dunbar, (1903) 190 U. S. 340, 23 S. Ct. 757, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1084, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139.

Medical attendance furnished to wife or child.—The exception as to liabilities "for maintenance or support of wife or child" does not apply to a debt for medical attendance furnished to the wife or child of the bankrupt at his request, and while the normal family relations subsist between him and the recipient of the services. In re Ostrander, (E. D. N. Y. 1905) 139 Fed. 592, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96.

A liability for goods purchased by a husband, or parent, and used by the wife and children, is not within the meaning of section 17a (2). Schellenberg v. Mullaney, (1906)

16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 542, 112 App. Div. 384, 98 N. Y. S. 432.

Liability for seduction. — Under the express provision of the statute a liability accruing, or a judgment recovered, for the seduction of an unmarried female is not released by a discharge in bankruptcy. In re Maples, (D. C. Mont. 1901) 105 Fed. 919, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426; In re Freche, (D. C. N. J. 1901) 109 Fed. 620, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 479; Distler v. McCauley, (N. Y. 1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 491. See also Bond v. Milliken, (1906) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 811, 134 Ia. 447, 109 N. W. 774

Criminal conversation. — Even prior to the enactment of the amendment of 1903, which specifically excepts liabilities for criminal conversation, it was held that a judgment for damages for criminal conversation is one recovered in an action "for wilful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another" within the meaning of section 17a (2) Tinker v. Colwell, (1904) 193 U. S. 473, 24 S. Ct. 505, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 754, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 568, affirming (1902) 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 334, 169 N. Y. 531, 62 N. E. 668, which affirmed (N. Y. 1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 434.

Rep. 434.

Judgment for alienation of affections. — A judgment obtained by a wife, against another woman, for damages sustained by the wife by reason of the alienation of the affection of her husband, is not released by the discharge of the judgment debtor under proceedings in bankruptcy, where such alienation has been accomplished by schemes and devices of the judgment debtor, and resulted in the loss of support, and impairment of health, to the wife. Leicester v. Hoadley, (Kan. 1903) 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318.

Breach of promise to marry.—A liability accruing, or a judgment recovered, for the breach of a contract to marry, is released by a discharge in bankruptcy; and is not within the exceptions specified in section 17a (2). In re McCauley, (E. D. N. Y. 1900) 101 Fed. 223, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122; In re Fife, (W. D. Pa. 1901) 109 Fed. 880, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258; Finnegan v. Hall, (1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648, 35 Misc. 773, 72 N. Y. S. 347; Bond v. Milliken, (1906) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 811, 134 Ia. 447, 109 N. W. 774; Biela v. Urbanczyk, (1905) 38 Tex. Civ. App. 213, 85 S. W. 451. See also In re Brumbaugh, (D. C. Pa. 1904) 128 Fed. 971.

Thus it has been held that where, in an action for breach of promise to marry, there is no proof of the seduction of the plaintiff or of malice tending to show an attempted injury to character, a judgment is released by the defendant's discharge in bankruptcy, even though he went into bankruptcy for the sole purpose of evading the payment of such judgment. Finnegan v. Hall, (1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648, 35 Misc. 773, 72 N. Y. S. 377.

(3) [Debts not scheduled.] have not been duly scheduled in time for proof and allowance, with the name of the creditor if known to the bankrupt, unless such creditor had notice or actual knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy; or [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 550.]

Debts not duly scheduled in time for proof and allowance, with the name of the creditor if known to the bankrupt, are not released by the bankrupt's discharge, unless such creditor has notice or actual knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy. Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, (1902) 186 U. S. 181, 22 S. Ct. 857, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 1113, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Birkett v. Columbia Bank, (1904) 195 U. S. 345, 25 S. Ct. 38, 49 U. S. What constitutes due scheduling has been considered under section 7a (8), supra, p. 520.

Knowledge of bankruptcy proceedings.— Even though a debt has not been duly scheduled, as required by section 7a (8), it will be none the less discharged if the creditor has such knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy as will permit of his participation therein in time to prove his claim against the estate. Claster v. Soble, (1903) 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 631; Dight v. Chapman, (1904) 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 743, 44 Ore. 265, 75 Pac. 585; Kaufman v. Schreier, (1905) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314, 108 App. Div. 298, 95 N. Y. S. 729; Morrison v. Vaughan, (1907) 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704, 119 App. Div. 184, 104 N. Y. S. 169. And see also the same effect In re Beerman, (N. D. Ga. 1901) 112 Fed. 662; Santa Rosa Bankr. White, (1903) 139 Cal. 703, 73 Pac. 577; Alling v. Straka, (1905) 118 III. App. 184; Zimmerman v. Ketchum, (1903) 66 Kan. 98, 71 Pac. 264; Jones v. App. 403, 77 S. W. 492.

Time of acquiring knowledge. — In Birkett v. Columbia Bank, (1904) 195 U. S. 345, 25 S. Ct. 38, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 231, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 691 (affirming (1903) 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 481), it was said: "Actual knowledge of the proceedings contemplated by the section is a knowledge in time to avail a creditor of the benefits of the law, in time to give him an equal opportunity with other creditors; not a knowledge that may come so late as to deprive him of participation in the administration of the affairs of the estate or to deprive him of dividends."

Knowledge acquired after discharge, but in time to apply for revocation, insufficient.

Knowledge of bankruptcy proceedings on the part of a creditor of the bankrupt, which is not acquired until after discharge, though in time to prove his claim, and to move, under section 15, to revoke his discharge, is not the "actual knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy" which, under section 17, is essential to the release, by the discharge, of provable debts which have not been duly scheduled in time for proof and allowance. Birkett v. Columbia Bank, (1904) 195 U. S. 345, 25 S. Ct. 38, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 231, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 691.

(4) [Fraud, etc., in fiduciary capacity.] were created by his fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, or defalcation while acting as an officer or in any fiduciary capacity. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 550.]

A debt created by fraud, embezslement, misappropriation, or defalcation, while acting as an officer, or in any fiduciary capacity, will not be released by the discharge of the debtor in bankruptcy. Crawford v. Burke, (1904) 195 U. S. 176, 25 S. Ct. 9, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 147, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 668; In re Butts, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 120 Fed. 960, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 15; Harper v. Embezzlement by bank officer. — An indebtedness created by the embezzlement and misappropriation of the funds of a bank, by the debtor while acting in the capacity of vicepresident thereof, and having full control of its affairs, is one created by his fraud, embezzlement, and misappropriation, while acting in a fiduciary capacity, within the meaning of section 17a (4). Harper v. Rankin, (4th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 626, 72 C. C. A. 320,
15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608.

Officers of a corporation, where they get control, with an attendant fiduciary obligation, of the property of the corporation, are "officers" within section 17a (4). In re Gulick, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 186 Fed. 350.

In enacting section 17, cl. 4, Congress must be presumed to have known the construction placed by the courts on the words "fiduciary capacity" as used in former Bankrupt Acts. In re Harper, (W. D. Va. 1904) 133 Fed. 970, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 430.

It has been held that the fiduciary relation, specified in the statute is one which existed previously to, and independently of, the particular transaction from which the debt arises. Bryant v. Kinyon, (1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237, 127 Mich. 152, 86 N. W. 531, 53 L. R. A. 801.

in its terms as a debt which is not released by a discharge in bankruptcy. Crawford v. Burke, (1904) 195 U. S. 176, 25 S. Ct. 9, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 147; In re Basch, (S. D. N. Debt due by factor. — It is well settled that a debt due by a factor, to his principal, for money collected and which he refuses to pay over, is not a debt accruing in a fiduciary capacity, so as to prevent its release by a discharge in bankruptcy. Crawford v. Burke, (1904) 195 U. S. 176, 25 S. Ct. 9, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 147; In re Woods, (S. D. Ga. 1903) 121 Fed. 599, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615; Barrett v. Prince, (7th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 302, 74 C. C. A. 440; In re Adler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 422, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240; In re Gulick, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 186 Fed. 350.

Debt due by commission merchant. — A debt due by a bankrupt in the character of a commission merchant, arising out of his failure to account for the value of goods consigned to him for sale on commission, on a contract to return the goods or their specific proceeds, is not a debt created by the bankrupt's "fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity," and therefore will be released by his discharge in bankruptcy. In re Basch,

Rep. 235.

A naked bailee of money, under an express contract to keep the same safely and pay it over on request, is not acting in a fiduciary capacity within the meaning of section 17a (4). Lewis v. Shaw, (1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 866, 122 App. Div. 99, 106 N. Y. S. 1012.

Conversion by pledgee. — An action at law for the conversion by brokers of stocks owned by plaintiff, but held by defendants as pledgees, although it is alleged that they induced the plaintiff to purchase such stocks by fraud, is not one to recover a debt created by defendants' "fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity." In re Ennis, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 755, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679.

Misappropriation by railroad ticket agent.

— A judgment obtained by a railroad company, against a ticket agent, for money collected by him for tickets sold and misappropriated to his own use, is not one for a debt created by his fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, or defakation, while acting as an officer or in a fiduciary capacity within the meaning of section 17a (4). In re Wenham, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 153 Fed. 910, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690.

Debt arising from implied understanding on conveyance of property. — The words "fiduciary capacity" having reference only to technical trusts, a debt arising out of an implied understanding, had on a conveyance in the ordinary form of an absolute deed from R. to M. of certain parts of R.'s real estate, no trust being expressly declared, is not excepted from the operation of a discharge. Reeves v. McCracken, (N. J. 1905) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 680.

COURTS AND PROCEDURE THEREIN.

SEC. 18. PROCESS, PLEADINGS, AND ADJUDICATIONS.—a [Service of petition—return—publication.] Upon the filing of a petition for involuntary bankruptcy, service thereof, with a writ of subpoena, shall be made upon the person therein named as defendant in the same manner that service of such process is now had upon the commencement of a suit in equity in the courts of the United States, except that it shall be returnable within fifteen days, unless the judge shall for cause fix a longer time; but in case personal service can not be made, then notice shall be given by publication in the same manner and for the same time as provided by law for notice by publication in suits to enforce a legal or equitable lien in courts of the United States, except that, unless the judge shall otherwise direct, the order shall be published not more than once a week for two consecutive weeks, and the return day shall be ten days after the last publication unless the judge shall for cause fix a longer time. An action for malicious prosecution will lie for the institution and prosecution of a proceeding in bankruptcy without probable cause and with a malicious intent, although not accompanied by any actual seizure of the alleged bankrupt's property. Wilkinson v. Goodfellow-Brooks Shoe Co., (E. D. Mo. 1905) 141 Fed. 218, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 554.

All process, summons, and subpœnas should issue out of the court, under the seal thereof, and be tested by the clerk. In re Pierce, (D. C. Colo. 1901) 111 Fed. 516, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747; In re Abbey Press, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 134 Fed. 51, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11.

Alias writ may issue. — The fact that the subpoena, issued for the defendant in involuntary proceedings in bankruptcy, was not served before the return day, does not terminate the proceedings; but the court has power to grant an alias subpoena. Gleason v. Smith, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 895, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602.

The return day should be fixed by the issuance of the subpœna. In re L. Humbert Co., (N. D. Ia. 1900) 100 Fed. 439, 4 Am. Bankr Rep. 76.

The official forms should be used when their use is possible. Mahoney v. Ward, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 100 Fed. 278, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770; Gage v. Bell, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 124 Fed. 371, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696; In 76 White, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 199, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 241.

Section 18a refers only to the manner of the service of the subpœna, and not to its form. It does not require that the writ of subpœna shall contain the memorandum provided for by equity rule 12. Matter of Wing Yick, (D. C. Hawaii 1905) 13 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 360.

Application of rules of practice generally.—General order 37 provides for the use of the equity rules, and the practice and procedure in cases at law, as nearly as may be; and authorizes the modification thereof, and a change in the time allowed for the return of process, for appearance, pleadings, etc. Shute v. Patterson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 509, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 99.

Service — Personal service on bankrupt unnecessary. — The personal service referred to in section 18 is not personal service upon the alleged bankrupt himself. In re Norton, (N. D. N. Y. 1906) 148 Fed. 301, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504. See also In re Magid-Hope Silk Mfg. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1901) 110 Fed.

352, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610.

Thus it has been held that service by leaving a copy of the petition in involuntary proceedings, with the subpœna, with the clerk of a hotel, of which the bankrupt was proprietor, and where he usually resided, sufficient, although the bankrupt was absent in another town, sick and unconscious, and died two days later without regaining consciousness. In re Risteen, (D. C. Mass, 1903) 122 Fed. 732, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 494.

So also service may be made either personally or by leaving the petition and subpœna at the bankrupt's dwelling house or usual place of abode, with some adult person who is a member of or resident in the family, if at the time of the service he has such place of abode or dwelling house, and such adult person is there found. In re Norton, (N. D. N. Y. 1906) 148 Fed. 301, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504.

Service outside district. — Where service of the order on a petition in involuntary bankruptcy is made upon the defendant outside the district, without an appearance on his part, no order can be made which will apply to him in person, but the proceeding will affect only property within the district which can come into possession of the trustee. In re Appel, (D. C. Neb. 1900) 103 Fed. 931, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722.

Service by publication. — If the bankrupt cannot be found and cannot be served within the district, the court will, on a proper showing, make an order for service by publication. In re Murray, (N. D. Ia. 1899) 96 Fed. 600, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601.

Answer - Generally. - The bankrupt, or any creditor, may answer the petition, and set up any defense or counterclaim which may be available as a good and sufficient reason why an adjudication of bankruptcy should not be made. As in the case of an answer in other equitable proceedings, the facts relied upon must be stated with as much clearness and certainty as they will permit of, for the purpose of affording the petitioners an opportunity of meeting them, and giving the court the information necessary to judge of their sufficiency. Form of answer. — An answer to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy should follow the simple form of denial prescribed by form No. 6. If responsive to multifarious matter in the petition, or unnecessarily defensive, it must be prepared in proper form, and refiled as of the original date; the original answer, however, remaining on file. Mather v. Coe, (N. D. Ohio 1899) 92 Fed. 333, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504; Bradley Timber Co. v. White, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 121 Fed. 779, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329.

Formal amendments to an answer filed by a creditor to a petition in involuntary bank-ruptcy against his debtor may be made at any time before adjudication. In re Harris, (N. D. Ala. 1907) 155 Fed. 216, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635; Knapp, etc., Co. v. Drew, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 160 Fed. 413, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355.

The answer will be taken as true in the absence of a replication. In re Taylor, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 728, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515; Brinkley v. Smithwick, (E. D. N. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 686, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Failure to deny matter alleged in petition equivalent to admission. — The averment in a petition for an adjudication of bankruptcy that the respondent is not a wage-earner, not being denied in the answer, may be taken as admitted. Hoffschlaeger Co. v. Young Nap, (D. C. Hawaii 1904) 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 517.

An issue as to the sufficiency of an answer to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy cannot be raised by demurrer. Goldman v. Smith, (D. C. Ky. 1899) 93 Fed. 182, 1 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 266.

Reservation of right to move for dismissal. It has been held that where an alleged involuntary bankrupt admitted his insolvency in the answer, a reservation of a right to move to dismiss the proceedings for irregularities and want of notice is too indefinite to be considered. Brinkley v. Smithwick, (E.

D. N. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 686, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500.

Creditors cannot answer voluntary petition. The statute does not authorize the creditors of a proposed voluntary bankrupt to file answers in opposition to his petition for adjudication. In re Jehu, (N. D. Ia. 1899) 94 Fed. 638, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498; In re Ives, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 911, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692; In re Carleton, (D.
 C. Mass. 1902) 115 Fed. 246, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270.

Withdrawal of answer. — A debtor who contests an involuntary proceeding in bank, ruptcy against him does so in his own behalf and not in the interest of his creditors, and is at liberty to withdraw his opposition at any time, when done in good faith, without notice to his creditors. In re Billing, (M. D. Ala. 1906) 145 Fed. 395, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Demurrer. — The petition when insufficient may be met by a demurrer. Green River Deposit Bank v. Craig, (W. D. Ky. 1901) 110

Fed. 137, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381.

A demurrer, however, will be deemed to have been waived by answering to the merits. In re Cliffe, (E. D. Pa. 1899) 94 Fed. 354, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317; Leidigh Carriage Co. r. Stengel, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1899) 95 Fed. 637, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 385; In re Herzikopf, C. D. 1999, 118 Fed. 101 Am. Bankr. (S. D. Cal. 1902) 118 Fed. 101, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90.

And although a demurrer to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy proceedings is sustained, the petition will not, as a rule, be dismissed without first giving the petitioners an opportunity to apply for leave to amend. In re Brett, (D. C. N. J. 1904) 130 Fed. 981, 12

c [Verification of pleadings.] All pleadings setting up matters of fact shall be verified under oath. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 551.]

Verification - By petitioners. - Where the truth of the matters of fact alleged in a petition in involuntary bankruptcy is within the knowledge of the petitioning creditors, the petition should be verified by them in person. In re Nelson, (W. D. Wis, 1899) 98 Fed. 76, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 556. See also Matter of McConnell, (W. D. N. Y. 1904) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 418.

But a petition in bankruptcy is not subject to a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, because of the failure of one of the petitioners to verify it. Green River Deposit Bank v. Craig, (W. D. Ky. 1901) 110 Fed. 137, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381.

An authorized agent is qualified to verify such a petition when his principals are at a distance and he is acquainted with the facts. Matter of Levingston, (D. C. Hawaii 1905) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357.

Verification by attorney. — But the statute does not require a petition in involuntary bankruptcy to be verified by the creditor personally, and such verification may be made by his attorney if he has knowledge of the facts. In re Chequasset Lumber Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 112 Fed. 56, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep.

87; In re Herzikopf, (S. D. Cal. 1902) 118 Fed. 101, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90; In re Hunt, (M. D. Ia. 1902) 118 Fed. 282, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; In re Vastbinder, (M. D. Pa. 1903) 126 Fed. 417, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118; Rogers r. De Soto Placer Min. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 407, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252; In re Levingston, (D. C. Hawaii 1905) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357.

But where an attorney in fact for the petitioning creditors swore that the statements made in the petition were true to the best of his knowledge and belief, without distinguishing the facts based on knowledge from those based on information only, the verification was held to be insufficient. In re Vastbinder, (M. D. Pa. 1903) 126 Fed. 417, 11 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 118.

Verification by corporation.—A corporation can act only through its officers or agents, and where its name is subscribed by an individual to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, and the petition purports to be verified by the same person, it is necessary that such person should set forth under oath or affirmation that he was authorized to sign and verify the petition on behalf of the corporation. The omission of such an averment, unless remedied, is fatal, but is not an incurable defect jurisdictional or otherwise. In re Bellah, (D. C. Del. 1902) 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310.

Verification by corporation and partner-ship. — A petition in involuntary bankruptcy, in which a corporation and a partnership join, may be verified for the corporation by its president, and for the partnership by one of its members. Walker v. Woodside, (C. C.

A. 9th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 680, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132.

Amendment. - Defects or irregularities in the verification of a petition may be amended. In re Bellah, (D. C. Del. 1902) 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310; In re Vastbinder, (M. D. Pa. 1903) 126 Fed. 417, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118. See also In re Chequasset Lumber Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 112 Fed. 56, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 87.

d [Determining issues of fact - jury trial.] If the bankrupt, or any of his creditors, shall appear, within the time limited, and controvert the facts alleged in the petition, the judge shall determine, as soon as may be, the issues presented by the pleadings, without the intervention of a jury, except in cases where a jury trial is given by this Act, and makes [sic] the adjudication or dismiss the petition. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 551.]

Cross-reference: As to

Necessity of notice to creditors prior to dismissal of petition, see section 59g.

Determination of issues - By judge. - The statute requires that the testimony be weighed and considered by a district judge, and that his personal judgment be exercised in the determination of each issue, leaving no authority for delegation of either duty to a ministerial officer. Ex p. Steele, (N. D. Ala. 1908) 162 Fed. 694, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446; In re King, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 694.

But reference to a special master, or like ministerial officer, may be ordered, to hear and report the testimony (with or without advisory findings thereupon), when an issue triable by the judge alone involves extended testimony, and its hearing in open court appears to be impracticable. The court, however, can confer no authority upon the referee (as master or otherwise) to decide these issues, nor to rule thereon either finally or temporarily. Clark v. American Mfg., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 962, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; In re Lacov, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 134 Fed. 237, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 400; In re King, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 694.

As to jury trials see generally the annotation under section 19, infra, p. 586.

Evidence — Burden of proof. — On the hearing to determine whether or not the debtor shall be adjudged bankrupt, the burden of proof rests with the petitioners, and in order to warrant an adjudication it is necessary to establish every essential allegation made in the petition. In re West, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1901) 108 Fed. 940, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734; In re Scott, (D. C. Mass. 1901) 111 Fed. 144, Am. Bankr. Rep. 39; In re Pilger, (E. D. Wis. 1902) 118 Fed. 206, 9 Am. Bankr. As to the matter which it is necessary to allege in the petition, and consequently to prove on the determination of the issue, see the annotation under section 59b.

Adjudication on pleadings. — Where, after the filing of answers to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy presenting issues of fact, the petitioners move for an adjudication on the pleadings, they thereby admit the facts properly pleaded in the answers, in accordance with the general rules of equity practice; and the only question presented is as to the legal sufficiency of the answers. If the motion is denied, the defendants are entitled to a final decree dismissing the petition. In re Waugh, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 281, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187.

Adjudication where two petitions are filed. — Under general orders in bankruptcy No. 7, which provides that "in case two or more petitions shall be filed against the same individual in different districts the first hearing shall be had in the district in which the debtor has his domicile," it has been held that the first hearing should be had in the district in which he has had his domicile during the greater part of the preceding six months, and which has jurisdiction on the ground of such domicile, rather than in a district to which he subsequently removed and in which he was domiciled at the time of the filing of the petitions. In re Isaacson, (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 161 Fed. 777, 20 Am. Bankr.

Where two petitions are filed alleging different acts of bankruptcy, and the defendant answers but one, which charges the earlier act, general order No. 7 has no application; and the case will proceed upon the petition which is confessed, the other remaining in abeyance. In re Harris, (N. D. Ala. 1907) 155 Fed. 216, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

Effect of adjudication - Places debtor's property in custodia legis. - An adjudication in bankruptcy operates in rem and places the bankrupt's entire estate, including property previously transferred in fraud of creditors, in the custody of the law, and under the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy, in which court alone all persons claiming rights in the estate, or seeking to participate in it, must assert their claims. Carter v. Hobbs, (D. C. Ind. 1899) 92 Fed. 594, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215; Clay v. Waters, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 385. And see the annotation under section 70 a and a (5).

But as to matters which were not in issue the rule is otherwise; thus an adjudication in involuntary bankruptcy is not res judicata as to the validity or amount of the petitioning creditors' claims when offered for allowance, or to share in dividends. f [Judge absent — reference to referee.] If the judge is absent from the district, or the division of the district in which the petition is pending, on the next day after the last day on which pleadings may be filed, and none have been filed by the bankrupt or any of his creditors, the clerk shall forthwith refer the case to the referee. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 551.]

Reference on absence of judge.—If the judge of the court of bankruptcy is absent from the district, or the division of the district, in which the petition is filed, at the time of its filing, the clerk should forthwith refer the case to the proper referee. In refurray, (N. D. Ia. 1899) 96 Fed. 600, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601. See also Gilbertson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 672, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32.

When petition may be referred. — The clerk cannot refer a petition in involuntary bankruptcy to the referee for adjudication, except in cases where no issue is made by the bankrupt or any creditor upon the facts averred in the petition, and where the judge is absent from the district or from the division of the district where the petition is filed, on the next day after the last day on which pleadings may be filed. In re L. Humbert Co., (N. D. Ia. 1900) 100 Fed. 439, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78

Reference by deputy clerk.—Under R. S. sec. 558, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 74, authorizing the appointment of a deputy district court clerk, such clerk has power to perform all the ministerial acts of the clerk, including the power to make an order of reference on the filing of a bankruptcy petition. But see Bray v. Cobb, (E. D. N. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153, wherein it was held that a deputy clerk of a court of bankruptcy has no authority to refer a petition in bankruptcy to the referee.

g [Hearing on voluntary petition — absence of judge.] Upon the filing of a voluntary petition the judge shall hear the petition and make the adjudication or dismiss the petition. If the judge is absent from the district, or the division of the district in which the petition is filed at the time of the filing, the clerk shall forthwith refer the case to the referee. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 551.]

Dismissal before adjudication.—Upon the filing of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, and before an adjudication thereon, creditors may move to set the petition aside or dismiss it, on the ground that the court has no jurisdiction, the residence or domicile of the debtor being in another district; and thereupon the court may inquire into the facts of jurisdiction, and make the adjudication or dismiss the petition, according to the result. In re Waxelbaum, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 98 Fed. 589, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392.

Dismissal after adjudication.—An adjudication of bankruptcy made exparts on a voluntary petition is not conclusive on creditors although not appealed from; and they may, by petition, ask a dismissal of the proceedings upon facts appearing on the bankrupt's examination, and a showing that the court is without jurisdiction. In re Garneau, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1904) 127 Fed. 677, 11 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 679.

When proceedings will not be dismissed. — Where an order of adjudication has been entered, without objection, on a voluntary petition alleging the petitioner's residence within the district, and the court has proceeded to administer the estate, the proceeding will not be dismissed, on motion of a judgment creditor, on the ground that at the time of the application the bankrupt had not resided in the district for the required period, if it appears that the petition was filed in good faith and the bankrupt is still a resident of the district, but in such case the order of adjudication will be set aside and a new one entered as of a later date. In re Tully, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 156 Fed. 634, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604.

Effect of pendency of involuntary petition.—Where a bankrupt, against whom an involuntary petition is pending, files a voluntary petition, notice should be given the creditors who filed the involuntary petition before proceeding on the voluntary one, and such steps should then be taken with respect to the two petitions as appears to be for the best interest of the estate. SEC. 19. JURY TRIALS.—a [When demandable — waiver.] A person against whom an involuntary petition has been filed shall be entitled to have a trial by jury, in respect to the question of his insolvency, except as herein otherwise provided, and any act of bankruptcy alleged in such petition to have been committed, upon filing a written application therefor at or before the time within which an answer may be filed. If such application is not filed within such time, a trial by jury shall be deemed to have been waived. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 551.]

Right to trial by jury. - The only issues on which a person against whom an involuntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed is entitled of right to a jury trial are with respect to his insolvency, and the commission of the acts of bankruptcy with which he is charged. Elliott v. Toeppner, (1902) 187 U. S. 327, 23 S. Ct. 133, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 200, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50; Simonson v. Sinsheimer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 100 Fed. 426, 3 Am. Bankr. Cudd, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 603.

Right to jury trial absolute where it exists.— The right to a jury trial, on written application therefor, for the purposes specified in section 19a, is absolute, and cannot be withheld at the discretion of the court. In that respect it differs from the trial of an issue out of chancery, which the court of equity is not bound to grant, nor bound by the verdict if such trial be granted. The court cannot as the chancellor may, enter judgment contrary to the verdict; but the verdict may be set aside, or the judgment may be reversed for error of law, as in common-law cases. Elliott v. Toeppner, (1902) 187 U. S. 327, 23 S. Ct. 133, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 200, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54.

Who may demand jury trial. — The right to a jury trial of the question of an involuntary bankrupt's insolvency, and of alleged acts of bankruptcy, is limited to the bankrupt; and it cannot be extended to intervening creditors contesting such issues. In re Herzikopf, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1903) 121 Fed.

544, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745.

Time to make demand. — In a case of involuntary bankruptcy a demand for a trial by jury, as to the commission of the acts of bankruptcy alleged, and the fact of solvency, must be made by the debtor at or before the expiration of the time allowed for an answer, unless the time is extended by the court. Bray v. Cobb, (E. D. N. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

Submission of questions incidental to insolvency — Question as to partnership. — The respondent in proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy is entitled to go to the jury upon everything affecting the question of his solvency; and where a determination of an issue as to whether he was a partner, as charged, decides the question of his solvency, such issue must be submitted to a jury. Buffalo Milling Co. v. Lewisburg Dairy Co., (M. D. Pa. 1908) 159 Fed. 319, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 279.

But in In re Neasmith, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 160, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128, it was held that on an involuntary bankruptcy petition against the members of an insolvent partnership, the question whether one of the alleged partners was in fact a member of the firm is not a question which should be submitted to a jury.

Amount of indebtedness and valuation of property.— An issue as to the insolvency of an alleged bankrupt involves, as elements, the questions of the amount of his indebtedness, and the fair valuation of his property, both of which he is entitled to have determined by a jury; and the court cannot make a preliminary finding as to the validity and amount of the claims of certain creditors which will be conclusive on the jury upon the trial of such issue. Schloss v. Strellow, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1907) 156 Fed. 662, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 359.

Rep. 359.

Trial according to common law. — When, on an issue of fact as to the existence of ground for adjudication, a jury trial is demanded as of right, the trial proceeds acording to the course of common law. Elliott v. Toeppner, (1902) 187 U. S. 327, 23 S. Ct. 133, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 200, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54; Duncan v. Landis, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1901) 106 Fed. 839, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649; In re Ward, (D. C. N. J. 1908) 161 Fed. 755, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482

Fed. 755, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482.

Burden of proof. — On a trial by jury the burden of proving insolvency was on the petitioners. McGowan v. Knittel, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 453, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

A motion by both parties for a peremptory instruction is equivalent to a request for a finding of the facts by the court, and, if the court directs a verdict for one of the parties, both are concluded by the facts thereby found. Bradley Timber Co. v. White, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 121 Fed. 779, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329.

Waiver of right to jury trial — Failure to demand. — The failure of an alleged involuntary bankrupt to formally apply for a jury, in writing, at or before the time when an answer is required, operates as a waiver of the statutory right to a trial by jury. Bray v. Cobb, (E. D. N. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; Oil Well Supply Co. v. Hall, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 876, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738; In re Neasmith, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 160, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128.

Waiver by admissions made in answer.— The statute does not entitle an alleged bankrupt to a jury trial where by his answer he admits his insolvency and the commission of the alleged acts of bankruptcy, but alleges that he is not amenable to bankruptcy proceedings because chiefly engaged in farming. Stephens v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 341, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 560.

Failure to deny commission of act of bankruptcy. — In the case of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy alleging the making of a general assignment for creditors, where the defense set up by the debtor is that the petitioning creditors are estopped, by their conduct, with reference to the assignment, to maintain a petition based thereon, he is not entitled to a trial by jury. Simonson v. Sinsheimer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 100 Fed. 426, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824.

- b [Attendance of jury certifying case to other court.] If a jury is not in attendance upon the court, one may be specially summoned for the trial, or the case may be postponed, or, if the case is pending in one of the district courts within the jurisdiction of a circuit court of the United States, it may be certified for trial to the circuit court sitting at the same place, or by consent of parties when sitting at any other place in the same district, if such circuit court has or is to have a jury first in attendance. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 551.]
- c [Laws as to jury trials applicable.] The right to submit matters in controversy, or an alleged offense under this Act, to a jury shall be determined and enjoyed, except as provided by this Act, according to the United States laws now in force or such as may be hereafter enacted in relation to trials by jury. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 551.]

Submission of matters in controversy to jury. — The submission of issues of fact to a jury in an involuntary bankruptcy proceeding, under section 19c, is within the discretion of the judge of the bankruptcy court, and the verdict returned is wholly advisory. A notary public is an officer authorized to administer oaths in proceedings in the courts of the United States by Act of Aug. 15, 1876, c. 304, 19 Stat. L. 206, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 379; and an oath taken before him is sufficiently authenticated, prima facie, by what purport to be the notary's official signature and seal, although made in a different state from that in which the proceedings are pending, and without regard to the special requirements of the state statutes. In re Pancoast, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 129 Fed. 643, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275. See also In re Kindt, (S. D. Ia. 1900) 98 Fed. 403, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 443; In re Kimball, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 100 Fed. 777, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 144.

A notary's certificate of acknowledgment to the power of attorney to a proxy of the bankrupt's creditor is sufficient, though having no venue, where it complies with form No. 21. In re Henschel, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 443, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662, reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 109 Fed. 861, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305.

Verification before attorney for affiant.—
It has been held that it is not a valid objection to the proof of a claim against the estate of a bankrupt, that the officer taking the verification thereof is the creditor's attorney. In re Kimball, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 100 Fed. 777, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 144.
But see In re Brumelkamp, (N. D. N. Y. 1800) 25 Fed. 214, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218

But see In re Brumelkamp, (N. D. N. Y. 1899) 95 Fed. 814, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318, wherein it was held that the verification of the petition and schedules were defective in that they were made before a notary public who was the attorney of the bankrupt.

But the fact that the notary, before whom the oath was taken, subsequently becomes the affiant's attorney, does not invalidate the verification. In re Kindt, (S. D. Ia. 1900) 98 Fed. 403, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 443.

A justice of the peace, if authorized by the state law to take acknowledgments, may take the acknowledgment of a creditor to a letter of attorney to be used in the selection of a trustee. In re Roy, (W. D. N. Y. 1910) 185 Fed. 551, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4.

(3) [Diplomatic or consular officers.] diplomatic or consular officers of the United States in any foreign country. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]

Diplomatic and consular officers. -- An acknowledgment of a power of attorney before a diplomatic or consular officer in a foreign country is sufficient to authorize the proof of a creditor's claim before the referee. In re Sugenheimer, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 91 Fed. 744, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425.

b [Affirmations.] Any person conscientiously opposed to taking an oath may, in lieu thereof, affirm. Any person who shall affirm falsely shall be punished as for the making of a false oath. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]

SEC. 21. EVIDENCE. — a [Compulsory attendance of witnesses.] A court of bankruptcy may, upon application of any officer, bankrupt, or creditor, by order require any designated person, including the bankrupt and his wife, to appear in court or before a referee or the judge of any State court, to be examined concerning the acts, conduct, or property of a bankrupt whose estate is in process of administration under this Act: [(Amended 1903) 32 Stat. L. 798. ]

Purpose of examination — For trustee's information. — The examination of a witness by the trustee, under section 21a, is taken solely for his information to enable him to act intelligently in the premises, and to take such steps as may be necessary for the protection and preservation of the estate. For discovery. — The provisions of the Bankruptcy Act authorizing the examination of third persons as witnesses in bankruptcy proceedings, and requiring them to produce books and documents when called for, are intended to enable creditors to find grounds of opposition to the bankrupt's discharge, if any exist, and to enable the trustee to discover assets of the estate which may be applied to the payment of the bankrupt's debts.

The examination of the bankrupt has been considered under section 7a (9); therefore the annotation following is confined to the examination of third persons.

Right to have examination discretionary. While the statute authorizes the court, on a creditor's application, to summon a third person for examination regarding the affairs or estate of a bankrupt, it does not give a creditor an unqualified right to demand the issuance of such a summons, the awarding of which is in all cases discretionary. In re Andrews, (D. C. Mass. 1904) 130 Fed. 383.

Evamination of claimant against estate. -A party in interest, objecting to the allowance of a claim proved against the estate of a bankrupt, is entitled, in support of his objection, to examine the claimant and other witnesses, if their attendance can be secured without embarrassing delay. In re Sumner, (E. D. N. Y. 1900) 101 Fed. 224, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123.

Adverse claimant may be examined irrespective of where he may be sued. — The provisions of the Bankruptcy Act determining the forum in which suits by a trustee in bankruptcy against an adverse claimant may be brought, do not in any way limit the right of the trustee to examine any competent witness concerning the acts, conduct, or property of the bankrupt; and he may examine a creditor, whose claim he disputes, concerning the extent and nature of the bankrupt's alleged indebtedness to him, without regard to the question as to what court, federal or state, would have jurisdiction of the trustee's suit against such creditor if he should decide to sue. In re Cliffe, (E. D. Pa. 1899) 97 Fed. 540, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257.

Examination of secured creditor. — Where a bankruptcy proceeding has been referred generally to the referee, he has jurisdiction to order a secured creditor to appear before him for examination. In re Abbey Press, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 134 Fed. 51, 13 Am.

Trustee in insolvency proceedings.— A trustee in bankruptcy may require the examination of a trustee in insolvency appointed under the state laws more than four months before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, concerning the disposition made by him of the bankrupt's assets. In re Pursell, (D. C. Conn. 1902) 114 Fed. 371, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96.

A bankrupt's husband cannot be compelled to testify without payment to him of his lawful fees. In re Marcus, (D. C. Vt. 1908) 160

Fed. 229, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 397.

Waiver of objection to subpæna. — Where a witness appeared for examination before a referee in bankruptcy, without objection on the ground that the subpæna was not sealed, it was held that the defect was waived. In re Abbey Press, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 134 Fed. 51, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11.

Need not be a suit pending.—It is not necessary to the ordering of such an examination that there should be a suit pending by or against the bankrupt or his estate. In re Fixen, (S. D. Cal. 1899) 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 822.

Examination of books and papers. — The right to examine witnesses, under section 21a, includes the right to examine such books and written instruments as relate to the acts, conduct, or property of the bankrupt, and are under the control or in the possession of the witness. In re Fixen, (S. D. Cal. 1899) 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822; In re Hark, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 136 Fed. 986, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624; In re Hess, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 136 Fed. 988, 14 Am. Bankr. Relevancy for court to determine. — A witness cannot refuse to produce the books and papers called for, or to answer questions relating thereto, on the ground that they contain nothing relating to the bankrupt's property, as this matter is not left to the opinion of the witness, but must be determined by the court. In re Fixen, (S. D. Cal. 1899) 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822.

Examination asked in bad faith will be denied.—An application by a creditor for leave to examine the books of a bankrupt, in the hands of his trustee, should be denied where it fairly appears that it is not made in good faith in his own interest, but in the interest of one who is not a creditor and who has no right to such examination. In re Sully, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 142 Fed. 895, 15

Am. Bankr. Rep. 304.

Application for examination — Who may apply. — The application for the examination of a witness, under section 21a, may be made by any officer, the bankrupt, or a creditor. In re Jehu, (N. D. Rep. 280; In re Robinson, (D. C. Minn. 1910) 179 Fed. 724; In re Thompson, (W. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 874.

Any creditor may apply for examination.—At the first meeting of creditors, in a proceeding in bankruptcy, any person who is actually a creditor of the bankrupt, and whose debt is provable under the Act, is entitled to examine the bankrupt, although he has not made formal proof of his claim; and the fact that his name is included in the bankrupt's list of creditors will be prima facie sufficient evidence of his having a provable debt. In re Walker, (D. C. N. D. 1899) 96 Fed. 550, 3

Am. Bankr. Rep. 35.

Formal application unnecessary.—An order made by a referee in bankruptcy, at the instance of the trustee, requiring a designated person to appear and be examined as a witness concerning the acts, conduct, and property of the bankrupt, is valid without a formal application showing what questions are to be asked upon the examination, or as to what particular facts the witness is to be interrogated. The simple application or demand of the trustee for such an order is all that is required to support it. In re Howard, (N. D. Cal. 1899) 95 Fed. 415, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582.

Ancillary jurisdiction.—A United States District Court has ancillary jurisdiction to order the examination of witnesses, under section 21a, in aid of a proceeding pending in another district. Elkus, Petitioner, (1910) 216 U. S. 115, 30 S. Ct. 377 (relying on Babbitt v. Dutcher. (1910) 216 U. S. 102, 30 S. Ct. 372); In re Sutter, (S. D. N. Y.

1904) 131 Fed. 654, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632; In re Robinson, (D. C. Minn, 1910) 179 Fed. And see also, as to the right to take depositions of witnesses residing out of the district, the annotation under subdivision bof this section, infra, p. 592. As to the right to exercise ancillary jurisdiction generally, see section 2 (20) and the annotation thereunder, supra, p. 480.

Where it is sought to examine a resident of another state, in support of a creditor's specifications of objection to a bankrupt's discharge, an application for an order requiring the witness to appear before a referee in bankruptcy and submit to examination should be made to the federal District Court of the district wherein the witness resides. In re Robinson, (D. C. Minn. 1910) 179 Fed. 724.

Notice of examination. - No notice need be given to the bankrupt of the examination of a witness by the trustee, under section 21a. In re Cobb, (D. C. Mass. 1901) 7 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 104.

Where a claimant against the bankrupt estate had no notice, at the time of the examination of the bankrupt and other witnesses, that the evidence taken thereon would be used against him on the hearing of his claim, it was held that such evidence was inadmissible against him. In re Hersey, (N. D. Ia. 1909) 171 Fed. 1004, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. See also the annotation under section

Conduct of examination. - As a general rule the examination must be confined to an inquiry as to the acts, conduct, and property of the bankrupt; and while the scope of such examination is necessarily broad, and considerable latitude must be allowed, matter which is clearly immaterial and irrelevant should be excluded. Ordinarily the examination is made by the trustee, and after his appointment a creditor should apply to him. It the trustee refuses to undertake the examination, the creditor may apply to the court for an order direct-ing him to do so. To order the trustee to examine is manifestly a matter of discretion. Doubtless the creditor may apply to the court in order to carry on the examination himself, but the court is not wholly without discretion to refuse the application. The examination of third persons concerning the bankrupt estate is anomalous; and, if wholly beyond the control of the court's discretion, it would be oppressive. In re Andrews, (D. C. Mass. 1904) 130 Fed. 383.

Determining competency of witness.— Where, in a proceeding before a referee in bankruptcy, a question arises concerning the competency of a witness, the referee should decide it in the first instance, and should not certify the question to the court until requested to do so in a proper manner. In re Ruos, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 159 Fed. 252, 20

Am. Bankr. Rep. 281.

Competency of witness as to transactions with deceased person. — In a proceeding in a federal court, the competency of a witness to testify to a transaction with a deceased person is covered by R. S. sec. 858, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 1116, and is to be governed by that section, and not by the statutes of the state. Smith v. Au Gres Tp., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 257, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745.

Determining relevancy and materiality of questions. - The witness cannot refuse to answer questions relating to the bankrupt's property on the ground that the inquiry is irrelevant and immaterial; the question of relevancy and materiality being one for the court. People's Bank v. Brown, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1902) 112 Fed. 652, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 475; In re Ruos, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 159 Fed. 252, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 281.

Full and frank answers required. — Section 21a should be liberally construed, so as to enforce full and frank answers by a witness in aid of the bankruptcy proceedings. In re Carley, (D. C. Ky. 1901) 106 Fed. 862, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 554.

Disclosure of personal affairs. - A question should not be excluded, or the witness be excused from replying to it, because of his assertion that his answer, if made, would disclose the personal affairs of himself or of others, not material to the subject of the inquiry. People's Bank v. Brown, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1902) 112 Fed. 652, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 475.

But the statute does not authorize an inquiry as to the private affairs of a witness, which have no relation to the "acts, conduct, or property" of the bankrupt. In re Carley, (D. C. Ky. 1901) 106 Fed. 862, 5 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 554.

Objection that testimony may be subsequently used against witness. - A creditor of the bankrupt, being examined as a witness in the proceedings, cannot refuse to answer questions concerning the nature, extent, or evidences of his claims against the bankrupt, on the ground that his answers may furnish evidence which may be used against him in a civil suit thereafter to be brought by the trustee in bankruptcy. In re Cliffe, (E. D. Pa. 1899) 97 Fed. 540, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257.

A state statute which provides a rule of evidence will be enforced in the court of bankruptcy. In re Reid, (E. D. Mich. 1906) 155 Fed. 933, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477.

Examination before masters and commissioners.—The bankruptcy law gives the court power to appoint special masters, or commissioners, to hold hearings under section 21a. In re Stark, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 694, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 467.

Privileged communications. — The question whether certain communications are privileged is to be determined by the court and not by the witness. People's Bank v. Brown, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1902) 112 Fed. 652, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 475; In re Reid, (E. D. Mich. 1906) 155 Fed. 933, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477.

But testimony, although privileged, may be used for all purposes, when once it is brought out. In re Bendheim, (S. D. N. Y. 1910)

Incriminating evidence.—A witness called under the provisions of section 21a will not be obliged to give incriminating evidence against himself; and this rule also applies to documentary evidence, although the court may order the production of the writing to ascertain, by inspection, whether the objection thereto is well founded. In re Feldstein, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 103 Fed. 269, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 321; In re Smith, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 112 Fed. 509, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213; In re Kanter, (S. D. N. Right of witness to have aid of counsel.—

The right of a witness, other than the bankrupt, to have the aid of counsel at a hearing under section 21s, is discretionary with the court, but will usually be permitted where the examination is of such a nature as to warrant it. In re Howard, (N. D. Cal. 1899)

D. La. 1908) 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302.

[Examination of bankrupt's wife.] Provided, That the wife may be examined only touching business transacted by her or to which she is a party, and to determine the fact whether she has transacted or been a party to any business of the bankrupt. [(Inserted 1903) 32 Stat. L. 798.]

Examination of bankrupt's wife.—A certain latitude must be permitted in the examination of the bankrupt's wife, and, where there is reasonable ground therefor, she may be examined to determine whether a business conducted in her name is in fact hers or the bankrupt's; and she may also be asked such questions as are pertinent to that inquiry. In re Worrell, (E. D. Pa. 1903) 125 Fed. 159, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 744.

The wife of a bankrupt, under examination as a witness at the instance of the trustee or the creditors, may be questioned as to money or other property in her possession, and as to how and when the same was received or acquired; provided only that the testimony shows such questions to be reasonably pertinent to the subject of inquiry. In re Foerst, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 93 Fed. 190.

b [Depositions — right to take.] The right to take depositions in proceedings under this Act shall be determined and enjoyed according to the United States laws now in force, or such as may be hereafter enacted relating to the taking of depositions, except as herein provided. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]

Right to take depositions.—A court having charge of the administration of a bankrupt's estate has power to order that any person having knowledge "concerning the acts, conduct, or property" of the bankrupt, but who resides without the district or state, and more than one hundred miles from the court, shall be examined before a commissioner in accordance with the provisions of the general statutes or practice in equity cases; and persons so ordered to be examined may be compelled by proper process, as in other cases, to appear and testify. In re Hemstreet, (N. D. Ia. 1902) 117 Fed. 568, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760; In re Williams, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 123 Fed. 321, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 538; In re Cole, (D. C. Me. 1904) 133 Fed. 414, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300; In re Robinson, (D. C. Minn. 1910) 179 Fed. 724. And see the cases cited supra, p. 590, under the heading Anoillary Jurisdiction.

c [Notice of taking depositions.] Notice of the taking of depositions shall be filed with the referee in every case. When depositions are to be taken in opposition to the allowance of a claim notice shall also be served upon the claimant, and when in opposition to a discharge notice shall also be served upon the bankrupt. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]

- d [Certified copies as evidence.] Certified copies of proceedings before a referee, or of papers, when issued by the clerk or referee, shall be admitted as evidence with like force and effect as certified copies of the records of district courts of the United States are now or may hereafter be admitted as evidence. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]
- e [Certified copy of order approving trustee's bond.] A certified copy of the order approving the bond of a trustee shall constitute conclusive evidence of the vesting in him of the title to the property of the bankrupt, and if recorded shall impart the same notice that a deed from the bankrupt to the trustee if recorded would have imparted had not bankruptcy proceedings intervened. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]
- f [Certified copy of orders.] A certified copy of an order confirming or setting aside a composition, or granting or setting aside a discharge, not revoked, shall be evidence of the jurisdiction of the court, the regularity of the proceedings, and of the fact that the order was made. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]

Copy of order granting discharge.—Section 21f provides, in effect, that a certified copy of the order granting a discharge shall be evidence of the jurisdiction of the court, the regularity of the proceedings, and the fact that the order was made. Custard v. Wiggerson, (Wis. 1907) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337.

- g [Evidence of revesting title in bankrupt.] A certified copy of an order confirming a composition shall constitute evidence of the revesting of the title of his property in the bankrupt, and if recorded shall impart the same notice that a deed from the trustee to the bankrupt if recorded would impart. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]
- Sec. 22. Reference of Cases after Adjudication.—a [Judge may refer case.] After a person has been adjudged a bankrupt the judge may cause the trustee to proceed with the administration of the estate, or refer it [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]

Necessity of adjudication. — Section 22a, providing for reference of bankruptcy proceedings, permits no such reference until after adjudication. In re Back Bay Automobile

Co., (D. C. Mass. 1907) 158 Fed. 679, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835, reversing 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 33.

- (1) [General or special reference.] generally to the referee or specially with only limited authority to act in the premises or to consider and report upon specified issues; or [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]
- A general reference, made under section 22s (1), authorizes the referee "to take such further proceedings as are required" by the Act. Presumably, therefore, it continues in force until no such proceedings are any longer required. U. S. v. Sondheim, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 188 Fed. 378.

  Special reference. A bankruptcy proceedings may be referred to the reference by a special reference.

Special reference.—A bankruptcy proceeding may be referred to the referee by a special order or on special issues, his power depending on the order of reference. In re Sweeney, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 612, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 866.

Special reference superseded by general reference. — The powers of a special referee, appointed on petition of a receiver for the property of an alleged bankrupt pending a hearing on the petition, with authority to examine the bankrupt and other witnesses in relation to the property and assets of the bankrupt generally, are superseded on the making of an adjudication and an order of general reference. In re Ruos, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 164 Fed. 749, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257.

(2) [To any referee within territorial jurisdiction.] to any referee within the territorial jurisdiction of the court, if the convenience of parties in interest F. S. A. Supp. — 38 598 will be served thereby, or for cause, or if the bankrupt does not do business, reside, or have his domicile in the district. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]

Reference discretionary. — The reference of a case under section 22a (2) is a matter within the discretion of the court, guided by what appears to be the convenience of the parties in interest. In re Western Invest. Co., (E. D. Okla. 1908) 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 367.

Referee must reside in district. - Section

22s (2) refers to referees in bankruptcy appointed within the district where the case is pending; and the court has no jurisdiction to refer a case to a referee appointed and residing in another district for any purpose. In reschenectady Engineering, etc., Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1906) 147 Fed. 868, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 279.

b [Transfer of case to different referee.] The judge may, at any time, for the convenience of parties or for cause, transfer a case from one referee to another. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]

Cross-reference: As to Absence or disability of referee as cause for transfer, see section 43, infra, p.

Relationship between the bankrupt and the deputy clerk of the District Court, in whose office a petition was filed, will be cause for transferring the case to another seat of the court in the same district and division, and ordering the record to be filed and docketed in the office of the clerk of the court at the latter place. Bray v. Cobb, (E. D. N. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

Sec. 23. Jurisdiction of United States and State Courts.—a [Circuit courts.] The United States circuit courts shall have jurisdiction of all controversies at law and in equity, as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy, between trustees as such and adverse claimants concerning the property acquired or claimed by the trustees, in the same manner and to the same extent only as though bankruptcy proceedings had not been instituted and such controversies had been between the bankrupts and such adverse claimants. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 552.]

The Circuit Court of the United States has been abolished by section 289 of the Judicial Code, which also provides, by section 291 thereof, that "wherever, in any law not embraced within this Act, any reference is made to, or any power or duty is conferred or imposed upon, the circuit courts, such reference shall, upon the taking effect of this Act, be deemed and held to refer to, and to confer such power and impose such duty upon, the district courts." The code went into effect Jan. 1, 1912. See ante, title Judiciary, p. 249, this Supplement.

Jurisdiction of Circuit Court. — Adverse claimants in bankruptcy proceedings may, in a proper case, sue or be sued in the Circuit Court of the United States, when the bankrupt might have sued there on the same cause of action, viz., where there is a diversity of citizenship and the requisite amount is involved. In re MacDougall, (N. D. N. Y. 1909) 175 Fed. 400, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762.

If a party contesting the right of a trustee in bankruptcy to property is claiming in the right of the bankrupt, the case is one for summary proceeding in the District Court, as a court of bankruptcy; but if claiming adversely, by title paramount, then it is a case for the Circuit Court, or the state court, as the facts may warrant. Goodnough Mercantile, etc., Co. r. Galloway. (D. C. Ore. 1906) 156 Fed. 504, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

Cause of action arising under laws of United States. — A Circuit Court of the United States has jurisdiction of an action by a trustee in bankruptcy against a national bank to recover usurious interest received by the defendant from the bankrupt, in violation of R. S. sees. 5197, 5198, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 130, 196; such action being one arising under the laws of the United States, which might have been brought in such court by the bankrupt, regardless of the citizenship of the parties. Reed r. American-German Nat. Bank. (W. D. Ky. 1907) 155 Fed. 233, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140.

19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140.

To establish validity of lien.— A Circuit Court, or other court of equity, has jurisdiction of a suit against a trustee in bankruptey to establish the validity and lien of a pledge, made by the bankrupt, of property which has come into the hands of the trustee. Chattanooga Nat. Bank r. Rome Iron Co., (N. D. Ga. 1899) 99 Fed. 82, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582.

Jurisdiction over bankrupt essential. — The jurisdiction of a Circuit Court of a suit by an adverse claimant of property against a trustee in bankruptcy is expressly excluded by section 23s, where it would not have had jurisdiction if the suit had been against the bankrupt. Hatch r. Curtin, (C. C. Mass. 1906) 146 Fed. 200, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 629. See also Goodier r. Barnes, (N. D. N. Y. 1899) 94 Fed. 798.

Diversity of citisenship between the trustees in bankruptcy and the defendant is not necessary to the exercise by a federal Circuit Court of its jurisdiction, under section 236, of a suit brought by such trustees upon an alleged cause of action for moneys due the bankrupt at and prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy, where the citizenship of the bankrupt and the defendant is such that the former might have sued in the federal court but for the bankruptcy proceedings. Bush v. Elliott, (1906) 202 U. S. 477, 26 S. Ct. 668, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 1115, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656.

But a Circuit Court of the United States has no jurisdiction of a bill in equity by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance of property by the bankrupt, when the bankrupt, the trustee, and the defendant are all citizens of the same state. Goodier v. Barnes, (N. D. N. Y. 1899) 94 Fed. 798, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328. The words "acquired or claimed" are synonymous, both alluding to property adversely held by third parties, but which by the terms of the Bankruptcy Act become vested in the trustee upon his qualification as such. In re Bender, (W. D. Ark. 1901) 106 Fed. 873, 5

Am. Bankr. Rep. 632.

The removal from a state court to a federal Circuit Court for diverse citizenship, of a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy for the conversion of property, the title to which vested in him by the adjudication in bankruptcy, places such suit in the federal court as if it had been commenced there on that ground of jurisdiction, within the rule making the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals final when the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court depends entirely on diverse citizenship, and not as if it had been commenced there by consent of defendant. Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co., (1903) 191 U. S. 526, 24 S. Ct. 174, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 287, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563. Jurisdictional amount essential. — A trustee or receiver in bankruptcy cannot remove a cause into a federal court, on the ground that it is one arising under the laws of the United States, unless it clearly appears that the jurisdictional amount of $2,000 is involved. Swofford v. Cornucopia Mines, (C. C. Ore. 1905) 140 Fed. 957, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 564.

Matters pertaining to administration of bankrupt estate - Determination of validity and priority liens. - A Circuit Court of the United States is without jurisdiction of a suit the object of which is to determine liens upon, and priorities in the distribution of, a bankrupt's estate in process of administration by District Court, the jurisdiction of the latter court in such matter being original and exclusive; and it is immaterial that the property, which is in the custody of the bankruptcy court, is within the territorial jurisdiction of the Circuit Court, or that the suit was instituted by leave of the bankruptcy court. Bray v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 689, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 363.

Suit to compel trustee to pay over assets. -A Circuit Court is without jurisdiction of a suit in equity against trustees in bankruptcy to require them to pay over the proceeds of property claimed by complainant, but which was sold by defendants under an order of the bankruptcy court as assets of a bankrupt estate. Treat v. Wooden, (C. C. Mass. 1905)

Bill by creditor. — Section 23a does not authorize the maintenance of a bill, by a simple-contract creditor, to set aside alleged fraudulent conveyances in aid of a bank-ruptcy proceeding against the grantor. Viquesney v. Allen, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 21, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 402.

b [Suits by trustee — where brought.] Suits by the trustee shall only be brought or prosecuted in the courts where the bankrupt, whose estate is being administered by such trustee, might have brought or prosecuted them if proceedings in bankruptcy had not been instituted, unless by consent of the proposed defendant, except suits for the recovery of property under section sixty, subdivision b; section sixty-seven, subdivision e; and section seventy, subdivision e. Bona fide adverse claims. — A suit brought by a trustee in bankruptcy, for the recovery of property alleged to be a part of the assets the estate, against a bona fide adverse claimant thereof, must, excepting as to those cases which fall within the provisions of sections 60b, 67e, or 70e, be brought and prosecuted in a court wherein it might have been brought and prosecuted if proceedings in bankruptcy had not been instituted; in such cases the bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction unless it is given or acquired by the consent, express or implied, of such adverse claimant; or unless the property, which forms the subject-matter of the claim, is in the possession of the court of bankruptcy. Scheduling of property by bankrupt immaterial.—A federal District Court, sitting in bankruptcy, has no jurisdiction to try title to personalty scheduled by the bank-rupt as a part of his assets, as against a buyer claiming under an alleged executed sale thereof. In re Flynn, (E. D. N. C. 1903) 126

Fed. 422, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318.

Independent suits against strangers. — United States District Courts have no jurisdiction over independent suits brought by a trustee in bankruptcy to assert a title to money or property as assets of the bankrupt. against strangers to the bankruptcy proceedings, unless by consent of the proposed defendant; such jurisdiction being denied to them by section 23 of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898. Bardes v. Hawarden First Nat. Bank, (1900) 178 U. S. 524, 20 S. Ct. 1000, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1175; In re Kellogg, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 121 Fed. 333, 10 Am. Bankr.

Absolute ownership unnecessary. — In Jaquith v. Rowley, (1903) 188 U. S. 620, 23 S. Ct. 369, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 620, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525, it was held that it is not necessary, in order to be an adverse claimant, that one should claim to be the absolute owner of the property in question.

Pledgee. — The surety on a bankrupt's bail bond, in whose hands property was deposited by the bankrupt to indemnify him for his liability, is an adverse claimant within the meaning of section 23b. Jaquith v. Rowley, (1903) 188 U. S. 620, 23 S. Ct. 369, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 620, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525; In re Horgan, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1907) 158 Fed. 774, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 857.

Recipient of property in payment of debt. - A claim by one who acquired possession of the property of a bankrupt before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, that such property was delivered to him in part payment of a debt, and that he had no reasonable cause to believe that a preference was there-by intended, is clearly an adverse claim, of which a referee has not jurisdiction to summarily determine on its merits, except by the claimant's consent. In re Adams, (D. C. R. I. 1904) 130 Fed. 788, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 368.

Claim of assignee for creditors-for services and disbursements. - A court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to adjudicate the merits of the claim of a general assignee of the bankrupt, to retain out of the bankrupt's estate money disbursed by him, or claimed on account of his commission as such assignee, before the bankruptcy proceedings were begun, unless such assignee consents to the exercise of such jurisdiction. Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, (1902) 184 U. S. 18, 22 S. Ct. 293, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 413, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; Sinsheimer v. Simonson, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 898, 5 Am. Bankr.

Controversy between trustee and mort-gages.—The Act does not confer upon a District Court of the United States, as a court of bankruptcy, jurisdiction of a controversy between a trustee and a mortgagee of the bankrupt to determine the validity of the mortgage, unless with the consent of such mortgagee. In re San Gabriel Sanatorium Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 892, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206, reversing (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 310, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197.

Attaching creditors of a bankrupt, whose levies constitute the preference on which the adjudication in bankruptcy is based, do not occupy the position of third persons in possession of property claimed to belong to the bankrupt, or adverse claimants dealing therewith, so as to render it necessary that proceedings against them should be by bill in equity or other plenary process. Bear c. Chase, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1900) 99 Fed. 920, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; Staunton v. Wooden, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 61.

Where property is held by the agent or bailee of the bankrupt, the possession thereof cannot be adverse to the trustee. Mueller v. Nugent, (1902) 184 U.S. 1, 22 S. Ct. 269, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 405; In re Knickerbocker, (W. D. N. Y. 1903) 121 Fed. 1004, 10 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 381.

As to who are adverse claimants under a will, see In re Baudouine, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 574, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651, reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 96 Fed. 536, 3

Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

Colorable adverse claims. — The court of bankruptcy has, however, the right to determine whether a claim adverse to that of the trustee is real or merely colorable; and such determination may be had by a summary proceeding. If it is decided that the claim is bona fide, the parties will be relegated to a plenary suit in the proper court; but if the court decides that the alleged adverse claim is fictitious, or merely colorable, or that the claimant is simply the alter ego of the bank-rupt, it will proceed summarily to dispose of it. Mueller v. Nugent, (1902) 184 U.S. 1, 22 S. Ct. 269, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 405; Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, (1902) 184 U. S. 18, 22 S. Ct. 293, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 413; In re Tune, (N. D. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 188 Fed. 401.

Duty to determine validity of adverse claim. - On adverse claims being made to property, it is the duty of the referee to hear the testimony in order to determine whether the claim is real or merely colorable. In re Holbrook Shoe, etc., Co., (D. C. Mont. 1908) 165 Fed. 973, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511.

The mere assertion of a claim of title to property adverse to a trustee in bankruptcy, even with an intention to protect it by the usual process of law, will not preclude the bankruptcy court from exercising its power to proceed summarily; but it is only when the evidence indicates that the asserted claim is not false or fraudulent that such court is deprived of jurisdiction. In re Ellis Bros. Printing Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1907) 156 Fed. 430, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re Famous Clothing Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1910) 179 Fed.

Property held under process from state court. - Where property of a bankrupt is held adversely to his estate, under a claim of seizure on process from a state court, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to summarily inquire and determine whether the adverse claim has an actual basis or is merely colorable. In re Weinger, (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 126 Fed. 875, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424.

Possession without claim of title. - Where the property of a bankrupt was alleged to be in the possession of a third person, who, though not admitting possession, claimed no title to any of the property, he could not object to the bankruptcy court's jurisdiction to order him to surrender the property to the trustee. In re Fogelman, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 755.

The trustee cannot enlarge the referee's jurisdiction merely by alleging that the claim under which the property is held has no merit. or is fraudulent, or by calling it "merely colorable," when no other reasons appear for so describing it. In re Tarbox, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 185 Fed. 985.

II. JURISDICTION AS AFFECTED BY POSSESSION.

Possession of property gives jurisdiction thereover. - When a court of bankruptcy has acquired possession of the res, either actual or constructive, that is, where the property was in the possession of the bankrupt at the time the petition in bankruptcy was filed against him, or where such property has been taken possession of by the officers of the court, such as the referee, receiver, marshal.

or trustee, it is then in custodia legis, and the court has, by virtue of such possession, jurisdiction to hear and determine all adverse claims asserted thereto. Metcalf v. Barker, (1902) 187 U. S. 165, 23 S. Ct. 67, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 122, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; Murphy v. John Hofman Co., (1909) 211 U. 8. 562, 29 S. Ct. 154, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 327, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487; Babbitt v. Upon the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, followed by an adjudication, all property in the possession of the bankrupt, of which he claims the ownership, passes at once into the custody of the court of bankruptcy, and becomes subject to its jurisdiction to determine, by plenary action or summary proceeding, as the nature of the case demands, all adverse or conflicting claims thereto, whether of title or of lien; and that court may, by the process of injunction, protect its jurisdiction against interference. Goods in actual possession of a bankrupt at the time of his adjudication as such, and at the time of the reference of the case to a referee, who directs them to be locked in a store, are in custody of the United States court, from which they cannot be taken upon any process from a state court. White v. Schloerb, (1900) 178 U. S. 542, 20 S. Ct. 1007, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1183, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178. See also In re Mertens, (N. D. N. Y. 1904) 131 Fed. 507, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698.

Possession by act of officers. - When the court of bankruptcy through the act of its officers, such as referees, receivers, marshals, or trustees, has taken possession of a res, as the property of a bankrupt, it has ancillary jurisdiction to hear and determine the adverse claims of strangers to it, and its possession cannot be disturbed by the process of another court. Murphy v. John Hofman Co., (1909) 211 U. S. 562, 29 S. Ct. 154, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 327, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487. An uncertain or fleeting occupancy by the officers of the bankruptcy court, however, is not sufficient to change the ordinary rule which gives the state courts jurisdiction over property which is in its possession; nor will the mere constructive possession of the bankruptcy court be effective as against the possession of the state court in every case. See Frank v. Vollkommer, (1907) 205 U. S. 521, 523, 529, 27 S. Ct. 596, 599, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 911; In re Rathman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 913. And see the annotation, infra, p. 602, under VI. Jurisdiction of State

Possession acquired for preservation of estate. — The District Court has jurisdiction of a controversy in a case in which it finds it absolutely necessary, for the preservation of the estate, to take the possession of the property from an adverse claimant by means of its receiver or the marshal, under section 2 (3), and the determination of the issue thus raised between the trustee and the adverse claimant is a proceeding in bankruptcy, as distinguished from a controversy at law or in equity, within the true interpretation of section 23. In re Rochford, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 182, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608. And see the annotation under section

2 (3), supra, p. 472.
Controversies between estates in bankruptcy. - A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to determine a controversy as to the ownership of property between the trustees of two different estates, both of which are being administered by such court. In re Rosenberg, (E. D. Pa. 1902) 116 Fed. 402, 8

Am. Bankr. Rep. 624.

Property which has been unlawfully taken from the custody of the bankruptcy court, or its officers, may be recovered, and restored to the trustee or other proper officer, by a summary or other proceeding instituted for that purpose. White v. Schloerb, (1900) 178 U. S. 542, 20 S. Ct. 1007, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1183, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178; In re Reynolds, (D. C. Mont. 1904) 127 Fed. 760, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 758; In re Briskman, (W. D. Surrender of possession. — Where the possession of property has been relinquished by the court of bankruptcy, or its duly authorized officer, the jurisdiction of the court thereover, as a general rule, ceases. Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102; Hinds v. Moore, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1905) 134 Fed. 221, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1, reversing (W. D. Tenn. 1904) 129 Fed. 922, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136; In re Berkowitz, (E. D. Pa. 1906) 143 Fed. 598, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251.

Order of surrender improvidently granted.

Order of surrender improvidently granted.

— Where an ex parte order permitting a claimant of property in the possession of a bankrupt to sue the trustee in a state court to determine the claimant's right thereto was improvidently granted, the court, on being advised of all the facts, had power to vacate such order, and enjoin the claimant from proceeding further in the state court. In reschermerhorn, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 145

Fed. 341, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507.

Burrender as affected by subsequent possession.—The vacation by a court of bankruptcy of its order enjoining any interference under process from a state court with certain property then in the possession of the receiver in bankruptcy, cannot be deemed an abandonment by the court of bankruptcy of its possession of the property to be dealt with by the state court, where, in the meantime, there had been various dealings with the property by the bankruptcy court, including a sale by the trustee in bankruptcy. Murphy v. John Hofman Co., (1909) 211 U. S. 562, 29 S. Ct. 154, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 327, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487.

Unauthorized surrender by officer.—The bankruptcy court may draw to itself the determination of all controversies over the property in its possession, and when it once lawfully attaches its jurisdiction cannot be destroyed or impaired by the unauthorized surrender of possession of the property by the officers of the court, or through a seizure thereof by an adverse claimant. Whitney v. Wenman, (1905) 198 U. S. 539, 25 S. Ct. 778, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1157, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45; In re Schermerhorn, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 341, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507.

Possession of, or under, assignee for creditors. — A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction of a proceeding by a trustee to recover property from an assignee to whom it was conveyed by the bankrupt, for the benefit of creditors, within four months prior to the bankruptcy. In re Stokes, (E. D. Pa. 1901) 106 Fed. 312, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262; In re Knight, (W. D. Ky. 1903) 125 Fed. 35, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 6; O'Dell v. Boyden, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 731, 10 Ann. Cas. 239, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757; In re Stewart, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 222.

A purchaser from an assignee in insolvency who holds the property under a general assignment, when the sale is made before a trustee has been appointed, but after and with knowledge of the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, has no title superior to that of the bankrupt's estate; but his equities in respect to the goods, or to the money that he has paid for them, may depend upon many circumstances, and can be settled in the District Court as a court of bankruptcy. Bryan v. Bernheimer, (1900) 181 U. S. 188, 21 S. Ct. 557, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 814, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623.

Court may require assignee to account.—A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to require an accounting from an assignee for creditors of a bankrupt, under an assignment which constitutes an act of bankruptcy; and where he appears and submits his account and enters upon a hearing without objection, the court does not lose jurisdiction to require him to turn over property to the trustee because he asserts title to a part of such property in himself. In re Thompson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 575, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719.

III. JURISDICTION BY CONSENT.

Effect of consent. — A court of bankruptcy may, under section 23b, acquire jurisdiction, by the consent of the defendant, for the purpose of suits brought by a trustee in bankruptcy in the performance of the duties imposed upon him under the statute. necessary consent may be given by such acts or conduct of the parties as will give jurisdiction in other cases; and where jurisdiction has been obtained in this manner the court will proceed to determine all of the rights of the parties to the subject-matter in controversy. A general appearance of a defendant, and the filing of a demurrer on grounds going to the merits, as well as to the jurisdiction of the court, waives an objection that the court is without jurisdiction of the defendant's person. Knapp, etc., Co. v. Drew, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 160 Fed. 413, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; Sheppard v. Lincoln, (S. D. N. Y.

When an adverse claimant voluntarily comes into a court of bankruptcy and claims property in the possession of the trustee, wherever situated, or asserts a lien thereon and seeks to have it established, enforced, or protected, the proceeding becomes a "proceeding in bankruptcy" in the course of collecting the estate, reducing the same to money, and distributing the same, and a "controversy" in relation to the estate within the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court. In re MacDougall, (N. D. N. Y. 1909) 175 Fed. 400, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762. Presenting claims. — Where a bank, claiming security under a deed of trust executed more than four months before the institution of bankruptcy proceedings, voluntarily submitted to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court by presenting its claim for adjudica-tion, and the bankrupt's estate was wholly in the possession of the court, the referee has jurisdiction to adjudicate the validity of the deed in a summary proceeding. In re Elletson Co., (N. D. W. Va. 1909) 174 Fed. 859, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 530.

Consent does not validate unlawful procedure. - Section 23b refers to consent to the tribunal in which the controversy is to be carried on, and not to the mode of procedure; and where that is unlawful, the appearance of the defendant, and his contesting the proceedings, do not confer jurisdiction. Sinsheimer v. Simonson, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 898, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537.

Matters disconnected with bankruptcy proceedings. - A claimed indebtedness from one creditor of a bankrupt to another, growing out of transactions not connected with the bankruptcy proceedings, cannot be litigated in such proceedings or adjusted in the distribution of dividends. In re Girard Glazed Kid Co., (E. D. Pa. 1905) 136 Fed. 511, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 485.

Effect of objection to jurisdiction. - The failure of adverse claimants to abandon their claims to property not in the possession of the receiver in bankruptcy, after their objections to the jurisdiction of a court of bankruptcy to act on the receiver's petition for directions respecting a sale have been overruled, does not amount to a waiver of their objections or a consent to an exercise of jurisdiction. Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102.

An adverse claimant brought into a court of bankruptcy by citation and ordered to turn over property, and who before entry of final decree against him specially objects on the ground that the court is without jurisdiction, cannot be held to have consented to such jurisdiction. In re Horgan, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1907) 158 Fed. 774, 19 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 857.

An assignee of a bankrupt cannot be deemed to have consented to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court because he participated in the proceedings before the referee, where he made formal protest to the exercise of such jurisdiction before the final order was entered. Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor. (1902) 184 U. S. 18, 22 S. Ct. 293, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 413, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421.

IV. RECOVERY OF PREFERENTIAL AND FRAUDU-LENT TRANSFERS.

Jurisdiction to recover property fraudulently or preferentially transferred. — Prior to the amendment of 1903, suits for the recovery of property fraudulently or preferen-tially transferred, in violation of the provisions of sections 60b, 67e, or 70e, in the absence of consent, could only be brought in the court wherein such action might have been prosecuted if bankruptcy proceedings had not been instituted; this was definitely decided in the case of Bardes v. Hawarden First Nat. Bank, (1900) 178 U. S. 524, 20 S. Ct. 1000, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1175. For the purpose of remedying this, the bankruptcy law was amended in 1903 so as to permit suits for the recovery of fraudulent and preferential transfers, under sections 60b and 67e, in the court of bankruptcy, concurrently with the state court, without the consent of the defendant. Gregory v. Atkinson, (E. D. Mo. 1904) 127 Fed. 183, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495; Johnston v. Forsyth Mercantile Co., (S. D. Ga. 1904) 127 Fed. 845, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669; Horskins v. Sanderson, (D. C. Vt. 1904) 132 Fed. 415, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102; Delta Nat. Bank v. Easterbrook, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 521, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338; Lawrence v. Lowrie, (M. D. Pa. 1903) 133 Fed. 995, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 297; Parker v. Black, (W. D. N. Y. 1906) 143 Fed. 560, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; Horner-Gaylord Co. v. Miller, (N. D. W. Va. 1906) 147 Fed. 295, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257; Bowman v. Alpha Farms, (N. D. N. Y. 1907) 152 Fed. 280, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267, 700. 153 Fed. 380, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700; Lynch v. Bronson, (D. C. Conn. 1908) 160 Fed. 139, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409; Westall v. Avery, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 626, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; Off v. Hakes, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700. And see the cases cited to this effect under sections 60b and 67c.

By the amendment of 1910, section 70e was included; so that proceedings thereunder, for the recovery of property transferred in fraud of creditors, may now be had in the bankruptcy court, concurrently with the state court, without the consent of the adverse party. The amendment of 1903, however, did not specifically mention recovery under section 70c, and there was a conflict of authority as to whether recoveries under that section could be had in the bankruptcy court without the consent of the adverse party. The following cases sustain the view that consent was unnecessary: Johnston v. Forsyth Mercantile Co., (S. D. Ga. 1904) 127 Fed. 845, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669; Hurley v. Devlin, (D. C. Kan. 1906) 149 Fed. 268, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 793. And see the annotation to this effect under section 70e.

But in many cases it was held that the amendment of 1903, because of the fact that section 70e was not specified therein, did not permit a recovery thereunder in the bankruptcy court without consent. Gregory v. Atkinson, (E. D. Mo. 1904) 127 Fed. 183, 185; Skewis v. Barthell, (N. D. Ia. 1907) 152 Fed. 534; Hull v. Burr, (5th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 945, 948, 950, 83 C. C. A. 61; Palmer v. Roginsky, (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 175 Fed. 883; In re Rathman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 913. See also the annotation under section 70e.

Pleading and practice. — A proceeding by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside fraudulent conveyances or illegal preferences is not a proceeding in bankruptcy, but while ancillary to such proceedings and authorized by the Bankruptcy Act to be instituted in either the federal District Court or in a state court of competent jurisdiction, it must be governed, so far as pleading and practice are concerned, by the laws and rules of the court wherein it is instituted, and, where that is a federal court, such suits are in equity and are governed by the rules of pleading and practice in equity which obtain in such court independently of the state court. Westall v. Avery, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 626, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

V. SUMMARY AND PLENARY JURISDICTION.

Necessity of plenary action. — The rights of adverse claimants cannot be determined by summary proceedings; and where it appears that such a claimant has lawfully obtained possession of property prior to the bankruptcy proceeding, or where his claim otherwise appears to be founded in good faith, and not merely frivolous or fictitious, and the property is not in possession of the bankruptcy court, either actually or constructively, it is well settled that a plenary suit is necessary in order to litigate such claimant's right. Mass. 1910) 185 Fed. 554; In re Tarbox, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 185 Fed. 564. 985.

The mere fact that a person has been adjudged a bankrupt does not deprive other persons, owning or claiming purely legal rights to property claimed by the trustee, of having such rights adjudicated in the courts and by the procedure guaranteed to them by the Constitution. In re Peacock, (E. D. N. C. 1910) 178 Fed. 851.

Property in possession of bankrupt as agent. — Where property in possession of a bankrupt, which passed into the hands of his receiver, is claimed by a third person, who alleges title by virtue of a bill of sale, and that the bankrupt was in possession as his agent, both of which allegations are denied by the receiver, the court will not determine such issues of fact summarily on affidavits, but will retain the property in the hands of its receiver until the claimant has established his right in a plenary suit. In re Mundle, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 139 Fed. 691, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 680.

Suit against stockholder.— A suit by the trustee of a bankrupt corporation to compel a stockholder to pay corporate debts because of her alleged participation in a fraudulent overvaluation of the corporation's assets in payment for stock, is not a case of a preferential or fraudulent transfer, but is a suit of a plenary nature, of which the bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction except by defendant's consent. In re Haley, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 158 Fed. 74, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313.

Determination of title to land. — The provisions of the bankruptcy law give no jurisdiction for the determination of a dispute as to a question of title to land on affidavits in the bankruptcy proceeding, unless the court in bankruptcy considers the transaction to have been so clearly the occasion of such fraudulent or dishonest action upon the part of the claimant, or his grantor, that no title could have passed or been acquired. In re Bailey, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 156 Fed. 691, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470.

Nonresidents. — The statute confers no power on a court of bankruptcy to summon before it, by a rule to show cause, third persons who are not parties to the record and who reside without the district and state, and are there served with the order; and under the general rules of law governing the federal courts, in the absence of express authority, such service is ineffectual to confer jurisdiction in personam. In re Waukesha Water Co., (E. D. Wis. 1902) 116 Fed. 1909, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

Sec. 23 b.

Summary jurisdiction. — Where an adverse claim is made and it has been determined to be without merit, or where the property claimed is in the actual possession of the court, the claim may be disposed of by summary proceedings. Babbitt v. Dutcher, (1910) 216 U. S. 102, 17 Ann. Cas. 969, 30 S. Ct. 372; In re Tune, (N. D. Ala. 1902) 115 Fed. 906, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285; In re Muncie Pulp Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 139 Fed. 546, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 70; In re Walsh, (N. D. Ia. 1908) 163 Fed. 352, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14; Clay v. Waters, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 385; In re Rathman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 395; In re Coffey, (W. D. N. Y. 1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148.

Thus it has been held that the District Court, sitting in bankruptcy, has jurisdiction to determine by summary proceedings, after a reasonable notice to claimants to present their claims to it, controversies between the trustee and adverse claimants over liens upon, and the title and possession of, (1) property in the possession of the bankrupt when the petition in bankruptcy is filed, (2) property held by third parties for him, (3) property lawfully seized by an officer, as the bankrupt's, under clause 3 of section 2 of the bankruptcy law, and (4) property claimed by the trustee which has been lawfully reduced to actual possession by the officers of the court. Such controversies are controversies in proceedings in bankruptcy under section 2; and they are not controversies at law or in equity as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy within the meaning of section 23. Clay v. Waters, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 385.

And in In re Tune, (N. D. Ala. 1902) 115 Fed. 906, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285, it was said that the collection and distribution of the assets of the bankrupt estate in a sense involves the administration of a trust. The court to which the administration is confided has the inherent power, apart from the special jurisdiction conferred by the bank-rupt law, if need be, on its own motion, to punish mere intermeddlers by summary process. It can make no difference that the jurisdiction is invoked by the trustee, the receiver, or the bankrupt himself, so long as the person against whom the power of the court is invoked is a mere intermeddler, or one who claims to hold or take possession under a claim which in law is purely colorable. Such proceedings are not "suits" in the ordinary meaning of the term, nor in the sense in which the word is used in subdivision b of section 23. They come, rather, under sub-division 15 of section 2, which empowers the court to make such orders, issue such process, and enter such judgments, in addition to those specifically provided for, as may be necessary for the enforcement of the provisions of the Act. Each case of this kind, of course, must depend upon its own facts.

Where the claimant has acquired possession of the property prior to the bankruptoy, and claims the right to hold it as against the bankrupt or the trustee, then the authority of the referee, and of the court of bankruptcy in summary proceedings, is limited to determining whether the claim made is colorable merely, or is in fact adverse to the bankrupt, and according as it determines that question will it deny or retain jurisdiction of the controversy. In re Walsh, (N. D. Ia. 1908) 163 Fed. 352, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14, relying on Mueller v. Nugent, (1902) 184 V. S. 1, 22 S. Ct. 269, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 405; Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, (1902) 184 U. S. 18, 22 S. Ct. 293, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 413.

Practice.— The court may adjudicate controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings, summarily, without subpœna, summons, pleadings, or evidence, according to the principles, rules, and practice in actions at law and suits in equity. In re Rathman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 913.

VI. JURISDICTION OF STATE COURTS.

Jurisdiction of state courts. - In all controversies between the trustee of the bankrupt's estate, and a stranger or third parties, as to the title and ownership of property alleged to belong to the estate of the bankrupt, the jurisdiction of the state courts is expressly preserved; and the trustee is relegated to such courts for the determination of his rights when the bankrupt himself should or could have litigated them therein, excepting as to proceedings under sections 60b, 67e, and 70e, unless the consent of the defendant has been obtained as required by the statute. Bardes v. Hawarden First Nat. Bank, (1900) 178 U. S. 524, 20 S. Ct. 1000, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1175; Heath v. Shaffer, (N. D. Ia. 1899) 93 Fed. 647, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. D. 1a. 1899) 93 Fed. 647, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 98; Robinson v. White, (D. C. Ind. 1899) 97 Fed. 33, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88; In re Nixon, (D. C. Mont. 1901) 110 Fed. 633, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 693; Pond v. New York Nat. Exch. Bank, (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 124 Fed. 992, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 343; Lawrence v. Lowrie, (M. D. Pa. 1903) 133 Fed. 995, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 297; French v. R. P. Smith, etc. Co. (Minn. 1900) 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298 etc., Co., (Minn. 1900) 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; Sheldon v. Parker, (1902) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 152, 66 Neb. 610, 92 N. W. 923, 95 N. W. 1015; Breckons v. Snyder, (1905) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112, 211 Pa. St. 176, 60 Atl. 575. And see the annotation, supra, p. 531, under section 11a, as to stay of suits pending in state courts.

Property in lawful possession of state court.— If the property claimed was in the lawful possession of the state court at the time the petition in bankruptcy was filed, and its possession has not been affected by the provisions of sections 60b, 67e, or 70e, pertaining to preferential and fraudulent transfers, such possession will draw to the state court jurisdiction over the res. Frank v. Vollkommer, (1907) 205 U. S. 521, 27 S. Ct. 596, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 911, 17 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 806; In re Heckman, (9th Cir. 1905) 140 Fed. 859, 72 C. C. A. 8, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500; In re Kane, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 152 Fed. 587, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654; In re Rathman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 913.

Conflict of jurisdiction. — In Hooks v. Aldridge, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 865, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658, it was said that while it is unquestionable that the federal courts are the final arbiters to settle questions arising under the bankruptcy laws, there are questions relating to comity and procedure, in the event of conflict of opinion between the state courts and the bankruptcy courts as to the possession of the bankrupt's assets, which remain unsettled by decision of the Supreme Court. Whether the bankruptcy court should make such orders as will preserve the estate, and await the final result of the litigation in the state court, or should act on its own opinion of the want of jurisdiction of the state court, and enforce its order to secure the possestion of the property, is one of the questions left unsettled. At a proper time the federal courts, of course, may decree the enforcement of the supremacy of the Constitution and laws of the United States, for it is an incontrovertible principle that the government of the United States may, by means of physical force, exercised through its official agents, execute on every foot of American soil the powers and functions that belong to it. (Ew p. Siebold, (1879) 100 U. S. 371, 395, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 717.) But it is, without doubt, the duty of both the state and federal courts to exercise the greatest caution to avoid this necessity where it is possible.

Formal proceedings necessary to oust possession of officer of state court.—A court of the United States will not dispossess the receiver or other officers of a state court by any summary order or process, or otherwise than by formal proceedings taken by its own receiver or trustee for that purpose. Ross-Meeham Foundry Co. v. Southern Car, etc., Co., (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 124 Fed. 403, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624.

Co., (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 124 Fed. 403, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624.

Trustee should apply to state court for order.—Where property belonging to the estate of a bankrupt is in the custody and possession of a receiver appointed by a state court, the trustee in bankruptcy should apply to the state court for an order directing the receiver to turn over the property to him. In re Lesser, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 758.

c [Concurrent jurisdiction.] The United States circuit courts shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the courts of bankruptcy, within their respective territorial limits, of the offenses enumerated in this Act. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.]

The Circuit Court has been abolished by section 289 of the Judicial Code, which became effective Jan. 1, 1912. See the annotation, supra, p. 594, under subdivision a of this section; and see the title JUDICIATY, ante, p. 249.

Not applicable to civil actions.—Section 23c has no application to civil actions; the words "offenses enumerated" meaning the crimes described in section 29. Goodier v. Barnes, (N. D. N. Y. 1899) 94 Fed. 798, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328.

SEC. 24. JURISDICTION OF APPELLATE COURTS. — a [Supreme court — circuit courts of appeals—territorial courts.] The Supreme Court of the United States, the circuit courts of appeals of the United States, and the supreme courts of the Territories, in vacation in chambers and during their respective terms, as now or as they may be hereafter held, are hereby invested with appellate jurisdiction of controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings from the courts of bankruptcy from which they have appellate jurisdiction in other cases. The Supreme Court of the United States shall exercise a like jurisdiction from courts of bankruptcy not within any organized circuit of the United States and from the supreme court of the District of Columbia. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.]

I. Controversies Abising in Bankbuptcy Proceedings.

In general. — This section "relates to controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings in the exercise by the bankruptcy courts of the jurisdiction vested in them at law and in equity by section 2, to settle the estates of bankrupts, and to determine controversies in relation thereto. Hutchinson v. Otis, (1903)

190 U. S. 552, 23 S. Ct. 778, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1179." Hewit r. Berlin Mach. Works, (1904) 194 U. S. 296, 24 S. Ct. 690, 48 U. S. (L. ed.)

Appealable "controversies," etc., under section 24a "by judicial definition are limited to cases of the class referred to in section 23." Thompson v. Mauzy, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed, 611, 614.

Where a "controversy" is of such a character that, if it had arisen in a federal court when it was not sitting in bankruptcy, the final decision of it would have been reviewable in the Circuit Court of Appeals, by writ of error or appeal, it is consequently reviewable on appeal or writ of error under section 24a. Dodge v. Norlin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 363.

Under this section the Circuit Court of Appeals has appellate jurisdiction over the District Courts, sitting in bankruptcy, wherever there is a controversy of a character justiciable in other courts; and where the subject-matter involved in a decision was not in any way peculiar to bankruptcy, and is governed entirely by the principles of the common law and the rules of equity, an appeal is allowable. Burleigh v. Foreman, (1st Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 217, 60 C. C. A. 109; Mason v. Wolkowich, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 699.

"Surely what constitutes a 'controversy' within the meaning of section 24a must be determined by the nature of the right involved and the issue tried, and not by the accidental circumstance as to which party Most is actor and which defendant. of the confusion on this subject has arisen out of a misunderstanding of the decision in Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051. . . . It is manifest that the Supreme Court, if the judgment in [that case] had properly involved a decision as to the merits, would have decided that appeal was the proper method of bringing the question before the appellate court, for it sustained an appeal on a petition by a trustee to determine the rights of adverse claimants to property in the custody of the court in a later case reported in the same volume, namely, Whitney v. Wenman, (1905) 198 U. S. 539, 25 S. Ct. 778, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1157." Per Amidon, J., in Thomas v. Woods, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 173 Fed. 585, 589, 590.

Decisions held appealable. - In the following cases decisions were expressly or impliedly held to be appealable:

A decree on a bill in equity by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside a fraudulent conveyance by the bankrupt. Thomas r. Sugarman, (1910) 218 U. S. 129, 30 S. Ct. 650.

A decree denying the right invoked by a petition in intervention to have the lien of a chattel mortgage established as the first claim on the property of a bankrupt and satisfied out of the proceeds of a proposed sale by the trustee in bankruptcy. Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., (1910) 216 U. S. 545, 30 S. Ct. 412.

A decision upholding the right of an intervener, as a conditional vendor of the bankrupt, to certain goods and proceeds of other goods in the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy. Bryant v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., (1909) 214 U. S. 279, 29 S. Ct. 614, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 997.

A person's assertion of title to property in possession of the trustee in bankruptcy by an intervention raising a distinct and separable issue. Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, (1904) 194 U. S. 296, 24 S. Ct. 690, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 986; Manson v. Williams, (1909) 213 U. S.

453, 29 S. Ct. 519, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 869.

A judgment that a chattel mortgage upon the alleged property of the bankrupt is voidable by his trustee, and that it entitled the mortgagee to no lien upon the property and no preference in payment out of its proceeds. Dodge v. Norlin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 363, where the court said: "The late decision of the Supreme Court in Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, (1904) 194 U. S. 296, 24 S. Ct. 690, 691, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 986, as we understand it, is an adjudication of this question in accord with these views.'

In the course of proceedings to marshal assets in the hands of a trustee, as between partnership and individual creditors, if a distinct and separable issue is raised between parties intervening, involving substantial rights, and which might arise at common law or in equity, an order made therein is appealable. Burleigh v. Foreman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 217.

A decision on the petition of an adverse claimant to reclaim property taken possession of by the trustee in bankruptcy. Franklin v. Stoughton Wagon Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir.

A decree adverse to a petitioner who alleged that he was the owner of property which, prior to the adjudication, had been in the possession of the bankrupt, but was since held by the trustee, and praying that the latter be ordered to surrender possession. Smith v. Means, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 89.

An order on a petitioner's prayer to have turned over to him as mortgagee the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property. Liddon v. Smith, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 43.

A decree on a petition in the nature of a bill in equity to establish the right of the petitioner to the possession of certain property also claimed by the trustee in bank-ruptcy and to enjoin the latter from interfering with such possession. Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 32, affirmed in (1907) 206 U. S. 415, 27 S. Ct. 720, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 1117.

A decree in a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy to cancel a conveyance of real estate of the bankrupt and quiet the trustee's title to it. McCarty v. Coffin, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1907) 150 Fed. 307.

A decision on the petition of an adverse claimant to reclaim property taken possession of by the trustee in bankruptcy. Franklin v. Stoughton Wagon Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 857.

A decree in a proceeding instituted by petition of the trustee in bankruptcy to have certain adverse claims and liens upon property belonging to the estate declared void and for a sale of the property free and clear of the same. Thomas v. Woods, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 173 Fed. 585.

A decree summarily adjudicating the right to property in the possession of the trustee in bankruptcy and an adverse claimant. Mound Mines Co. v. Hawthorne, (C. C. A.

8th Cir. 1909) 173 Fed. 882.

A judgment determining the priority of certain liens upon lands belonging to the bankrupt's estate and involving questions of fact. Hendricks v. Webster, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 927.

A decree dismissing the petition of lessors of a bankrupt to forfeit the lease in the event of a sale by the trustee in bankruptcy under the court's order. Gazlay v. Williams, (1908) 210 U. S. 41, 28 S. Ct. 687, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 950

A judgment by the Circuit Court of Appeals holding that an intervening conditional vendor of property sold to the bankrupt had no lien thereon as against a general creditor, because of a failure to file the contract of sale. York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, (1906) 201 U. S. 344, 26 S. Ct. 481, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 789.

A dispute between a receiver in bankruptcy and an outside person as to whether a contract was made between them for the sale and purchase of property of the estate, brought before the bankruptcy court for determination. In re Jungmann, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 302.

An order disallowing a mortgage lien on the ground that it was given and accepted in fraud of the Bankrupt Act. In re Canton First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 62.

An order disallowing a creditor's claim to priority by reason of a mortgage to secure his debt, but allowing the debt. In re Doran, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 467.

On a creditor's answer to the trustee's petition to sell certain chattels and claiming chattel mortgage liens thereon, an order holding the chattel mortgages void. Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 675, affirming (1910) 216 U. S. 545, 30 S. Ct. 412.

A judgment determining the claim of a chattel mortgagee to assets in the hands of a trustee in bankruptcy. Loeser v. Savings Deposit Bank, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 212.

A judgment that a chattel mortgage upon the alleged property of the bankrupt is voidable by his trustee, that it entitled the mortgagee to no lien upon the property and to no preference in payment out of its proceeds. Dodge v. Norlin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 363.

An order directing the receiver in bank-ruptcy to pay to the trustee in bankruptcy the proceeds of a sale of the bankrupt's assets under an order of the court. Mason v. Wolkowich, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 699.

An order allowing a debt but disallowing the creditor's claim of priority by reason of a mortgage to secure the debt. In re Doran, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 467.

An order dismissing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, if it presents questions of law only, is appealable, although it is also reviewable on a petition to revise under section 24b. Stevens v. Nave-McCord Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 71. But see as to exclusiveness of the remedies by appeal or by petition to revise, the note to section 24b. infra. p. 611 note to section 24b, infra, p. 611.

Judgment erroneous but not void. — A judgment on an appeal determining in favor of the appeal "that somewhat cloudy question" whether a petition for revision is or is not the sole appellate remedy, is not void even though it be erroneous, and it cannot be vacated as a nullity at a subsequent term of court. Loeser v. Savings Deposit Bank, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 212.

Decisions held not appealable.—"Nothing as it seems to us can be regarded as a controversy 'arising in bankruptcy proceedings' within the purview of subdivision a, section 24, where the subject-matter and object of the proceedings are within the power to make a summary order. Certainly this is true where plenary action is not sought.

. . . In determining the question of remedy, then, as between review or appeal under the Bankruptcy Act, we are not to be governed by our ideas of whether the power invoked can be rightly exercised or not in the given instance, but by the object and character of the proceeding." In re Farrell, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 176 Fed. 505, 509, oiting Coder v. Arts, (1909) 213 U. S. 223, 29 S. Ct. 436, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 772.

A receiver in bankruptcy having turned over to the petitioning creditor certain of the bankrupt's property on the creditor's claim that the bankrupt was a bailee thereof only, special commissioner recommended that the receiver's action be not approved, which recommendation was affirmed by an order of the District Court. Another order was therefter made, referring to the same commissioner. the duty to ascertain the value of the property, and the sum the creditor should pay to the bankrupt's trustee, and, on the commissioner's finding being filed, an order was entered confirming his report and directing payment to the trustee or clerk of the court. It was held that none of such orders was appealable or reviewable otherwise than by a petition to revise. In re Strobel, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 160 Fed. 916.

An order made in a proceeding between the trustee in bankruptey and a prior assignee to determine the right to property in the custody of the court or its proceeds is not appealable. O'Dell v. Boyden, (6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 731, 10 Ann. Cas. 239, 80 C. C. A. 397.

The following were held not to be appealable: An order dismissing a petition to revoke a discharge, Thompson r. Mauzy, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 611; an order directing the turning over of property or money by a third person to the trustee in bankruptcy, In re Rose Shoe Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 39; a decree relating to the distribution of the proceeds of a sale of real estate made by the trustee in bankruptcy, In re Groetzinger, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1903) 127 Fed. 124, holding that the remedy is by petition to revise; a decree reversing a referee's judgment requiring a trustee to account to the creditors in specific sums as the rental value of the property of which he permitted the bankrupt to retain use and possession. Clinton Bank v. Kondert, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 703.

Decrees in proceedings in bankruptcy, as distinguished from "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings," and not enumerated in section 25a, are not appealable to the Circuit Court of Appeals, but are reviewable only on petition to superintend and revise. Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051. See the note to section 24b, infra, p. 611.

Administrative orders. — "The 'controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings' ferred to in this section [section 24a], as has been heretofore held by this court, are 'those independent or plenary suits which concern the bankrupt's estate, and arise by intervention or otherwise between the trustee representing the bankrupt's estate and claimants asserting some right or interest adverse to the bankrupt, or his general creditors,' and do not include 'administrative orders and decrees in the ordinary course of a bankruptcy between the filing of the petition and the final settlement of the estate,' which, under section 24b of the Bankrupt Act, are subject to revision by this court in matter of law upon petition for review." Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. A. 6th. Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 576, citing the following cases: In re Mueller, (6th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 712, 68 C. C. A. 349; Dickas v. Barnes, (6th Cir. 1905) 140 Fed. 849, 72 C. C. A. 261; Davidson v. Friedman, (6th Cir. 1906) 140 Fed. 853, 72 C. C. A. 553; In re McMahon, (6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 684, 77 C. C. A. 668; O'Dell v. Boyden, (6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 731, 80 C. C. A. 397.

Orders made by the bankruptcy court requiring members of a bankrupt partnership, who have not been individually adjudged bankrupt, to schedule and surrender their individual property are not appealable under section 24a. Dickas c. Barnes, (6th Cir. 1905) 140 Fed. 849, 72 C. C. A. 261, where the court said: "It is not necessary for us now to determine what the final disposition to be made by the District Court of the in-dividual assets of these appellants should be."

"No appeal lies from an order rejecting a petition for rehearing under the bankrupt law. Sections 24 and 25 of the Bankruptcy Act prescribe in what cases appeals may be had, and these sections manifestly do not cover such a case as this." Morgan v. Benedum, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 232.

Decree awarding interlocutory injunction.

— Under section 7 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, as subsequently amended by Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 803, 31 Stat. L. 660, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 422, an appeal would lie to the Circuit Court of Appeals from a decree of the District Court awarding an interlocutory injunction in a bankruptcy case, even though the right to issue the injunction involved the juris-diction of the District Court, provided, how-ever, as declared in the Act above cited, that the Circuit Court of Appeals would have jurisdiction of an appeal from a final decree in the cause; if the injunction was allowed in a cause of a character subject only to review on petition for revision, no appeal would lie from the decree awarding the interlocutory injunction. O'Dell v. Boyden, (6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 731, 10 Ann. Cas. 239, 80 C. C. A. 397, dismissing the appeal.

Time limit for appeal. — Appeals to the Circuit Court of Appeals from decisions of the District Court in "controversies arising," etc., under section 24a must be taken "within six months after the entry of the order, judgment, or decree sought to be reviewed," as provided in section 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, c. 517, 26 Stat. L. 829, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 428. Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed.

Parties to appeal. - "All the parties interested in the proceedings must be made parties to the appeal and must be given notice of its pendency and hearing." Stevens v. Nave-McCord Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 71.

Parties jointly interested in, and aggrieved by, a final decision, may jointly appeal there-Stevens v. Nave-McCord Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 71.

Where a single order or judgment is made by a District Court in a bankruptcy proceeding which determines a question affecting alike different claimants, they may unite in an appeal therefrom, although their interests are several and distinct. Crim v. Woodford, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 34, sustaining a joint appeal from an order fixing certain priorities and liens.

The practice and requirements upon appeals in bankruptcy cases are substantially the same as in other cases." Cook Inlet Coal Fields Co. v. Caldwell, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 475, 478. See also for various matters of appellate procedure, the first note.

to section 25a, infra, p. 623.

An appeal was dismissed where citation was not issued nor the assignment of errors filed until after a term of the Circuit Court of Appeals had intervened, and the transcript was not filed until after a second term had passed, and no showing was made in excuse of the delay. Nazima Trading Co. r. Martin, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 838.

Presentation and reservation in lower court of ground of objection. — Where an order was made on the trustee's petition to sell chattels, if the trustee's official capacity was not challenged in the court below, it cannot be questioned on a creditor's appeal from the order. Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 675, affirmed (1910) 216 U.S. 545, 30 S. Ct. 412. Where a petition was filed by a married woman against her husband and his trustee in bankruptcy to enforce a resulting trust of certain land standing in his name, an objection that a judgment in her favor was erroneous because she, being a married woman, had no power to sue without the intervention of a trustee or a next friend, and that no decree pro confesso was taken against her husband on his failure to answer, could not be made for the first time on appeal. Buckingham v. Estes, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 584.

Assignment of errors.—Where, on appeal from an order confirming a master's report as to the amount of rents a bankrupt's wife was entitled to under a decree enforcing a resulting trust of land held by the bankrupt, none of the errors assigned raised any question as to the correctness of the decree in favor of the wife for rents and profits, but all of them related to the question of amount, the wife's right to recover rents could not be reviewed. Buckingham v. Estes, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 584.

A. 6th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 584.

Failure to incorporate evidence in the record, where there is nothing to show any evidence was taken, is not ground for dismissing the appeal. C. C. Taft Co. v. Century Sav. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 369.

Review in general.—"Upon an appeal from a final decision in equity, all the anterior rulings in the progress of the cause are reviewable." Stevens v. Nave-McCord Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 71. 73.

Where each party has laid the merits before the appellate court, regardless of the pleadings, the court may not feel called upon to depart from the issues actually shown by the proofs, or to raise any question of variance. Mason v. Wolkowich, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 699, 704.

Review of facts.—"When the court has considered conflicting evidence and made a finding or decree, it is presumptively correct, and unless some obvious error of law has intervened or some serious mistake of fact has been made the finding or decree must be permitted to stand." Coder v. Arts, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 943, 946, affirmed (1909) 213 U. S. 223, 29 S. Ct. 436, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 772.

As a rule the Supreme Court will not disturb concurrent findings of fact by two courts below, and this rule will be adhered to unless the lower courts clearly erred in their conception of the weight of the evidence. Page v. Rogers, (1909) 211 U. S. 575, 29 S. Ct. 159, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 332; Manson v. Williams, (1909) 213 U. S. 453, 29 S. Ct. 519, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 869, where the court said: "We do not say that we necessarily should have come to this conclusion if the case had been tried before us in the first instance, but, upon a pure question of fact, the error, if there was one, is not so plain as to call upon us to depart from our usual rule."

Upon reversing an order of the District Court, which reversed an order of the referee, it was observed that "the referee had the opportunity of seeing and hearing the witnesses, and he was therefore in a better position to judge of their credibility than are courts, which have before them nothing but the printed record." Southern Pine Co. v. Savannah Trust Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 802. To the same point see numerous cases cited in Moore on Facts, sections 992, 1278, 1276.

Remand. — The rule that an appellate court will remand a cause with instructions to dismiss whenever it appears from the record that there was no jurisdiction in the court below, has no application except where such want of jurisdiction affirmatively appears upon the face of the record, in a case otherwise properly before the appellate court; and the appellate court has no jurisdiction to so remand where the alleged want of jurisdiction of the court below is predicated upon an issue of fact adjudicated in the court below in favor of the jurisdiction, and where the order or judgment in which such adjudication was involved is not properly brought before the appellate court for review. Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 576.

Scope and exigency of mandate.— Where an order made by a District Court, sustaining a claim of privilege of a witness examined by creditors in a bankruptcy proceeding, was reversed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, which remanded the cause for further proceedings, the court below properly vacated an order previously made by the referee discharging the trustee, and required the witness to appear again for further examination. Brown v. Persons, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 212.

II. REVIEW BY UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT DIRECT FROM UNITED STATES DIS-TRICT COURT.

"Appellate jurisdiction in other cases." -So far as this phrase in section 24a refers to the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court direct from federal District Courts, it imports the jurisdiction conferred by section 5 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 827, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 398, which section is now embodied in Judicial Code, sec. 238, ante, title JUDICIARY, p. 231, of this Supplement. It is to be observed, however, that cases not "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings" within the meaning which that phrase in section 24a of the Bankruptcy Act has acquired in bankruptcy cases are nevertheless appealable direct to the Supreme Court if they are of the character described in section 5 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891 (now Judicial Code, sec. 238) above mentioned. Thus a judgment adjudging a defendant a bankrupt is enumerated in section 25a of the Bankruptcy Act (1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 602, and see infra, p. 623) among the judgments appealable to the Circuit Court of Appeals. Nevertheless, if the jurisdiction of the District Court was in issue in the case the judgment is appealable on that issue direct to the Supreme Court, as in the case of Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co.,

for appeal and error, p. 609.

Jurisdiction of District Court in issue. Cases taken on appeal or error direct to the Supreme Court from the District Court in bankruptcy cases, are usually those in which the jurisdiction of the court was in issue (or claimed to have been in issue) under the first specification in section 5 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 398, now Judicial Code, sec. 238, ante, title JUDICIARY, p. 231, of this Supplement. In fact, all of the cases cited in this division II. of this note (pp. 607-610) were brought up under that section.

Section 5 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act, above referred to, is copiously annotated in 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 399 et seq., and in the corresponding place in title JUDICIARY, post, vol. 2, of this Supplement.

In the following bankruptcy cases the Supreme Court determined questions of jurisdiction certified by the District Court on appeal or error: Harris v. Mt. Pleasant First Nat. Bank, (1910) 216 U. S. 382, 30 S. Ct. 296, as to jurisdiction to entertain a suit brought by a trustee in bankruptcy against a bank to require it to surrender notes pledged by the bankrupt as collateral security; Babbitt v. Dutcher, (1910) 216 U. S. 102, 30 S. Ct. 372, as to ancillary jurisdiction to entertain a summary proceeding by a trustee in bankruptcy appointed in a bankruptcy proceeding in another district to compel officers of the bankrupt corporation to deliver to such trustee the documents in their possession relating to the business of the bankrupt; Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., (1909) 212 U. S. 445, 29 S. Ct. 332, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 591, as to jurisdiction to adjudicate bankruptcy in an involuntary proceeding by a creditor on a claim for unliquidated damages, the judgment appealed from being an adjudication of bankruptcy; Whitney v. Wenman, (1905) 198 U. S. 539, 25 S. Ct. 778, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1157, as to jurisdiction of a plenary suit in equity to determine the extent and character of liens upon, rights in, and disposition of property which became subject to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court as that of the bankrupt, whether held by him or for him; Jaquith v. Rowley, (1903) 188 U. S. 620, 23 S. Ct. 369, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 620, as to jurisdiction of a summary application by a trustee in bankruptcy to grant an order the result of which would be to take immediately from the bankrupt's surety on a bail bond in a state court moneys which had been deposited with him before the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, as indemnity against liability, and thus compel him to come into the bankruptcy court for the litiga-tion of questions as to his right to retain the money obtained by him; Bardes v. Hawarden First Nat. Bank. (1900) 178 U. S. 524, 20 S. Ct. 1000, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1175, as to jurisdiction of a suit in equity by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance of goods by the bankrupt and to compel defendants to account for the goods or their proceeds; Mitchell v. McClure, (1900) 178 U. S. 539, 20 S. Ct. 1000, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1182, as to jurisdiction of an action of replevin by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover goods alleged to have been conveyed by the bankrupt in fraud of the Bankruptcy Act and of creditors; also in the two cases cited in the next two para-

When property of the bankrupt has come into possession of the trustee in bankruptcy, and the bankrupt has asserted in the federal District Court in bankruptcy a claim to be entitled to a part or the whole of such property, as exempt property, the bankruptcy court necessarily is vested with jurisdiction to determine, upon the facts before it, the validity of the claimed exemption. In such case, therefore, an erroneous decision against an exemption, and a consequently erroneous holding that the property forms assets of the estate in bankruptcy, to be administered under the direction of the court, while subject to correction on a petition for revision, does not create a question of jurisdiction proper to be passed upon by the Supreme Court on direct appeal from the District Court, even though a plea denying jurisdiction was filed in that court and its decree expressly asserted jurisdiction to hear and determine the matter. Lucius v. Cawthon-Coleman Co., (1905) 196 U. S. 149, 25 S. Ct. 214, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 425, dismissing the appeal. See also In re Riggs, (1909) 214 U. S. 9, 29 S. Ct. 598, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 887.

A judgment dismissing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy on the ground that the respondent is not in fact, as alleged, a person who may be lawfully adjudged an invol-untary bankrupt does not raise the question of jurisdiction. Denver First Nat. Bank v. Klug, (1902) 186 U. S. 203, 22 S. Ct. 899, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 1127, where an appeal was dismissed, the court saying: "The conclusion was, it is true, that Klug could not be adjudged a bankrupt, but the court had jurisdiction to so determine, and its jurisdiction over the subject-matter was not and could not be questioned."

Following the case last above cited, it was held in Columbia Ironworks v. National Lead Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 127 Fed. 99, that no question of jurisdiction was involved in a determination by the District Court that, on the proofs adduced, a corporation was engaged principally in manufacturing and mercantile pursuits and therefore subject to an adjudication of bankruptcy; and in Ex-ploration Mercantile Co. v. Pacific Hardware, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 825, that the question whether a petition in involuntary bankruptcy alleges an act of bankruptcy does not go to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court.

Where the District Court's jurisdiction to enter a decree on petition of the trustee in bankruptcy was no more dependent upon the rightful appointment of the trustee than a state court's would have been over a suit by that trustee, no appealable question of jurisdiction is presented. Knapp v. Milwankee Trust Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 675, affirmed (1910) 216 U. S. 545, 30 S. Ct. 412.

O'Neal v. U. S., (1903) 190 U. S. 36, 23 S. Ct. 776, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 945, was a writ of error to the District Court to review a judgment of imprisonment in contempt proceedings for an assault on a trustee in bankruptcy, the District Court certifying the question of jurisdiction. Dismissing the writ of error, the Supreme Court said: "The question here is asserted in the certificate to be whether the District Court had jurisdiction to try and punish the said defendant for contempt thereof, upon the facts and for the causes stated in said rule and affidavit.' Jurisdiction over the person and jurisdiction over the subject-matter of contempts were not challenged. The charge was the commission of an assault on an officer of the court, for the purpose of preventing the dis-charge of his duties as such officer, and the contention was that on the facts no case of contempt was made out. In other words, the contention was addressed to the merits of the case, and not to the jurisdiction of the court. An erroneous conclusion in that regard can only be reviewed on appeal or error, or in such appropriate way as may be provided."

What constitutes an appealable "question of jurisdiction" has been discussed in numerous cases not arising under the Bankruptcy Act. See 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 399 et seq., and the note in the corresponding place in title JUDICIABY, post, vol. 2, of this Supplement.

Where other questions are involved. See cases cited under this catch-line in 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 400, and under the sace catch-line in the corresponding place in title JUDICIARY, post. vol. 2. of this Supplement.

DICIARY, post, vol. 2. of this Supplement.

Speaking of section 5 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act above cited in this note, the court said: "It is the settled construction of this statute that . . . the losing party in a Circuit Court or a District Court may take to the Supreme Court the question of jurisdiction, in accordance with this provision of statute, or . . . he may take the entire case, including the question of jurisdiction, to the Circuit Court of Appeals." Burleigh v. Foreman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 125 Fed.

Only after final judgment. — An appeal or writ of error in a case in which the jurisdiction of the court is in issue can be taken directly from the District Court to the Supreme Court only after final judgment. Bardes v. Hawarden First Nat. Bank, (1899) 175 U. S. 526, 20 S. Ct. 196, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 261, dismissing, therefore, a certificate presenting a question of jurisdiction in order to obtain instruction for the guidance of the District Court in a case which had not gone to judgment. But a subsequent judgment in the same case was reviewed by the Supreme Court on appeal with a certificate of the same question of jurisdiction. Bardes v. Hawarden

Determination of a question of jurisdiction by the Circuit Court of Appeals on a petition for revision does not bar the petitioner from taking the same question direct to the Supreme Court from the District Court after final decision thereof in the latter court. Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., (1909) 212 U. S. 445, 29 S. Ct. 332, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 591.

Time for appeal and error.—The time limit for an appeal or writ of error direct to the Supreme Court from the District Court in a bankruptcy case is two years, as provided in R. S. sec. 1008, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 622; such cases are now governed by the time limit of thirty days which is prescribed in general orders in bankruptcy No. 36, subd. 2, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 612. Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., (1909) 212 U. S. 445, 29 S. Ct. 332, 53 U. S. (L. ed.)

Form of appellate remedy. — Where a judgment of the District Court is based upon the verdict of a jury on a jury trial demanded as of right, the record can be brought to the Supreme Court with a certified question of jurisdiction only by means of writ of error and not by appeal. Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., (1906) 203 U. S. 502, 27 S. Ct. 161, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 292, dismissing an appeal. But if an appeal is dismissed for that reason, the record may be again brought up on a writ of error sued out in proper time Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., (1909) 212 U. S. 445, 29 S. Ct. 332, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 591.

A judgment dismissing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy pursuant to a directed advisory verdict that the respondent was not a person who could lawfully be adjudged an involuntary bankrupt is reviewable on appeal. Such was the case of Denver First Nat. Bank v. Klug, (1902) 186 U. S. 203, 22 S. Ct. 899, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 1127, where the finding was that the respondent was "engaged chiefly in farming."

Mandamus will not lie from the Supreme Court to the District Court, as a substitute for an appeal or writ of error, to review an adjudication of bankruptcy for alleged want of jurisdiction, where, in making the adjudication, the court was called upon to decide, and did decide, a question of fact or of mixed law and fact. In re Riggs, (1909) 214 U. S. 9, 29 S. Ct. 598, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 887.

Certificate of question of jurisdiction.—
The absence of a separate certificate by the District Court of the question of jurisdiction, or the equivalent of such certificate, is fatal to the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, where the appeal is taken on the sole question of jurisdiction of the District Court. Denver First Nat. Bank v. Klug, (1902) 186 U. S. 203, 22 S. Ct. 899, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 1127, dismissing an appeal.

A certificate reciting several questions is quoted in Jaquith r. Rowley, (1903) 188 U. S. 620, 23 S. Ct. 369, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 620, and in Bardes v. Hawarden First Nat. Bank, (1900) 178 U. S. 539, 20 S. Ct. 1000, 44 U.

S. (L. ed.) 1175. For numerous other cases quoting certificates see the note to section 5 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, 4 Fed. Stat, Annot. 398, in the corresponding place in title JUDICIARY, post, vol. 2, of this Supplement.

Bill of exceptions. — On a writ of error with a certified question of jurisdiction a bill of exceptions is not necessary if it would add nothing to what is patent on the face of the record. Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., (1909) 212 U. S. 445, 29 S. Ct. 332, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 591, an adjudication on a jury trial, where the record showed when and how the question of jurisdiction was raised and decided, and the elements necessary to decide it.

Case advanced for hearing in Supreme Court. — Supreme Court Rule 32, (1892) 146 U. S., appendix p. 707, provides that cases brought to that court direct from a District Court where the jurisdiction of the latter court is the only question in issue will be advanced on motion and heard under the rules prescribed in regard to motions to dismiss writs of error and appeals.

Cases direct from District Court not sitting in bankruptcy. - Final judgments in suits brought in the District Court not sitting in bankruptcy, but exercising the jurisdiction conferred by section 23a of the Bankruptcy Act on the Circuit Court, Circuit Courts being abolished by Judicial Code, section 289 ante, title JUDICIABY, p. 249, of this Supplement, are reviewable directly by the Supreme Court on appeal or error under the same conditions and regulations that govern direct review of judgments of the District Court sitting in bankruptcy, considered supra in this note. Thus, Bush v. Elliott, (1906) 202 U. S. 477, 26 S. Ct. 668, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 1114, was a case of direct review on a writ of error, presenting the question of jurisdiction of the then Circuit Court to entertain a suit by trustees in bankruptcy to recover upon an alleged cause of action for moneys due the bankrupt at and prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy, where one of the trustees in bankruptcy is a citizen of the same state with the defendant and the bankrupt a citizen of another state. And Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, (1902) 186 U. S. 181, 22 S. Ct. 857, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 1113, was a case of direct review on writ of error involving the constitutionality of the Bankruptcy Act in an action against a bankrupt on a judgment recovered against him prior to his discharge in bankruptcy.

III. REVIEW BY UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT OF DECISIONS OF CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS.

Source of appellate jurisdiction. - An appeal from a final decision of a Circuit Court of Appeals in the proper exercise of its "appellate jurisdiction of controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings" under section 24a is taken under the authority of section 6 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 828, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 409, now embodied in sections 128, 241 of the Judicial Code, ante, title JUDICIARY, pp. 195, 232, of this Supplement. Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, (1904) 194 U. S. 296, 24 S. Ct. 690, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 986; Coder v. Arts, (1909) 213 U. S. 223, 29 S. Ct. 436, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 772; Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., (1910) 216 U. S. 545, 30 S. Ct. 412.

"This section [section 24a] has no relation to appeals from the Circuit Courts of Appeals. Aside from the express provision therein as to the relations of the Supreme Court to courts of bankruptcy not within any organized circuit, and to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, this section did not broaden its jurisdiction in any particular." Hutchinson v. Otis, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1902) 123 Fed. 14, 17. See also Hutchinson v. Otis, (1st Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 937, 941, 53 C. C. A. 419, affirmed (1903) 190 U.S. 552, 23 S. Ct. 778, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1179.

Jurisdictional amount. - It is to be observed that if a decision is not appealable to the Supreme Court under section 25b infra. but only under section 6 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 828, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 409, re-enacted in part in section 241 of the Judicial Code, ante, title JUDICIARY, p. 232, of this Supplement, the matter in controversy must exceed $1,000 besides costs. See Hutchinson v. Otis, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1902) 123 Fed. 14, 19, 59 C. C. A. 94; Hutchinson v. Otis, (1903) 190 U. S. 552, 23 S. Ct. 778, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1179.

Time for appeal. — Judgments or decrees of the Circuit Court of Appeals in "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings" are not governed by general order 36, subd. 3, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 612, limiting thirty days for appeals in certain cases, but are reviewable by the Supreme Court upon appeal taken or writ of error sued out "within one year after the entry of the order, judgment, or decree sought to be reviewed," as provided in the last paragraph of section 6 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 828, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 409. Thomas v. Sugarman, (1910) 218 U. S. 129, 30 S. Ct. 650.

The appellate procedure on appeals to the Supreme Court from the Circuit Court of Appeals in "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings" is the same that obtains in like cases of appeals to the Supreme Court under the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 826, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 395, and is not regulated by any provision in the Bankruptcy Act or the general orders. Neither section 25b of the Bankruptcy Act nor general order No. 36, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 612, applies to such appeals. Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., (1910) 216 U. S. 545, 30 S. Ct. 412.

Hence on appeals from decrees of the Circuit Court of Appeals determining "controversies," etc., under section 24a, no findings of fact and conclusions of law are required; general order No. 36, subd. 3, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 612, applying only to appeals under section 25b. Knapp r. Milwaukee Trust Co., (1910) 216 U. S. 545, 30 S. Ct. 412.

Miscellaneous matter of appellate procedure, see first note to sec. 25a, infra, p. 623.

Review on certiorari to the Circuit Court of Appeals, see infra, p. 641, section 25d.

Mandate and proceedings thereon. — On determination of a case taken to the Supreme Court from the Circuit Court of Appeals, which was brought to the latter from a District Court, it is customary to issue but a single mandate; and although the mandate may be addressed to the Circuit Court of Appeals alone in point of form, the directions as to the further proceedings of the District Court are not an order to the Circuit Court of Appeals to issue an order to the District Court, but simply directions to be communicated to the District Court, which the latter is to follow on the authority of the Supreme Court, not of the Circuit Court of Appeals. Hence an application for mandamus to the District Court to compel it to conform to the mandate must be made to the Supreme Court and not to the Circuit Court of Appeals, the latter having no jurisdiction thereof. Ex p. Chicago First Nat. Bank, (1907) 207 U. S. 61, 28 S. Ct. 23, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 103, reversing (7th Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 742, 77 C.

A decree of a District Court for the transfer to certain adverse claimants of a part of the proceeds of a sale of property not in possession of the trustee in bankruptcy, without prejudice to the rights of such trustee, "if this court shall so authorize," to litigate in any proper court the question of his right to recover such funds as a part of the bankrupt's general estate, is a sufficient compliance with the mandate of the Supreme Court, which had directed the remanding of the case for further proceedings in conformity with its opinion, in which it was stated that the District Court's original decree should have been "without prejudice to the right of respondents to litigate in a proper court." Ex p. Chicago First Nat. Bank, (1907) 207 U. S. 61, 28 S. Ct. 23, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 103, reversing (7th Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 742, 77 C. C. A. 408.

Where an appeal is dismissed by the Supreme Court without opinion, and the mandate recites only that the appeal was dismissed "for the want of jurisdiction," it would be idle to speculate as to the precise grounds upon which this action was taken. Loeser v. Savings Deposit Bank, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 212.

b [Circuit Courts of Appeals.] The several circuit courts of appeal shall have jurisdiction in equity, either interlocutory or final, to superintend and revise in matter of law the proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction. Such power shall be exercised on due notice and petition by any party aggrieved. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.]

The provisions in this subsection are recognized and confirmed in Judicial Code, section 130, ante, title, JUDICIABY, p. 196, of this Sup-

Appeal or petition to revise as exclusive or optional right — Supreme Court. — If a decree of a bankruptcy court is a step in bankruptcy proceedings proper, and is not enumerated in section 25a, no appeal will lie to the Circuit Court of Appeals, the latter having power to review such a decree only on a petition for revision. Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051, reversing (7th Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 169, 60 C. C. A. 567, and holding that a controversy in the bankruptcy court between a receiver appointed by that court and an adverse claimant to property which the receiver had been authorized by the court to sell was a proceeding in bankruptcy and not reviewable

First circuit. — "It is not unreasonable to hold that a dissatisfied litigant may appeal as to both the law and facts, or may, where a question of law is concerned, take the less expensive and the more summary manner of raising that alone by a revisory petition. Certainly no detriment could come therefrom, because in the latter case the party aggrieved waives all questions of fact, which is for the advantage of the winning party in the court below. . . . Neither has the Supreme Court expressly ruled on the proposition before us. It has, without question, permitted cases to come before it based on revisory petitions to the Circuit Courts of Appeals without comment on this topic [citing cases]

In these cases it has proceeded so indiscriminately on the foundation of a revised petition to a Circuit Court of Appeals as to give much color to our proposition that in many cases parties considering themselves aggrieved may proceed either by such a petition or by appeal." Burleigh t. Foreman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 217. Compare In rePettingill, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 840.

Second circuit. — See In re Levi, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 962; obiter, In re Mertens, (2d Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 818, 75 C. C. A. 548, affirmed, but not mentioning this point, sub nom. Hiscock v. Varick Bank, (1907) 206 U. S. 28, 27 S. Ct. 681, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 945; In re Kuffler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 127 Fed. 125.

Fourth circuit.—Appeal is the exclusive remedy for review of an order allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of $500 or over. Postlethwaite v. Hicks, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 897, dismissing a petition for revision. See also Chesapeake Shoe Co. v. Seldner, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 593; Cook Inlet Coal Fields Co. v. Caldwell, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 475.

(C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 475.

Fifth circuit. — See Union Nat. Bank v.
Neill, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed.

Siath circuit. - "That which may come here by appeal cannot come here for review; otherwise the distinction which the act recognizes will be ignored. Neither is there any reason for supposing that an order or judgment may be appealed when questions of fact are to be considered and reviewed upon petition if only a question of law is involved. The distinction between cases appealable and cases reviewable lies deeper, and turns upon the character of case or question. . . . The consensus of opinion and reason seems to be that this revisory jurisdiction does not include any orders or decrees which are appealable" - whether under section 24a or under section 25a - "the provisions for appeal and for petition of review being mutually ex-clusive. . . . The 'proceedings' reviewable are those administrative orders and decrees in the ordinary course of a bankruptcy between the filing of the petition and the final settlement of the estate, which are not made specially appealable under section 25a." Per Lurton, J., in In re Mueller, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 711, 712, 715, dismissing a petition to review an order allowing a claim, which was appealable under section 25a (3).

"It is also the settled rule of this court, in accordance with the great weight of authority in the federal courts, and in harmony with the case of Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051, and earlier decisions of the Supreme Court, that the provisions for appeal under section 24a of the Bankrupt Act and those for review under section 25b are 'mutually exclusive,' and that where an appeal has been erroneously taken it cannot be treated and sustained as a petition for review." Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 576, 580, citing the following cases: Dickas v. Barnes, (6th Cir. 1905) 140 Fed. 849, 72 C. C. A. 261; Davidson v. Friedman, (6th Cir. 1906) 140 Fed. 853, 72 C. C. A. 553; In re McMahon, (6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 684, 77 C. C. A. 668; O'Dell v. Boyden, (6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 731, 10 Ann. Cas. 239, 80 C. C. A. 397. See also In re Doran, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 467.

Seventh circuit. — "The very fact that specific methods are provided for specific situations is conclusively indicative to our minds that Congress did not intend that an aggrieved party should be at liberty to disregard the course definitely opened for him, and to choose some other that might better suit his inclination or convenience. There is no evidence of an intent, for example, to jumble up writs of error with appeals. Why should an inference be entertained that original petitions to review and appeals were intended to be interchangeable at the election of the suitor? . . . If an inferior territorial court enters one of the judgments in bankruptcy proceedings on the equity side which are specifically named in section 25a, is it conceivable that Congress designed that the aggrieved party should have his choice, not merely between methods of review, but also between forums?" In re Friend, (C. C. A.

7th Cir. 1905) 134 Fed. 778, holding that a judgment granting a discharge, being appealable under section 25s (2), is not reviewable on petition to revise, even though it involves only matter of law.

Eighth circuit. — For reasons stated in In re Holmes, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 391, 392, the decision in Plymouth Cordage Co. v. Smith, (1904) 194 U. S. 311, 24 S. Ct. 725, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 992, was construed as a ruling that orders appealable under section 25a may nevertheless be reviewed in matter of law on petition under section 24b. See also C. C. Taft Co. v. Century Sav. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 369; Thomas v. Woods, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 173 Fed. 585

"The grant of jurisdiction to the Circuit Court of Appeals to review by appeal the final decision of a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings of which that court would have had appellate jurisdiction if it had arisen in any other case in a federal court under section 24a, and the grant of jurisdiction to revise and superintend in matter of law the proceedings of the inferior courts of bankruptcy under section 24b, are not exclusive of each other, but cumulative or concurrent grants, the former of jurisdiction to review questions of law and of fact, the latter of jurisdiction to review questions of law alone. An aggrieved party often has a choice of these methods." In re Lee, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 182 Fed. 579, 581.

"The Act of 1898 does not grant the appellate and the revisory jurisdiction in the alternative. It does not give to disappointed litigants the right of appeal or the right of revision in matter of law. It grants the right of appeal and the right of superintendence and revision in matter of law only. It gives both rights freely and without limitation. The two grants are not inconsistent, and on familiar principles both must stand, and in a proper case either may be invoked."

Dodge v. Norlin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 363, holding that the fact that a decision may be reviewable on petition under section 24b does not alone make it nonappealable as a "controversy" under section 24a.

In In re McKenzie, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 383, where the order of the court below, which was brought upon a petition to revise, was "probably" not an order rejecting a claim within the meaning of section 25a (3), the court said that even "if it were," it could be revised in matter of law on petition for revision; that appeal and revision are "concurrent and cumulative remedies;" and that "in many cases parties aggrieved have the option to present questions of law by petition for revision or questions of law and fact by an appeal." Compare Ingram v. Wilson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 913.

Ninth circuit. — "There is in the language of the act nothing to indicate that the revisory power so given to the Circuit Courts of Appeals is more extensive than that which was exercised by the Circuit Courts under Bankrupty Act March 2, 1867, c. 176, 14 Stat. L. 517. In Lathrop v. Drake, (1875) 91 U.

S. 516, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 414, it was held that the appellate jurisdiction conferred on the Circuit Courts by the Act of 1867 was of two classes of cases, one to be exercised under a petition for review, the other by the ordinary appeal or writ of error. The same distinction has been recognized in construing the Bankruptcy Act of 1898, and it has been held that the provisions for appeal and for review on petition are mutually exclusive, and that the revisory jurisdiction does not include any orders or decrees which are appealable or reviewable on writ of error." Morehouse v. Pacific Hardware, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 337, citing the following cases: Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, (1904) 194 U. S. 296, 24 S. Ct. 690, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 986; Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051; Scott v. Wilson, (7th Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 284, 53 C. C. A. 76; Inre Rusch, (7th Cir. 1902) 116 Fed. 270, 53 C. C. A. 631; In re Friend, (7th Cir. 1905) 134 Fed. 778, 67 C. C. A. 500; In re Mueller, (6th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 712, 68 C. C. A. 349; O'Dell v. Boyden, (6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 731, 80 C. C. A. 397.

"The general consensus of opinion is that section 25a having provided a means to review by appeal three kinds of judgments, every other means is excluded." Miles City First Nat. Bank v. State Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 430, 433

First Nat. Bank v. State Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 430, 433.

Appeal treated as petition to revise.—
Unquestionably where "matter of law" is sufficiently presented in the record on an appeal, the Circuit Court of Appeals is at liberty to treat the appeal as a petition to revise if appeal is decided not to be the proper remedy. Holden v. Stratton, (1903) 191 U. S. 115, 119, 24 S. Ct. 45, 47, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 116, 118; Duryea Power Co. r. Sternbergh, (1910) 218 U. S. 299, 31 S. Ct. 25, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047.

In In re Abraham, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 93 Fed. 767, 787, the court treated an appeal as a petition for revision, the record clearly embracing a sufficient statement of the facts and action of the court thereon sought to be are to matter of law. See the same case on certiorari sub nom. Bryan v. Bernheimer, (1901) 181 U. S. 188, 21 S. Ct. 557, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 814.

In Chesapeake Shoe Co. v. Seldner, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 593, an appeal presenting only a question of law was treated as a petition for revision, thereby avoiding the necessity of deciding whether the judgment complained of was one rejecting a claim and therefore appealable under section 25a (3).

Treating an appeal in an unappealable case as a petition for revision, where the appellee made no objection, and the record was fully adequate to present a matter of law. "we shall not consider our action a precedent in any case where objection is made," said the court in In re Rose Shoe Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 39.

But an appeal cannot be treated as a petition for revision if a consideration of the facts is essential to any review of the decision complained of. Francis v. McNeal, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 445; Gaudette v. Graham, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 311, where the court said: "That is only permissible where questions of law only are involved," citing In re Williams, (9th Cir. 1907) 156 Fed. 934, 84 C. C. A. 434; In re Rouse, (7th Cir. 1899) 91 Fed. 96, 98, 33 C. C. A. 356, and Courier Journal Job-Printing Co. v. Schaefer-Meyer Brewing Co., (6th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 699, 41 C. C. A. 614.

Petition for revision treated as appeal.—While an appeal may be treated as a petition for revision in a proper case, the converse proposition does not necessarily hold; a petition for revision opens only questions of law, and jurisdiction of the Circuit Court of Appeals thereon cannot be enlarged by treating it as an appeal opening both fact and law. Duryea Power Co. v. Sternbergh, (1910) 218 U. S. 299, 31 S. Ct. 25, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047.

A petition to superintend and revise could not be treated as an appeal unless it was filed within the time limited for an appeal, which would be ten days if the judgment was appealable under section 25a. So stated in Postlethwaite v. Hicks, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 897.

Appeal united with petition. - An appeal and also a petition to superintend and revise were filed in the following cases, the court usually dismissing the proceeding which it deemed inappropriate and determining the questions presented in the other proceeding, especially when the latter was declared to be the exclusive remedy: In re Moore, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1909) 166 Fed. 689; Franklin v. Stoughton Wagon Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 857; Schuler v. Hassinger, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 119; In re Hecox, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 823, "a course of practice recognized in this jurisdiction," citing In re McKenzie, (8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 383, 73 C. C. A. 483; In re Holmes, (8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 391, 73 C. C. A. 491; Hendricks v. Webster, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 927, dismissing the petition, "as we are asked to consider evidence in the record," and entertaining the appeal; Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., (C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 445; Union Nat. Bank v. Neill, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 720; Mason v. Wolkowich, (C. C. A.
1st Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 699; Coder v. Arts,
(C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 943, affirmed (1909) 213 U. S. 223, 29 S. Ct. 436. 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 772; In re Louisville First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 155 Fed. 100; In re Louisville Nat. Banking Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 158 Fed. 403.

Questions and orders reviewable on petition.—See cases cited under this catchline in 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 595.

In general.—"It is conceivable that the line of demarcation between proceedings in bankruptcy and controversies at law and in equity, arising in the course of bankruptcy proceedings, may in some cases be obscure; but, generally speaking, the former include all questions arising in the administration of the bankrupt's estate, such as the appointment of receivers and trustees, orders requiring the bankrupt to surrender property of the estate in bankruptcy, orders requiring the bankrupt's voluntary assignee to surrender property of the estate, orders giving priority to the claim of a creditor, orders directing a set-off of mutual debts, and orders confirming the composition. These are questions which, with a view to the prompt administration and distribution of the assets of the bankrupt, the law permits to be summarily disposed of by revision. The latter include all controversies and questions arising between the trustee and adverse claimants of property as property of the estate, whether the property be in his possession or theirs." Per Gilbert, J., in Morehouse v. Pacific Hardware, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 337, 339.

An order setting aside an adjudication and dismissing the bankruptcy proceeding for want of jurisdiction is reviewable in matter of law on petition of the trustee. In re New England Breeders' Club, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1909) 169 Fed. 586, regarding that point as decided in Plymouth Cordage Co. v. Smith, (1904) 194 U. S. 311, 24 S. Ct. 725, 48 U. S.

An order refusing to set aside an order of adjudication of bankruptcy is reviewable on petition under this section. Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 576, citing as in point Plymouth Cordage Co. v. Smith, (1904) 194 U. S. 311, 24 S. Ct. 725, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 992, which held that the Circuit Court of Appeals had jurisdiction of a petition to revise a refusal of the bankruptcy court to permit certain creditors to file a motion to set aside an order dismissing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy.

Creditor claiming a lien. — "A decision of a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings which involves the validity of the claim of a creditor to a lien upon the property of the bankrupt, or its proceeds under administration in possession of the court, is a proceeding in bankruptcy within the meaning of section 24b of the bankruptcy law and reviewable in matter of law upon a petition to revise." In re Lee, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 182 Fed. 579, 581, citing the following cases: Dodge v. Norlin, (8th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 363, 367, 66 C. C. A. 425, 429; John Dears Blow Co. 6th McDorid, (9th Cir. 1905) Deere Plow Co. v. McDavid, (8th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 802, 810, 70 C. C. A. 422, 430; In re McKenzie, (8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 383, 385, 73 C. C. A. 483, 485; In re Holmes, (8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 391, 393, 73 C. C. A. 491, 493; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, (7th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 32, 38, 74 C. C. A. 186, 192; Franklin v. Stoughton Wagon Co., (8th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 857, 860, 94 C. C. A. 269, 272, and Thomas v. Woods, (8th Cir. (1909) 173 Fed. 585, 588, 97 C. C. A. 535, 538.

Where the validity of a trust deed given by a bankrupt more than four months prior to the institution of bankruptcy proceedings, as against other creditors, arises in bankruptcy proceedings in determining the priority of claims, an order holding the trust deed invalid is reviewable under section 24b, and need not be taken up by appeal. Ritchie County Bank v. McFarland, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 715; Moore v. Green, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 472, "for the reasons stated by this court in the case of Morgan v. Mannington First Nat. Bank, (4th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 466, 468, 469, 76 C. C. A. 236."

Allowance of counsel fees and expenses.—
An order passing upon the claim of a creditor for the allowance of counsel fees and expenses incurred in contesting claims and prosecuting suits on behalf of the estate, if a question of fact is not involved, is reviewable in petition. Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Switzer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 362. Likewise an order allowing expenses incurred by a bankrupt's trustee for counsel fees. Davidson r. Friedman, (6th Cir. 1906) 140 Fed. 853, 72 C. C. A. 553.

"Where the right to amend in bankruptcy

"Where the right to amend in bankruptcy proceedings is a valuable legal right, the action of the district judge in refusing the amendment may be revised" under section 24b. Goodman v. Curtis, (5th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 644, reversing an order denying the bankrupt the right to amend his schedule to supply an omission through mistake to claim his exemptions, and citing In re Carley, (3d Cir. 1902) 117 Fed. 130, 55 C. C. A. 146, which reversed, on petition, an order denying a creditor's motion to amend his specifications in opposition to a discharge.

Orders in contempt proceedings. - An order not made with a view to obtain possession of property of the bankrupt or to en-force a prior order of the court, but made in a criminal proceeding to punish by fine or imprisonment for contempt in violating an injunction against the bankrupt and others, has nothing to do with the estate of the bankrupt, and is not reviewable on a petition to revise. Morehouse v. Pacific Hardware, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 337, distinguishing Mueller v. Nugent, (1902) 184 U. S. 1, 22 S. Ct. 269, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 405, and In re Cole, (1st Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 392, 75 C. C. A. 330, (1st Cir. 1907) 163 Fed. 180, 90 C. C. A. 50, on the ground that "those were not proceedings to punish for contempt already committed, but orders, the purpose of which was to require the payment to the trustees of the money of the estate, and the commitments for contempt were alternative, and for the purpose of compelling obedience to the orders.

"It would seem" that an order to show cause in a proceeding for contempt is not reviewable on petition, for the reason that it is not an interlocutory order which determines any substantial right of the petitioners. Morehouse v. Pacific Hardware, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 337.

An order adjudging the petitioner guilty of contempt in disobeying an order to pay over a sum of money to the trustee in bankruptcy, and ordering that he be committed to jail unless he paid the money, was reviewed on petition in In re Graessler, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 478.

Disputed questions of fact. - An order confirming or setting aside a referee's order requiring the bankrupt to turn over property to the trustee, involving disputed questions of fact, is not reviewable on petition. Ellis v. Krulewitch, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 954.

Whether the lien claimed by a creditor under a trust deed constituted a valid preference, so far as the question depended on the correct determination of the facts relating to the particular transaction, was not reviewable on a petition to revise. Kenova L. & T. Co. v. Graham, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 717.

It seems that an order transferring a case to another court of bankruptcy under section 32 of the Bankruptcy Act is not reviewable on petition, since it determines a mixed question of law and fact. Kyle Lumber Co. v. Bush, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1905) 133 Fed.

The question whether the court erred in ordering a sale of property free from incumbrances, on the ground that it was covered by a mortgage which left no equity of redemption of value to the estate, cannot be reviewed on petition where it involves questions of fact as well as of law. In re Union Trust Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 937.

An order allowing a claim as a general debt, but disallowing in part a claim of the creditor to priority as a lienholder, where it depends on controverted facts, is not reviewable on petition. Gaudette v. Graham, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 311.

A finding by a court of bankruptcy on competent evidence that money deposited by a bankrupt in a bank in his own name as attorney, giving the bank where he opened the account a power of attorney from his wife to draw against it, was not his money and did not pass to his trustee is one of fact, which cannot be reviewed on a petition to revise. In re Donnelly, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 187 Fed. 121.

Orders of a miscellaneous character, expressly or impliedly held reviewable on petition, are as follows:

A decree directing trustees in bankruptcy to turn over certificates of stock and proceeds of other certificates to certain claimants thereof. Thomas v. Taggart, (1908) 209 U. S. 385, 28 S. Ct. 519, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 845.

A decree of the District Court in favor of a trustee in bankruptcy subrogating him to the rights of certain creditors and au-thorizing him to enforce their attachment liens with like force and effect as the attaching creditors might have done had not the bankruptcy proceedings intervened. Balti-more First Nat. Bank v. Staake, (1906) 202 U. S. 141, 26 S. Ct. 580, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 967; McHarg v. Staake, (1906) 202 U. S. 150, 26 S. Ct. 584, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 971.

A decree requiring payment to the trustee in bankruptcy of a sum of money as a part of the assets of the bankrupt's estate. end of opinion in Schweer v. Brown, (1904)

A decision that a petitioner in involuntary bankruptcy had a provable claim, denying the alleged bankrupt's motion to dismiss the petition, and directing that the claim of the petitioning creditor be liquidated at a jury trial demanded by the alleged bankrupt. In re Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 881, as explained in Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., (1909) 212 U. S. 445, 29 S. Ct. 332, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 591.

Denial of an application by an individual creditor of a bankrupt member of a firm for an allowance of interest out of the individual estate subsequent to the allowance of his claim. In re Chandler, (C. C. A. 7th Cir.

A decision denying a summary order to compel the bankrupt's assignee for the benefit of creditors to turn over to the trustee assets alleged to belong to the bankrupt. Farrell, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 176 Fed. 505.

An order directing the trustee in bankruptcy to pay a certain sum of money to the petitioners. In re Brown, (C. C. A. 2d Cir.

1909) 174 Fed. 339.

An order directing the turning over of property or money by a third person to the trustee in bankruptcy. In re Rose Shoe Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 39.

A decision on objections by creditors of a bankrupt to an account rendered by the trustee, which seeks to charge him with property as having come into his possession which was not accounted for, being a summary proceeding and not a plenary suit. In re Moore, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1909) 166 Fed. 689.

An order dismissing a petition in the nature of a replevin suit seeking to have delivered to him certain property seized by the receiver in bankruptcy. Ross v. Stroh, (C. receiver in bankruptcy. Ross v. C. A. 3d Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 628.

Refusal, solely on a question of law, of the trustee's petition for a summary order on a receiver appointed by a state court to deliver property to the trustee. In re Hecox, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 823.

An adjudication of bankruptcy against a corporation, the question being one of jurisdiction and presented in the court below and in the appellate court on an agreed statement Hall, etc., Co. v. Friday, (C. C. A. of facts. 3d Cir. 1907) 158 Fed. 593, reversed on certiorari, but impliedly affirmed on this point (1910) 216 U. S. 449, 30 S. Ct. 261.

Denial of a creditor's application to set aside a bankrupt's discharge on the ground that, if the facts claimed by the creditor were established, they would not warrant the court in refusing a discharge. In re Louisville Nat. Banking Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 158 Fed. 403, the question being "one of administration."

An order setting aside an allowance of a secured claim and requiring the creditor to pay to the trustee a sum received through an unlawful preference. In re Louisville First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 155 Fed. 100, dismissing an appeal united with the petition for review.

An order denying a claim to certain ex-emptions asserted by the wife of a bankrupt. In re Youngstrom, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 188 Fed. 98.

An order made in a proceeding between the trustee in bankruptcy and a prior assignee to determine the right to property in the custody of the court or its proceeds. O'Dell v. Boyden, (6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 731, 10 Ann. Cas. 239, 80 C. C. A. 397.

An order denying to holders of debts against a partnership the right of participation in the individual assets of the bankrupt partner until the individual creditors of the bankrupt were paid. Euclid Nat. Bank v. Union Trust, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 975, certiorari denied (1907) 205 U. S. 547, 27 S. Ct. 793, 51 U. S. (L. ed.)

A decree of the District Court asserting its jurisdiction, on petition by the trustee in bankruptcy for an order to sell real estate in his possession, to determine the validity of claims to it or liens against it, and ruling that if such adverse claimants did not choose to come in voluntarily and set up their claims they might be brought in by subpæna on the trustee's petition. In re McMahon, (6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 684, 77 C. C. A. 668.

An order requiring the bankrupt to assign and turn over to his trustee certain life insurance policies as property of his estate. In re Mertens, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 445, affirmed in (1907) 205 U. S. 202, 27 S. Ct. 488, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 771.

An order requiring a bankrupt to pay over to the trustee a sum of money as assets of the estate or in the alternative to be committed to jail. Samel v. Dodd, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1906) 142 Fed. 68, certiorari denied in (1906) 201 U. S. 646, 26 S. Ct. 761, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 903.

Orders requiring members of a bankrupt partnership to schedule and surrender their individual property. Dickas v. Barnes, (6th Cir. 1905) 140 Fed. 849, 72 C. C. A. 261.

A decree relating to the distribution of the proceeds of a sale of real estate made by a trustee in bankruptcy. In re Groetzinger, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1903) 127 Fed. 124.

An order, on petition of a creditor, directing the sale of property which had previously been set apart to the bankrupt as a home-stead. Ingram v. Wilson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 913.

A decree denying a chattel mortgagee's right to a fund arising out of the mortgaged property, which by agreement he had turned over to the bankruptcy court reserving the right to pursue the fund. In re Antigo Screen Door Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1903) 123 Fed. 249.

Time for filing petition. - See cases cited under this catchline in 1 Fed. Stat. Annot.

When no rule of court prescribes time. -The Bankruptcy Act does not prescribe a limit of time within which a petition to su-perintend and revise must be filed, and none has been fixed by the general orders in bankruptcy, nor by any rule of court in most of the Circuit Courts of Appeals. "It does not, however, follow from this lack of limitation that the Courts of Appeals will entertain petitions to revise any of the proceed-ings of the inferior courts of bankruptcy which a disappointed litigant may seek to challenge without regard to the time which has elapsed between the date of the proceeding and the presentation of the petition.

One of the main purposes of the law was to provide a speedy method whereby a bankrupt might be finally discharged from liability to his creditors and his property might be equitably distributed among them. This object would be entirely defeated if the orders and judgments in bankruptcy were forever open, or were open for an uncertain or unknown time, to revision and reversal upon petitions under section 24b, because in that case they would never become or be known to be either final or conclusive. An uncertainty relative to the time within which such petitions may be maintained necessarily leaves the conclusiveness of the orders of the bankruptcy courts in doubt and thus tends to defeat one of the main purposes of the law. There ought, therefore, to be a well-known and certain limit to the time within which such judgments and orders may be challenged in matter of law by petition as well as by appeal." Per Sanborn, J., in In re Holmes, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 391. For similar sentiments see Blanchard v. Ammons, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 556.

The several Circuit Courts of Appeals have adopted, in their reported opinions, either a definite limitation or a limitation depending somewhat upon the circumstances of each case. By the express terms of section 24b the power there conferred is a "jurisdiction in equity," and "a petition for revision, like all proceedings in bankruptcy, is a proceeding an proceedings in bankrupery, is a proceedings in equity." In re Holmes, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 391, 394. General Order No. 37, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 612, provides that "in proceedings in equity instituted for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the Act, or for enforcing the rights and remedies given by it, the rules of equity practice established by the Supreme Court shall be followed as nearly as may be." By liberal construction of the order it would extend not only to what are denominated the equity rules, but to rules of practice in equity established alone by decisions of the Supreme Court. Now, it is well settled in that court that bills of review to correct errors apparent upon the face of the record may not be successfully maintained, unless they are filed within the times limited for the review by appeal of the decrees they question. Cases cited in In re Holmes, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 391, 393, 394. And petitions for superintendence and revision in matters of law under the Bankruptcy Act are available only to correct errors apparent upon the face of the record. Case last above cited, and cases cited, supra, p. 611, in this note to section 24b. Hence, the reason of the limitation for bills of review being even more persuasive and compelling in the case of petitions for superintendence and revision in bankruptcy, it has been held in two circuits that such a petition cannot be maintained after expiration of the six months period for appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals, which is prescribed in section 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 829, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 428. (See infra, p. 635, note to last clause of sec. 25a (3). In re Holmes, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 391, dismissing a petition for revision in the case of what it regarded as an appealable order, because the six months period for appeal had elapsed three days before the petition was filed; In re Worcester County, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 808, sustaining a petition for revision of an order regarded as nonappealable, filed within six months, the court saying, however, "certainly" the limit of time "can be no shorter." In one of those circuits this time limit was applied to a petition to revise an order in bankruptcy by a District Court of a territory. In re Tomlinson Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 834, dismissing a petition filed by a bankrupt more than sixteen months after an order was made in the District Court of Oklahoma territory denying his motion to quash service of the subpœna, and referring to the time limit as being six months. See also Blanchard v. Ammons, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 556, a case from a territory.

In another circuit it was held, in a case of a petition for review of a nonappealable order, that the petition ought ordinarily to be filed within six months, but that in the absence of a standing rule on the subject, a longer delay would be tolerated where there was a reasonable excuse for it. In re Groetzinger, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1903) 127 Fed. 124, where the court denied a motion to dismiss a petition for revision, not filed within six months, of an order relating to the distribution of the proceeds of the sale of real estate made by the trustee in bankruptcy, it appearing from the certificate of the clerk of the District Court, and otherwise, that important evidence, to wit, the books of the bankrupt, without fault on the part of the petitioners, had disappeared and could not be found, and that the judge below had made two orders enlarging the time for filing the record with reference to an appeal taken simultaneously with the petition for review.

In Blanchard v. Ammons, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 556, where a petition for revision was dismissed because of a delay of more than three years without reasonable excuse, the court said: "An appeal from the adjudication of bankruptcy is required to be taken within ten days, and by analogy it would seem that a petition for revision of the adjudication of bankruptcy ought to be taken within a similar time, unless there are circumstances excusing delay. But the courts have generally held that a petition for revision must be presented within six months."

In In re Good, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 99 Fed. 389, the court was evidently of opinion that if an adjudication of bankruptcy could be reviewed on a petition to revise, this could only be done on a petition filed within the ten days limited for an appeal from the order. See also on that point the remarks of the court in In re Friend, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 134 Fed. 778, 780; In re Sweetser, (C. C. Mass. 1907) 157 Fed. 567.

In In re Youngstrom, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 98, a motion to dismiss a petition for revision was denied, "as the order sought to be revised is not one of those • made specially appealable by section 25a, and as the petition was presented within the six months generally limited for invoking the appellate jurisdiction of a Circuit Court of Appeals."

In In re New York Economical Printing Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1901) 106 Fed. 839, a motion to dismiss a petition, made on the ground that the same had not been taken within ten days, was denied, the court saying, "we do not think there has been any unreasonable delay in this case," but not stating any of the circumstances nor the length of the delay. Subsequently the court adopted the rule quoted infra, this page. In Meyer Bros. Drug Co. v. Pipkin Drug Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 396, more than three months after an order was made declaring a mortgage lien invalid a petition to revise the order was filed, and the court refused to dismiss it, there being "no suggestion that pending the delay the proceeds of the property mortgaged have been distributed, or that any party's rights have suffered."

A petition presented to a judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals five days after the judgment was rendered which it sought to have reviewed was held to be in ample time. In re Seebold, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1901) 105 Fed. 910.

Where a party's appeal from an order, taken in due time, was dismissed by the Circuit Court of Appeals about a year after-ward because the order was not appealable, but reviewable only on a petition for revision, the court noticed and refrained from deciding the question whether a petition for revision would then be too late. Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 576, 581.

Under a standing rule of court. — A limitation of ten days has been adopted by rule 38 of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the second circuit, which provides as follows:
"Petitions to review orders in bankruptcy filed_under the provisions of section 245 of the Bankruptcy Act must be filed and served within ten days after the entry of the order sought to be reviewed, and a transcript of the record of the proceedings in the bankruptcy court of the matter to be reviewed must be filed and the cause docketed within thirty days thereafter, but the judge of the bankruptcy court may for good cause shown enlarge the time for filing the petition or record, the order of enlargement to be made and filed with the clerk of this court before the expiration of the times hereby limited for filing the petition and record respectively,"—in order "to conform the practice in review by petition to review by appeal," said the court in In re Brown, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 339.

An order denying a claim to certain exemptions asserted by the wife of a bankrupt. In re Youngstrom, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 188 Fed. 98.

An order made in a proceeding between the trustee in bankruptcy and a prior assignee to determine the right to property in the custody of the court or its proceeds. O'Dell v. Boyden, (6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 731, 10 Ann. Cas. 239, 80 C. C. A. 397.

An order denying to holders of debts against a partnership the right of participation in the individual assets of the bankrupt partner until the individual creditors of the bankrupt were paid. Euclid Nat. Bank v. Union Trust, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 975, certiorari denied (1907) 205 U. S. 547, 27 S. Ct. 793, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 694

A decree of the District Court asserting its jurisdiction, on petition by the trustee in bankruptcy for an order to sell real estate in his possession, to determine the validity of claims to it or liens against it, and ruling that if such adverse claimants did not choose to come in voluntarily and set up their claims they might be brought in by subpæna on the trustee's petition. In re McMahon, (6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 684, 77 C. C. A. 668.

An order requiring the bankrupt to assign and turn over to his trustee certain life insurance policies as property of his estate. In re Mertens, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 445, affirmed in (1907) 205 U. S. 202, 27 S. Ct. 488, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 771.

An order requiring a bankrupt to pay over

An order requiring a bankrupt to pay over to the trustee a sum of money as assets of the estate or in the alternative to be committed to jail. Samel v. Dodd, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1906) 142 Fed. 68, certiorari denied in (1906) 201 U. S. 646, 26 S. Ct. 761, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 903.

Orders requiring members of a bankrupt partnership to schedule and surrender their individual property. Dickas v. Barnes, (6th Cir. 1905) 140 Fed. 849, 72 C. C. A. 261.

A decree relating to the distribution of the proceeds of a sale of real estate made by a trustee in bankruptcy. In re Groetzinger, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1903) 127 Fed. 124.

An order, on petition of a creditor, directing the sale of property which had previously been set apart to the bankrupt as a homestead. Ingram v. Wilson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 913.

A decree denying a chattel mortgagee's right to a fund arising out of the mortgaged property, which by agreement he had turned over to the bankruptcy court reserving the right to pursue the fund. In re Antigo Screen Door Co., (C.C. A. 7th Cir. 1903) 123 Fed. 249.

Time for filing petition. — See cases cited under this catchline in 1 Fed. Stat. Annot.

When no rule of court prescribes time.—
The Bankruptcy Act does not prescribe a limit of time within which a petition to superintend and revise must be filed, and none has been fixed by the general orders in bankruptcy, nor by any rule of court in most of the Circuit Courts of Appeals. "It does not, however, follow from this lack of limitation that the Courts of Appeals will enter-tain petitions to revise any of the proceed-ings of the inferior courts of bankruptcy which a disappointed litigant may seek to challenge without regard to the time which has elapsed between the date of the proceeding and the presentation of the petition. One of the main purposes of the law was to provide a speedy method whereby a bankrupt might be finally discharged from liability to his creditors and his property might be equitably distributed among them. This object would be entirely defeated if the orders and judgments in bankruptcy were forever open, or were open for an uncertain or unknown time, to revision and reversal upon petitions under section 24b, because in that case they would never become or be known to be either final or conclusive. An uncertainty relative to the time within which such petitions may be maintained necessarily leaves the conclusiveness of the orders of the bankruptcy courts in doubt and thus tends to defeat one of the main purposes of the law. There ought, therefore, to be a well-known and certain limit to the time within which such judgments and orders may be challenged in matter of law by petition as well as by appeal." Per Sanborn, J., in In re Holmes, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 391. For similar sentiments see Blanchard v. Ammons, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed.

The several Circuit Courts of Appeals have adopted, in their reported opinions, either a definite limitation or a limitation depending somewhat upon the circumstances of each case. By the express terms of section 24b the power there conferred is a "jurisdiction in equity," and "a petition for revision, like all proceedings in bankruptcy, is a proceeding in equity." In re Holmes, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 391, 394. General Order No. 37, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 612, provides that "in proceedings in equity instituted for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the Act, or for enforcing the rights and remedies given by it, the rules of equity practice established by the Supreme Court shall be followed as nearly as may be." By liberal construction of the order it would extend not only to what are denominated the equity rules, but to rules of practice in equity es-tablished alone by decisions of the Supreme Court. Now, it is well settled in that court that bills of review to correct errors apparent upon the face of the record may not be successfully maintained, unless they are filed within the times limited for the review by appeal of the decrees they question. Cases cited in In re Holmes, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 391, 393, 394. And petitions for superintendence and revision in matters of law under the Bankruptcy Act are available only to correct errors apparent upon the face of the record. Case last above cited, and cases cited, supra, p. 611, in this note to section 24b. Hence, the reason of the limitation for bills of review being even more persuasive and compelling in the case of petitions for superintendence and revision in bankruptcy, it has been held in two circuits that such a petition cannot be maintained after expiration of the six months period for appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals, which is prescribed in section 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 829, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 428. (See infra, p. 635, note to last clause of sec. 25a (3). In re Holmes, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 391, dismissing a petition for revision in the case of what it regarded as an appealable order, because the six months period for appeal had elapsed three days before the petition was filed; In re Worcester County, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 808, sustaining a petition for revision of an order regarded as nonappealable, filed within six months, the court saying, however, "certainly" the limit of time "can be no shorter." In one of those circuits this time limit was applied to a petition to revise an order in bankruptcy by a District Court of a territory. In re Tomlinson Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 834, dismissing a petition filed by a bankrupt more than sixteen months after an order was made in the District Court of Oklahoma territory denying his motion to quash service of the subpæna, and referring to the time limit as being six months. See also Blanchard v. Ammons, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 556, a case from a territory.

In another circuit it was held, in a case of a petition for review of a nonappealable order, that the petition ought ordinarily to be filed within six months, but that in the absence of a standing rule on the subject, a longer delay would be tolerated where there was a reasonable excuse for it. In re Groetzinger, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1903) 127 Fed. 124, where the court denied a motion to dismiss a petition for revision, not filed within six months, of an order relating to the distribution of the proceeds of the sale of real estate made by the trustee in bankruptcy, it appearing from the certificate of the clerk of the District Court, and otherwise, that important evidence, to wit, the books of the bankrupt, without fault on the part of the petitioners, had disappeared and could not be found, and that the judge below had made two orders enlarging the time for filing the record with reference to an appeal taken simultaneously with the petition for review.

In Blanchard v. Ammons, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 556, where a petition for revision was dismissed because of a delay of more than three years without reasonable excuse, the court said: "An appeal from the adjudication of bankruptcy is required to be taken within ten days, and by analogy it would seem that a petition for revision of the adjudication of bankruptcy ought to be taken within a similar time, unless there are circumstances excusing delay. But the courts have generally held that a petition for revision must be presented within six months."
In In re Good, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 99

Fed. 389, the court was evidently of opinion that if an adjudication of bankruptcy could be reviewed on a petition to revise, this could only be done on a petition filed within the ten days limited for an appeal from the order. See also on that point the remarks of the court in In re Friend, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 134 Fed. 778, 780; In re Sweetser, (C. C. Mass. 1907) 157 Fed. 567.

In In re Youngstrom, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 98, a motion to dismiss a petition for revision was denied, "as the order sought to be revised is not one of those . made specially appealable by section 25a, and as the petition was presented within the six appellate jurisdiction of a Circuit Court of Appeals."

In In re New York Economical Printing Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1901) 106 Fed. 839, a motion to dismiss a petition, made on the ground that the same had not been taken within ten days, was denied, the court say-ing, "we do not think there has been any unreasonable delay in this case," but not stating any of the circumstances nor the length of the delay. Subsequently the court adopted the rule quoted infra, this page

In Meyer Bros. Drug Co. v. Pipkin Drug Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 396, more than three months after an order was made declaring a mortgage lien invalid a peti-tion to revise the order was filed, and the court refused to dismiss it, there being "no suggestion that pending the delay the proceeds of the property mortgaged have been distributed, or that any party's rights have

A petition presented to a judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals five days after the judgment was rendered which it sought to have reviewed was held to be in ample time. In re Seebold, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1901) 105 Fed. 910.

Where a party's appeal from an order, taken in due time, was dismissed by the Circuit Court of Appeals about a year afterward because the order was not appealable, but reviewable only on a petition for revision, the court noticed and refrained from deciding the question whether a petition for revision Brady v. Bernard. would then be too late. Brady v. Bernar (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 576, 581.

Under a standing rule of court. — A limitation of ten days has been adopted by rule 38 of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the second circuit, which provides as follows: "Petitions to review orders in bankruptcy filed under the provisions of section 24b of the Bankruptcy Act must be filed and served within ten days after the entry of the order sought to be reviewed, and a transcript of the record of the proceedings in the bankruptcy court of the matter to be reviewed must be filed and the cause docketed within thirty days thereafter, but the judge of the bankruptcy court may for good cause shown enlarge the time for filing the petition or record, the order of enlargement to be made and filed with the clerk of this court before the expiration of the times hereby limited for filing the petition and record respectively,"—in order "to conform the practice in review by petition to review by appeal, said the court in In re Brown, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 339.

An oral or a written stipulation of counsel extending the time, before expiration of the ten days, and with full knowledge of all existing facts, will not be recognized if the In re Brown, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174
Fed. 339, where the court said: "It was the manifest object of the rule (38) to keep this · important matter of enlargement of time to seek a review by the appellate court within the control of the court, and to prevent indefinite extension by mere agreement of counsel." And in the same case it was held that a nunc pro tune order extending the time, entered after expiration of the ten days, cannot operate to enlarge the time; but the court expressly refrained from deciding what construction might or might not be given to the rule when the sudden illness of a judge or other untoward occurrence prevented a party, who had been himself careful and diligent to conform to the rule, from securing an order in time.

In the same circuit there was an unsuccessful attempt indirectly to extend the time within which to review an adjudication of bankruptcy by filing a petition for revision of an order denying a motion to vacate the order of adjudication after the time for appeal from the latter had expired. In re Goldberg, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 167 Fed. 808, affirming the order for revision of which the petition was filed.

Doubtless the filing of a petition within the time prescribed is not a jurisdictional necessity; that is, it would be subject to waiver by the respondent. See In re Sweetser, (C. C. Mass. 1909) 168 Fed. 1018, 1019; In re Strobel, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 160 Fed. 916. In the latter case, however, it was held that the filing of a stipulation that two petitions to review, with the certified copies transmitted by the clerk of the District Court "be printed in one appeal book" did not constitute a waiver of objection that the petitions were not filed in time.

"Petition by any party aggrieved."—
This phrase is liberally construed, and a doubt as to whether a petitioner in a given case is a party aggrieved "should be reallyed in favor of the patitioner." solved in favor of the petitioner." Clark v. Pidcock, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 745, 749, where, after a bankrupt's estate had been closed without appointment of a trustee, for the reason that the schedule showed no assets, an assignee of a judgment creditor who alone proved his claim applied to have the estate opened on the ground that the bankrupt had assets which he had fraudulently destroyed, on which petition the court discharged a restraining order and refused an injunction to prevent a further transfer of the assets, and it was held that the petitioner was entitled to prosecute a petition for review of such order, as he "was a judgment creditor of the bankrupt, and so scheduled by him in his bankruptcy petition," and "whether he may or may not hereafter be allowed to prove his claim, he has an interest as a general creditor in the estate of the bankrupt."

Premature petition.—In Sturgiss v. Corbin,

(C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 1, it was held that the petitioner for revision of an order setting aside a sale and directing a resale, properly followed the West Virginia practice on appeals in such cases by refraining from filing his peution until after the resale was made and confirmed.

Matters res judicata on former petition. --A petition to revise proceedings in bank-ruptcy on the ground of the insufficiency of the creditor's petition for adjudication, was denied where the same matter was involved in a former petition for revision by the same petitioner and therein fully disposed of. Beach v. Macon Grocery Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 736.

A petition for review should set out the facts or finding of facts on which the matters of law sought to be reviewed arise, and if it fails to do so, it ought to be dismissed. Steiner v. Marshall, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1905) 140 Fed. 710, the court saying: "Attorneys fling petitions under the statute where testimony has been heard, ought, in fairness to both the court asked to be reviewed and the appellate court, to give the latter court the benefit of the testin ony, or the findings of fact by the district judge."

"It is . an elementary rule of procedure that the petition for a review shall set out the matters of law which we are asked to review." In re Taft, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 511, 513.

Statements in a petition for revision wholly unsupported by any evidence in the record cannot be considered. Chestertown Bank v. Walker, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1908) 163 Fed.

"Due notice" of petition.—See cases cited 1 Fed. Stat. Ann. 600. Where an appeal was prayed for and allowed in open court, in the presence of all the parties or their attorneys, at the very instant that the judgment was announced, the proceeding constituted sufficient notice so as to authorize the appellate court to treat the appeal as a petition for revision without further notice. In re Abraham, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 93 ·Fed. 767.

Response to petition. - Rule 39 of the Circuit Court of Appeals (150 Fed. cxix, 79 C. C. A. cxix), which provides that "the response to the petition, when the defendant elects to make a written response, shall be filed at least fifteen days before the day set for the hearing," contemplates that the defendant may take issue upon the allegations of the petition and deny or otherwise controvert the facts alleged therein, or he may admit the facts and challenge by demurrer, or in some other appropriate way, their legal sufficiency to warrant the granting of the relief prayed for. In re Frank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 182 Fed. 794, 796.

"A failure to deny or otherwise controvert the facts alleged will be deemed to be an admission that they are true." In re Frank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 182 Fed. 794.

Presentation and reservation in lower court of grounds of review. — The Circuit Court of Appeals will not ordinarily take jurisdiction over propositions not brought specifically to the attention of the District Court. In re Boston Dry Goods Co., (1st Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 226, 60 C. C. A. 118; Shoe, etc., Re-porter, Petitioners, (1st Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 588, 64 C. C. A. 156.

An objection to specifications of objections to a bankrupt's discharge, on the ground that the jurat was insufficient, cannot be made for the first time on a petition for review. E. H. Godshalk Co. v. Sterling, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 580.

Where it was not objected in the District Court that part of the property of a bank-rupt ordered to be sold had not been inventoried in the manner required by the Bankruptcy Act, such objection would not be considered on a revisionary petition. Shoe, etc., Reporter, Petitioners, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 588.

Where the only jurisdictional question urged in the District Court was by way of objection to the granting of the orders sought to be reviewed, the Circuit Court of Appeals could not pass upon an objection to the jurisdiction of the whole bankruptcy proceeding. In re New York Tunnel Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 688.

On petition to review an order directing petitioners to pay over to a temporary receiver a certain sum of money, an objection that a copy of the testimony taken under section 21a, supra, was not served with the order to show cause, comes too late if not made at or before the argument in the court below. In re Friedman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 260.

So an objection that petitioners were given no opportunity to cross-examine witnesses who testified against them is unavailable if no request to be allowed to cross-examine them was made. In re Friedman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 260, where the court said: "The case differs fundamentally from In ro Rosser, (8th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 562, 41 C. C. A. 497, where the bankrupt never had any opportunity to show cause why he should not be ordered to turn over certain money."

Likewise the record ought to show that the petitioners objected to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court to determine sum-marily the question whether the money was or was not the property of the bankrupt, in order to preserve such objection for consideration on the petition for revision. So sugrested in In re Friedman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 260.

Record for review. - In the Circuit Court of Appeals for the fourth circuit, rule 36, subd. 2, provides that: "The petitioner shall cause a certified transcript of the record and proceedings of the bankruptcy court of the matter to be reviewed to be filed in the clerk's office of this court within thirty days from the date of the filing of the said petition." This rule contemplates a transcript of the record and proceedings of the bank-ruptcy court certified by the clerk of that court and not a transcript certified by the referee. Cook Inlet Coal Fields Co. v. Caldwell, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 475,

sisted largely of proceedings, orders, and decrees authenticated by the certificate of the referee and specifically excepted by the clerk in his own certificate.

A record which fails to give the filing dates of all the material orders contained in it is defective. In re Friedman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 260.

The matters of law of which revision is sought should in some manner be clearly presented by the record. In re Boston Dry Goods Co., (1st Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 226, 60 C. C. A. 118; In re O'Connell, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 137 Fed. 838; Ross v. Stroh, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 628, 630.

Statements made in the brief of counsel, which are unsupported by the record, cannot be considered as facts. "If the appeal book did not state the facts a motion should have been made to amend it." In re Oakland Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 634.

Landry v. San Antonio Brewing Assoc., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1907) 159 Fed. 700, was a petition for revision of an order of allowance of a secured claim, but nowhere in the transcript was there an agreed statement of facts or a finding of facts by the judge. Denying the petition, the court said: "The referee found and formulated the facts on the evidence submitted to him, also his conclusions of law, and the whole, accompanied with the evidence, was transmitted to the district judge for review. The record shows that the judge on the hearing considered the certificate of the referee as to the questions presented and the summary of the evidence, and thereupon reversed the referee, and entered judgment accordingly, so that we cannot from the record say whether the judge decided the case upon the facts reported by the referee or upon facts found by himself on the evidence. To determine whether the judge a quo correctly ruled the law, we must necessarily have before us the facts upon which he acted."

In the fifth circuit there was a motion to dismiss a petition to revise, "because it was not allowed by any judge of this or the lower court; no bond has been given; the transcript of the record is not certified by the clerk of the lower court; the transcript does not contain the pleadings upon which the issues were tried, nor show who are the proper parties to this proceeding; the transcript does not contain the evidence upon which the findings of the referee were based, . . . and because no supersedeas has been granted." The court held that none of those grounds was well taken, inasmuch as there were no rules of court in that circuit referring to the formalities mentioned in the motion to dismiss. Meyer Bros. Drug Co. v. Pipkin Drug Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 396.

Record on facts. - An order reducing the amount of a creditor's claim for a collection fee contracted for in the note given by the bankrupt in a state where such a contract is valid only to the extent of a reasonable fee, cannot be reversed on a petition to revise, where there is no evidence in the record to show what would be a reasonable fee for the services which have been rendered or the amount the creditor has paid or contracted to pay for the same. Chestertown Bank v. Walker, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 510.

Matter of law.—See cases cited 1 Fed. Stat. Ann. 595, 596. "In a proceeding to revise under section 24b this court is limited to a review in matter of law, and only questions of law arising out of the facts found or conceded can be considered. cannot determine questions of fact involved in the finding or order sought to be reviewed. We call attention to the following decisions of this court and of the Supreme Court: Courier-Journal Job-Printing Co. v. Schaefer-Meyer Brewing Co., (6th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 699, 703, 41 C. C. A. 614; In re Taft, (6th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 511, 66 C. C. A. 385; In re Throckmorton, (6th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 145, 146, 79 C. C. A. 15; Mueller v. Nugent, (1902) 184 U. S. 1, 9, 22 S. The master's findings of fact, approved by the district judge, are not brought up for review, and must be accepted as the basis of reviewable questions of law. In re Caponigri, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 307.

"We are not at liberty upon a petition for review to challenge the facts, or an inference of fact, found by the court below." In re Antigo Screen Door Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir.

"Obviously our jurisdiction is restricted to matters of law, and the legal questions we can examine are only those which arise out of the facts found or conceded." In re Throckmorton, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 145, citing Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 291, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051, and In re Taft, (6th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 511, 66 C. C. A. 385. To the same effect see In re Cole (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 392.

An order of a bankruptcy court finding that $100 was a reasonable attorney's fee in each of two voluntary cases could not be reviewed on a petition to revise, because the findings of the court on the facts could not be disturbed. In re Irwin, (C. C. A. 3d Cir.

"A petition to revise under section 24b can properly present for determination only questions of law and not doubtful or disputed questions of fact. But when facts are agreed upon, or are proven or admitted, that leave nothing for determination but their legal import, such a determination of them by the court of bankruptcy may be reviewed upon a petition to revise. But a review of decisions which require the consideration of conflicting evidence, or evidence though not conflicting from which different deductions or conclusions may reasonably be drawn, may not be reviewed upon a petition to revise, but upon appeal only." In re Frank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 182 Fed. 794, 797.

In In re Lee, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 182 Fed. 579, revision was had on agreed facts which were not contradictory, doubtful, or incomplete, and the only question presented was as to their legal import. Hall, etc., Co. v. Friday, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1907) 158 Fed. 593, was a case of review on an agreed state-

To determine as an ultimate proposition that a sale was "unfair, illegal, and void," as alleged in a petition for revision, "would require, in the absence of an agreed statement of facts or finding of facts by the ref-eree or court, a consideration of all the evidence in the record entirely beyond the inquiries this court can make on a petition for revision." Schuler v. Hassinger, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 119, denying a peti-

In a controversy between the bankrupt and the trustee over land claimed by the former as a homestead the referee found that he was guilty of fraud and certified the evidence to the court, which reversed the decision of the referee and negatived the existence of fraud. On a petition to revise, all the evidence not being brought up, it could not be inferred that the referee and the court merely drew different legal deductions from undisputed facts. "The record not showing to the contrary, there may have been a conflict in the evidence on the issue of fraud, and in that event a review could not be secured by petition to revise." In re Letson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 78.

But if a finding of fact is so wholly unjustified on the proofs that the Circuit Court of Appeals would be required, on a writ of error, to set aside a verdict of a jury for want of any evidence whatever to sustain it, or for some other reason kindred thereto, it may be reversed on a petition to revise. In re Cole, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1907) 163 Fed. 180, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 392.

And where the Circuit Court of Appeals has under review an order adjudging the bankrupt guilty of contempt for failure to deliver property or proceeds thereof to his trustee, the evidence claimed to establish his possession thereof will be examined to the extent of ascertaining whether the court be-low could properly find the fact proved beyond reasonable doubt as the rule requires in such contempt cases. In re Levy, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 442, where it was held that the order affirming the referee's ruling would not be reversed except upon clear proof of error.

Findings of fact. — In order that it may appear by the record that issues raised on appeal were presented below, findings of fact which involve distinct propositions of law, or something else as a substitute therefor, are necessary. In re Boston Dry Goods Co., (1st Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 226, 60 C. C. A. 118; In re O'Connell, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 137 Fed. 838.

Without either the testimony or a settlement of facts whereon an order was predicated, the record presents no question of law which can be reviewed on a petition to revise. Hegner v. American Trust, etc., Bank, (C.

C. A. 7th Cir. 1911) 187 Fed. 599.

A mere opinion of the court below not specially made a matter of record does not take the place of a finding of facts, although it may be referred to for the purpose of ascertaining what propositions of law governed the court, or for the general purpose of determining whether the case went off on facts or law. In re Pettingill, (1st Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 840, 70 C. C. A. 338. See also In re Cole, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1907) 163 Fed. 180; In re Boston Dry Goods Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 226.

But where the district judge made no separate finding of facts, but affirmed the "findings" and "decisions" of the referee, and the referee had not certified any particular facts as found by him, the Circuit Court of Appeals, by reference to other proceedings in the record, managed to discover with satisfactory clearness the conclusions of fact upon which the district judge made the order complained of. In re Taft, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 511.

Where the record on a petition to revise contains no findings of fact by the District Court, and the opinion of that court, although stating propositions of law, shows that they were not determinative of the matter at issue which was decided as a question of fact on the evidence, there is nothing upon which the Circuit Court of Appeals can act. In re Pettingill, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 840.

Where the record contains no findings of fact by the court itself, but only a decree which, in a formal manner, affirmed the action of the referee, this must be taken as affirming his findings of fact, and the appellate court cannot take cognizance of the evidence which was before the referee. In re O'Connell, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 137 Fed. 838.

Hearing. — "It is not satisfactory . . . for counsel to say to this court that the facts appear in the record, instead of making a succinct statement of facts, especially when they do not appear at the hearing." Ravenswood Bank v. Johnson, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 463, 464.

Scope of review. — Ordinarily a petition to revise does not authorize the court to revise the proceedings of a referee, but only those of the court. In re Pettingill, (1st Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 840, 70 C. C. A. 338.

On a bankrupt's petition to review an order adjudging him in contempt for failure to obey a prior order requiring him to turn over property, the propriety of such prior order cannot be considered. In re Lans, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 158 Fed. 610.

On a petition to review an order holding that certain money claimed by the bankrupt's wife belonged to the trustee in bankruptcy. the court declined to consider an objection to the jurisdiction to make a prior order upon her to pay the money to the trustee subject to leave to prove her claim, there having been no proceeding taken to revise that prior order. In re Bacon, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 424.

Since a party in whose favor a decision of the bankruptcy court was rendered is not in a situation to ask for a review thereof, he may, as respondent in a petition for review attacking the decision, rely upon any ground that will support it, even though it be not the ground upon which that decision was made. Davis v. Crompton, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1907) 158 Fed. 735, certiorari denied (1908)

If a case "involves the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States" it is appealable from the District Court direct to the Supreme Court; such question is not open for review in the Circuit Court of Appeals. In re Abbey Press, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 134 Fed. 51. See section 5 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 398, 405, and the note at the corresponding place, post, vol. 2 of this Supplement, title JUDICIARY.

On a petition to revise an order denying the petitioner's claim to property seized by the receiver in bankruptcy, the petitioner is not at liberty to attack collaterally the official status of the receiver or the regularity of the proceedings leading to his appointment. Ross v. Stroh, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1908)

Discretionary orders. — See cases cited 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 596.

Orders which were in the discretion of the court will not be reviewed unless an abuse of discretion is shown. Schuler v. Hassinger, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 119.

Exercise of discretion to determine whether suit pending in a state court should be stayed or not is subject to review, but will not be interfered with unless it appears to have been abused. New River Coal Land Co. v. Ruffner, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1908) 165

Fed. 881, 886.

While it is the duty of the bankruptcy court to see that examinations of third persons for the discovery of assets are not permitted to transcend the limit of a legitimate investigation, this is a duty which involves the exercise of wide discretion which will not be interfered with by the appellate court except when it has been manifestly abused. In re Horgan, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1899) 98 Fed. 414, affirming an order upon the bankrupt to produce the books in his custody as president of a corporation and submit them for examination.

The bankruptcy court's exercise of discretionary power to dismiss an involuntary petition for want of prosecution will not be reviewed where it does not appear that the discretion was abused. In re Levi, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 962, certiorari denied (1906) 203 U. S. 596, 27 S. Ct. 784, 51 U.

S. (L. ed.) 333.

Refusal of the judge of the bankruptcy court to sanction an arrangement between the bankrupts and certain creditors and persons who had received preferential transfers of the bankrupt's property does not present a "matter of law" reviewable on petition, as there is "no rule of law or of equity by which the propriety of that refusal is determinable." Mulford v. Fourth St. Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 897, holding, however, that there was no abuse of discretion.

Questions "peculiarly administrative."—
On a revisory proceeding under the Bankruptcy Act of 1867 the court said: "Any question of removing assignees or appointing trustees is so peculiarly an administrative one, and involves so thorough a knowledge... that an appellate tribunal ought not to interfere in regard thereto unless a sharp question of law is raised, or the demand for revision is very peremptory." In re Sweetser, (C. C. Mass. 1907) 157 Fed. 567.

The court sometimes exercises liberality

The court sometimes exercises liberality with reference to the practice on petitions to revise and makes "due allowance" for lack of experience alike of the bench and the bar, and, where the petition involves substantial interests, endeavors to sift out from the record the issues of law, if it presents any; even in cases which could be said to relate to the mere administration by the District Court of the bankruptcy statute. In reBoston Dry Goods Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 226, 229.

But where there was no suggestion of any practical detriment that would come to the estate from the determination of the District Court, even if, strictly speaking, that determination should have been otherwise than what it was, the court said: "It would be detrimental to the authority of the District Court, injurious to its administration of the bankruptcy statutes, and involve the numerous and useless delays which those statutes evidently have been framed to avoid, if, in administrative matters where no substantial interests are concerned, we became meddle-some beyond what the law requires of us." In re Boston Dry Goods Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 226, where the main question related to the powers of the bankruptcy court in canvassing votes for a trustee alleged to have been procured or solicited by the bankrupt, and how far it should exercise them, and according to what rules.

And in Shoe, etc., Reporter, Petitioners, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 588, where the order under review was one fixing a minimum bid for the sale of the assets of the bankrupt, and providing that five-sixths of the purchase price might be paid in bonds secured by mortgage assets, the objection to the order was "disposed of by the general rule in equity which applies to these summary petitions, to the effect that equity does not concern itself with mere trivialities, nor unless, on the whole case, the proponent satisfies the court that he has a substantial interest, which is in danger."

Unless convinced that manifest error has been committed the appellate court will refrain from meddling with the administration of the estate by the officers of the bankruptcy court who are familiar with the local environment and the character and conduct of the parties. In In re Schulman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 191, affirming an order adjudging the bankrupt in contempt of court for refusing to answer questions concerning his property and for concealing from his creditors all material facts relating thereto. the bankrupt's testimony having been certified to the court by the referee, Judge Coxe said: "The questions of fact presented by this appeal are peculiarly within the province of the referee and district judge. law cannot be promptly and efficiently administered if the collection and division of the bankrupt's property is to be suspended and delayed pending appeals from the orders of the court and referee having in view the discovery of the bankrupt's property, and the prevention of its fraudulent concealment and conversion. In the case at bar we know nothing of the bankrupt Schulman, except as he is portrayed in the printed record. The referee, on the contrary, had an opportunity to see and hear the bankrupt and observe his manner while testifying, which is an inestimable advantage in cases of this character. The testimony of a witness may sound plausible when read afterwards from a printed book, and yet his conduct on the stand may have been such that no one who heard him testify believed that he was telling the truth. The referee certifies that after having taken the oath the bankrupt refused to be examined according to law and deliberately withheld facts within his knowledge as to the disposition of the property of the bankrupt's firm. Again, he certifies that the bankrupt withheld from the trustee and the court, with the deliberate intention of concealing his condition, the true facts relating to the conduct of his business, his dealings with his creditors and the amount and whereabouts of his property. The referee says: 'The manner of the bankrupt, his recollection when he desired to exercise it, convinced me as I watched him that where he desired to give the facts he could do so.' Disingenuous and evasive as his testimony appears when read, it is obvious that the opportunity to 'watch' the bankrupt gave the referee a very marked advantage in determining whether he was acting honestly. . . . An appellate court may be unable to detect, under such conditions, the false from the true, the honest from the fraudulent, but any intelligent person, after observing the witness for hours on the stand, could not be deceived as to his purpose."

Nonprejudicial error. — Whether or not an order permitting the amendment nunc pro tunc of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy after the sustaining of a demurrer to the original petition was erroneous, is immaterial where the original petition sufficiently charged an act of bankruptcy and the demurrer was erroneously sustained. In re Riggs Restaurant Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 691.

Determination and disposition of matter.— Where the bankruptcy court erred in dismissing a claim for the return of personal property delivered to a bankrupt corporation, the Circuit Court of Appeals, upon reversing the order, entered its own order requiring the bankrupt's trustee or receiver to surrender the poperty. Sprague Canning Machinery Co. v. Fuller, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1908) 158 Fed. 588.

Where, on a petition to revise, there were no sufficient specifications of legal error presenting the questions sought to be reviewed. but the evidence was such as to raise a doubt as to the merits of petitioner's claim, his petition was dismissed without prejudice to such further proceedings as the District Court might consider proper. Ross v. Stroh, (C.

C. A. 3d Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 628.

Proceeding after reversal and remand.— Where an order of the District Court is annulled by reversal thereof on petition for revision, the District Court cannot amend the order on mere petition therefor so as to make it the basis of another petition for revision.

In re Lesaius, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 690.

Costs.—In In re Ravenswood Bank v. Johnson, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 463, dismissing a petition for revision filed by creditors who had opposed an application for discharge, they were charged with the costs in the appellate court, "and it is suggested that the District Court tax the contesting creditors with all 'wholly immaterial matters, captious objections, remarks of counsel, reiteration of the same questions and demands' included in the depositions taken before the referee or special master and all unnecessary costs incurred at their instance.

Review by Supreme Court of decrees of Circuit Courts of Appeals. - By construction of the Bankruptcy Act of 1867 it was settled that appeals to the Supreme Court did not lie from decisions of the Circuit Courts in the exercise of supervisory jurisdiction in matter of law conferred on them by that Act. Morgan v. Thornhill, (1870) 11 Wall. 65, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 60; Conro v. Crane, (1876) 94 U. S. 441, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 145.

Hence the revision contemplated by section 24b of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898 being substantially of the same character as that in the Act of 1867, a decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the exercise of its supervisory power is not appealable to the Supreme Court. Holden v. Stratton, (1903) 191 U. S. 115, 24 S. Ct. 45, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 116 (dismissing the appeal), reaffirmed in Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, (1904) 194 U. S. 296, 24 S. Ct. 690, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 986, and Duryea Power Co. v. Sternbergh, (1910) 218 U. S. 299, 31 S. Ct. 25, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047. Such a decree is reviewable only on certiorari.

See III. Writs of certiorari in note to section 25d, infra, p. 643. See also Hutchinson v. Otis, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1902) 123 Fed.

SEC. 25. APPEALS AND WRITS OF ERROR. — a [Appeals.] That appeals, as in equity cases, may be taken in bankruptcy proceedings from the courts of bankruptcy to the circuit court of appeals of the United States, and to the supreme court of the Territories, in the following cases, to wit, [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.

The provisions in section 25a, as far as they relate to the Circuit Court of Appeals, are recognized and confirmed in Judicial Code, sec. 130, ante, title, JUDICIARY, p. 196, of this Supplement.

Necessity of this provision. - "There is an appeal provided in section 25, with reference to the specific matters named therein. This was needed if an appeal was to be allowed, as the matters to which it relates could arise in bankruptcy only." Burleigh v. Foreman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 125 Fed.

217.
"By section 25a it [Congress] granted to the Courts of Appeals additional jurisdiction which before the enactment of the bankrupt law they could not exercise." Dodge v. Norlin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 363, Exclusiveness with respect to section 24b. See note to section 24b, supra, p. 611.

Exclusiveness with respect to section 24a. —To the point that a judgment appealable under section 25a (1), (2), or (3), cannot be appealable as a "controversy" under section 24a, see Thompson v. Mauzy, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 611.

Parties to appeal. — A trustee may appeal from an order denying his motion to expunge a claim allowed, unless further preferences were surrendered, and directing a return of a preference previously surrendered by the creditor. Livingstone v. Heineman, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 786.

On appeal by a creditor of a bankrupt from an order approving a composition under which a majority of the creditors have received the amounts to which they were entitled, the assenting creditors are necessary parties. Field v. Wolf, etc., Dry Goods Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 815.

On an appeal by a trustee in bankruptcy from a judgment of the bankruptcy court allowing claims for expenses and costs of administration, the question whether the judgment shall stand or be reversed is of such direct interest to those whose claims are sustained by it that no determination thereof can be had without affording them an opportunity to be heard in defense of the judgment. On such an appeal the trustee represents the general creditors of the estate, and not those the allowance of whose claims is challenged by him. Gray v. Grand Forks Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 344.

"The cases cited present somewhat divergent views as to whether a creditor may as of right appeal from the allowance of a debt which affects him, but a concurrence in the matter of allowing an appeal upon good cause shown by such creditors when the trustee refuses to appeal himself." Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Mack, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 163 Fed. 165, where the appeal was by a creditor who was, upon application, allowed to appeal, the trustee refusing to appeal; but Lurton, J., said "the better practice would be to order the trustee to appeal, or to allow the dissatisfied creditor to appeal in his name, being indemnified in either case against costs by such creditors."

Effect of appeal. — The taking of an appeal deprives the court of bankruptcy of jurisdiction to further consider matters involved in the appeal. For example, pending an appeal from a judgment rejecting a debt or claim, the court has no power to grant rehearing upon the ground of alleged newly discovered evidence. Miles City First Nat. Bank v. Miles City State Nat. Bank, (C. C. A.

Without a supersedeas, however, an appeal never suspends the execution of an order nor stops its enforcement, and, pending the bankrupt's appeal, without supersedeas, from an order adjudicating him a bankrupt, the court may, on motion of creditors, compel him to file his schedules. In re Brady, (D. C. Ky. 1908) 169 Fed. 152.

An appeal, with a supersedeas bond, from a judgment denying a discharge is in the nature of a cost bond, and does not supersede the judgment so as to prevent creditors from obtaining a second adjudication of bankruptcy on account of later acts of bankruptcy. In re Barton, (W. D. Ark. 1906) 144 Fed. 540. As to supersedeas on appeals or writs of error in federal courts, see R. S. secs. 1007, 1012, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 618, 624, and the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, sec. 11, 26 Stat. L. 829, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 428.

Assignment of errors — Circuit Court of Appeals Rule 11, 91 Fed. vi, 32 C. C. A. lxxxviii (which is the same in all the circuits), makes the filing of an assignment of errors an essential condition to the granting of a writ of error or the allowance of an appeal, and concludes as follows: "Errors not assigned according to this rule will be disregarded, but the court, at its option, may notice a plain error not assigned."

Total neglect to comply with the rule usually results in an affirmance of the order or decree appealed from or dismissal of the appeal. Lockman v. Lang, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 128 Fed. 279, where the appeal was dismissed; In re Dunning, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1899) 94 Fed. 709, where the court said: "We place our judgment of affirmance wholly upon the ground indicated, in the hope that attention may be drawn to the necessity of compliance with the rule. It may be added that upon the hearing of the cause not only was no 'plain error not assigned' suggested, but, on the contrary, the court was convinced that upon the merits the decision of the District Court was not erroneous." In Burleigh v. Foreman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 13, "there were other questions below, but we have only to deal with such questions as are raised by the assignment of errors," said the court.

Time for filing. — When an appeal is prayed and allowed in open court, the prayer for reversal and the citation may be waived, but the assignment of errors is indispensable to the perfection of the appeal, and it must be filed before or at the time of the allowance of the appeal. But if an appeal is allowed upon condition of filing an appeal bond, and the bond and assignment of errors are thereafter filed within the time required for appeal, the assignment of errors is not too late. Lockman v. Lang, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 1.

If an assignment of errors is not made and filed in the court below when an appeal is allowed, a subsequent assignment in the appellate court, without leave, will be disregarded. Lloyd v. Chapman, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1899) 93 Fed. 599.

If a party proceeds both by writ of error and by appeal to review the same rulings or adjudications, and the errors alleged are the same in each proceeding, a single assignment or errors duly filed is sufficient notwith standing dismissal of the particular appellate proceeding with which the assignment was filed. Lockman v. Lang, (C. C. A. 8th

Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 1.

Amendment of defective assignment. — If an assignment of errors is filed, but it does not sufficiently indicate the particular error complained of to entitle it to be considered on the appeal, the appellate court is not deprived of jurisdiction because of the generality of the assignment, and amendment thereof may be allowed on motion of the appellant, when the special circumstances justify it, and the motion is promptly made upon discovery of the defect. Flickinger v. Vandalia First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 162, (certiorari denied (1906) 203 U. S. 595, 27 S. Ct. 783, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 332), where appellant was allowed to file more specific assignments upon his showing that in making the formal assignment he relied upon and followed a precedent contained in an approved book of forms.

Finding of facts.— In equity cases in federal courts it is not the practice to make findings of fact and conclusions of law. Whitney v. Whitney Elevator, etc., Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1910) 180 Fed. 187. On appeal from a bankruptcy court to the Circuit Court of Appeals a finding of facts is not required by the Bankruptcy Act nor is it desirable. In re Meyers, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 105 Fed. 353, where the referee's report in favor of the bankrupts discharge was confirmed, and opposing creditors submitted certain statements of fact and asked the court to find them for the purposes of a hearing on appeal. The court declined to do so and said: "It would impose additional burdens upon the court, and is not ordinarily essential: since in cases of reasonable doubt, the grounds of the decision usually appear sufficiently either in the report of the referee or in the opinion or memorandum of the judge thereon." But for the accommodation of the party the court proceeded to state more fully than appeared in its former opinion filed in the same case the grounds for granting the discharge.

Appeal bond. — Before an appeal can be allowed or perfected an appeal bond must be given and approved, the court fixing the amount, and the bond should be filed and made a part of the record in the case, and the record, in order to be perfect, should recite that such bond has been given, approved, and filed. In re Miller, (1904) 13 Okla. 557, 75 Pac. 1128. If the record is silent upon that point, but the bond was actually given, the proper remedy of the appellant is to suggest a diminution of the record and have the clerk of the court below certify the record showing the fact. In re Miller, (1904) 13 Okla. 557, 75 Pac. 1128, in which case, however, a motion to dismiss the appeal having been filed, the court said: "If the appeal should be dismissed without having been heard upon the merits, possibly a new citation might be had and the appeal perfected, and for that reason alone we pass this proposition without further comment, to deal with one including more of the merits of the case."

On appeal by the bankrupt from an adjudication of bankruptcy in an involuntary proceeding the appeal bond is sufficient if it runs only to the original petitioners for the adjudication, although other creditors filed an intervening petition having the same object. Flickinger v. Vandalia First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 162 (certiorari denied (1906) 203 U. S. 595, 27 S. Ct. 783, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 332), where the court said: "As all the petitioners make common cause and not separate controversies, and the benefits of the bond will practically come to all, it would seem to be sufficient. The motion to dismiss the appeal is therefore denied."

Citation. — In proceedings in error the citation signed by the judge of the court to which the writ is addressed or any judge or justice of the appellate court is the notice required by R. S. sec. 998, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 609. Exploration Mercantile Co. v. Pacific Hardware, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 825, holding that service of a citation signed by the district judge was sufficient.

signed by the district judge was sufficient.

Where a citation is not issued nor an assignment of errors filed, on appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals, until an entire term of the appellate court has intervened, the appeal becomes inoperative. Nazima Trading Co. v. Martin, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 838 diamissing an appeal 1908) 164 Fed. 838, dismissing an appeal.

Where an appeal is seasonably taken and seasonably docketed the appellate court has power to direct the issuance of an alias citation to omitted but necessary parties if application therefor is made before the expiration of the first term at which the case could have been heard. Per Van Devanter, J., in Gray v. Grand Forks Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 344, citing Lockman v. Lang, (8th Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 1, 65 C. C. A. 621. If such application is not made within that time, the necessity therefor having been brought to the attention of appellant's counsel in ample time, the appeal becomes inoperative in so far as it challenges the claims of those who have not thus been brought into the appellate court. Gray v. Grand Forks Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 344.

Bill of exceptions. - On appeals in bankruptcy cases a bill of exceptions has no function and is entirely irregular as a means of bringing before the appellate court the evidence or other proceedings of the court below or the referee. Dodge v. Norlin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 363, where the court said: "An appeal makes the entire record available to counsel for the appellant, and imposes upon him and upon the clerk of the lower court the duty of inserting in the transcript of the record sent to the appellate court everything material to the hearing of the questions to be presented there. Teller r. U. S., (8th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 119, 49 C. C. A. 263. The bill of exceptions must therefore be disregarded. It appears, however, that this bill of exceptions was presented by the appellant to the court below, that it bears the written approval of counsel for the appellee, and that it was filed in the case by the order of the District Court. In view of these facts, we have concluded, with some hesitation, that the paper called a 'bill of exceptions' may be deemed a written stiputer of the control of the con lation of the parties to the effect that it correctly portrays the evidence and the proceedings below, and upon this basis we proceed to consider the case it presents."

On appeal from a judgment of the bankruptcy court pursuant to the advisory verdict of a jury a bill of exceptions taken upon the jury trial is out of place and of no value except upon a motion for a new trial made to the court below. In re Neasmith, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 160, an appeal from adjudication of bankruptcy in an involuntary proceeding, the appellant having waived the statutory right to a jury and issues having been submitted to the jury in the exercise of the court's discretion.

Record on appeal. — Rule 14 in all the Circuit Courts of Appeals specifies what shall constitute the record on appeal or error. By virtue of provisions in sec. 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3. 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 829, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 428, the sections of the Revised Statutes relating to transcripts on appeals, viz., sections 698, 750, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 446, 556, are in full force and apply to bankruptcy cases. In re A. L. Robertshaw Mfg. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 220, 222.

The language used in the law and rules of court in regard to the record on appeal is so general that in every case it is necessary for some one to specify what part of the record, in the particular case, comes within the general designations. In re A. L. Robertshaw Mfg. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 222, per Holland, J.

In one of the Pennsylvania districts, it is said the practice has there long prevailed of counsel's agreeing, by stipulation filed, as to what the record shall contain; that when counsel disagree and it is necessary to specify the record, the best practice is to require the appellant to file a pracipe with the clerk, pointing out specifically what records, in his judgment, are necessary to be certified on the appeal; and that if the appellee is of opinion that these are not sufficient, he can suggest a diminution of the record and ask for a certiorari, and the question as to the necessity of additional matter will properly be determined by the appellate court, and that the judge of the bankruptcy court will not, on petition of an appellant, designate what records shall be certified to the appellate court. Per Holland, J., in In re A. L. Robertshaw Mfg. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 220, where the court also said: "The petition of the [appellants] . . . sets forth such parts of the record as they regard sufficient for a full and complete understanding of the case in the appellate court, and we are of opinion that their judgment is right in this respect; but we know of no law which authorizes the court from which an appeal is taken to designate what records in the court below shall be certified upon which the appellate court shall determine the appeal. In fact, the judge of the court from which the appeal is taken ought not in the least to interfere in the discretion allowed by the general terms used in the Acts of Congress and rules of court in designating the record to be certified in cases of appeal, as his judgment is to be reviewed, and his opinion of the importance and relevancy of matters contained in the record might, in the estimation of counsel for one side or the other, be as faulty as it is claimed his judgment is from which an appeal is taken; and if an order of the court from which the appeal is taken could have the effect of restricting the record in all cases where such a decree had been made there would be the possibility of a feeling upon the one side or the other that they had not secured a fair hearing on a full record. Holding this view as to the authority of this court and the practice to be adopted, we conclude that the counsel for the appellant must assume the responsibility of designating what records shall be certified by the clerk, and present to him a precipe stating specifically which of the papers on file in the case he desires him to certify to the appellate court."

"In Union Pac. Co. v. Stewart, (1877) 95 U. S. 284, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 431, it is made the duty of appellant to see that the record is properly presented to the appellate court." Per Simonton, J., in Williams v. Savage, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 497, 498.

In his certificate to the transcript of the record it is customary for the clerk of the court below to state, if it be the fact, that the transcript contains only such papers as the attorney for the appellant designated. See Herman Keck Mfg. Co. v. Lorsch, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 485.

Neither the counsel for the appellant nor the clerk of the court below can conclusively determine what parts of the record are necessary on the hearing of the appeal. Cunningham v. German Ins. Bank, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 103 Fed. 932, per Lurton, J.

An appeal may be dismissed on motion where the transcript is incomplete in respect of essential jurisdictional information, and verbal explanations made by appellant's counsel at the bar cannot be treated as part of the record. Williams v. Savage, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 497, dismissing an appeal from a judgment granting a discharge where the record, made up, as the clerk certified, under the instructions of appellant's counsel, failed to show whether any of the steps to perfect the appeal were taken in proper time, or indeed when they were taken; or to show when the petition for appeal was presented, or when the order granting its prayer was granted or filed, or whether they were filed at all; "there is nothing in the record which can inform the court when this appeal was taken."

If a transcript is defective by omission of matters necessary to a proper understanding of the evidence the appropriate remedy for the appellee is not a motion to strike the transcript from the files, but a suggestion to the appellate court of the defect complained of and application for a certiorari to send up the missing matter. Flickinger v. Vandalia First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 162 (certiorari denied (1906) 203 U. S. 595, 27 S. Ct. 183, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 332), where a motion to strike was denied, the only ground therefor being that the transcript was not submitted to counsel for the appellees, and that none of said counsel had notice of the filing thereof, and that the record was imperfect because it did not contain all the evidence on which the cause was decided, and that what was given was stated in a narrative form, without giving the questions put to the witnesses.

When the clerk's certificate does not show that the record is a full and complete record of the entire proceedings, it ought to appear, by stipulation or otherwise, that it does include all that is necessary to a determination of the matters involved by the appeal; and if the appellee is not content with the transcript as filed, he should seasonably move the court to require the appellant to complete the record by filing a transcript of such other papers and evidence as he deems necessary and points out. Cunningham v. German Ins. B.nk, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 103 Fed. 932.

On appeal from an adjudication of bankruptcy the appellee's motion that several matters and things, not included in the transcript, be brought up, as necessary to a satisfactory examination of the questions raised, was granted, with a reservation as to the costs, although the appellant insisted that the record was sufficient. Herman Keck Mfg. Co. v. Lorsch, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) "That 179 Fed. 485, where the court said: motion we are disposed to allow, with the reservation of power in this court to ultimately determine where the costs of that additional matter of the transcript should be placed, determinable upon the question placed, determinable upon the question whether or not it is necessary to be brought, in order to have a proper understanding. With this reservation, the motion will be granted; but for special reasons, which we m , do not care to dwell upon, we further order that the charges incident to the supplying of this additional matter be paid by the ap-pellees, and so of the cost of printing it, the ultimate liability for which is also to be determined hereafter."

On a bankrupt's appeal from an adjudica-tion of bankruptcy the appellee's motion for an order requiring that the original books and records in the business of the bankrupt be sent up, it being claimed that there was something about them which could not be adequately transcribed, was denied. Herman Keck Mfg. Co. v. Lorsch, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 485, where the court said: "There is a rule which we have taken from the Supreme Court rules, so far as this branch of it is concerned, that where there are exhibits in the record in the court below, such as cannot be transcribed or brought here by proper representation, as, for instance, models and the like, which have been made part of the evidence in that court, they may be ordered by the judge of the court below to be sent here as part of the return to the appeal. The rule applies generally to such matters as cannot be transcribed so as to be exhibited to this court as they were exhibited to the court below. The application for an order to send up the original books and records is not within the scope of that provision. It is not shown that transcription, or representation by photographic copies, if necessary, cannot be made. Therefore no ground is made which would bring the case within the scope of the rule."

The presumptions are in favor of the correctness of the action of the court below, and reversal thereof cannot be had unless the transcript of the record affirmatively shows the ground upon which the action complained of was taken. Buckingham v. Estes, (C. C.

A. 6th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 584.

The record ought to show that the appeal and the steps to perfect the same were taken in proper time. Williams v. Savage, (C. C.

A. 4th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 497.

On appeal from a judgment allowing a claim an assignment of error because claim was not proved within one year after adjudication of bankruptcy is not available if the date of adjudication nowhere appears in the transcript of the record. Buckingham v. Estes, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 584, where the defect was called to the attention of the appellant in the brief filed by the appellee, and no step was taken to supplement the transcript by supplying the date, although appellant had ample time to do so.

An order of the bankruptcy court restraining a referee in petition proceedings in a state court from paying over the fund in his hands is not reviewable if neither the order nor the papers upon which it was granted appear in the record on appeal. In re Lynan, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 127 Fed. 123.

If the record on appeal suggests material facts, but does not set them forth as clearly as is necessary for the decision of the question, the cause may be remanded with instructions to the court below to have the essential facts ascertained and reported and to pass upon the same. Devries v. Shanahan, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 629.

Where the referee, pursuant to the petition of a party desiring review of an order, has certified to the judge the question presented, with a summary of the evidence relating thereto and the finding and order of the ref-eree thereon, and such certificate and summary appear in the record on appeal, it will be presumed, in the absence of some order of the court below, that the hearing therein was upon the summary of the evidence certified by the referee, and that the original evidence before the referee constituted no part of the record in the court below; especially where nothing indicates that any effort was made, either before the referee or judge, to supplement the summary of evidence certified. Cunningham v. German Ins. Bank, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 103 Fed. 932, where appellee's motion for a rule upon the appellant to file a more complete transcript was denied, although "it was entirely within the competency of the judge at request of either party to have directed the filing of all or any part of the original documents or proofs which were on file with the referee."

The transcript from the records of the lower court imports absolute verity, and it is not competent to contradict, explain, or extend the recital of the record by evidence dehors the record. Per Lurton, J., in In re McCall, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed.

A certified record purporting to contain an entry on the journal of the court below on a stated date controls a different date of an indorsement upon the entry of a direction to enter the same; such indorsement having no proper place upon the journal, its date will be treated as a clerical mistake. In reMcCall, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 898, 903

Questions considered and determined in general. - An appeal from a judgment adjudicating the appellant a bankrupt brings up In re Neasmith, (C. C. A.

the whole case. In re Nea 6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 160.

Errors assigned upon instructions given or refused, or other rulings made, on a jury trial demanded by the alleged bankrupt as of right can be considered only upon a writ of error and not upon appeal from an adjudication of bankruptcy. In re Neasmith, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 160.

While a general appeal opens up all prior decrees of an interlocutory character, ques-tions reviewable on appeal from a final de-cree may be limited by the terms in which the appeal was prayed for and allowed. Buckingham v. Estes, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 584, where, for the reason stated, on appeal from a decree allowing a claim on confirmation of a master's report, the court was inclined to regard the appeal as limited to the question of the amount allowed and not extending to the question of the right to recover at all.

If an appeal is taken from an order allowing a claim under section 25c (3), only the validity of the claim allowed can be considered, and it seems that complaint of interlocutory orders affecting the appellant would be excluded. Schuler v. Hassinger, (C. C.

A. 5th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 119.

A decree found correct upon any ground established in the case will be affirmed, though a wrong reason was given for it in the court below. Naylon v. Christiansen Harness Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 158 Fed. 290, 293.

On appeal from a judgment denying a discharge where the referee's report adverse to the bankrupt shows that he passed upon only one of several specifications of objections, that specification alone is brought before the appellate court. Vehon v. Ullman, (C. C.

A. 7th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 694.

Where a party's appeal from the disallowance of his debt concerns the amount of the claim, he may also present any question relating to the security or rank of the debt, as an incident thereof, though the question of lien or priority, if alone involved, could be reviewed only on a petition for revision. In re Cosmopolitan Power Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 858, where the court said: "If the case of In re Worcester County, (1st Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 808, 42 C. C. A. 637, is to be construed as requiring us to split the case and dismiss the portion that affects priority, we are not disposed, as now advised, to follow it."

Presumptions on appeal.—On appeal the presumptions are in favor of the correctness of the action of the court below. Kentucky Nat. Bank v. Carley, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 127 Fed. 686; Buckingham v. Estes, (C. C.

A. 6th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 584.

The presumption of correctness of findings of fact on a given point is conclusive if the record does not show that it contains all the evidence on that point. In re French, (1904) 13 Okla. 549, 75 Pac. 278, where the court presumed there was sufficient evidence to warrant the finding that certain payments constituted preferences and that at the time they were made the bankrupt was insolvent.

Where the clerk's certificate appended to the record on an appeal from an order denying a bankrupt's discharge, recited that the record was a true transcript of so much of the record and proceedings of the court as was requested by counsel for appellant, it was presumed, in the absence of anything showing to the contrary, that there was a sufficient appearance by the objecting creditors on the day they were required to show cause against a discharge, as required by general order No. 32, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 611. Shaffer v. Koblegard Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 71.

Presentation and reservation in lower court of ground of review.—An objection to the consideration of specifications of objection to a bankrupt's discharge, not urged in the trial court, is unavailable on appeal. Shaffer v. Koblegard Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 71, where, for that reason, it was presumed that such appearance as is required by general order No. 32, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 611, was duly and properly entered.

Although a sworn proof of claim has probative force and is prima facie evidence of its allegations even when objected to (Whitney v. Dresser, (1906) 200 U. S. 532, 535, 26 S. Ct. 316, 317, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 584), it cannot be regarded as self proving on the claimant's appeal from a judgment disallowing it unless he relied upon it in the bankruptcy court. In re McIntyre, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 627, where the claimant did not stand upon his proof of claim before the referee and insist that the objectors should go forward, but attempted, by insufficient evidence, to establish the allegations in his proof of claim; and it was held that be could not be permitted to use those very allegations to supply the deficiencies in his evidence.

Review as dependent on state of record.— Where, out of abundant caution, review is sought by appeal and also by petition to revise, both cases may, by agreement of the parties, be considered upon the same record, as in Franklin v. Stoughten Wagon Co., (C. C. A.

8th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 857.

On appeal from an adjudication of bank-ruptcy if the evidence heard below is not brought up, the appellate court is limited to a consideration of the case made by the pleadings when these alone are found in the record. Corwith First State Bank v. Haswell, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 209, where the court said: "The issue of fact presented by the bank's answer to the effect that the debtor was a wage earner, and, therefore, not subject to the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, cannot be considered by us. The trial court by its decree of adjudication necessarily found that issue against the bank, and as no evidence is preserved in the record we are unable to review its finding."

The record must in some form show that it includes the entire evidence, or at least the entire evidence on a given proposition, which the appellate court is asked to consider; if this is not shown in some form, the appellate court will not presume that the entire evidence is included in the record, and will not reverse a case because a finding of fact is not, seemingly, supported by the evidence. In re French, (1904) 13 Okla. 549, 75 Pac. 278, affirming a judgment disallowing a claim.

If the referee failed to take and preserve the testimony which he excluded, and it is not presented to the appellate court, his rulings excluding it are not reviewable. Philadelphia First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 852, where the court said: "The established practice in the federal courts in equity is that examiners, masters, and the Circuit Courts must, under rule No. 67 in equity, take, record, and, in case of an appeal, return to the appellate court all the evidence offered by either party, that which was held to be incompetent or immaterial as well as that which they deemed competent and relevant, to the end that if the appellate court is of the opinion that evidence rejected should have been received, it may consider it, render a final decree, and thus conclude the litigation without remanding the suit to procure the excluded evidence. If evidence is objected to and ruled out, it must nevertheless be written down and preserved in the record subject to the objections, or the ruling cannot be considered in the appellate court. From the general rule that all evidence offered must be taken and preserved, the evidence of a privileged witness, evidence plainly privileged and evidence which clearly and affirmatively appears to be so incompetent, irrelevant, or immaterial that it would be an abuse of the process or power of the court to compel its production or to permit its introduction, are excepted. . . . When the rejected testimony is made a part of the record and returned to an appellate court, and then only, can such a court consider and decide the legality of the rulings which excluded it, and after determining that question it will proceed to decide whether or not all the admissible evidence presented to it sus-tains the decree below, and to render a final decree accordingly." The foregoing statedecree accordingly." ment is substantially a repetition of what was said by the same court in Missouri-American Electric Co. v. Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 283, where an adjudication of bankruptcy was reversed for insufficiency of the evidence.

Under the rule that every presumption must be indulged in favor of the correctness of a judgment rendered by a court of com-petent jurisdiction until the contrary appears, and the rule that after a judgment has been rendered it will be presumed, in the absence of a contrary showing, that the facts necessary to support it were proved, and the complaint will be treated as amended to conform to the proofs, it will be presumed on appeal from an adjudication of involuntary bankruptcy that a defect in the petition was supplied by the proof, where the latter is not brought up for the consideration of the appellate court. Corwith First State Bank v. Haswell, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 209, affirming a decree of adjudication, even though it were conceded that the petition failed to describe sufficiently the land charged to have been unlawfully conveyed, by not specifying the county or state in which it was located; especially "because the record does not disclose that the alleged defect was ever called to the attention of the trial court, and because the facts of the case are not brought here for our consideration."

Harmless or prejudicial error.—"When it can be seen that no harm resulted to appellant, this court will not reverse a decree on account of an immaterial departure from technical rules of proceeding." Oil We'll Supply Co. v. Hall, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 875.

A creditor's appeal from a judgment granting a discharge, upon the contention that the court erroneously referred the application for a discharge to the referee, is without merit where no prejudice whatever has resulted to the appellant through such reference. In re McDuff, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 241.

The decisive issue is not whether there was an error in the admission or exclusion of evidence, but whether or not all the competent and relevant evidence presented to the appellate court sustains the decree. Philadelphia First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 852, following the rule announced in Blease v. Garlington, (1875) 92 U. S. 1, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 521. Admission of incompetent evidence by a

Admission of incompetent evidence by a referee is not ground for reversal of an order pursuant to his finding where the latter was not based upon the incompetent testimony and the court below apparently acted only upon the competent evidence. Smith v. Means, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 89.

A judgment refusing an adjudication of bankruptcy on the advisory verdict of a jury will not be reversed for mere informalities in the proceedings, where the merits of the question involved were passed upon by the trial judge and substantial justice was effected. Oil Well Supply Co. v. Hall, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 875.

An order granting a discharge will be affirmed on appeal if the appellate court is satisfied that it was correct, regardless of the question whether it was made by the court below without investigation of the merits. Kentucky Nat. Bank v. Carley, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 127 Fed. 686.

An order of adjudication will not be reversed on the ground that certain alleged acts of bankruptcy were not properly pleaded and proved if enough was alleged and proved to warrant the adjudication. In re Lynan, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 127 Fed. 123.

Although the record may conclusively show that a party against whom a decree is rendered has suffered no prejudice from a refusal to take and hear cumulative evidence on his behalf, yet when a court of bankruptcy refuses to take and consider evidence which the losing party desires to offer before that evidence has been presented to it so that it can determine the question of its admissibility, the presumption that error produces prejudice necessarily prevails. Missouri-American Electric Co. v. Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 283, reversing an adjudication of bankruptcy for the reason above stated.

Discretion of lower court. — Where the allowance of a claim by the bankruptcy court is discretionary the appellate court strongly inclines to affirm the action of the court below in that behalf unless it appears that clear wrong was done. Gold v. South Side Trust Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 210, affirming disallowance by the court below and the referee of a claim by a broker to a commission for sale of the bankrupt's real estate, the claimant having no contract therefor with the trustee. It was considered to be "an administrative matter" and the court said: "If abuses threaten to creep into bankruptcy procedure those charged with local administration are in better position to prevent such abuses than are appellate tribunals."

Allowance or refusal of amendments to a petition in bankruptcy being entirely within the judicial discretion of the bankruptcy court, is not ground for reversal where the record discloses no abuse of discretion. Pittsburgh Laundry Supply Co. v. Imperial Laundry Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 662, where the court affirmed a refusal to allow amendment of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy by inserting additional alleged acts of bankruptcy, inspection of the proposed amendments showing that they lacked the specific particularity requisite to the statement of an act of bankruptcy, or to sufficiently distinguish them from acts not in violation of the bankrupt law.

The Circuit Court of Appeals is loath to interfere with the amount allowed as an attorney's fee for services rendered to petitioning creditors in involuntary cases unless fully persuaded that the judgment of the court below was founded in misconception of the ground upon which the allowance should be based, or, if proceeding upon correct grounds, that the amount allowed was largely excessive or greatly inadequate. Per Jenkins, J., in In re Curtis, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1900) 100 Fed. 784. But a judgment for a clearly inordinate allowance may be reversed with directions to reduce the allowance to a stated amount. This was done in In re Curtis, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1900) 100 Fed. 784.

Questions of fact - In general. - "A proceeding in bankruptcy is a proceeding in equity, and on an appeal to this court, or to the Supreme Court, the decisive issue is not whether there was an error in the admission or exclusion of evidence, but whether or not all the competent and relevant evidence presented to the appellate court sustains the decree." Philadelphia First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed.

On an appeal the facts as well as the law Courier-Journal Job-Printing Co. v. Schaefer-Meyer Brewing Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 699; and the evidence is therefore re-examined in that court, Simonson v. Sinsheimer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 100 Fed. 428 where the court also side. 100 Fed. 426, where the court also said: "An appeal as in equity cases necessarily involves the idea of re-examination by the appellate court of both the facts and the law of the case."

On appeal from an order refusing a discharge, if any one of the several specifications of objections to the discharge is sustained by sufficient evidence the order will be affirmed. Seigel v. Cartel, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908)

Where an error of the referee calls for reversal of the order confirming his report, unless the court is satisfied by the evidence in the record that his ultimate conclusion was right, the court will not weigh the tes-timony on the mere printed record if the questions of fact seem doubtful, but will reverse and remand in order that further evidence may be taken. In re Straschnow, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 337.

Findings of referee or master. - As to the weight to be attached to a finding of fact by a bankrupt referee alone, it has been said that no arbitrary rule can be laid down for determining it; that his position and duties are analogous to those of a special master directed to take evidence and report his conclusions, and the rule applicable to a review of a referee's findings of fact must be substantially that applicable to a master's report; that much in both cases must depend upon the character of the finding; that if it be a deduction from established fact, the finding will not carry any great weight, for a reviewing court having the same facts may as well draw inferences or deduce a conclusion as the referee; but that if the finding is based upon conflicting evidence involving questions of credibility and the referee has heard the witnesses, much greater weight naturally attaches to his conclusion. Per Lurton, J., in Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Mack, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 163 Fed. 155, 158. In In re Howard, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910)

· 180 Fed. 399, where an order denying a discharge was reversed, the court said: our opinion the evidence was insufficient to warrant a finding that the failure to keep more complete records arose from any inten-tion upon the part of the bankrupt to con-ceal his financial condition. Certainly we think the evidence would not warrant such a finding in the face of the report of the special master who saw the bankrupt upon the stand and heard his testimony at length."

An order of the bankruptcy court disregarding a referee's findings that are amply supported by the testimony will be reversed. Boyd v. Arnold, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 187 (certiorari denied (1907) 207 U. S. 593, 28 S. Ct. 259), reversing a judgment denying a discharge contrary to the recommendation of the referee.

Findings of fact dependent upon conflicting testimony have every reasonable presumption in their favor, and will not be set aside or modified by an appellate court unless it clearly appears that there was error or mis-take, though the court below disagreed with such findings. Southern Pine Co. v. Savannah Trust Co., (5th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 802, 73 C. C. A. 60, reversing an order which set aside the report of a referee in favor of a claimant of proceeds of property sold by a trustee in bankruptcy, the court saying: "Upon the trial of the issues before him the referee had the opportunity of seeing and hearing the witnesses, and he was therefore in a better position to judge of their credibility than are courts which have nothing before them but the printed record."

Judgment allowing a claim was reversed in Rush v. Lake, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 561 (certiorari denied (1903) 191 U. S. 571, 24 S. Ct. 843, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 307), where the appellate court found, contrary to the opinion of the court below, that there was sufficient evidence to justify the referee's finding that the creditor was a silent partner of the bankrupt.

Concurrent findings of referee or jury and court below. — Appeals from judgments of the bankruptcy court are taken "as in equity cases" to a Circuit Court of Appeals or to the Supreme Court of a territory, and consequently the proceeding thereunder should conform itself, as far as may be consistent with justice, to the ordinary course of equity procedure. In re Noyes, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 127 Fed. 286, per Aldrich, J. Hence findings of fact made by a referee or master and confirmed by the judge are to be accepted by the appellate court, unless clear error in them is shown. Ellsworth v. Lyons, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 55, finding that the bankrupt corporation was solvent at the date of a transaction involved; Canner v. Webster Tapper Co., (C. C. A. lst Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 519, affirming an adjudication of bankruptcy; Philadelphia First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 852, affirming an order that a claim be expunged unless the creditor surrendered security which the court below and the referee held on conflicting evidence to have been obtained with reasonable cause to believe that it was intended as a preference; Seigel v. Cartel, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 691, affirming an order refusing a discharge, and holding that the credibility and reasonable-ness of the bankrupt's story of his loss of money being addressed to the judicial discretion of the court below, "as there was, in our judgment, reasonable ground for discrediting his explanation, we will not review the exercise of that discretion;" Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Mack, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 163 Fed. 155, affirming a judgment allowing a claim, which was assailed mainly upon the ground of relationship, and because it did not appear from the books of either the creditor or the debtor, the court saying that "in this case the conclusions of the referee necessarily involved the credibility of the witnesses who testified to the bona fides of the claim preferred by Charles Mack, Sr.; the conclusion he reached in favor of the validity of his debt has also passed the scrutiny of the district judge; under such circumstances this court is not warranted in overturning the conclusions of two courts upon anything less than a demonstration of plain mistake; " Naylor v. Christiansen Harness Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 158 Fed. 290, where, on appeal from an adjudication in involuntary bankruptcy, the appellate court, concurring with the court below, declined to believe that the officers of the bankrupt corporation "could be and continue so utterly ignorant of the financial condition of their company as the general terms in which their testimony was given would seem to indicate;" Stephens v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 341, affirming an adjudication of bankruptcy where the evidence left it uncertain whether or not the alleged bankrupt was chiefly engaged in farming; Smith v. Means, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 89, affirming an order denying the petition of an adverse claimant for the surrender of property to him by the trustees in bankruptcy, since "the master was in the best position to judge of the weight and credibility of the testimony, which was given orally before him," as to the title and right of possession of the claimant; In re Lawrence, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 134 Fed. 843, affirming an order, findings not to be dis-turbed "unless they are manifestly unsupported by the evidence;" Buckingham v. Estes, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 584, affirming a judgment allowing a claim as to the amount thereof, which "this court will not reverse or modify unless a very plain mistake is definitely pointed out;" In re Noyes, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 127 Fed. 286, affirming a judgment allowing a debt, the court saying: "Some cases go so far as to hold that a chancellor's findings will not be reversed where the appellate court cannot see that the decree is right, and where the evidence raises some doubt as to its correctness. But it is not necessary to go to that extreme in this case, for, while the evidence presented by the record is meagre, there is nothing in the case to lead us to doubt the correctness of the finding below."

Conclusions of the trial judge, according with those of a jury in an advisory verdict, are entitled to the same weight as the concurrent findings of a referee and the judge. See In re Neasmith, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 160, affirming an adjudication of bankruptcy, the court seeing "no sufficient reason for disagreeing with the conclusions."

Findings of a referee affirmed by the court may not be adopted by the appellate court where they appear to be clearly against the weight of testimony, or where they proceed upon an erroneous theory of the principles of law upon which the case was to be tried and determined, or where the appellate court finds that there are no substantial contradictions in the testimony which the court below thought had developed. West v. McLaughlin, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 124, where a judgment rejecting a claim was reversed because it depended upon an erroneous assumption that the burden of proof on one of the issues involved rested on the creditor.

In In re Sweeney, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 612, where the dismissal of an intervening claimant of property sold to the bankrupt was affirmed, the referee's report and finding, concurred in by the court below, was that the intervener had ample evidence, on a stated date, to put him on notice of the bankrupt's failing condition. "To justify us in a contrary conclusion," said the Circuit Court of Appeals, "it should plainly appear that the finding or conclusion was based upon some error of law or plain mistake of fact."

Finding of judge.—A judgment denying a discharge on an issue of fraud, the court below having seen the witnesses and heard their testimony, will not be disturbed unless the appellate court can clearly see that it is opposed to the weight of evidence. Osborne v. Perkins, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 127, per Aldrich, J., "or, as otherwise stated, unless plain and manifest error appears," he continued.

While the presumption is that all facts necessary to a decree were found by the court below, in the absence of circumstances showing the contrary, the appellate court is not aided in consideration of the case by the weight which ordinarily attaches to findings of the court below if there are no express findings stated in such a way as to make it clear that they were distinct findings upon questions of fact. Burleigh v. Foreman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 13, reversing a decree adjudging that certain property constituted assets of the bankrupt's estate, it appearing that the conclusions of the court below were reached "upon general reasoning in respect to law and fact."

An appeal will be dismissed by the court of its own motion if it appears that the order or judgment was not one from which an appeal would lie. Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. Å. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 576, 579; Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Switzer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907)

153 Fed. 362.

Where an appeal is taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals from an order which is not appealable, but subject to review only on petition to revise, the appeal should be dismissed. Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1151.

Where the record on appeal from an order allowing a claim was not filed within the time allowed by law, and no motion to extend the time had been made within that period, the appeal was dismissed on motion. In re Alden Electric Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1903) 123 Fed. 415.

"Appeals will not be entertained to argue moot questions only." In re Berkebile, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 577, dismissing an appeal for that reason.

Where, pending an appeal from an order dismissing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, the defendants were adjudicated bankrupts in another district, the appeal will be dismissed, since under general order No. 6, 1 Fed Stat. Annot. 607, the court making the first adjudication has exclusive jurisdiction, and the questions involved in the appeal have therefore become academic; and especially where such questions relate to an alleged preferential transfer of property, charged as an act of bankruptcy, which may again come before the court in a suit by the trustee against the transferee. In re Sears, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 275.

Where, on a former appeal, it was determined that if the alleged bankrupt committed the acts of bankruptcy in question while insane the adjudication was wrong, but if the acts were committed while sane it was proper to continue the case, though the bankrupt subsequently became insane, and the case was remanded to give the petitioning creditors an opportunity to rebut the presumption of insanity arising from the inquisition, and on such hearing a number of witnesses testified that he was same when the acts of bankruptcy were committed, and no evidence to the contrary was offered by the bankrupt's committee, a further appeal by such committee, raising the same question previously determined, was diamissed as frivolous and taken for delay. In re Kehler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 674.

Appeal taken on erroneous theory. - An appeal taken on the erroneous supposition that the order was appealable under section 25a (3) will not be dismissed if the order was appealable as a "controversy" under section 24a. Liddon v. Smith, (C. C. A. 5th

Reversal and remand. - Where an order denying a discharge was reversed on appeal the court below was instructed to sustain the bankrupt's exceptions to the master's report against his petition for discharge, and to grant the discharge; this courts being deemed more equitable, under all the circumstances, than to leave the question of discharge open to a new inquiry. Vehon v. Ullman, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 694.

Mandate and proceedings thereon. — The District Court is a mere instrument to make effectual the mandate sent down by the Circuit Court of Appeals, which must be carried into effect without any limitation whatever. In re Hudson River Electric Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1911) 184 Fed. 970, where the Circuit Court of Appeals having affirmed an order dismissing a petition in involuntary banks. ruptcy, the petitioner moved in the District Court to insert in the order entered on the mandate a provision that it should not be prejudicial to his right to apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari to review the order, the matter of certiorari to review the order; the motion was denied.

Costs. -- Appeals are not now allowed in forma pauperis, much less ought the court to allow a bankrupt's appeal to be financed by means to be supplied out of a fund which it may ultimately be held ought to go to the benefit of creditors. Hence, where the bank-rupt appealed from an involuntary adjudication, he was not entitled to an order requiring a receiver of his property to pay the costs of the transcript and the printing of the record out of the proceeds of the estate in his hands because the appellant was without the means required for that purpose. Herman Keck Mfg. Co. v. Lorsch, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 485.

(1) [From judgment granting or denying adjudication.] from a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.7

An order dismissing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy is a judgment refusing to make an adjudication and appealable under Stevens v. Nave-McCord Merthis clause. cantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 71, where the court said: "A decision which finally determines the rights of parties to secure in that suit the relief they seek is a 'final decision' within the meaning of that term in the Act creating the Circuit Courts of Appeals, although it is not a decision of the merits of the case and does not bar another suit or proceeding for the same cause. It is a final adjudication of the particular case, and that is sufficient to vest in the defeated parties the right of review by Refusal to set aside adjudication. — An order or judgment overruling a motion to set aside a judgment of adjudication of bank-ruptcy is not appealable. Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 576.

The appeal from an adjudication should not be taken to the Supreme Court, but only to the Circuit Court of Appeals, if it does not involve a question of jurisdiction of the District Court within the cases cited supra, p. 603, in note to section 24a. Exploration Mercantile Co. v. Pacific Hardware, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 825; Columbia Ironworks v. National Lead Co., (6th Cir. 1904) 127 Fed. 99, 62 C. C. A. 99. Where question of jurisdiction of the Dis-

Where question of jurisdiction of the District Court is claimed to be in issue, see supra, note to section 24a, p. 603.

Appeal or petition for revision.—A judgment of adjudication is appealable, even though it might be reviewable in matter of law on petition for revision. C. C. Taft Co. v. Century Sav. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 369. But see as to exclusiveness of remedies note to sec. 24b. supra. p. 611.

Writ of error or appeal. — The distinction between a writ of error which brings up matter of law only, and an appeal, which, unless expressly restricted, brings up both law and fact, has always been observed by the federal Supreme Court, and been recognized by the legislation of Congress from the foundation of the government. Elliott v. Toeppner, (1902) 187 U. S. 327, 23 S. Ct. 133, 136, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 200, per Chief Justice Fuller. And the Constitution provides that "no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law." Seventh Amendment to Constitution, 8 Fed. Stat. Annot. 370. Hence & judgment that a defendant is or is not a bankrupt, entered by a federal District Court pursuant to a verdict of a jury on a trial under section 19 of the Bankruptcy Act, supra, p. 586, is not appealable to the Circuit Court of Appeals, and can be reviewed for alleged errors of the court on the trial only by a writ of error accompanied by a bill of exception. Elliott v. Toeppner, (1902) 187 U. S. 327, 23 S. Ct. 133, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 200; Duncan v. Landis, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1901) 106 Fed. 839; In re Neasmith, (6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 160, 77 C. C. A. 402; Lennox v. Allen-Lane Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 167 Fed. 114; Exploration Mercantile Co. v. Pacific Hardware, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 825 (writ of error to review a judgment of adjudication on a jury trial).

The provision in section 25a (1), authorizing an appeal "from a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt," applies only to judgments when trial by jury is not demanded and the court of bankruptcy proceeds on its own findings of fact. Elliott v. Toeppner, (1902) 187 U. S. 327, 23 S. Ct. 133, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 200.

A writ of error to review the judgment just mentioned is of adjudication after a jury trial demanded as of right, authorized by the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, sec. 6, 26 Stat. L. 828, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 409 (now embodied in Judicial Code, sec. 128, ante, p. 195, title JUDICIARY, in this Supplement), in connection with section 24a of the Bankrupt Act, supra, p. 603. Duncan v. Landis, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1901) 106 Fed. 839.

Under the Bankruptoy Act of 1867 it was also held that a writ of error is the proper remedy in such a case. Knickerbocker Ins. Co. v. Comstock, (1872) 16 Wall. 258, 21

U. S. (L. ed.) 493.

An adjudication of bankruptcy without a jury trial is reviewable only by appeal and not by a writ of error. Lockman v. Lang, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1903) 128 Fed. 279. See also Lockman v. Lang, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 1.

Appeal and not a writ of error is the proper remedy for appellate review by a bankrupt of an order of adjudication upon the advisory verdict of a jury upon issues submitted in the exercise of the court's discretion. In re Neasmith, (6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 160, 77 C. C. A. 402; Oil Well Supply Co. r. Hall, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 875.

"The practice of taking an appeal and a writ of error to review the same adjudications is not only permissible, but commendable, in cases in which counsel have just reason to doubt which is the proper proceeding to give jurisdiction to the Appellate Court. In such cases the reviewing court will consider both proceedings, will dismiss that one which is ineffective, and will review the rulings of the court below in accordance with the rules of the method applicable to the nature of the case before it." Lockman v. Lang, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 1.

Both an appeal and a writ of error were taken from an adjudication which followed the verdict of a jury in Lennox v. Allen-Lane Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1908) 167 Fed. 114, the court dismissing the appeal.

Other matters of appellate procedure, see the first note to section 25a, supra, p. 623.

(2) [From grant or denial of discharge.] from a judgment granting or denying a discharge; and [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.]

Judgment on composition.— A judgment confirming a composition is appealable as a judgment granting a discharge. In re Friend, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 134 Fed. 778; U. S. v. Hammond, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 862.

The bankrupt has an equal right to appeal from a judgment refusing confirmation. U.

S. v. Hammond, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 862; Adler v. Jones, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1901) 109 Fed. 967. Contra, Ross v. Saunders, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1901) 105 Fed. 915.

An order dismissing an application for discharge for want of prosecution, after so long a time had elapsed that the application could not be reviewed, is appealable as a judgment denying a discharge. In re Kuffler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 127 Fed. 125.

Whether an order dismissing a petition to revoke a discharge is appealable as an order granting a discharge was expressly left undecided, the court finding no authorities on the point, in Thompson v. Mauzy, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 611.

Entry of order.—An honest bankrupt's right to a discharge is to be jealously protected, and where petitioners were adjudicated bankrupts Sept. 9, 1904, and applied for their discharge June 7th following, which application was dismissed for a technical error Sept. 13, 1905, but no order was entered on the judge's memorandum, and new proceedings were instituted, in which the former denial was pleaded as res adjudicata, the bankrupts were still entitled to have an order entered on the prior decision and to appeal therefrom under section 25a (2). In re Elkind, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 175 Fed. 64.

(3) [From allowance or rejection of claim.] from a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of five hundred dollars or over. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.]

For matters of appellate procedure see the first note to section 25a, supra, p. 623.

"That 'claim,' as used here, means a 'debt' is settled by Holden v. Stratton, (1903) 191 U. S. 115, 118, 24 S. Ct. 45, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 116, where it was said by Chief Justice Fuller that 'while the word "claim" is used in its signification of the demand or assertion of a right in subdivision 11 of section 2, in respect of all claims of bankrupts to their exemptions, it is also used in many parts of the act, and, as we think, in section 25, as referring to debts . . . presented for proof against estates in bankruptcy." In re Mueller, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 711, 714.

Where a creditor asserts both a debt and a lien to secure the same, the procedure as to the debt or claim governs, with incidental right to determine the validity and priority of the lien asserted, and a judgment in his favor is appealable by the trustee under section 25a (3), although the latter makes no objection to the amount found due, and only seeks by his appeal to further contest the right to the security asserted. Coder v. Arts, (1909) 213 U. S. 223, 29 S. Ct. 436, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 772.

An order disallowing a claim for voting

An order disallowing a claim for voting purposes in the selection of a trustee in bankruptcy, "without prejudice to the claimant's right to present the claim hereafter," is not appealable, and is reviewable only on a petition for revision. Duryea Power Co. v. Sternbergh, (1910) 218 U. S. 299, 31 S. Ct. 25, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047.

Disallowing priority.—Where a claim of Disallowing priority. — Where a claim of debt is allowed, an order disallowing priority to it is not appealable. In re Doran, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 467.

And an order allowing a claim as a general debt, but disallowing in part a claim of the creditor to priority as a lien holder, is not appealable. Gaudette v. Graham, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 311.

not appealable. Gaudette v. Graham, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 311.

"But where the appeal is from a judgment allowing or disallowing a debt, any question of lien or priority of the debt, if allowed, may be considered upon the appeal as an incident of the debt." In rc Mueller, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 711, 714.

Claim for franchise tax. — Where a state filed a claim against a bankrupt corporation for an alleged franchise tax, and more than $500 of such claim was disallowed, the state was entitled to appeal from such disallowance under section 25a (3). In re Cosmopolitan Power Co., (7th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 858, 70 C. C. A. 388, reversed on the merits, sub nom. New Jersey v. Anderson, (1906) 203 U. S. 483, 27 S. Ct. 137, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 284.

Denial of business homestead exemption.

Where, in a proceeding to determine a bankrupt's homestead exemption, the creditor secured by a deed of trust of property, claimed by the bankrupt as a business homestead, intervened, on the ground that the bankrupt was not entitled to a business homestead exemption, and prayed that all the property covered by the deed of trust be adjudged subject thereto and be ordered sold to satisfy the debt, which exceeded $2,000, a judgment of the district judge reversing a referee's decision and holding that the bankrupt was not entitled to a business homestead, and directing that the property covered by the deed should be applied to its satisfaction, was applicable under section 25a (3). Burow v. Grand Lodge, etc., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1905) 133 Fed. 708, distinguishing In re Whitener, (5th Cir. 1900) 105 Fed. 180, 44 C. C. A. 434.

An order allowing expenses incurred by a bankrupt's trustee for counsel fees is not appealable. Davidson v. Friedman, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 140 Fed. 853.

An order passing upon a creditor's claim for the allowance of counsel fees and expenses incurred in contesting claims and prosecuting suits on behalf of the estate is not appealable. Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Switzer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 362

Orders of miscellaneous character.—A judgment is appealable as one rejecting a claim where a referee's order disallowing a claim "as the proof now stands" was approved and affirmed by the bankruptcy court. Hiscock v. Varick Bank, (1907) 206 U. S. 28, 27 S. Ct. 681, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 945, affirming (2d Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 818, 75 C. C. A. 548, which reversed (N. D. N. Y. 1905) 134 Fed. 101.

Where the creditor of a bankrupt, after the filing of the petition, sold securities which it held, credited the proceeds on its debt, and filed a claim for the balance due, an order disallowing such claim and directing a resale of the securities at public auction was one rejecting the claim and appealable. In re Mertens, (2d Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 818, 75

C. C. A. 548, affirmed (1907) 206 U. S. 28, 27 S. Ct. 681, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 945.

Where a creditor holding a note given by a bankrupt firm and signed as surety by a member of the firm, also bankrupt, proved the debt against the firm estate and also filed it as an individual debt against the estate of the surety, the only question determined by an order allowing such claim was that it was a provable debt against the individual estate, and the order was appealable, the amount allowed being over $500. In re Mueller, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed.

An order denying to a creditor of a partnership the right of participation in the in-dividual assets of a bankrupt partner until the individual creditors were first paid is not a rejection of the debt claimed and is not appealable. Euclid Nat. Bank v. Union Trust, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 975, certiorari denied (1906) 205 U. S. 547, 27 S. Ct. 793, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 924.

Where an order of sale recognized and adjudicated the validity and amount due on mortgages as incidental to the necessary sale of the property free and clear of all incum-brances, "it is doubtful if such recognition was such an allowance of a claim as would entitle any party not adversely affected to appeal therefrom." Schuler v. Hassinger, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 119.

An order denying a petition for rehearing is not appealable. Morgan v. Benedum, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 232. See also Conboy v. Jersey City First Nat. Bank, (1906) 203 U. S. 141, 27 S. Ct. 50, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 128.

Limitation as to amount.—"The purpose of the Congress in restricting the right of appeal was evidently to avoid inconvenience, delay, and expense to claimants and bankrupt estates which would be disproportionate to the amount in controversy. When read with due regard to this purpose, the restriction plainly has reference, not to the amount of the original claim, but to the amount of the allowance or rejection; that is, to the amount which will be put in controversy by the appeal." Per Van Devanter, J., in Gray v. Grand Forks Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 344, stating, however, that where the trustee in bankruptcy is given or refused credit for different payments aggregating $500 or over, claimed to have been actually made by him in the due administration of the estate, he would be the creditor or claimant, the different payments would be only items of a single debt or claim, and the order of allowance or rejection would be appealable.

[Time for taking appeal — hearing.] Such appeal shall be taken within ten days after the judgment appealed from has been rendered, and may be heard and determined by the appellate court in term or vacation, as the case may be. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.]

The time limit in this paragraph applies only to the three judgments specifically mentioned in the preceding part of the section, and the time limit for appeal from other judgments is six months, as provided in the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, ch. 517, sec. 11, 26 Stat. L. 829, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 428. Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 576, 579. And see supra, p. 603, note to section 24a.

If an order dismissing a petition to revoke a discharge is appealable under section 25a (2), the appeal must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction unless it is taken within ten days. Thompson v. Mauzy, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 611.

Where a creditor's claim was disallowed, and the question of its preference also decided against him, it was held that his appeal was governed by the ten days limitation, and not by the limitation of six months and not by the limitation of six monous applicable to appeals by adverse claimants in "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings." Kenova L. & T. Co. v. Graham, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 717.

Nonenumerated judgments "in bankruptcy proceedings."—If there be any appealable orders or decrees of the District Court "in bankruptcy proceedings" that are not "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings." troversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings under section 24a, nor enumerated as appealable under section 25a, an appeal therefrom will not be controlled by the limitation of ten days for appeals from enumerated judgments, but may be taken within the same period as other appeals to the Circuit Court of Appeals from that court; that is to say, "within six months after the entry of the order, judgment, or decree sought to be received," as provided in the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, sec. 11, 26 Stat. L. 829, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 428. Per Sanford, J., in Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 576, 579; per Caldwell, J., in Steele v. Buel, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 968, sustaining a bankrupt's appeal, within six months, from an order denying his claim to exemption of certain insurance policies and their cash value.

Allowance of an appeal after expiration of the time limited has no efficacy to prevent dismissal of the appeal on motion. Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed.

576. 578.

Judgment "rendered." - Statutes limiting a stated period for appeal after a judgment has been "rendered" are usually construed as meaning from the date of the decision by the court, and not from the date of its subsequent entry in the journal, or signing by the judge; and if the time for appeal is suspended during the pendency of a petition for rehearing (see infra, this note), it will begin to run when a decision denying the petition is rendered, although the decision be actually entered at a later date. In re McCall, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 898, 902.

Presumptively, however, an unannounced judgment is not "rendered" when the judge signs it under a given date, but only until it is handed to the clerk and filed by him. Peterson v. Nash, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 311, in which case there was an interval of two days between the date of an appealable order and the date of filing, the appeal having been taken within ten days of the latter date but more than ten days from the former. The record failed to disclose where the signed order was during the two days. The court presumed it was in the judge's possession "unannounced and unpublished and still subject to his considera-tion and determination," and "in the ab-sence of a showing to the contrary" denied a motion to dismiss the appeal.

Where the judge filed an opinion, the time for appeal did not begin to run until his conclusion was placed in the form of a judgment and entered as such. Rush v. Lake, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 561, certiorari denied (1903) 191 U. S. 571, 24 S. Ct. 843, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 307. See also In re Elkind, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 175

Fed. 64.

If, in a given case, an order denying a motion to set aside a judgment would be . appealable, the time for appeal would begin to run from the entry of the order and not from the entry of the original judgment. Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 576, 579.

Effect of proceedings for rehearing. - For evident reasons this topic is here considered in connection with cases where the same question arose under section 25b.

If a party subject to the limitation of thirty days for appeals to the Supreme Court from a Circuit Court of Appeals (see infra, p. 638, note to sec. 25b), suffers the time to elapse without filing a petition for re-hearing, his right of appeal expires and cannot be resuscitated by merely filing a peti-tion for rehearing. Conboy v. Jersey City First Nat. Bank, (1906) 203 U. S. 141, 27 S. Ct. 50, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 128; especially if the petition is afterward denied, Conboy r. Jersey City First Nat. Bank, (1906) 203 U. S. 141, 27 S. Ct. 50, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 128; Morgan v. Benedum, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 232; even though the term of court has not expired and by its rules of practice petitions for rehearing may be presented at any time during the term, Conboy v. Jersey City First Nat. Bank, (1908) 203 U. S. 141, 27 S. Ct. 50, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 128, dismissing an appeal from the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Whether the Circuit Court of Appeals has power to grant a rehearing after the lapse of thirty days from an appealable judgment, in view of the terms and spirit of the Bankruptcy Act, even though the term of the court has not expired, and the effect of granting it in restoring the right to appeal, were questions expressly left undecided by the Supreme Court. Conboy v. Jersey City

But since the decision in the Supreme Court case last above cited, as well as before, it has been expressly held in other federal courts that the bankruptcy court has sufficient control of any order so that, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, it may set aside the order even after the exmay set asue the order even after the experiment of the time for appeal, whereupon the right of appeal is revived. Per Evans, J., in West v. McLaughlin, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 124, 126, citing In re Ives, (6th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 911, 51 C. C. A. 541, as "so decided upon a kindred proposi-tion." Per contra, in Brady v. Bernard, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 576, where a petition to set aside an adjudication of bankruptcy was filed more than ten days after the adjudication was entered, and the petition was afterward denied, an appeal from the original judgment of adjudication was dismissed. So in In re Berkebile, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 577, where an adjudication of bankruptcy was entered, and e few days thereafter an alias adjudication to precisely the same effect and without vacating the prior adjudication, it was held that this subsequent entry did not extend the time for appeal from the original adjudication. And in In re Brown, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 339, the court said arguendo: "It is well settled that this statutory limitation [of ten days] cannot be enlarged either by the bankruptcy or by the appellate court."

It has also been held that the right of appeal is revived where a rehearing is granted upon petition filed after the time for appeal has expired, but not for the mere purpose of evading the statutory limitation, and the court adheres to its first determination. West v. McLaughlin, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 124, a case of an appeal from the disallowance of a claim, where Evans, J., said: "The learned judge of the District Court not only re-examined the questions involved, but more elaborately stated his views thereon. The fact that he again arrived at the same conclusion did not neutralize his power to grant the rehearing, though some concession to the supposed hardship of the case may have had weight with him." In In re Brady, (W. D. Ky. 1908) 169 Fed. 152, the point was expressly left undecided. Some courts have held that while the bankruptcy court will not grant a rehearing upon the pretense of reconsidering the merits of the case, but really to revive the petitioner's right of appeal (In re Girard Glazed Kid Co., (E. D. Pa. 1904) 129 Fed. 841), because that "would be the employment of an unworthy fiction" (In re Wright, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 96 Fed. 820), the court has a right to grant a rehearing upon a petition filed arow-edly for the purpose of regaining by that means a right of appeal lost by expiration of time. In re Worcester County, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 808, where it was "apparent that the purpose was to revive the right of appeal;" In re Wright, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 96 Fed. 820, where the court said "the record should show the true purpose for which the rehearing was sought and granted;" In re Girard Glazed Kid Co., (E. D. Pa. 1904) 129 Fed. 841, stating that the petition should set forth the reasons for the failure to appeal in due season. In such cases as the last cited perhaps the petition must be filed during the same term, as in In re Worcester County, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 808, where the court said: "We have no occasion to consider whether or not the organization of the District Court, sitting in bankruptcy, is, by the statute, of a continuous nature, so that according to the expressions in Sandusky v. Indianapolis First Nat. Bank, (1874) 23 Wall. 289, 292, 293, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 155, and in Stickney v. Wilt, (1874) 23 Wall. 150, 164, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 50, its proceedings are not subject to the ordinary rule that rehearings must be asked for at the term at which the judgment is entered."

Courts holding that they have power to grant a rehearing after the time for appeal has expired, and in order to revive the right to appeal, declare that they may properly do so when satisfied that the failure to appeal was not due to the culpable neglect of the party or his counsel (In re Wright, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 96 Fed. 820), but that the court "must exercise a very guarded discretion in granting" such a rehearing, and "should never do this unless the facts in the case clearly warrant it." In re Hudson Clothing Co., (D. C. Me. 1905) 140 Fed. 49, 51, where the judge denied a petition for rehearing because he thought the parties had "acted advisedly in failing to preserve the record and to apply for an appeal," and because, he said, "if I should grant this rehearing for this purpose, it might fairly be used as a precedent for such action in almost any case where a party had not taken an appeal from an adverse decree within the ten days allowed by the bankruptcy statute."

For a contrary view as to the propriety of granting a rehearing to restore a party's right of appeal, see West v. McLaughlin, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 124, where the judge who entered an order, having at once left upon a vacation trip, was not, for over ten days, within the reach of appellant's counsel, who desired to take steps for an appeal, but no reason was disclosed by the record for not taking other available steps for that purpose. Evans, J., in the case cited, said: "One purpose which runs through the Act is to require the prompt and expeditious winding up of estates, and the provision just quoted [limiting ten days for appeal] was intended to promote that end. Notwithstanding some judicial expressions which possibly favor it we cannot accept as accurate or sustainable the contention that it would not be an abuse of the discretion of the court to set aside an order disallowing a claim for the sole purpose of extending the time for taking an appeal. We conceive that such a course would practically nullify the wise provision of the statute, and go beyond the bounds of a proper discretion."

Where a petition for rehearing is filed before the time for appeal has expired, the finality of the order or judgment sought to be reviewed is thereby suspended, and the period of limitation for appeal does not begin to run until the court disposes of the petition. Mills v. Fisher, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 897 (distinguishel Conboy v. Jersey City First Nat. Bank, (1906) 203 U. S. 141, 27 S. Ct. 50, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 128); In re McCall, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 898.

When appeal is "taken." - Whether a citation is needful, by way of notice to the parties, in any appeal in bankruptcy, may not be clear under the authorities. Per Seaman, J., in In re T. E. Hill Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 832, where it was also said: "The general rule is established, as stated by this court in McNulta v. West Chicago Park Com'rs, (7th Cir. 1900) 99 Fed. 328, 39 C. C. A. 545, that no citation is required 'when an appeal is allowed in open court at the same term when the decree was rendered.' peals in bankruptcy, however, this rule may not be applicable, for the reason that there are no stated terms of the bankruptcy court, as such, but the jurisdiction is exercised by the District Courts throughout the proceedings [citing Bankruptcy Act, sec. 2, supra, p. 469] 'in vacation in chambers and during their respective terms.' Thus each 'proceeding in bankruptcy, from its commencement to its close upon the final settlement, is but one suit.' Wiswall v. Campbell, (1876) 93 U. S. 347, 348, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 923."

And the cases are not harmonious in reference to citation or bond as requisites to confer jurisdiction of an appeal. Per Seaman, J., in In re T. E. Hill Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 832, continuing as follows: "In Jacobs r. George, (1893) 150 U. S. 415, 416, 14 S. Ct. 159, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 1127, and Mattingly v. Northwestern Virginia R. Co., (1895) 158 U. S. 53, 56, 15 S. Ct. 725, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 894, however, the general doctrine is established for appeals in equity that 'neither signing nor service of the citation is jurisdictional, its only office being to give notice to the appellees,' and that failure or defects therein may be cured after the time limited for appeal. Like rule is applied to perfect the bond for appeal. Edmonson v. Bloomshire, (1868) 7 Wall. 306, 311, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 91; Peugh v. Davis, (1884) 110 U. S. 227, 228, 4 S. Ct. 17, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 127."

It has been held that an appeal is not "taken" within the meaning of the statute until the petition and allowance of appeal (if there be such petition and allowance) and the appeal bond and the citation are presented to and filed in the court which made the decree appealed from; and that the filing of a bond is only one step towards perfecting the appeal, and the presumption that might arise from its filing and approval does not obtain when the record affirmatively discloses that there was a prayer for the appeal, and its allowance and a citation, none of which was filed in the court until after the expiration of the time for appeal. Norcross v. Nave, etc., Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed.

796, dismissing an appeal although the bond was filed and approved in time, Caldwell, J., saying: "The case of Credit Co. v. Arkansas Cent. R. Co., (1888) 128 U. S. 258, 9 S. Ct. 107, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 448, is directly in point, and concludes the question; and to the same effect are Fowler v. Hamill, (1891) 139 U. S. 549, 11 S. Ct. 663, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 266; Farrar v. Churchill, (1890) 135 U. S. 609, 10 S. Ct. 771, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 246."

It has also been held that an appeal must be dismissed where there is no evidence in the record that the bond was filed in time nor the time when the petition for appeal was presented, or filed, or granted, or whether it was filed at all. Williams v. Savage, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 497.

On the other hand, a motion to dismiss an appeal was denied where the petition and allowance of the appeal were in due time, but citation was not issued to the appellee mov-ing to dismiss the appeal, and the bond, although filed in due time, ran to the other appellee alone. In re T. E. Hill Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 832, certiorari denied, (1907) 207 U. S. 589, 28 S. Ct. 256. See also Gray v. Grand Forks Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 344.

A motion to dismiss was also denied where the appeal was allowed and bond approved in time, but a citation was not issued until several days after the time for appeal had expired, Lockman v. Lang, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 1; and where the filing of the bond and the service of the citation were done before motion to dismiss the appeal was made, but not within the time limited for appeal, Columbia Ironworks 5.

National Lead Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904)
127 Fed. 99, the court saying: "The delay Ironworks v. was for a few days only, and we do not think the interests of the opposite party were to any appreciable extent impaired thereby."

And an appeal "not taken strictly within the statutory limitation" was entertained where there was no motion to dismiss. Stroud v. McDaniel, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1901) 106 Fed. 493, the report not otherwise showing what was the omission, and Judge Purnell quoting as follows from Justice Brewer's opinion in Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Phinney, (1900) 178 U. S. 327, 20 S. Ct. 909, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1093: "While we have always been careful to see that the required order of procedure has been complied with before any case shall be considered as transferred from a lower to a higher court, that a party seeking a review must act in time, and must make a substantial compliance with all that the statute prescribes, at the same time we have been equally careful to hold that no mere technical omission which did not preju-dice the rights of the defendant in error should be made available to oust the appel-late court of jurisdiction."

b [Appeal to Supreme Court.] From any final decision of a court of appeals, allowing or rejecting a claim under this Act, an appeal may be had under such rules and within such time as may be prescribed by the Supreme Court of the United States, in the following cases and no other: [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.

This paragraph is re-enacted in Judicial Code, sec. 252, ante, title JUDICIARY, p. 237

of this Supplement.

That this provision is to be strictly construed is indicated by the following quotation from Holden v. Stratton, (1903) 191 U. S. 115, 24 S. Ct. 45, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 116: "The allowance or rejection of a debt or claim is a part of the bankruptcy proceedings, and not an independent suit, and under the Act of 1867 it was held that this court had no jurisdiction to review judgments of the Circuit Courts dealing with the action of the District Courts in such allowance or rejection, because they were not final. Wiswall v. Campbell, (1876) 93 U. S. 347, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 923; Leggett v. Allen, (1884) 110 U. S. 741, 4 S. Ct. 195, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 313. The jurisdiction now given is carefully restricted, and cannot be expanded beyond the letter of the grant. It is an exception to the general rule as to appeals and writes the control of the grant of the foundation of of error obtaining from the foundation of our judicial system. McLish v. Roff, (1891) 141 U. S. 661, 12 S. Ct. 118, 35 U. S. (L. ed.)

The provision in this section is exclusive with reference to its subject-matter, so that if a final decision allowing or rejecting a claim fails to meet the requirements of this section and is therefore not appealable under it, an appeal cannot be taken to the Supreme Court under section 24a, supra. Hutchinson v. Otis, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1902) 123 Fed. 14. No appeal lies from orders denying petitions for rehearing, which are addressed to the discretion of the court and designed to afford it an opportunity to correct its own errors. Conboy v. Jersey City First Nat. Bank, (1906) 203 U. S. 141, 27 S. Ct. 50, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 128. See also Morgan v. Benedum, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 232.

What constitutes decision "allowing or rejecting a claim." - See also cases cited in note to section 25a (3), supra, p. 634.

A decision of a Circuit Court of Appeals reversing a bankruptcy court's disallowances constitutes an appealable decision rejecting a claim. Hiscock v. Varick Bank, (1907) 206 U. S. 28, 27 S. Ct. 681, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 945.

An order allowing a claim as a general debt but disallowing it as preferred is appealable. National Bank of Commerce v. Downie, (1910) 218 U. S. 345, 31 S. Ct. 89, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1065, affirming (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 180 Fed. 979.

In Sexton v. Dreyfus, (1911) 219 U. S. 339, 31 S. Ct. 256, an appeal was entertained from a decision permitting secured creditors to apply the proceeds of the sale of the se· curities first to interest accrued since the filing of the petition, then to the principal debt, and to prove for the balance.

A judgment which reversed an order of the District Court allowing a claim against a bankrupt's estate and held that the creditor must first surrender a certain alleged preference was treated as appealable in New York County Nat. Bank v. Massey, (1904) 192 U. S. 138, 24 S. Ct. 199, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 380.

A judgment of a Circuit Court of Appeals denying a state's claim to preferential pay-ment of taxes was treated as appealable in New Jersey v. Anderson, (1906) 203 U. S. 483, 27 S. Ct. 137, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 284.

A decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals on petition for revision of an order allowing an exemption is not a decision "allowing or rejecting a claim," and is not appealable, but reviewable only on certiorari, under section 25d, infra. Holden v. Stratton, (1903) 191 U. S. 115, 24 S. Ct. 45, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 116.

A decree denying the right invoked by a petition in intervention to have the lien of a chattel mortgage established as the first claim on the property of a bankrupt, and satisfied out of the proceeds of a proposed sale by the trustee in bankruptcy, is not a decision "rejecting a claim," but is the determination of a "controversy" under section 24a. Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., (1910)

Time for appeal. — Appeals under this paragraph must be taken within thirty days after the judgment or decree, as required in general order 36, par. 2, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 612. This limitation is "in harmony with the policy of the Bankruptcy Act, requiring prompt action and the avoidance of delay," and "has the same effect as if written in the statute." Conboy v. Jersey City First Nat. Bank, (1906) 203 U. S. 141, 27 S. Ct. 50, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 128.

The allowance of an appeal by the Circuit Court of Appeals and the granting of a certificate by a justice of the Supreme Court under section 25b, subd. 2, cannot operate as an adjudication that it was taken in time. Conboy v. Jersey City First Nat. Bank, (1906) 203 U. S. 141, 27 S. Ct. 50, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 128, where such appeal on certificate was dismissed because not taken in time, thereby indicating that the italicized clause in the following quotation from the opinion of the court in Coder v. Arts, (1909) 213 U. S. 223, 237, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, 29 S. Ct. 436, 444, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 772, must have been an inadvertence and does not support an implication that any other time than thirty days is limited for appeal even if there is a certificate: "As there is no such certificate the question is, was the appeal taken within the time prescribed by the rules of this court," viz., thirty days?

Nor can a party whose time for appeal has expired derive any benefit from the subsequent filing nunc pro tunc by the Circuit Court of Appeals, as though filed at the time of entry of the judgment or decree, of findings of fact and conclusions of law, as required by general order No. 36, par. 3, 1

Fed. Stat. Annot. 612. Conboy v. Jersey City First Nat. Bank, (1906) 203 U. S. 141, 27 S. Ct. 50, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 128.

Effect of proceedings for rehearing as extending the time, see note to last clause of section 25a (3), supra, p. 635.

Findings of fact and conclusions of law must be filed pursuant to the requirements of general order No. 36, subd. 3, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 612. If the court fails to make those findings, the omission cannot be supplied in the Supreme Court by reference to the opinion of the court below. Chapman v. Bowen, (1907) 207 U. S. 89, 28 S. Ct. 32, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 116.

"But if the case was not appealable the appeal must be dismissed, even though clause 3 [of general order No. 36] had been complied with." Chapman v. Bowen, (1907) 207 U. S. 89, 28 S. Ct. 32, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 116.

Where an appeal was allowed within thirty days of the entry of the judgment, and afterward, but still within the thirty days, an order was made which recited that the court had made certain findings of fact and conclusions of law, and the same was entered nunc pro tunc as of the date of the judgment, it was held that this was a compliance with the requirement that the findings be made at or before the time of entering the judgment or decree. Coder v. Arts, (1909) 213 U. S. 223, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, 29 S. Ct. 436, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 772, where the court said: "We think that the court must be presumed to have acted within its authority to correct the record by this order, made within the time allowed for an appeal, to make it show the findings at or before the time of entering the judgment."

In Duryea Power Co. v. Sternbergh, (1910) 218 U. S. 299, 31 S. Ct. 25, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047, where an appeal was dismissed, it was apparently deemed worthy of remark that the court below "filed no finding of facts at or before the time of entering its decree, as required by the general orders, but did so only two months after the decree had been entered, and a month after an appeal had been taken and allowed by a justice of this court."

The general order provision above cited "does not require such findings to be made without request, but is intended to give the party a right to such findings, to be conceded if he demands it, which we think he should do, either before the opinion of the court is given, or, if thereafter, before the judgment is entered." Crucible Steel Co. v. Holt, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 127. See also Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 675, affirmed (1910) 216 U.S. 545, 30 S. Ct. 412.

There is set forth in full a finding of facts and conclusions of law in Coder v. Arts, (1909) 213 U. S. 223, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, 29 S. Ct. 436, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 772, and Bryant v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., (1909) 214 U. S. 279, 29 S. Ct. 614, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 997, and a finding of facts in Western Tie, etc., Co. v. Brown, (1905) 196 U. S. 502, 25 S. Ct. 339, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 571.

The Supreme Court can look only at the facts found by the Court of Appeals. Coder v. Arts, (1909) 213 U. S. 223, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, 29 S. Ct. 436, 442, 53 U. S. (L. ed.)

Record on appeal. - General Order No. 36, subd. 3, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 612, limits and defines what shall constitute the record on appeal under section 25b, and a general appeal bringing up the entire record is not a correct proceeding in that class of appeals. Chapman t. Bowen, (1907) 207 U. S. 89, 29 S. Ct. 32, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 116.

If the Circuit Court of Appeals had no appellate jurisdiction in the case wherein it rendered the decision, its decision must, of course, be reversed by the Supreme Court for that reason. See Coder v. Arts, (1909) 213 U. S. 223, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, 29 S. Ct. 436, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 772, where, however, it was held that the Circuit Court of Appeals had jurisdiction.

1. [Jurisdictional amount — question involved.] Where the amount in controversy exceeds the sum of two thousand dollars, and the question involved is one which might have been taken on appeal or writ of error from the highest court of a State to the Supreme Court of the United States; or [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.

This subdivision is now a part of Judicial Code, sec. 252, ante, title JUDICIARY, p. 237, of this Supplement.

In order to be appealable under this subdivision - that is, in the absence of a certificate provided for in the next succeeding subdivision - the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals must involve a federal question as the latter is defined in Rev. Stat., $ 709, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot, 467, which is the provision to which this subdivision alludes. Western Tie, etc., Co. v. Brown, (1905) 196 U. S. 502, 25 S. Ct. 239, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 571; Coder v. Arts, (1909) 213 U. S. 223, 238, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, 29 S. Ct. 436, 442, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 772.

A federal question is not involved in a decision which proceeds on well-settled principles of general law broad enough to sustain it without reference to provisions of the Bankruptcy Act. Chapman v. Bowen, (1907) 207 U. S. 89, 28 S. Ct. 32, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 116, where, for that reason, the court dismissed an appeal from the allowance of the claim of a creditor against the bankrupt estate of an individual partner as well as against the estate of the bankrupt partnership; Blake v. Openhym, (1910) 216 U. S. 322, 30 S. Ct. 309, dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, an appeal from a decree reversing the disallowance of a certain claim as entitled to be preferred.

A trustee's bare denial of a creditor's claim allowed him by the Circuit Court of Appeals is not the assertion of a right under federal law, but a denial of such right, and the decision allowing the claim is not appealable. Chapman r. Bowen, (1907) 207 U. S. 89, 28 S. Ct. 32, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 116.

A decision allowing a claim and declaring the validity of a mortgage lien to secure it was held to be appealable where a construction of the Bankruptcy Act insisted upon by the trustee would defeat the lien and a construction contended for the creditor would give the law validity. Coder v. Arts, (1909) 213 U. S. 223, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, 29 S. Ct. 436, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 772.

Following Coder v. Arts, last above cited, an appeal was entertained from a decree sustaining an equitable charge asserted by an intervener as a preferential claim against assets of the bankrupt in the hands of the trustee. Hurley c. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1909) 213 U. S. 126, 29 S. Ct. 466, 53 U. S. trustee. (L. ed.) 729.

Where a decision rejecting a claim is based upon the denial of the creditor's right to a set-off asserted under the provisions of section 68 of the Bankruptcy Act, the construc-tion of those provisions is involved so that a claim of federal right is presented and the decision is appealable. Western Tie, etc., Co. v. Brown, (1900) 196 U. S. 502, 25 S. Ct. 339, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 571, reversing decree in (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 728

An appeal was entertained from a decision which affirmed a judgment disallowing a claim except upon a surrender of an alleged preference. Wild v. Provident L. & T. Co., (1909) 214 U. S. 292, 29 S. Ct. 619, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 1003, reversing (3d Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 562, 82 C. C. A. 516, and holding that the transaction involved did not constitute a preference.

An action in a state court by a trustee in bankruptcy seeking to recover what is asserted to be an asset of the bankrupt estate under the Bankruptcy Act presents a federal question, so that a judgment denying the asserted right is a denial of a right or title specially claimed under a law of the United States and appealable under Rev. Stat., § 709, cited near the beginning of this note. Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co., (1906) 200 U. S. 405, 26 S. Ct. 289, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 527.

The question whether a bankrupt's conveyance of property was in fact made with intent to defraud creditors, when passed upon in the state court, is not one of a federal nature. Thompson v. Fairbanks, (1905) 196 U. S. 516, 25 S. Ct. 306, 49 U. S. (L. ed.)

577.

A judgment recovered by a trustee in bankruptcy in his suit to avoid an alleged unlawful preference, the state court having answered some of the contentions of the defendant by the construction it gave to the Bankruptcy Act, is appealable to the federal Supreme Court. Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Jackman. (1907) 204 U. S. 522, 27 S. Ct. 391, 51 U.S. (L. ed.) 596, where the court said: "The case, therefore, comes within the ruling in Nutt v. Knut, (1906) 200 U.S. 13, 26

S. Ct. 216, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 348. It was there said: 'A party who insists that a judgment cannot be rendered against him consistently with the statutes of the United States may be fairly held, within the meaning of section 709 [4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 467] to assert a right and immunity under such statutes, although the statutes may not give the party himself a personal or affirmative right that could be enforced by direct suit against his adversary.' See also Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co., (1906) 200 U. S. 405, 26 S. Ct. 289, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 527."

While a certificate made by the state court of last resort and filed by it as part of the record cannot import a federal question into a record where otherwise such question does not arise, such certificate may serve to elucidate the determination whether a federal question exists. Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co., (1906) 200 U. S. 405, 26 S. Ct. 289, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 527, holding that the certificate in the case at bar made clear the fact, if it were otherwise doubtful, that rights under the Bankruptcy Act were relied upon and passed upon below.

2. [Certification of question by Supreme Court justice.] Where some Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States shall certify that in his opinion the determination of the question or questions involved in the allowance or rejection of such claim is essential to a uniform construction of this Act throughout the United States. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.]

This subdivision is re-enacted in Judicial Code, sec. 252, ante, title JUDICIARY, p. 237, of this Supplement.

National Bank of Commerce v. Downie, (1910) 218 U. S. 345, 31 S. Ct. 89, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1065, and Jaquith v. Alden, (1903) 189 U. S. 78, 23 S. Ct. 649, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 717, were cases brought up with a certificate under this subdivision.

On appeal from a decision of a Circuit

Court of Appeals allowing or rejecting a claim, the court will not determine the question involved solely on the ground that such determination is essential to a uniform construction of the Bankruptcy Act, if the appeal is not accompanied by a certificate of a justice of the Supreme Court. Chapman v. Bowen, (1907) 207 U. S. 89, 28 S. Ct. 32, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 116; Blake v. Openhym, (1910) 216 U. S. 322, 30 S. Ct. 309.

- c [Bond on appeal by trustees.] Trustees shall not be required to give bond when they take appeals or sue out writs of error. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.]
- d [Certification to Supreme Court by other courts.] Controversies may be certified to the Supreme Court of the United States from other courts of the United States, and the former court may exercise jurisdiction thereof and issue writs of certiorari pursuant to the provisions of the United States laws now in force or such as may be hereafter enacted. ## I. IN GENERAL

"The provisions of the United States laws" referred to in this section are the provisions in section 6 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, 26 Stat. L. 828, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 409, as reproduced in sections 239 and 240 of the Judicial Code, set forth ante, pp. 231, 232, title JUDICIARY, in this Supplement. This section 25d of the Bankruptcy Act is also re-enacted without change in section 252 of the Judicial Code, set forth ante, p. 237, title JUDICIARY, in this Supplement.

In Denver First Nat. Bank v. Klug, (1902) 186 U. S. 203, 22 S. Ct. 899, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 1127, Chief Justice Fuller said: "The certification referred to is that provided in sections 5 and 6 of the Act of March 3, 1891, [4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 398, 409]." His reference to section 5 was probably an inadvertence, since the certificate under that section, unlike a certificate under section 6, is not an independent proceeding, but always and necessarily an incident to an appeal or a writ of error. See 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 402-404, and the corresponding place in title Judiciary, vol. 2 of this Supplement.

"The construction which the Denver First

"The construction which the Denver First Nat. Bank v. Klug, (1902) 186 U. S. 203, 22 S. Ct. 899, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 1127, suggests may be put on section 25d with reference to certification and writs of certiorari, as between the Supreme Court and the Circuit Courts of Appeals, makes it applicable to bankruptcy proceedings, no matter in what way they get into the Circuit Courts of Appeals, and whether they come up under section 24 or section 25 . . . and this is clearly a just construction of that section." Hutchinson v. Otis, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1902) 123 Fed. 14, 19.

II. QUESTIONS CERTIFIED.

The leading provision for certification of questions to the Supreme Court by the Circuit Court of Appeals is in section 6 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, annotated in 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 418, and in title Judiciary, vol. 2 of this Supplement,

Despite the comprehensive phrase "other courts" the provision in section 25d refers only to certificates from the Circuit Court of Appeals. See Bardes v. Ha-warden First Nat. Bank, (1899) 175 U. S. 526, 20 S. Ct. 196, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 261, holding that a certificate under that provision cannot be employed to bring a question of jurisdiction direct from the District Court to the Supreme Court. As to certification of questions of jurisdiction in connection with direct appeals or writs of error, see 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 418, and the corresponding place in title JUDICIARY, vol. 2 of this Supplement.

Cases in Circuit Court of Appeals on appeal. - In Toxaway Hotel Co. r. Smathers, (1910) 216 U.S. 439, 30 S. Ct. 263, a question was certified in a bankruptcy case pending in the Circuit Court of Appeals on ap-

In proceedings to revise in matter of law. — Certification of questions from the Circuit Court of Appeals is not only authorized in bankruptcy cases pending in that court on appeal or writ of error, but also in bankruptcy cases pending on petition to superintend and revise in matter of law; certificates in the latter class of cases constitute a large proportion of the bankruptcy cases presented to the Supreme Court on certificate. The following were certified cases of that description: White v. Schloeb, (1900) 178 U. S. 542, 20 S. Ct. 1007, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1183; Wall v. Cox, (1901) 181 U. S. 244, 21 S. Ct. 642, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 845; Metcalf v. Barker, (1902) 187 U. S. 165, 23 S. Ct. 67, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 122; Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, (1903) 190 U. S. 294, 23 S. Ct. 751, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1061; Plymouth Cordage Co. v. Smith, (1904) 194 U. S. 311, 24 S. Ct. 725, 48 U.S. (L. ed.) 992; In re Wood, (1908) 210 U. S. 246, 28 S. Ct. 621, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 1046; Elkus, Petitioner, (1910) 216 U. S. 115, 30 S. Ct. 377; Matter of Harris, (1911) 221 U. S. 274, 31 S. Ct. 557.

At what stage of the case. - Section 6 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 409, re-enacted in Judicial Code, sec. 239, set forth ante, p. 231, title JUDICIARY, in this Supplement, provides for the certification of questions or proposi-tions of law concerning which the Circuit Court of Appeals "desires the instruction" of the Supreme Court "for its proper decision," clearly implying that a question cannot be certified after the Circuit Court of Appeals has decided it. But the court may grant a rehearing after deciding a case or question, and then certify the question to the Supreme Court, as was done in Wall v. Cox, (1901) 181 U. S. 244, 21 S. Ct. 642, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 845, where, prior to granting a rehearing, the Circuit Court of Appeals had affirmed a decision of the District Court on a petition for revision.

Motion for certificate. — In Andrews v. National Foundry, etc., Works, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1897) 77 Fed. 774, 778, not a bankruptcy case, the court said questions are certified "only upon our own motion."

Frame and contents of certificate. - See cases cited 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 419, and the corresponding place in title JUDICIARY, vol. 2 of this Supplement. Supreme Court Rule 37, par. 1, 210 U. S. appendix 501, 20 S. Ct. xxii, requires that a certificate shall contain "a proper statement of the facts" on which the certified question or proposition of law arises. Facts implied in a question certified may, perhaps, aid the statement of facts. See remark of Justice White in Keppel r. Tiffin Sav. Bank, (1905) 197 U. S. 356, 25 S. Ct. 443, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 790.

Sec. 25 d.

Following a concise chronological statement of the fundamental facts the questions arising thereon are propounded, each in a numbered paragraph. See certificates used in bankruptcy cases and quoted in full in Wilson v. Nelson, (1901) 183 U. S. 191, 22 S. Ct. 74, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 147; Metcalf r. Barker, (1902) 187 U. S. 165, 23 S. Ct. 67, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 122; Randolph v. Scrugge, (1903) 190 U. S. 533, 23 S. Ct. 710, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1165; Elkus, Petitioner, (1910) 216 U. S. 115, 30 S. Ct. 377.

The questions should be numbered so that the Supreme Court, in its reported opinion, may refer to one as "the second question," for instance, as is commonly done, without quoting it again.

Captions distinguishing the "statement of facts" from the "questions certified" appear in the certificate copied in Metcalf v. Barker, (1902) 187 U. S. 165, 23 S. Ct. 67, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 122, and appear in other cases not in bankruptcy.

The Supreme Court will take judicial notice of the public statutes of every state in the Union and of every territory. Stat. Annot. xi, xii. But if the construction or effect of a state or territorial statute is necessarily involved in a certified question, good practice will suggest that the statute be not only accurately cited in the certificate, but copied therein. See, for example, the certificate in Evans v. Nellis, (1902) 187 U. S. 271, 23 S. Ct. 74, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 173, not a bankruptcy case.

An essential point not clearly expressed in a question may sufficiently appear in the accompanying statement of facts, as in White

v. Schloerb, (1900) 178 U. S. 542, 20 S. Ct. 1007, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1183.

Consideration and disposition of questions certified. - In disposing of the questions certified, the Supreme Court is confined to the facts stated in the certificate, and cannot consider allegations of other facts that are made in the briefs. Wall v. Cox, (1901) 181 U. S. 244, 21 S. Ct. 642, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 845.

A question may be regarded as too comprehensive and indefinite to be answered at all. Thus, in Wall v. Cox, (1901) 181 U. S. 244, 21 S. Ct. 642, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 845, a trustee in involuntary bankruptcy filed a plenary bill in equity in the federal District Court where he was appointed, to set aside an alleged fraudulent sale by the bankrupt and praying for an injunction and receiver. The court granted an injunction and appointed a temporary receiver. A petition for revision was thereupon filed in the Circuit Court of Appeals, which certified a question as follows: "Said District Court having adjudicated bankruptcy on account of an alleged fraudulent transfer of the bankrupt's property, and having appointed a receiver to hold the estate thus conveyed, had it, in said proceedings or in ancillary proceedings, instituted either by the original petitioners, the receiver of the court, the bankrupt's trustee, or of the court's own motion, jurisdiction to bring in the alleged fraudulent transferee of the property thus in the court's possession, and do full and complete justice in one litigation?" The Supreme Court declined to answer that question, and said: "It speaks generally of the District Court having appointed a receiver, but does not state, nor does the certificate show, that the receiver was appointed before the election of the trustee in bankruptcy. Beyond this, the question comprehends what the District Court may do, not merely on this bill by the trustee, but on proceedings, original or ancillary, by the petitioning creditors or by the receiver, or on the court's own motion."

If the certificate is entertained by the Supreme Court, and the questions therein propounded are considered, the court gives categorical answers, as in Elkus, Petitioner, (1910) 216 U. S. 115, 30 S. Ct. 377, and Matter of Harris, (1911) 221 U. S. 274, 31 S. Ct. 557, or gives its response in a formal statement, if the latter appears desirable, as in White v. Schloerb, (1900) 178 U. S. 542, 20 S. Ct. 1007, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1183. But 20 S. Ct. 1007, 44 Ct. S. (21 ct.) 1101. 221. it is not disposed to volunteer instruction not expressly sought. "Not going beyond what the decision of the case before us requires, we are of opinion that," etc., was the response of the court in White v. Schloerb, (1900) 178 U. S. 542, 20 S. Ct. 1007, 44 U. S.

In some cases answers to one or more questions obviously dispense with the necessity of answering the remaining questions, as in Keppel v. Tiffin Sav. Bank, (1905) 197 U. S. 356, 25 S. Ct. 443, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 790; 776; Metcalf v. Barker, (1902) 187 U. S. (L. ed.) 165, 23 S. Ct. 440, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 165, 23 S. Ct. 67, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 122; William C. S. (L. ed.) 124; William C. (L. ed. son v. Nelson, (1901) 183 U. S. 191, 22 S. Ct. 74, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 147.

The certificate will be "dismissed" if the case, or the stage of the case, was one where a certificate for instruction was not authorized by law, as in Bardes v. Hawarden First Nat. Bank, (1899) 175 U. S. 526, 20 S. Ct. 196, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 261. The mandate of the Supreme Court on the disposition of the certificate is sent down and filed in the Circuit Court of Appeals, and in subsequent proceedings that court adopts the advice received. See Toxaway Hotel Co. v. Smathers, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 1005.

Certiorari to bring up entire record.— See also infra, this note, III. Writs of Certiorari, and section 6 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 409, as annotated in title JUDICIARY, vol. 2 of this Supplement.
When questions are certified to the Supreme Court, which thereupon requires that the whole record and cause be sent up for its consideration, as it is authorized to do by section 6 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 409, now embodied in the Judicial Code, sec. 239, ante, p. 231, title JUDICIARY, in this Supplement, it issues a writ of certiorari for that purpose. Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, (1903) 190 U.S. 294, 23 S. Ct. 751, 47 U.S. (L. ed.) 1061. The certified questions then become functus officio, the Supreme Court decides the whole matter in controversy in the same manner as if it had been brought there for review by writ of error or appeal, and remands the case to the proper District Court for further proceedings. See, for example, the conclusion of the opinion in Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, (1903) 190 U. S. 294, 23 S. Ct. 751, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1061.

III. WEITS OF CERTIORARI.

Cases in Circuit Court of Appeals on appeal or error. - Decisions in cases nonappealable to the Supreme Court are reviewable by the Supreme Court on certiorari. Richardson v. Shaw, (1908) 209 U. S. 365, 28 S. Ct. 512, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 835, to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court on a directed verdict for defendants in a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover alleged preferences; J. B. Orcutt Co. r. Green, (1907) 204 U. S. 96, 27 S. Ct. 195, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 390, to review an order which reversed an order of the District Court directing certain claims to be filed as of the date when delivered to the trustee in bankruptcy; Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051, to review a decree which reversed on appeal a decree of the District Court and sustained the jurisdiction of the latter over a summary proceeding by the receiver in bankruptcy.

Gases in Circuit Court of Appeals "to superintend and revise."—A decision made by that class is reviewable on certiorari. Duryea Power Co. v. Sternbergh, (1910) 218 U. S. 299, 31 S. Ct. 25, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047; Holden v. Stratton, (1903) 191 U. S. 115, 24 S. Ct. 45, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 116. The following were cases of that description: Friday v. Hall, etc., Co., (1910) 216 U. S. 449, 80 S. Ct. 261, to review a decree which reversed a decree adjudicating a corporation a bankrupt in involuntary proceedings; Thomas v. Taggart, (1908) 209 U. S. 385, 28 S. Ct. 519, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 845, to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court directing trustees in bankruptcy to turn over certain certificates of stock and proceeds of the certificates to divers claimants; Hiscock v. Mertens, (1907) 205 U. S. 202, 27 S. Ct. 488, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 771, to review a judgment which reversed a decision of the District Court that certain life insurance policies of the bankrupt had no cash surrender value and ordering him to assign them to the trustee in bankruptcy, there being a conflict of opinion in lower federal courts as to the construction of the Bankruptcy Act, and a question of construction of a prior opinion of the Supreme Court; Baltimore First Nat. Bank Supreme Court; Battimore First Nat. Batti v. Staake, (1906) 202 U. S. 141, 26 S. Ct. 580, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 967, and McHarg v. Staake, (1906) 202 U. S. 150, 26 S. Ct. 584, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 971, to review an order affirming a decree of the District Court in favor of a trustee in bankruptcy subrogating him to the rights of certain creditors, and authorizing him to enforce their attachment liens as they might have done had not the bankruptcy proceedings intervened, there being a division of opinion in the Circuit Court of Appeals; Holden v. Stratton, (1905) 198 U. S. 202, 25 S. Ct. 656, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1018, to review a judgment which reversed an order of the District Court requiring a bankrupt to pay to the trustee in bankruptcy the cash surrender value of certain life insurance policies as a condition precedent to the exemption of the policies; Clarke v. Larremore, (1903) 188 U. S. 486, 23 S. Ct. 363, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 555, to review a judgment which affirmed an order of the District ment which affirmed an order of the District Court restraining a sheriff from paying an execution creditor the money derived from a sale on the execution, and directing the sheriff to pay the money to the trustee in bankruptcy of the execution debtor; Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, (1902) 184 U. S. 18, 22 S. Ct. 293, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 413, to raview a decree which reversed for want to review a decree which reversed for want of jurisdiction a decree of the District Court ordering a bankrupt's general assignee for the benefit of creditors to pay to the trustee in bankruptcy certain moneys dis-bursed by the assignee and certain moneys retained by him; Mueller v. Nugent, (1902) 184 U. S. 1, 22 S. Ct. 269, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 405, to review a decree which reversed a decree of the District Court directing a person's imprisonment until he should pay over certain money to a trustee in bankruptcy as he had been ordered to do; Bryan v. Bernheimer, (1901) 181 U. S. 188, 21 S. Ct. 557, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 814, to review a decision which reversed a decree of the District Court ordering the marshal to hold property that he had taken from the possession of a claimant, the Circuit Court of Appeals directing, by a divided court, that he be ordered to restore it to the claimant.

A case which was in the Circuit Court of Appeals on an appeal, but there treated as on a petition for revision, may be reviewed on certiorari. Holden v. Stratton, (1903) 191 U. S. 115, 24 S. Ct. 45, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 116; Bryan v. Bernheimer, (1901) 181 U. S. 192, 193, 21 S. Ct. 557, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 815, 816; Duryea Power Co. v. Sternbergh, (1910) 218 U.S. 299, 31 S. Ct. 25, 54 U.S.

Certiorari is the exclusive remedy where the case was not in the Circuit Court of Ap-Peals on an appeal or writ of error. Duryea Power Co. v. Sternbergh, (1910) 218 U. S. 299, 31 S. Ct. 25, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047, and Holden v. Stratton, (1903) 191 U. S. 115, 24 S. Ct. 45, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 116, where, for that reason, appeals to the Supreme Court were dismissed.

Before or after final judgment. - In no reported bankruptcy case has the Supreme Court been asked to grant a writ of certiorari prior to final judgment in the Circuit Court of Appeals. While it has power to issue the writ before final judgment, "it is a power which will be sparingly exercised, and only when the circumstances of the case satisfy us that the importance of the question involved, the necessity of avoiding conflict between two or more courts of appeal, or between courts of appeal and the courts of a state, or some matter affecting the interests of this nation in its internal or external relations, demands such exercise." ternal relations, demands such exercise."

Per Justice Brewer, in Forsyth v. Hammond, (1897) 166 U. S. 506, 514, 17 S. Ct. 665, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 1095. See also The Conqueror, (1897) 166 U. S. 114, 17 S. Ct. 510, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 937; The Three Friends, (1907) 166 U. S. 1, 17 S. Ct. 495, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 897; American Constr. Co. Lecksonville, etc. P. Co. (1893) 148 U. v. Jacksonville, etc., R. Co., (1893) 148 U. S. 384, 13 S. Ct. 758, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 485.

Amount in controversy. - Nowhere do the federal statutes prescribe any jurisdictional amount as a condition for the issuance of a writ of certiorari; and see Whitney v. Dick, (1906) 202 U. S. 132, 26 S. Ct. 584, 50 U.

When an appeal is dismissed for want of jurisdiction because certiorari is the exclusive remedy in the particular case, the ques-tion on the merits may not be deemed of sufficient importance to justify the granting of a writ of certiorari, even though a justice of the court had given the appellant a certificate under section 25d, subd. 2, of the Bankruptcy Act, supra, p. 641. Duryes Power Co. v. Sternbergh, (1910) 218 U. S. 299, 31 S. Ct. 25, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047, where the writ was denied. On the other hand, it may, after such a dismissal of an appeal, grant a writ of certiorari if application graft a writ of certificat in application therefor is made in time, as was done in Holden v. Stratton, (1903) 191 U. S. 115, 24 S. Ct. 45, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 116, (1904) 193 U. S. 672, 24 S. Ct. 854, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 841, (1905) 198 U. S. 202, 25 S. Ct. 656, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1018.

The proper petitioner for the writ of certiorari is the party who would be entitled to appeal or sue out a writ of error if the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals were reviewable on appeal or error; for example, the petitioning creditors in involuntary bankruptcy, as in Friday v. Hall, etc., Co., (1910) 216 U. S. 449, 30 S. Ct. 261; the trustee or trustees in bankruptcy, as in the following cases: Mueller v. Nugent, (1902) 184 U. S. 1, 22 S. Ct. 269, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 405; Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, Comingor, (1902) 184 U. S. 18, 22 S. Ct. 293, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 413; Hiscock v. Mertens, (1907) 205 U. S. 202, 27 S. Ct. 488, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 771; Richardson v. Shaw, (1908) 209 U. S. 365, 28 S. Ct. 512, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 835; Thomas v. Taggart, (1908) 209 U. S. 385, 28 S. Ct. 519, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 845; attachment or execution creditors, as in Clarke v. Larremore, (1903) 188 U. S. 486, 23 S. Ct. 363, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 555; Baltimore First Nat. Bank v. Staake, (1906) 202 U. S. 141, 26 S. Ct. 580, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 967; McHarg v. Staake, (1906) 202 U. S. 150, 26 S. Ct. 584, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 971; creditor claimants, as in J. B. Orcutt Co. v. Green, (1907) 204 U. S. 96, 27 S. Ct. 195, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 390; or adverse claimants of property, as in Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051 according to the circumstances of the particular case.

In Bryan v. Bernheimer, (1901) 181 U. S. 188, 21 S. Ct. 557, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 814, where a marshal, who, in behalf of petitioning creditors, had seized property in the hands of a claimant and had been ordered by the Circuit Court of Appeals to restore it to the claimant, the marshal, in behalf of those creditors, obtained the writ of certio-

Form of petition. — A petition for a writ of certiorari is quoted, substantially in full, in Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051, where the writ was granted.

Miscellaneous matters of practice relating to certiorari, see 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 420, et seq., and note at the corresponding place in the title JUDICIARY, vol. 2 of this Supplement.

A certified copy of the entire record of the case in the Circuit Court of Appeals must be furnished to the Supreme Court by the applicant for a writ of certiorari, as a part of the application. Supreme Court rule 37, subd. 3, 210 U. S. appendix 501, 29 S. Ct. xxii. See generally "Instructions by clerk of Supreme Court as to applications for writs of certiorari under Act of March 3, 1911, which follow rule 39 in current publications of Supreme Court rules, and are printed in 210 U. S. appendix 503, 29 S. Ct. xxiii.

An agreed statement of acts was used in Friday v. Hall, etc., Co., (1910) 216 U. S.

449, 30 S. Ct. 261.

A motion to quash the writ was filed in one case, after the writ had been granted, on the ground that the petitioner's remedy in the particular case was by appeal or writ of error instead of certiorari. Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 25 S. Ct. 693, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051, where consideration of the motion was postponed to the hearing on the merits, when the motion was denied.

Determination and remand.—See the last paragraph of II. Questions Certified, supra this note; Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1905) 198 U. S. 280, 288, 25 S. Ct. 693, 697, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1051; Exp. Chicago First Nat. Bank, (1907) 207 U. S. 61, 28 S. Ct. 23, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 103, reversing Ex p. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 742.

Sec. 26. Arbitration of Controversies. — a [Trustees may submit.] The trustee may, pursuant to the direction of the court, submit to arbitration any controversy arising in the settlement of the estate. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.

b [Selection of arbitrators.] Three arbitrators shall be chosen by mutual consent, or one by the trustee, one by the other party to the controversy, and the third by the two so chosen, or if they fail to agree in five days after their appointment the court shall appoint the third arbitrator. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.7

Selection of arbitrators. - It is an irregularity if one of the arbitrators is selected by the trustee, one by the other party, and the third agreed upon by the two contending parties. In re McLam, (D. C. Vt. 1899) 97 Fed. 922, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 245.

c [Findings.] The written finding of the arbitrators, or a majority of them. as to the issues presented, may be filed in court and shall have like force and effect as the verdict of a jury. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.]

The finding of arbitrators is subject to be set aside or adjudged upon by the court in like manner as a verdict would be. In re

McLam, (D. C. Vt. 1899) 97 Fed. 922, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 245.

SEC. 27. COMPROMISES. — a [When allowed.] The trustee may, with the approval of the court, compromise any controversy arising in the administration of the estate upon such terms as he may deem for the best interests of the estate. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 553.]

When compromise will be approved. ---Where litigation would result in probable and almost inevitable defeat, and both the trustee and his attorney, as well as the learned referee and a very large majority of the creditors, have united in virtually declaring the defense of a suit not wise or beneficial to the estate, the acceptance of a proposed compromise and settlement would seem to be proper. In re Kearney, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 184 Fed. 190.

Compromise must be for best interests of estate. - Section 27 does not authorize the bankruptcy court to confirm a proposed plan for the reorganization of a bankrupt corporation, not amounting to a composition, by which dissenting creditors will be compelled to accept stock in the new corporation to be placed in a voting trust for a term of years in exchange for their claims on the money and assets of the bankrupts, consenting, in addition to the creation and priority of a large mortgage, to provide a working capital for the new corporation. A construction which would justify such action on the part of the court would be an undue enlargement of the section. In re Northampton Portland Cement Co., (E. D. Pa. 1911) 185 Fed. 542. See also In re Geiselhart, (W. D. Pa. 1910) 181 Fed. 622.

Lienors and Creditors Protected. - In In re Adamo, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 151 Fed. 716, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181, it was said that "inasmuch as the attorney for the bankrupt, who has prosecuted the mechanic's lien action, has an attorney's lien for services therein, and inasmuch as the rights in that action cannot be adjudicated in the bankruptcy proceedings, except as the matter is brought into the bankruptcy court by consent, it is impossible to approve the com-promise and direct that the trustee be al-lowed to carry it out, unless all the parties interested waive any particular right to liti-gate their claims in the state court."

Bankrupt cannot sue to restrain compromise. - Where a bankrupt's title to property, in the hands of his wife, passes by the adjudication to his trustee, he has no capacity to sue, in a state court, to restrain the trustee from carrying out a proposed compromise of the claim against the wife. In re Kranich, (E. D. Pa. 1909) 174 Fed. 908, 23

Am. Bankr. Rep. 550.

Sec. 28. Designation of Newspapers. — a [To publish notices.] Courts of bankruptcy shall by order designate a newspaper published within their respective territorial districts, and in the county in which the bankrupt resides or the major part of his property is situated, in which notices required to be published by this Act and orders which the court may direct to be published shall be inserted. Any court may in a particular case, for the convenience of parties in interest, designate some additional newspaper in which notices and orders in such case shall be published. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 554.]

Sec. 29. Offenses. — a [Misappropriating property — secreting or destroying documents.] A person shall be punished, by imprisonment for a period not to exceed five years, upon conviction of the offense of having knowingly and fraudulently appropriated to his own use, embezzled, spent, or unlawfully transferred any property or secreted or destroyed any document belonging to a bankrupt estate which came into his charge as trustee. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 554.]

Cross-reference: As to

Commission of offense as an objection to discharge, see section 14b (1), supra, p. 557.

Suspicious circumstances are not enough to show such a fraudulent transfer as is meant by section 29a. In re Howard, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 180 Fed. 399.

Defendant may refuse to answer incriminating questions. - A trustee in bankruptcy, who has been arrested under section 29a, charged with a misappropriation of the funds of the estate, on an examination before the referee, pending such charge, with reference to the bankrupt estate, has the constitutional right to refuse to answer a question asked him, on the ground that his answer may tend to incriminate him. In re Smith, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 112 Fed. 509, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213.

Release on habeas corpus. - A bankrupt, arrested and held on a capies in an action to recover from him the value of property which it is alleged he embezzled and fraudulently converted to his own use, is entitled to release on a writ of habeas corpus, where no facts are pleaded which show such em-bezzlement to have been committed while he was acting in a fiduciary capacity, so as to prevent a discharge in bankruptcy from being a release of the debt under section 17a (4). Barrett v. Prince, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 302, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64.

- b [Punishment.] A person shall be punished, by imprisonment for a period not to exceed two years, upon conviction of the offense of having knowingly and fraudulently [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 554.]
- (1) [Concealing property.] concealed while a bankrupt, or after his discharge, from his trustee any of the property belonging to his estate in bankruptey; or [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 554.]

Concealment of assets.—One who, while a bankrupt, or after his discharge, knowingly or fraudulently conceals from his trustee any of the property belonging to his estate in bankruptcy, is guilty of an offense under section 29b (1). In re Ablowich, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 99 Fed. 81; In re Welch, (S. D. Ohio 1899) 100 Fed. 65; In re Mendelsohn, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 102 Fed. 119; In re Quackenbush, (N. D. N. Rep. 360; Field v. U. S. (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 6, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507; U. S. v. Cohn, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 142 Fed. 983, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357; In re Jacobs, (D. C. Ore. 1906) 147 Fed. 797, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470; Cohen v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 651, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 8, distinguishing Field v. U. S., (8th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 6, 69 C. C. A. 568; Johnson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 30, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 2724; Alkon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 30, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 489; Kern v. U. S., (C. C. Rep. 520.

Effect of disclosure after arrest.—The offense of concealment of assets by a bankrupt, when once committed, cannot be retrieved by the bankrupt's atonement, after extradition, by disclosing to the trustee the assets concealed. Kern v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 169 Fed. 617, 22 Am. Bankr.

Mere omission of property from schedule insufficient.—The offense of concealing property by a bankrupt from his trustee consists of a continuous concealment of the property from the trustee during the whole course of the bankruptey proceedings, or beyond, and is therefore not necessarily consummated by an omission of the property from the schedules. Johnson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 30, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 724; U. S. v. Levinson, (D. C. S. C. 1904) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29.

Actual bankruptcy essential.—As the statute provides for concealment "while a bankrupt, or after his discharge," it has been held that the concealment must have actually taken place, or continued, while there is a person in bankruptcy. Wayne Knitting Mills v. Nugent, (D. C. Ky. 1900) 104 Fed. 530, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747; Field v. U. S. (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 6, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507; In re Gilroy, (S. D. N. Rep. 613.

The present or past bankruptcy of the person accused is an indispensable element of the offense denounced by the statute. Field v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 137

Fed. 6, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507.

Trustee must be entitled to concealed property. — It is necessary to show that the concealment was of property to which the trustee is entitled, and it must have been made knowingly and fraudulently by the bank-rupts while such; that is, after they were adjudicated bankrupts. In re Jacobs. (D. C. Ore. 1906) 147 Fed. 797, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470.

Must have been an adjudication. — A charge against a bankrupt of concealing from his trustee property belonging to the estate cannot be sustained without a bankruptzy adjudication, even though the proof establishes a flagrant concealment of the property from the trustee de facta. Gilbertson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 672, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32.

Necessity of appointment of trustee. — In In re Adama, (N. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 599, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 613, it was held that a person cannot be convicted of an offense, and imprisoned, for fraudulently concealing, while a bankrupt, property "from his estate in bankruptcy." Before this offense can be committed there must be a trustee.

But see U. S. v. Goldstein, (W. D. Va. 1904) 132 Fed. 789, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 755, wherein it was held that the concealment of property by a voluntary bankrupt after his adjudication, although before the appointment of a trustee, is a concealment from the trustee, which, if knowingly and fraudulently done, constitutes a criminal offense.

Knowledge of trustee's appointment immaterial.— The offense of concealment of goods may be completed by a physical act, intended or calculated to prevent a trustee when appointed from securing the goods, and the character of the offense is in no way dependent upon knowledge that a particular person is clothed with legal authority. U. S. v. Comstock, (C. C. R. I. 1908) 161 Fed.

644, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520.

Continuing concealments.—It is not necessary, in order to constitute the offense of unlawfully concealing assets, that the original concealment actually occur during bankruptcy, providing that it continue thereafter; and it has been held that the concealment will be none the less criminal where, although it was effected prior to bankruptcy, the property or its proceeds are concealed by the bankrupt from his trustee after his appointment. U. S. v. Goldstein, (W. D. Va. 1904) 132 Fed. 789, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 755; U. S. v. Cohn, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 142 Fed. 983, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357;

Johnson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 30, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 724; U. S. v. Young, etc., Co., (D. C. R. I. 1909) 170 Fed. 110, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484; U. S. v. Stern, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 186 Fed. 854.

The word "conocaled," employed in this

The word "concealed," employed in this connection, is sufficiently elastic in its signification to comprise a "continuing concealment." Thus, if a bankrupt has disposed of property belonging to him, prior to the adjudication, and has the proceeds thereof in his possession or within his authority to use and appropriate subsequently, there is a continuing concealment for which he is amenable to the law, although the fact of concealment, by intent and purpose, took place while he was not a bankrupt. In re Jacobs, (D. C. Ore. 1906) 147 Fed. 797, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470.

Concealment by corporation.—A bankrupt corporation may be guilty of concealing assets, and an officer thereof may be indicted therefor if he participated therein. U. S. v. Freed, (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 179 Fed. 236.

Conspiracy to conceal corporation assets. — Individuals may be guilty of a conspiracy which includes in its purpose a fraudulent concealment of the assets of a bankrupt corporation, even if the corporation could not be charged as a conspirator. U. S. r. Young, etc., Co., (D. C. R. I. 1909) 170 Fed. 110, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484. And see to the same effect Cohen v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 651, distinguishing Field v. U. S., (8th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 6, 69 C. C. A. 568.

But it has also been held that section 29b (1) must be strictly construed, and that, so construed, it does not include concealments by the officers of a corporation which has been declared bankrupt. U. S. v. Lake, (E. D. Ark. 1904) 129 Fed. 499, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270; Field v. U. S., (8th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 6, 69 C. C. A. 568, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507.

So also it has been held that since the Act does not make it a criminal offense for a person not a bankrupt to conceal the bankrupt's property from the trustee, an indictment charging that defendants, who were in no manner officially connected either as directors or stockholders with a bankrupt corporation, conspired to conceal assets of the corporation from the trustee in bankruptcy, and in pursuance of such conspiracy they removed the corporation's stock of goods from its place of business and caused the same to be sold and concealed the proceeds, did not state an offense. U. S. v. Waldman, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 524.

Conspiracy to conceal. — An indictment will lie under Rev. Stat., sec. 5440, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 247, now Cr. Code, sec. 37, 1909 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot. 415, making it an offense to conspire to commit any offense against the United States, for conspiracy to conceal from a trustee in bankruptcy property belonging to the estate, in violation of section 29b (1). U. S. v. Cohn. (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 142 Fed. 983, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 651, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 8; U. S. v. Young, etc., Co., (C. C. R. I. 1909) 170 Fed. 110, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484; U. S. v. Stern, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 186 Fed. 854; Radin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 189 Fed. 568.

And such conspiracy may be entered into prior to the bankruptcy, in contemplation thereof; and defendants may be convicted although it is not alleged nor proved that a trustee was actually appointed, where the evidence warrants a finding that the conspiracy was so successfully carried out that, when the bankruptcy proceedings were instituted, the bankrupt's property had all been removed beyond the jurisdiction of the court, so that the appointment of a trustee would have been a useless formality. Radin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 189 Fed. 568.

Conspiracy prior to bankruptcy as continuing concealment.—A conspiracy by bankrupts to conceal their property from their trustee, formed within thirty days of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy and followed by actual concealment of the property, is an offense which continues to the date of the refusal to turn over the property to the trustee on his election; and an indictment for conspiracy under Rev. Stat., sec. 5440, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 247, now Cr. Code, sec. 37, 1909 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot. 415, properly charges the commission of the offense as of such date. U. S. v. Stern, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 186 Fed. 854

Criminal intent. — In order to constitute an offense under section 29b (1), the concealment must have been knowingly and fraudulently made; therefore it has been held that there can be no conviction of such offense where the concealment complained of was made in good faith, unintentionally, or because of ignorance or mistake. In re Adams, (N. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 72, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696; U. S. v. Lowenstein, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 126 Fed. 884, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 134; U. S. v. Levinson, (D. C. S. C. 1904) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29.

Omission to schedule property.—The mere omission, through ignorance or otherwise, to turn over property, or to put it in the schedule, is not a criminal offense; for it may happen that bankrupts may innocently omit from their schedules property in which they may have an interest, the character of which is so indefinite that they do not consider it necessary to mention it, or through sheer neglect they may fail to turn over property which they have overlooked. The essence of the criminal offense is that it should be committed knowingly and fraudulently, and the jury must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that any property alleged to have been concealed was knowingly and fraudulently concealed. Johnson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 30, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 724; U. S. v. Levinson, (D. C. S. C. 1904) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29.

But where a bankrupt's schedule is indefinite, and the bankrupt, by active endeavor, keeps valuable assets in hiding, the fact that the title to all of his property passes to the trustee by operation of law is no defense to a prosecution for concealing assets, since the schedules point out to the trustee only such assets as the bankrupt actually discovered to him, or as the trustee would be likely to discover. Kern v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 169 Fed. 617, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 223.

Use of concealed property to pay debts.— The fact that a bankrupt used a part of the proceeds of property concealed from his trustee in the payment of debts does not negative a fraudulent intent in such concealment. Corenman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911)

Advice of counsel is ineffective as a defense when it does not go so far as to cover the actual concealment; thus it has been held, on the prosecution of a bankrupt for concealing money from his trustee, that testimony offered to show that the bankrupt's attorney advised him to continue his business until the usual time for closing on the day when the petition was filed and the adjudication made is immaterial, since, if true, and the business was continued in good faith and without criminal intent, and the money was received for goods sold during that time, such facts would give the defend-ant no right to withhold it from his trustee. McNiel v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1907) 150 Fed. 82, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19.

Evidence - Schedules not admissible .the prosecution of a bankrupt for concealing property from his trustee, the schedules filed by him are not admissible in evidence against him, being within the provision of Rev. Stat., sec. 860, 3 Fed. Stat. Annot. 5, that no pleading of a party, nor any discovery or evidence obtained from a party or witness by means of a judicial proceeding, shall be given in evidence in any criminal proceeding. Johnson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 30, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 724; Cohen v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 715, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 333.

But it has been held that R. S. sec. 860, 3 Fed. Stat. Annot. 5, applies only to prosecutions in the federal courts, and that in a prosecution under a state statute the bankrupt's schedule is competent evidence as an admission. Com. v. Ensign, (1909) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 797, 40 Pa. Super. Ct. 157.

Examination under section 7a (9). — On the trial of a bankrupt for a criminal offense, it was held to be error to permit the prosecuting attorney, on the cross-examination of defendant as a witness, to read from a copy of his examination before the referee in the bankruptcy proceedings, under section 7a (9), and to interrogate him thereon for the purpose of impeachment. Jacobs v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 694, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550. And see the annotation under section 7a (9).

Bankrupt's books of account. - On the trial of an involuntary bankrupt for conspiracy to conceal property from his trustee, it was held not to be error to admit in evidence, over defendant's objection and claim of privilege, his books of account which had been taken possession of by a receiver appointed by the bankruptcy court. Kerrch v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 366, supra, p. 520.

Proof of concealment of any part of property sufficient. — The government, to war-rant a conviction, need not prove the con-cealment of every article of property, or of every cent of the cash, but proof of the concealment of any part of the property or the cash warrants a conviction. U. S. v. Stern, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 186 Fed. 854.

Value of stock before and after filing periods.

tition. - On the trial of a bankrupt, who was a dealer in jewelry, and was charged with the concealment of a portion thereof from his trustee, it was held not be error to admit evidence of the amount and value of defendant's stock in trade a few days prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and also a short time afterward, where the jury were properly instructed and cautioned in reference to such testimony. Jacobs v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 694, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550.

Failure to give trustee information as to property. - On the trial of a bankrupt charged with concealment of property from his trustee, testimony of the trustee is admissible to show that he was not informed by the defendant that property belonging to him was stored in places where that which was charged to have been concealed was found by the trustee. Johnson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 581, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 359, explaining Jacobs v. U. S., (1st Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 694, 88 C. C. A. 554, and Johnson v. U. S., (1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 30, 89 C. C. A. 508.

In order to prove a continuous conceal-ment of property by a bankrupt from his trustee, it is not necessary to take up each moment of the bankrupt's life while the proceedings lasted, and prove what he did, as a means of proving what he did not; it being sufficient to introduce secondary evidence of the property disclosed by the bankrupt, he being entitled at his election to introduce his schedules to show that the property claimed to have been omitted was in fact included, as a matter of defense. Johnson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 30, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 724.

Circumstantial evidence is competent as in other cases; and where such evidence warrants the jury in finding beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused was guilty, a judgment on the verdict should not be arrested. U. S. v. Stern, (E. D. Pa. 1911)

186 Fed. 854. Indictment - Alleging that property concealed was part of estate. - It has been held that an indictment which charges that a bankrupt unlawfully, knowingly, wilfully, and fraudulently concealed from his trustee certrain property belonging to his estate in bank-ruptcy, carries with it a sufficient averment of his knowledge that such property belonged to his estate. McNiel v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1907) 150 Fed. 82, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19. See also U. S. v. Comstock, (C. C. R. I. 1908) 161 Fed. 644, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520.

The mode of the alleged concealment is entirely immaterial, and need not be set forth in the indictment. U. S. v. Comstock, (C. C. R. I. 1908) 161 Fed. 644, 20 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 520.

Alleging appointment of trustee. - In an indictment against a bankrupt and others for conspiracy to conceal assets from the trustee in bankruptcy, an averment that a person named was "duly" appointed trustee is sufficient; the matter of appointment being an incidental matter only, and not a vital element of the crime. Kerrch v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 366, 22

Am. Bankr. Rep. 544.
Knowledge of trustee's appointment. — An indictment under section 295 need not charge that the defendant bankrupt, at the time of the alleged concealment of his property, knew that a trustee had been appointed, or knew the name of the trustee. U. S. v. Comstock), (C. C. R. I. 1908) 161 Fed. 644, 20

Am. Bankr. Rep. 520.

Time of commission of offense in continuing concealments. — A concealment by a bankrupt from a trustee after his appointment of any property or cash which the bank-rupt has in his possession, and a failure to deliver it over to him on demand, is an offense as of any date the concealment continues; and an indictment charging the offense properly charges its commission as of the date of the refusal to turn over the property to the trustee. U. S. v. Stern, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 186 Fed. 854.

An indicament for conspiracy that one of the conspirators should purchase goods and afterwards go into bankruptcy, and that the goods should be concealed by the other, in violation of section 29b (1), is not insufficient because it avers that the conspiracy was formed and the goods were to be concealed prior to the bankruptcy, where it also avers that it was the intention to continue the concealment thereafter. Alkon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 810, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 489.

An indictment for conspiracy to conceal assets of a corporation in contemplation of bankruptcy is not objectionable because there was no existing bankruptey when the con-spiracy was originated. U. S. v. Young, etc., Co., (C. C. R. I. 1909) 170 Fed. 110, 22 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 484.

But an indictment against a bankrupt and others, charging a conspiracy to conceal property of the bankrupt from his trustee in violation of the Bankruptcy Act, does not charge an offense under Rev. Stat., sec. 5440, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 247, where it shows that the conspiracy was formed and the property removed and concealed by the defendants prior to the bankruptcy, but does not aver that such concealment was in contemplation of bankruptcy, or that any overt act was committed after the bankruptcy, although it charges a further conspiracy thereafter to continue the concealment. U. S. v. Grodson, (N. D. Ill. 1998) 164 Fed. 157, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 68.

And where an indictment for conspiracy to conceal the assets of a bankrupt corporation from its trustees alleged, as the overt act, that defendants removed and sold the bankrupt's stock of goods and concealed the proceeds from the bankrupt's receiver and trustee, but did not allege any of the circumstances under which the goods were removed, so as to show that such removal was illegal, and not under legal process, it was held to be insufficient. U. S. v. Waldman, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 524.

(2) [False oaths or accounts.] made a false oath or account in, or in relation to, any proceeding in bankruptcy; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 554.]

False oath. — Knowingly and fraudulently making a false oath or account in, or in relation to, any proceeding in bankruptcy, constitutes a punishable offense under secconstitutes a punishable offense under section 296 (2). Kentucky Nat. Bank v. Carley, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 127 Fed. 686, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 119; In. re Conroy, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 134 Fed. 764, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249; Edelstein v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 636, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649; Troeder v. Lorsch, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 710, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723; U. S. v. Liberman, (E. D. N. Y. 1910) 176
Fed. 161, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734; U. S. v.
Freed, (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 179 Fed. 236.
The term "false oath" is not limited to proceedings under section 7a (9), nor to false swearing in connection with the bankrupt's schedules, but is related to any proceeding in bankruptcy, including the examination of the bankrupt before a referee on an investigation of specifications filed against his discharge. Edelstein v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 636, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649.

False testimony given by a bankrupt on his examination in respect to his ownership of, or interest in, property conveyed to his wife some years before the bankruptcy pro-ceedings, constitutes the making of a false oath in relation to a proceeding in bank-ruptcy. In re Conroy, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 134 Fed. 764, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249.

Oath must be corruptly false. — The term "false oath" means a corruptly false oath, such as would subject the affiant to a prosecution for perjury. In re Gilpin, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 160 Fed. 171, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 374.

Objection that examination was unauthorized is unavailable. - If the bankrupt or a creditor appears prior to the first meeting of creditors, and at an examination before a special referee, special commissioner, or special master, consents to be sworn, and does not refuse to testify, he cannot then object to the authority of the court in requiring his examination. U. S. v. Liberman, (E. D. N. Y. 1910) 176 Fed. 161, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734.

Indictment - Alleging false oath to schodules. - Where an indictment against the president of a bankrupt corporation, for making a false oath to its schedules, alleged that the corporation was adjudged a bank-rupt; that defendant, as its president, in compliance with the bankruptcy law, did file in the bankruptcy proceeding with the referee the schedules required by law, subscribed and sworn to by him as president, etc.; that defendant stated on his oath that such schedules contained a true and complete statement of all the corporation's property; and that the statement that the bankrupt corporation had then on hand only a certain sum, which was all the money the corporation then and there had, was false, it was held that such indictment followed the strict language of the statute, and sufficiently showed the materiality of the false statement, without an express averment thereof. U. S. v. Lake, (E. D. Ark. 1904) 129 Fed. 499, 12 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 270. In an indictment against the president of a bankrupt corporation for making a false oath to its schedules, a description of the assets charged to have been fraudulently and knowingly omitted from such schedules as "one hundred and fifty thousand dollars in lawful money of the United States" was held to be sufficiently specific. U. S. v. Lake, (E. D. Ark. 1904) 129 Fed. 499, 12 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 270.

But an indictment charging the accused with having committed perjury by falsely omitting assets from his sworn schedule in bankruptcy, which alleges that he knew his schedule was false, and that he knew he was the owner of a specified sum of money in addition to what was mentioned in his schedule, is fatally defective, unless it also charges directly that he had other property than that described in his schedule. Bartlett v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1901) 106 Fed. 884,5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 678.

Sec. 29 b (5).

An indictment charging conspiracy to give false oaths in a bankruptcy proceeding, which failed to allege what false oaths were to be given, or what the subject of the oaths was, with such reasonable particularity as would advise defendant of the charge against him, was held to be insufficient. U.S. v. Waldman, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 524.

Alleging false testimony. — It is sufficient that an indictment for perjury allege that defendant's testimony was false, and that he believed it to be false, without alleging the actual facts. U. S. v. Freed, (S. D. N. Y.

1910) 179 Fed. 236.

Evidence — Testimony given under section 7a (9) admissible. — The immunity provided by section 7a (9) does not protect the bankrupt from the use of testimony, given in pur-suance thereof, upon the trial of an indict-ment for perjury committed by the making of a false oath in, and in relation to, the bank-ruptcy proceedings. U. S. v. Brod, (N. D. Tuptey proceedings. U. S. v. Brud, (M. D. Ga. 1910) 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740, following Edelstein v. U. S., (8th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 636, 79 C. C. A. 328, 9 L. R. A. N. S. 236, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649; Wechsler v. U. S., (2d Cir. 1907) 158 Fed. 579, 86 C. C. A. 37, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

But see U. S. v. Simon, (W. D. Wash. 1906) 146 Fed. 89, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41, wherein it was held that the provisions of section 7s (9) prevented a prosecution for perjury for false swearing, in an examina-tion thereunder in support of a claim against the estate.

- (3) [False claims.] presented under oath any false claim for proof against the estate of a bankrupt, or used any such claim in composition personally or by agent, proxy, or attorney, or as agent, proxy, or attorney; or (1898) 30 Stat. L. 554.]
- (4) [Receiving property from bankrupt.] received any material amount of property from a bankrupt after the filing of the petition, with intent to defeat this Act; or  $\lceil (1898) \ 30 \ Stat. \ L. 554. \rceil$

Receiving property with intent to defeat the Bankruptcy Act. — It is an offense under the bankruptcy law, punishable by im-prisonment for a period not exceeding two years, knowingly and fraudulently to receive any material amount of property from a bankrupt, after the filing of a petition, with intent to defeat the Act. Knapp. etc., Co. v. Drew, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1998) 160 Fed. 413, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; Clay r. Waters, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 385.

Participants in forbidden acts. — Section

nection with section la (19), in which it is distinctly provided that the word "persons" "when used with reference to the commission of acts which are herein forbidden shall include persons who are participants in the forbidden acts." The use of the word "forbidden" makes this phraseology peculiarly applicable to such criminal provisions as are embraced in section 29b (4). Matter of Luftig, (D. C. Mass. 1905) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773. See also U. S. v. Young, etc., Co., (C. C. R. I. 1909) 170 Fed. 110, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Force and effect of law. — It has been held that the rules and forms prescribed by the Supreme Court, under and by virtue of the Bankruptcy Act, and for its administration, have the force and effect of law. Gerber, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed.

Equivalent to interpretation. — The rules, forms, and orders adopted by the Supreme Court amount to an interpretation or construction of the law in that respect. Matter of McClintock, (N. D. Ohio 1904) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 606.

Forms prescribed should be followed. -The simple forms of bankruptcy practice found in the general orders and forms prescribed by the Supreme Court should be followed, and there should be no unnecessary departures by falling into a habit of using the more costly, prolix, and less suitable forms of special pleadings and procedure used in chancery cases. Gage v. Bell, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 124 Fed. 371, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

Necessary alterations allowable. — The bankruptcy forms were not designed to effect any change in the law. They are "forms," and nothing more, and they are to be observed and used with such alterations as may be necessary to suit the circumstances of any particular case. Burke v. SEC. 31. COMPUTATION OF TIME. — a Whenever time is enumerated by days in this Act, or in any proceeding in bankruptcy, the number of days shall be computed by excluding the first and including the last, unless the last fall on a Sunday or holiday, in which event the day last included shall be the next day thereafter which is not a Sunday or a legal holiday. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 554. ]

Computation of time. — In accordance with section 31 time shall be computed by excluding the first day and including the last. Day v. Beck, etc., Hardware Co., (C. C. Computation of time by months or years. -While the first six words of section 31 would seem to indicate that it was not intended to apply where the time is enumerated by months or years, the following words, "or in any proceeding in bankruptcy," make it applicable to any proceeding in bankruptcy where the number of days is material. In re Holmes, (D. C. Vt. 1908) 165 Fed. 225, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 339.

Sec. 32. Transfer of Cases. — a In the event petitions are filed against the same person, or against different members of a partnership, in different courts of bankruptcy each of which has jurisdiction, the cases shall be transferred, by order of the courts relinquishing jurisdiction, to and be consolidated by the one of such courts which can proceed with the same for the greatest convenience of parties in interest. The provision of the general orders in bankruptcy, No. 27, which requires a referee, on the filing of a petition for the review of an order made by him, to certify a summary of the evidence relating thereto to the judge, should be observed; but where it appears from the referee's certificate that, instead of making a summary, he has returned all the evidence taken, and the matter has been determined by the judge without any motion having been made to require the evidence to be summarized, the proceeding for review will not be invalidated, where it involves substantial matters, because the rule was not observed by the referee. Time for review. — There is no provision of the Bankruptcy Act, or of the general orders in bankruptcy, fixing the time within which a petition for the review of an order of a referee must be filed; and it has been quite generally held that, in the absence of a rule of court on the subject, the time within which such a petition may be entertained is discretionary, subject only to the limitation that it must be filed within a reasonable time in view of the general purpose of the act to expedite the proceedings. In re Smith, (W. D. Tex. 1899) 93 Fed. 791, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190; In re Schiller, (W. D. Va. 1899) 96 Fed. 400, 2 Am. Weight dependent on character of evidence.

Certifying questions to District Court.—
Specific questions arising in proceedings before a referee in bankruptcy, and upon which the opinion of the district judge is desired, may and should be presented on the certificate of the referee; or, in the case of orders entered, on petition for review, and not in the form of an assignment of errors. Authority with respect to possession and release of property - Referee may appoint receivers. - A referee has authority to exercise the powers of a judge in the taking pos-session of, and releasing, the bankrupt's property, on the issuance of a certificate by the clerk showing the absence of the judge from the district, or his inability to act. In accordance with this provision it has been held that the referee may appoint receivers in bankruptcy for the purpose of taking possession of the assets of the estate. In re Styer, (E. D. The failure to turn over property, when ordered to do so by the referee in a proper case, constitutes a contempt, and is punishable as such. See the annotation under section 41a (1), infra, p. 668.

A partner may be ordered to turn over to the firm's trustee in bankruptcy any partnership assets traced into his hands. Shaffer, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 185 Fed. 549.

Where a third party claims an interest in property which was in the possession of a bankrupt at the time of the bankruptcy and passed into that of his trustee, the referee may by a summary proceeding require such third party to appear in the bankruptcy court, and present his claim, and may adjudicate the rights of the parties in respect thereof. Mound Mines Co. v. Hawthorne, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 173 Fed. 882, 23 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 242.

Where, on a claim of a bankrupt's trustee to possession of property in the possession of another, the referee finds that the latter's claim is in good faith and probably real, it should then be determined by a plenary suit; but if he finds that the claim is without any actual merit or legal foundation, he should regard the property as subject to the bank-ruptcy court's jurisdiction as property of the bankrupt, and require its surrender to the trustee. In re Holbrook Shoe, etc., Co., (D. C. Mont. 1908) 165 Fed. 973, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511. See also the annotation under section 23b as to jurisdiction and procedure with respect to adverse claimants.

The fact that respondent was under indictment, charged with a violation of section 29, for having received and retained money for the purpose of defeating the operation of the bankruptcy law, furnishes no excuse for his failing to make a full disclosure of the facts. in response to the referee's order to show cause. Wayne Knitting Mills v. Nugent, (D. C. Ky. 1900) 104 Fed. 530, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747.

Proceedings to require a bankrupt to pay over money or surrender property to trustee, should ordinarily be by motion for a rule on him to show cause, and should be justified by the facts brought out in the examination of himself and other witnesses in the regular course of the proceedings. Unless under exceptional circumstances, where it is necessary to bring before the court facts not appearing in the examination, or new parties, a formal petition and pleadings as in a suit in equity are unnecessary, and an expense which should not be permitted by the court; nor should the court or referee entertain such proceedings at all unless there is sufficient in the evidence, taken in the regular course of the proceedings, to warrant the order sought prima facie. In re Adler, (W. D. Tenn. 1904) 129 Fed. 502, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19.

Order to show cause. — A referee in bankruptcy has power in the first instance to enter an order to show cause why a person should not be required to pay over, to the trustee in bankruptcy, money in his hands belonging to the bankrupt's estate; and, upon the hearing, to enter an order directing the payment of such money by a certain date. Mueller v. Nugent, (1902) 184 U. S. 1, 22 S. Ct. 269, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 405.

Petition for order. - An order requiring a bankrupt to turn over money or property to his trustee should be made only after a hearing on a petition therefor, making definite averments on the subject and offering a definite issue, upon which both parties may adduce evidence. In re Ruos, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 164 Fed. 749, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257.

Preponderance of evidence sufficient .. The issue whether an order should be made requiring a bankrupt to turn over money or property to the trustee is purely of a civil character determinable on a preponderance of the evidence. In re Alphin, etc., Cotton Co., (E. D. Ark. 1905) 134 Fed. 477, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194; In re Cole, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 392, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302.

Competency of evidence. — Testimony of a person, other than the bankrupt, or, in case of a corporation, of a person not an officer or a stockholder of such corporation, taken generally and not directed to any defined issue, is not admissible in subsequent proceedings against the bankrupt, or, in case of a corporation, against its officers, to compel a surrender of money or property of the estate, under penalty of punishment for contempt. In re Alphin, etc., Cotton Co., (E. D. Ark. 1904) 131 Fed. 824, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653.

Property must be part of bankrupt estate. - To justify an order directing money or other property to be turned over to the trustee, it must appear that such money or other property is a part of the assets of the estate in bankruptcy. ing paragraph.

Possession or control necessary. — A referee can only order the turning of assets to the trustee where it clearly appears that such assets are in the possession, or within the control, of the bankrupt, and rightfully constitute a part of his estate in bankruptcy. Possession or control necessary when order is made. — A finding by a referee that at the time of his bankruptcy a bankrupt had in his possession or under his control money or property of his estate which he withheld from his trustee, does not warrant an order, seven years afterward, requiring him to turn the same over to his trustee; it not being shown that he is then able to comply with such order. In re Ruos, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 164 Fed. 749, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257. Evidence based on comparative value of stock at different times. — To justify an order requiring a bankrupt to turn over property, the proof that he has withheld property should be clear; and, where it depends upon the comparative estimates of the value of a stock of goods at different times, the discrepancy must be great and such as cannot be otherwise explained. In re Reese, (M. D. Pa. 1909) 170 Fed. 986, 22 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 521.

Property out of possession and control. -A court of bankruptcy, or a referee, is without power to order a bankrupt to pay over to his trustee money collected from his debtors after he had knowledge of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy against him by creditors, where such money has since passed into the possession of others, and is not under the bankrupt's control. American Trust Co. v. Wallis, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 464, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360.

The treasurer of a bankrupt corporation cannot be required, by a summary order, to turn over to the trustee money which he in fact paid out in settlement of debts of the corporation between the filing of the petition and the adjudication, even though such payments were not justified and resulted in preferences to the creditors receiving the same. In re Laplume Condensed Milk Co., (M. D. Pa. 1906) 145 Fed. 1013, 16 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 729.

A proceeding to compel the bankrupt to turn over property which was concealed for him or by him may be based upon an examination of the bankrupt's agent as to what disposition he made of the bankrupt's property. But until the property or its proceeds have been traced through the hands of the bankrupt, and until he avoids responsibility by showing that his control over it had terminated because it had reached the possession of his agent and been converted or stolen, and was hence out of his own control, the trustee is not in a position to demand that the agent be compelled to make good or account for the bankrupt's property, unless the property or the proceeds be specifically shown to be in his hands. In re Fogelman, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 755.

Ability to comply with order necessary. In view of the fact that the failure of a bankrupt to obey an order to turn over money or property to his trustee is punishable by imprisonment for contempt, such an order should only be made on the clearest proof of his present ability to comply with it, since contempt proceedings cannot be invoked as a means of coercing the payment of debts, or to punish a bankrupt for transferring his property with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors. In re Dickens, (S. D. Ala. 1909) 175 Fed. 808, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 660, following Boyd v. Glucklich, (8th Cir. 1902) 116 Fed. 139, 53 C. C. A. 459; Samel v. Dodd, (5th Cir. 1906) 142 Fed. 68, 73 C. C. A. 254; In re Mize, (N. D. Ala. 1909) 172 Fed. 946. Presumption of possession or control.—It is well settled that where assets of the estate in bankruptcy have been traced to the recent possession or control of the bankrupt, they will be presumed to have remained in his possession or under his control until their disposition or disappearance has been satisfactorily accounted for. Mueller v. Nugent, (1902) 184 U. S. 1, 22 S. Ct. 269, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 405; U. S. 1, 22 S. Ct. 209, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 405; Wayne Knitting Mills v. Nugent, (D. C. Ky. 1900) 104 Fed. 530, 4 Am. Bankr. Effect of admission. — Where a bankrupt admits having had money or property a short time before his bankruptcy, which is not shown by his schedules, it is incumbent upon him to account clearly for the same to the satisfaction of the court; otherwise, he must be held still to have it in his possession, and to be able to turn it over to his trustee. In re De Gottardi, (S. D. Cal. 1902) 114 Fed. 328, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

Denial of possession or control. - The denial of the bankrupt that he has money or other property in his possession, or under his control, is not conclusive, but is entitled to its due weight in connection with the other evidence and circumstances shown. Jurisdiction with respect to sales of prop-

Jurisdiction with respect to sales of property. - A referee to whom a bankruptcy case has been referred generally has jurisdiction, on the petition of the trustee, to enjoin the sale of the property of the bankrupt by one of a number of lienholders, to order its sale free of incumbrances, and to settle the priority of liens, where all the parties in interest voluntarily appear and submit the controversies between them to his decision without objection. Referee cannot restrain court or officer thereof. — The word "herein" as used in section 38a (4) refers to the entire Act, including the general orders in bankruptcy, and the provision must be construed in connection with general order No. 12, which denies a referee jurisdiction to grant an injunction to stay the proceedings of a court or officer of the United States or of a state. In re Berkowitz, (E. D. Pa. 1906) 143 Fed. 598, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251.

A referee has no power to grant an injunction staying a proceeding in a state court, and such an order is void. In re Siebert, (D. C. N. J. 1904) 133 Fed. 781, 13

Am. Bankr. Rep. 348.

Power to set saids transfers and incumbrances. — Where the property concerned, the rea, is in the possession of the court, the referee has full power to deal with its status, and can set aside any transfers or incumbrances. This doctrine results necessarily from the basic principle that power to deal with property which is itself in the possession with property which is itself in the possession of the bankruptcy court rests exclusively in that court, and, therefore, at least concurrently with the district judge, in the referee. In re Overholzer, (N. D. N. Dak. 1909) 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 10. And see generally sections 23b, 60b, 67e, and 70e.

Questions arising out of applications for compesitions or discharges are expressly required to be originally presented to the court quired to be originally presented to the court, and are withheld from the referee. In re Johnson, (W. D. Ark. 1908) 158 Fed. 342, Johnson, (W. D. Ark. 1908) 158 Fed. 342, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814; In re Randall, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 159 Fed. 298, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305; U. S. v. Sondheim, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 188 Fed. 378; In re Taylor, (N. D. Ala. 1911) 188 Fed. 479. So, also, it has been held that a referee in bankruptcy, acting as a special master in hearing objections to a bankrupt's discharge, has no legal right to consider evidence which has been previously taken before him as referee; but must be governed entirely by the admissible evidence produced on the hearing of the application and objections. In re Murray, (D. C. Conn. 1908) 162 Fed. 983, 20

Am. Bankr. Rep. 700.

But, although section 38a (4) excepts from the referee's jurisdiction all questions arising out of an application for composition, there may be further proceedings required after a composition has been confirmed which involve no such question. Thus it has been held that no such question would be involved in the receipt and allowance or disallowance of a creditor's claim, not barred by section 57n, even if presented after the confirmation. U. S. v. Sondheim, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 188 Fed. 378.

Costs - Authority to tax. - A referee sitting as a court of bankruptcy has authority to award costs in proceedings before him; and may either tax the costs himself or order their taxation by the clerk of the District Court. Matter of Scott, (D. C. Mass. 1902) 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 710.

Imposition of costs on claimant of property. — Where a controversy between a trustee and a third person respecting the right to certain property was submitted to a referee, it was held that the claimant, who was unsuccessful, might properly be taxed with the costs of the reference, including a reasonable fee for the referee, a docket fee for the trustee's attorney, and the fee of a stenographer employed on the application of the trustee. In re Todd, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 109 Fed. 265, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88.

(5) [Authorize employment of stenographers.] upon the application of the trustee during the examination of the bankrupts, or other proceedings, authorize the employment of stenographers at the expense of the estates at a compensation not to exceed ten cents per folio for reporting and transcribing the proceedings. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 555.]

Employment and payment of stenographers. - Except where a stenographer is employed on the application of the trustee, as ployed on the application of the trustee, as provided by section 38a (5), or there has been a stipulation of the parties, or money has been deposited for the expense as provided by general order in bankruptcy No. 10, the referee cannot be allowed for such employment. In re Mammoth Pine Lumber Co., (W. D. Ark. 1902) 116 Fed. 731, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651.

The receiver or creditor applying for the examination will be compelled to approve of the stenographer's bill, and to certify that all of the examination was necessary. The bills can then be passed upon in settling the receiver's accounts, and close scrutiny should be given, with a view to preventing the unnecessary prolongation of such examination. In re Stark, (E. (5) [Make up records.] make up records embodying the evidence, or the substance thereof, as agreed upon by the parties in all contested matters arising before them, whenever requested to do so by either of the parties thereto, together with their findings therein, and transmit them to the judges; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 555.]

Making up records.—The duty to make up records, under section 39a (5), and transmit them to the judge, is for the purpose of reviewing the referee's decisions, and has been generally considered under section 38a, note heading Mode of Review, p. 655, supra.

The clear purpose of section 39a (5), set out above, is to avoid, as far as possible, the sending of the original proofs to the judge, and to substitute therefor, where the ends of justice will permit, a summary thereof; and to effectuate this object is the purpose of the general order No. 27. But it is undoubtedly within the competency of the judge, at the request of either party, to direct the filing of all or any part of the original documents or proofs which are on file with the referee. (8) [Transmit papers to clerks.] transmit to the clerks such papers as may be on file before them whenever the same are needed in any proceedings in courts, and in like manner secure the return of such papers after they have been used, or, if it be impracticable to transmit the original papers, transmit certified copies thereof by mail; [(1898] 30 Stat. Preservation of evidence. - It is the duty of examiners, masters, referees, and the court, taking evidence in controversies in bankruptcy, in the absence of a jury, to take, record, and, in case of an appeal, to return to the reviewing court, all the evidence offered by either party, that which they hold to be incompetent or immaterial as well as that which they deem competent and relevant, to the end that if the appellate court is of the opinion that evidence rejected should have been received it may consider it, render a final decree, and thus conclude the litigation without remanding the suit to procure the rejected evidence. The remedy for a refusal of a referee to take and preserve such evidence is an appli-cation to the District Court, and, failing there, to the Circuit Court of Appeals, for an order that it be taken and preserved. Referee not obliged to certify questions during pendency of proceedings.—A referee is not required to stop the proceedings before him, and to certify to the court for decision questions raised on objections to evidence. In re Romine, (N. D. W. Va. 1905) 138 Fed. 837, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; Ravenswood Bank r. Johnson, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 463, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206.

Evidence which need not be preserved. From the general rule above stated, which necessitates the taking of evidence even though it be excluded by the referee, there are certain exceptions; thus the referee need not receive or preserve evidence which is plainly privileged, or the testimony of a privileged witness, or evidence which clearly and affirmatively appears to be so incompetent, irrelevant, or immaterial that it would be an abuse of the process or the power of the court to compel its production or permit its introduction. Missouri-American Electric Co. v. Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 283, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270.

Cost of perpetuating testimony. — Where a trustee in bankruptcy has no funds in his hands, and the bankrupt is without means, the referee will not compel the trustee to pay for the stenographer's minutes, referee's fees, and disbursements in taking the testimony which the bankrupt desires to introduce in opposition to that offered by the trustee, in a proceeding to compel the bankrupt to turn over property; it being within the discretion of the referee to determine how the bankrupt's testimony should be taken and preserved, in order that he may not be in contempt. - Sec. 40. Compensation of Referees.—a [Fee and commissions.] Referees shall receive as full compensation for their services, payable after they are rendered, a fee of fifteen dollars deposited with the clerk at the time the petition is filed in each case, except when a fee is not required from a voluntary bankrupt, and twenty-five cents for every proof of claim filed for allowance, to be paid from the estate, if any, as a part of the cost of administration, and from estates which have been administered before them one per centum commissions on all moneys disbursed to creditors by the trustee, or one-half of one per centum on the amount to be paid to creditors upon the confirmation of a composition. [(Amended 1903) 32 Stat. L. 799.]

Referee's commissions.—A referee is entitled, under section 40a, as amended by the Act of Feb. 5, 1903, to a one per centum commission on all moneys disbursed to creditors by the trustee in estates which have been administered before them; or a commission of one-half of one per centum on the amount to be paid to creditors upon the confirmation of a composition. Statute covers all lawful disbursements. The language of section 40a covers, and evidently was intended to include, all moneys lawfully disbursed by the trustee, and held by him as such, whether to creditors, secured, unsecured, or having priority, or to other persons. If to creditors, it is immaterial whether the amounts lawfully paid them from the funds in court are paid as dividends, or in satisfaction of a lien or liens on the fund. If the money comes lawfully into the hands of the trustee, as such, and if he in the performance of his duty as such is required to protect, preserve, and care for it, and eventually disburse it pursuant to the order of the court, and does so, there is no reason why he should not have his commissions, if the court allows them, even if the funds are subject to a lien which in law and equity the court is required to recognize and enforce. In re Cramond, (N. D. N. Y. 1906) 145 Fed. 966, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

Referee entitled to commissions on moneys which should have been paid through trustee. -The referee, under the law, is entitled to commissions on all moneys which are disbursed to creditors by the trustee; and it has been held that this means all sums which should have been paid through the trustee but for outside agreement between parties and attorneys. Thus when property, subject to liens, is sold by consent of the parties holding such liens, the referee is entitled to his commissions on the purchase price in full. When sold free from incumbrances, the money is constructively paid to the trustee, even when purchased by the party holding such incumbrance, and the referee is entitled to commissions thereon as if it were actually paid. Having used the process of the court to accomplish their purpose, to wit, to sell the property by the trustee in bankruptcy, the incumbrancers have received benefits and services for which the officers of the court are entitled to pay. In re Sanford Furniture Mfg. Co., (E. D. N. C. 1903) 126 Fed. 888, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414. See also In re Sabine, (N. D. N. Y. 1899) 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 322; In re Coffin, (E. D. Tex. 1899) 2 Am. Liens must abate for referee's commissions. -When the bankruptcy court lawfully takes hold of and administers the estate of a bankrupt and has the funds in its possession for that purpose, it may direct, and it is its duty to direct, that the lawful fees and commissions of its officers and expenses of such administration be paid therefrom; and when necessary, in such cases, liens on such funds must abate for this purpose. But see In re Anders Push Button Telephone Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 136 Fed. 995, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 643, wherein it was held that a court of bankruptcy has no power to require a creditor, secured by a valid lien, to pay commissions on the amount realized thereon to the referee, although by stipulation the property is sold by the trustee, because the proceeds of the property, so far as necessary to satisfy the lien, are no part of the estate, from which all commissions are made payable.

See also In re Iowa Falls Mfg. Co., (N. D. Ia. 1905) 140 Fed. 527, 15 Am. Bankr, Rep. 384, wherein it was held that the proceeds of mortgaged property, arising from the sale thereof by the sheriff, should be excluded from the amount upon which the referee may compute his commissions, and the amount actually disbursed by the trustee to creditors will form the basis of such computation.

Where a referee authorized the continuance of the bankrupt's business in order to complete certain government contracts, and for that purpose there was raised and paid out $480,000 during a period of eighteen months, and some $30,000 distributed to creditors, it was held that the referee was only entitled to a percentage on the latter sum. And see the anno-tation under section 72.

But see Matter of Hart, (D. C. Hawaii 1907) 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 137, wherein it was held that a referee performing services not within his statutory duties, but of value to the conduct of a bankrupt estate as a going concern, may receive compensation therefor out of the funds of the estate.

A special allowance to a referee for services performed, in addition to the fees fixed by the Bankruptcy Act, cannot be made, even with the consent of the attorneys for the parties in interest. Dressel v. North State Lumber Co., (E. D. N. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 531, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541.

Clerical services rendered by referee. – The referee is not entitled to charge for his own services in making copies of the petition for discharge, but it may be necessary in some cases for the referee to employ clerical assistance in giving such notices, and then the expense actually incurred by him for such assistance would be a charge against the bankrupt or his estate; but the referee is not entitled to make any charge for clerical services rendered by himself in cases pending before him. In re Dixon, (N. D. Cal. 1902) 114 Fed. 675.

Extra compensation for giving notices.— Under general order in bankraptcy No. 35 (2), providing for compensation to the referee for expenses necessarily incurred in giving notices, he cannot, in case of re-examination of a claim, be allowed for notices to creditors other than the one provided for by order No. 21 (6), to the creditor whose claim is to be re-examined; nor can the referee be allowed for notices on distribution of money to preferred creditors; or for notice of protest against confirmation of sale, none being required by the Act or general orders. In re Mammoth Pine Lumber Co., (W. D. Ark. 1902) 116 Fed. 731, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651.

Referee's expenses.— The only allowance which can be made to a referee, in addition to the fees and commission, is for expenses necessarily incurred, a detailed account of which must be kept and returned to the court, verified by the oath of the referee, and accompanied by vouchers when they can be procured. In re Carolina Cooperage Co., (E. D. N. C. 1899) 96 Fed. 950, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154; In re Tebo, (D. C. W. Va. 1900) 101 Fed. 419, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 235; In re Dixon, (N. D. Services of referee as special master.— There is no authority for converting a referee in bankruptcy into a special master, nor for allowing him compensation as such. In re Sweeney, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 168

Fed. 612, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 866.

Where the statutory fees received by a referee are sufficient to compensate him liberally for all services rendered in a case, he will not be given a further allowance on account of an extra service rendered as special master in connection with a composition. In re Talton, (E. D. N. C. 1905) 137 Fed. 178, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 617.

But prior to the amendment of 1903 which, by the addition of section 72 to the statute, prohibited the payment of extra compensation to referees and other officers, it was held that where a referee performed services beyond those required of him in his official capacity as, for instance, those of special master, he might be allowed additional compensation therefor. Service of a copy of an injunction issued by a bankruptcy court, restraining an assignee for creditors of a bankrupt and others from disposing of his property, is unnecessary in order to put them in contempt for a violation thereof, where they were otherwise advised of its issuance. Refusal to turn over books and papers.—Where a bankrupt, for whose estate a receiver was appointed by the bankruptey court on the filing of an involuntary petition against him, neglected and refused to turn over to the receiver his books of account, or notes and mortgages owned by him, but concéaled the same, and also disregarded an order of the court commanding him to appear and show cause why he should not be punished for contempt for so doing, leaving the state after the order was served upon him, it was held that he was guilty of contempt. In re Wilson, (W. D. Ark. 1902) 116 Fed. 419, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612.

Failure to file schedules.—In Matter of Schulman, (D. C. N. Y. 1908) 20 Am. Bankr, Rep. 707, it was said: "Many bankrupts pay no attention to their duty to file their schedules, and motions to punish them for contempt for not filing schedules have become very frequent. Hereafter, as a general rule, whenever such motions are made, bankrupts will be fined a sufficient sum to compensate the attorneys for their trouble in making the motion, and, if such fines do not prove sufficient to put a stop to the delay in filing schedules, punishment by imprisonment for contempt will be imposed."

Fraud. — Contempt proceedings cannot be employed to punish for frauds committed by the bankrupt against the Bankruptey Act; nor can they be used to coerce the bankrupt, or transferees, to make restitution of money or property previously transferred in fraud of the act. In re Mayer, (E. D. Wis. 1900) 98 Fed. 839, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533.

The authority of the referee to make an order for the turning over of property to the trustee has been considered under section 38a

(4), supra, p. 659.

It is the court's duty to exercise its power to punish for contempt where there is sufficient evidence to satisfy the judge that the bankrupt has the property in his possession or control. In re Wilson, (W. D. Ark. 1902) 116 Fed. 419, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612

Object of proceeding. - It is not the object of contempt proceedings against a bankrupt for his failure to turn over money or property in his possession, to punish him for concealing assets from his trustees or for frauds or delinquencies of which he may appear to be guilty; but the sole purpose is to reach, and to compel the surrender of, property belonging to the estate in the actual v. Glucklich, (8th Cir. 1902) 116 Fed. 131, 53 C. C. A. 451, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 393; In re Kane, (M. D. Pa. 1903) 125 Fed. 984, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 478; In re Alphin, etc., Cotton Co., (E. D. Failure to turn over after-acquired property. - The failure of the bankrupt to turn over property in compliance with an order of the referee may be punished as a contempt although the order had reference to after-acquired property. In re Tudor, (D. C. Colo.) 96 Fed. 942, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 808.

In re Hooks Smelting Co., (E. D. Pa. 1906) 146 Fed. 336, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 141.

Bankrupt must account for money traced into his hands. — In proceedings against a bankrupt for contempt for failure to turn over to his trustee, on order of the referee, money traced into his hands, it is not a sufficient accounting by him for such money to say that he gave it to his wife, who has apent it for the benefit of himself and family. In re Kane, (M. D. Pa. 1903) 125 Fed. 984, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 478.

Where a bankrupt, having been ordered by the referee to pay over to his trustee a sum of money alleged to be in his possession and to belong to his estate in bankruptcy, denies his present possession of the money, and attempts to explain its loss by a story which, though difficult to believe, is not impossible, nor an obvious fabrication, he may be ordered before the judge for further examination as to whether or not he has made a full disclosure of the facts; and if satisfied that his story is false, the court will order commitment. In re McCormick, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 566, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340.

Failure to appeal from order to turn over. In a proceeding for contempt in a District Court against a bankrupt for failure to comply with an order of the referee to turn over money or property to the trustee, such order, not appealed from, is conclusive of the fact that at the date of its entry the bankrupt had the money or property in his possession or under his control. In N. Y. 1911) 184 Fed. 539. In re Frankel, (S. D.

Property must be capable of identification. - A summary order directing the respondent upon pain of imprisonment to surrender certain goods of which he is said to be holding fraudulent custody, the property still belonging to the bankrupt, should not be made unless the goods can be followed and sufficiently identified to enable the marshal to take them into his possession. In re Jackier, (M. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 720.

And a finding that a bankrupt had in his possession or under his control goods, merchandise, etc., of a certain value, which he withheld, secreted, and concealed, but which failed to describe more specifically the property, or to state where any of the goods were, was held to be insufficient to justify an order requiring its surrender under penalty of commitment for contempt. In re Rogowski, (N. D. Ga. 1908) 166 Fed. 165, 21 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 553.

Contempt dependent on ability to comply with order. — Whether a bankrupt is guilty of contempt in failing to comply with a referee's order directing him to pay over funds alleged to have been withheld, to his trustee, depends on the bankrupt's present ability to comply therewith. "The powers vested in courts of bankruptcy, to accomplish the general purpose of the bankrupt law, to wit, to segregate the estate of the bankrupt and provide for its equitable distribution amongst the creditors, are plenary and far-reaching. The court The court may, by summary order, direct the delivery and turning over to the trustee by the bankrupt, or by any third person holding the same under his order and control, any property which, prior to the filing of the petition, the bankrupt could by any means have transferred, or which might have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against him. For disobedience of such order, the court in bankruptcy undoubtedly has the power, by attachment for contempt, to enforce compliance with such order, and punish refusal to comply. This power, however, is far-reaching and drastic, and must be exercised with cautious discretion. If the bankrupt denies that he has possession or control of the property, or if a third person in possession thereof claims to hold it, not as the agent or representative of the bankrupt, but by title adverse to him, and there is no evidence to indisputably show that such denial or claim is false or fraudulent, and that the case is one of simple concealment or refusal on the part of the bankrupt, or the one in possession, to deliver up the property as ordered, it would be an unwarranted stretch of power on the part of the court to resort to a summary proceeding for contempt for the enforcement of its order. In the absence of fraud or concealment, the bankrupt court can only order the delivery of property to the trustee which the bankrupt is physically able to deliver up, having the same in his possession or control.

If it shall appear that he is not physically able to deliver the property required by the order, then, confessedly, proceedings for contempt, by fine and imprisonment, would result in nothing, certainly not in a compliance with the order. The contempt in this case could only be purged by a reiteration of the physical impossibility to comply with the order whose disobedience is being thus pun-An order made under such circumstances would be as absurd as it is inconsistent with the principles of individual liberty." Per Gray, C. J., in American Trust Co. v. Wallis, (3d Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 464, 61 C. C. A. 342, quoted with approval in Inre Cummings, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 188 Fed. 767.

Money paid out by bankrupt.—A bankrupt cannot be adjudged in contempt for failure to turn over to his trustee, pursuant to order of the referee, money which, before the proceedings were begun, had been paid out by him to creditors. In re Kane, (M. D. Pa. 1903) 125 Fed. 984, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 478; American Trust Co. v. Wallis, (3d Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 464, 61 C. C. A. 342, 11

Am. Bankr. Rep. 363.

Payment to wife. — Where a bankrupt, within a few days prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy against him, sells property, and pays the proceeds to his wife, she will be regarded as holding the same as his agent, and such facts will justify an order requiring him to pay the money over to his trustee; but he cannot be adjudged in contempt for a failure to obey such order with respect to certain of the money which his wife is affirmatively shown to have paid out to a third person prior to the bankruptcy. In re Eddleman, (W. D. Ky. 1907) 154 Fed. 160, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45.

Bankrupt's control nominal.—The court

Bankrupt's control nominal. — The court will not punish a bankrupt for contempt in not turning over property in compliance with an order, where it appears that he is in nominal rather than actual control of the business, the scheme of fraud being arranged and carried out by others. In re Davison, (D. C. R. I. 1906) 143 Fed. 673, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338.

Inability occasioned through fault of bankrupt. — A court cannot by contempt proceedings undertake to compel the performance of something which the respondent is wholly unable to perform, even though he became so through his own fault, where it arose through a mere misconception of his legal rights. Sinsheimer v. Simonson, (C.
C. A. 6th Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 898, 5 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 537.

Bankrupt may prove his inability to comply with order. — Before punishing a bankrupt for contempt because of his failure to comply with an order, the court should give him an opportunity to prove his inability to do so. In re Hausman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir.

1903) 121 Fed. 984.

Mere denial of ability insufficient.— It is well settled that the bankrupt's mere denial, under oath, that he is able to comply with an order directing him to turn over property or money is not conclusive; and if there is sufficient evidence to show that it is in his possession or under his control, he may be ordered to produce it, and a violation of the order will subject him to punishment for contempt. Schweer v. Brown, (8th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 328, 64 C. C. A. 574; In re Fellerman, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 149 Fed. 244, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; In re Richards, (W. D. Ark. 1910) 183 Fed. 501; In re Cummings, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 186 Fed. 1020.

Thus it has been held that an order requiring a bankrupt to turn over money or property should not be made when the bankrupt absolutely denies that he has the property or money, and the evidence that he has it is only inferential, if there can be any reasonable doubt of his ability to comply with the order, because if disobeyed it involves his imprisonment. In re Friedman, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 301.

And where the bankrupt claims that his property has been stolen, but it appears that at the time of the alleged theft he made statements that practically nothing had been taken, the court will be justified in punishing him for contempt on his failure to turn the property over in obedience to an order to do so. In re Levin, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 113 Fed. 498. 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 743.

Evidence should be clear and convincing.—
The evidence in a proceeding to compel a bankrupt to turn over assets to his trustee must be clear and convincing before it will justify an order for contempt for failure to comply therewith. In re Purvine, (5th Cir, 1899) 96 Fed. 192, 37 C. C. A. 446, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 787; In re Mayer, (E. D. Wis. 1900) 98 Fed. 839, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533; In re Adler, (W. D. Tenn. 1904) 129 Fed. 502, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19; Samel v. Dodd, (5th Cir. 1906) 142 Fed. 68, 73 C. C. A. 254, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163; In re Mize, (N. D. Ala. 1909) 172 Fed. 945, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577

Before a bankrupt can be punished for the failure to obey an order to turn over property to the trustee, not only must it be proven that the money or property ordered to be turned over is a part of his estate, but it must also be established that such money or property is in the possession or under the control of the bankrupt. In re Adler, (E. D. Okla. 1908) 170 Fed. 634, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371; In re Mize, (N. D. Ala. 1909) 172 Fed. 945, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577.

Power not exercised in doubtful cases.— The power of a court of bankruptcy to order a bankrupt or other person to turn over money or property found to belong to the bankrupt estate, under penalty of imprisonment for contempt, should not be exercised in doubtful cases. Samel v. Dodd, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1906) 142 Fed. 68, 16 Am. Bankr.

And where it is sought to punish a bankrupt for the failure to obey an order to turn over property to the trustee, and it appears that the amount claimed to be withheld depends on mere estimates on one side or the other, it is only where there are great discrepancies which cannot be explained except on the basis that the bankrupt has made away with his property that the matter can be laid hold of by a summary order. In re Reese, (M. D. Pa. 1909) 170 Fed. 986.

So, too, where the referee simply finds that the bankrupt had goods in stock a short time before bankruptcy proceedings were instituted, and that the goods have since disappeared without any satisfactory explanation by the bankrupt concerning their disappearance, but the report entirely fails to locate any of the missing goods, an order of the referee to turn over the property to the trustee is not, under the circumstances, sufficient to base contempt proceedings upon in the event of a failure to obey the order. In re Rogowski, (N. D. Ga. 1908) 166 Fed. 165.

Bankrupt entitled to benefit of reasonable doubt.—It has been held in several cases that, to justify an order requiring a bankrupt to turn over money or property under penalty of imprisonment for contempt, the court must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that he has such money or property in his possession or under his control. In re McCormick, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 566, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340; Ripon Knitting Works v. Schreiber, (D. C. Wash. 1900) 101 Fed. 810, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299; In re Goldfarb, (N. D. Am. Bankr. Rep. 660; In re Nisenson, (D. C. N. J. 1910) 182 Fed. 912.

The burden of accounting for property, shown to be in his possession, rests upon the bankrupt; but in assuming such burden he, because of the drastic means that may be invoked to enforce the order to turn over (imprisonment for contempt), is entitled to the benefit of the reasonable doubt. In re Nisenson, (D. C. N. J. 1910) 182 Fed. 912.

Improper interference with assets.— Any wilful interference with the estate of the bankrupt, any wilful attempt to injure it, to withdraw it from the custody of the court, or to conceal it from the court, or any of its officers whose duty it is to administer it, is a deflance of the power and an affront to the dignity of the court, which may be punished by a judgment for contempt. Am. Bankr. Rep. 472.

Thus where attorneys for the sellers of personal property to a bankrupt had knowledge of the bankruptcy adjudication against the buyer at the time they sued out writs of replevin, under which they took the property from the possession of the sheriff who was holding it under attachment which had been vacated by the bankruptcy adjudication, and such attorneys, claiming that their clients were entitled to rescind the sales for fraud, shipped the property out of the state and the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, it was held that they were guilty of contempt, equally with their clients, which could be purged only by their returning the property, paying its value to the trustee, or executing bonds to pay such value, on its finally being determined that the trustee was entitled to the property. In re Walsh, (N. D. Ia. 1908) 159 Fed. 560, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472.

A mere threat by a judgment creditor of a bankrupt to levy execution on his property, pending the bankruptcy proceedings, does not constitute a contempt of the court of bankruptcy or its process. In re McBryde, (E. D. N. C. 1899) 99 Fed. 686, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729.

Effect of advice of counsel.—The advice of counsel, sought and acted upon in good faith, will palliate, if it does not entirely excuse, a failure to comply with an order of the referee, where such noncompliance was pursuant to the advice so sought and received. In re Watts, (1903) 190 U. S. 1, 23 S. Ct. 718, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 933, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 113; U. S. v. Goldstein, (W. D. Va. 1904) 132 Fed. 789, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 755; In re Zier, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 102, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; In re Home Discount Co., (N. D. Ala. 1906) 147 Fed. 538, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168; Orr c. Tribble, (S. D. Ga. 1907) 158 Fed. 897, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 849; In re Strobel, (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 163 Fed. 380, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754.

Thus it has been held that where a witness, under examination in bankruptcy, refuses to produce books called for by the summons, and to answer questions relating thereto, but does so under the direction of counsel, who in good faith advises him to pursue that course, and professes his readiness to submit to an examination if the court should hold it proper, he will not be punished as for a contempt, but the court will simply order the examination to proceed. In re Fixen, (S. D. Cal. 1899) 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822.

(2) [Misbehavior.] misbehave during a hearing or so near the place thereof as to obstruct the same; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 556.]

The use of coarse and insulting language by witnesses before a referee is not compatible with the dignity of the court, or with a due regard for orderly procedure; and such conduct should be certified by the referee to the court for consideration under section 41b. Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Mack, (S. D. Ohio) 163 Fed. 160 note, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 919.

(3) [Withholding documents.] neglect to produce, after having been ordered to do so, any pertinent document; or [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 556.]

The neglect to produce pertinent documents or books, when ordered to do so, is punishable as a contempt under section 41a (3), in the absence of a reasonable excuse for such failure. In re Howard, (N. D. Cal. 1899) 95 Fed. 415, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582; In re Fixen, (S. D. Cal. 1899) 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822; In re Wilson, (W. D. Ark. 1902) 116 Fed. 419, 8 Am. Bankr. But the alleged bankrupt, or members of his family, cannot be held in contempt of court for a refusal to surrender property, or books and papers, to one claiming to represent the receiver, but who produces no written evidence of his authority. Skubinsky v. Bodek, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1909) 172 Fed. 340, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 699.

Necessity of subpana duces tecum and tender of fees. — A witness before a referee in bankruptcy, whose examination had been concluded except that he had refused to voluntarily produce a document, is not in contempt for a failure to appear at an adjourned hearing on a subsequent day, where he was not tendered fees for such appearance, nor served with a subpean duces tecum to produce the document. In re Johnson, etc., Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1907) 151 Fed. 207, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50.

(4) [Refusal to appear, take oath, or be examined.] refuse to appear after having been subpossed, or, upon appearing, refuse to take the oath as a witness, or, after having taken the oath, refuse to be examined according to law: [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 556.]

Contempt by witnesses.—The refusal to appear as a witness when duly subpænaed, or to testify, or be examined according to law, constitutes a contempt under section 41a (4); and it has been held that this provision includes, as contempts, the intentional swearing falsely, vaguely, evasively, and contradictorily, notwithstanding the fact that such conduct may also be punishable as a criminal offense. U. S. v. Goldstein, (W. D. Va. 1904) 132 Fed. 789, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 755; In re Fellerman, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 149 Fed. 244, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; In re Johnson, etc., Lumber Co., (C. C. Giving false testimony. — The judge of a bankruptcy court has jurisdiction to summarily punish, for contempt, misbehavior of the bankrupt and the giving of false testimony. In re Shear, (W. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 677.

Where a bankrupt on his examination was guilty of contumacious conduct and false swearing, it was held that the scope of the bankruptcy court's jurisdiction to punish him depended on the interference with the exercise of the court's jurisdiction, and not on the injury to the public welfare and morals, which is the basis of punishment for perjury. In re Wiesebrock, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 757.

Evasive testimony.— Where a bankrupt, after being sworn before the referee, in an examination concerning his property, by answers of "I don't remember," and "Whatsword or "I don't remember," and "Whatsword or "I don't remember," and prevent the trustee from learning the facts which would lead to a recovery of the missing property, it was held that the referee was not bound to continue the examination, but was justified in instituting contempt proceedings against the bankrupt prior to the conclusion of his testimony, and before he had been cross-examined. In re Schulman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 191, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 809.

Refusal to answer improper questions.—
It has been held that an attorney who has been adjudged bankrupt may raise any question of law which could have been raised had he been represented by another. General order No. 4 gives him the right to represent himself, and where his objections to his examination are bona fide and well founded, there is no contempt in his declining to answer. In re Shaffer, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 104 Fed. 982, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728.

[When tender of mileage necessary.] Provided, That no person shall be required to attend as a witness before a referee at a place outside of the State of his residence, and more than one hundred miles from such place of residence, and only in case his lawful mileage and fee for one day's attendance shall be first paid or tendered to him: [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 556.]

Attendance not compulsory. — One cannot be compelled to attend a reference in bank-ruptcy within the state of his residence but at a distance of more than one hundred miles from where he resides. In re Hemstreet, (N. D. Ia. 1902) 117 Fed. 568, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760.

b [Contempt proceedings — penalty.] The referee shall certify the facts to the judge, if any person shall do any of the things forbidden in this section. The judge shall thereupon, in a summary manner, hear the evidence as to the acts complained of, and, if it is such as to warrant him in so doing, punish such person in the same manner and to the same extent as for a contempt committed before the court of bankruptcy, or commit such person upon the same conditions as if the doing of the forbidden act had occurred with reference to the process of, or in the presence of, the court. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 556.]

Proceedings before referee for contempt. - The referee exercises a judicial office, and. while he cannot himself punish for contempt, he may take the needful preliminary steps to bring the bankrupt's conduct to the attention of the court; and he need not give notice of his intention so to do. The contempt is committed in his presence; and in asking that the court investigate the matter further, he is acting on his official responsibility. The court will then give the bankrupt notice of the proceeding, and will afford him an oppor-tunity to be heard. If, however, the referee does not choose to act upon his own motion, the situation is on a different footing. It is then an ordinary dispute between the party presenting the petition and the bankrupt, and the usual course of notice and a hearing should be followed. In re Magen, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 572.

Proceedings before judge — Proceeding based on referee's certificats. — A court of bankruptcy has no power to commit any person for a contempt committed before a referee, except strictly in accordance with the provisions of section 41b, which requires that the proceedings shall be based on a certificate of the referee. In re Gitkin, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 164 Fed. 71, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 113.

But the referee's failure to certify disobedience of a proper order to the court for action, while an irregularity, is not a jurisdictional defect in proceedings to punish the person guilty of such disobedience as for contempt, so as to subject the commitment to collateral attack by habeas corpus. U. S. r. Henkel, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 185 Fed. 553.

Formal proceedings.—The trustee should file a formal proceeding setting forth the alleged contempt of which he claims the bankrupt to be guilty; and if he fails to do so, there is no error in dismissing the proceedings. McNeil v. McCormack, (5th Cir. 1910) 182 Fed. 808, 105 C. C. A. 240.

182 Fed. 808, 105 C. C. A. 240.

But it has been held that contempt proceedings against a bankrupt are not required to be formal, but may be instituted by a petition sufficient to notify the bankrupt of the charge made against him, which may be established by affidavits. In re Cole, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 180, 20 Am. Bankr.

A rule requiring a bankrupt to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt for refusing to answer "sundry questions" put to him during his examination before the referee is sufficient although it does not set out the questions, where it refers to the transcript filed with the certificate of the referee, from which they fully appear. U. S. C. Goldstein, (W. D. Va. 1904) 132 Fed. 789, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 755.

Wilful disobedience must be alleged.—It has been held that a bankrupt cannot be punished for contempt merely on an allegation that he disobeyed an order directing him to turn over property to the trustee. It must be alleged that the disobedience was wilful and not the result of inability to comply therewith. In re Cole, (1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 180, 90 C. C. A. 50, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 781

Common-law rules applicable. — The statute permits the application of the common law rules applicable to a proceeding for contempt in whatever way it arises. In re Goodrich, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1910) 184 Fed. 5.

Defensive pleading.—It is often advantageous to set out the defense in a definite manner so that the court may pass on it intelligently with a view of bringing the issues clearly before the appellate tribunal; but unnecessary and dilatory pleading should not be permitted. In re Goodrich, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1910) 184 Fed. 5.

A party to an order made by a referee in bankruptcy cannot ignore the order until the referee certifies his disobedience to the judge, and then, on the summary hearing for which the statute provides, set up in defense matters contested before the referee, unless they show want of jurisdiction to make the order. In re Home Discount Co., (N. D. Ala. 1906) 147 Fed. 538, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168.

Notice of proceedings necessary. — Before a bankrupt can be punished for contempt he must have notice of the proposed action, and an opportunity to contest the questions of fact and of law involved. In re Rosser, (8th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 562, 41 C. C. A. 497, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; Boyd v. Glucklich, (8th Cir. 1902) 116 Fed. 131, 53 C. C. A. 451, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 393; In re Davison, (D. C. R. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 298.

A court of bankruptcy is without power, on an oral motion by counsel for a receiver, to make an order requiring a person, not a party to any proceeding before it, to appear before a referee and produce a document, where he was not brought before the court by the service of any notice, process, or rule to show cause, and did not enter an americance; and such an order is void, and its disobedience is not a contempt. In re Johnson, etc., Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1907) 151 Fed. 207, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50.

And it has been held that the record should show that the bankrupt had an opportunity to be heard, before the order punishing him for contempt is made. In ro Cole, (1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 180, 90 C. C. A. 50, 20 Am.

Hearing de novo. — In McNeil v. McCormack, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1910) 182 Fed. 808, it appears that the District Court, in reviewing a contempt proceeding against the bank-rupt, ordered the counsel for the trustee, in compliance with the proper practice, to file a proceeding before the court, setting forth the alleged contempt with which the bankrupt was charged, and to give him an opportunity to be heard thereon, in the nature of an investigation de novo, before the court would adjudge him guilty of contempt and impose a penalty upon him; and thereupon counsel for the trustee declared their inability to furnish the evidence to support such charges, and stated that they would be obliged to rely solely upon the report of the testimony taken before the referee, and that they were unable to proceed otherwise, and on the strength of this statement the proceedings were dismissed, and it was held that such dismissal was not error.

But see In re Richards, (W. D. Ark. 1910) 183 Fed. 501, wherein it appears that a bankrupt ignored an order of the referee directing him to pay to his trustee certain withheld assets, and that such order became final for want of a petition to review, and it was held that the court, on an application to punish the bankrupt for contempt, would not review the referee's finding of fact, which was the basis of the finding that the bankrupt had in his possession the assets which he was ordered to pay over.

Contemnor not entitled to jury trial. — It has been held that a bankrupt is not entitled to a trial by jury on a petition by the trustee to punish him for contempt. Ripon Knitting Works v. Schreiber, (D. C. Wash. 1900) 101 Fed. 810, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299, affirmed (9th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 1006, 43 C. C. A.

Evidence. — The testimony of the officers of a bankrupt corporation, taken under either section 7a (9) or section 21a, and reduced to writing, is admissible against them in a subsequent proceeding by the trustee to require them to surrender money or property of the estate alleged to be in their possession or under their control. In re Alphin, etc., Cotton Co., (E. D. Ark. 1904) 131 Fed. 824, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653.

Testimony taken at oreditors' meetings. — In a proceeding to compel a bankrupt to pay over money alleged to be still in his hands, the stenographer's notes of the testimony of the bankrupt taken at a creditors' meeting, called for the general purpose of inquiring into the bankrupt's affairs, is admissible; but the testimony given by other witnesses at such meetings is incompetent. In re Wiesen, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 442, 14 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 347.
Order of commitment. — An order of commitment of a bankruptcy court, directing that a person be imprisoned until he complies with an order made in a proceeding in equity under the Bankruptcy Act, is not invalid be-cause it does not run in the name of the United States. Mueller v. Nugent, (1902) 184 U. S. 1, 22 S. Ct. 269, 46 U. S. (L. ed.)

The bankrupt cannot be ordered to turn over the property within a specified time or, failing to do so, be held guilty of contempt, as this would leave the question of his default and consequent contempt of court to be determined by the marshal. In re Baum, (8th Cir. 1909) 169 Fed. 410, 94 C. C. A. 632

And where an order to turn over property to the trustee is made, it is error also to enter in substance a judgment for contempt accompanying an alternative order for committal, as the bankrupt is not in contempt until he has disobeyed the order. In re Cole, Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 392, 75 C. C. A. 330, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302, reversing on other grounds (D. C. Me. 1905) 135 Fed. 439, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389.

In so far as it relates to a commitment to jail, it will not be presumed that the court intended to issue a commitment before judgment of contempt had been pronounced. O'Conor v. Sunseri, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911)

184 Fed. 712.

Punishment. — In contempt proceedings against a bankrupt for the failure to turn over money or other property, the court is not authorized to imprison the bankrupt indefinitely, especially when it is not certainly known that he has the money or property which he is called upon to surrender. In re Taylor, (D. C. Colo. 1901) 114 Fed. 607, wherein the court ordered the bankrupt to be discharged after he had served one month in jail for the failure to obey an order to turn over property to the trustee.

Section 41 does not invest the bankruptey court with any broader powers in the matter of punishment for contempt than are possessed by other federal courts. Boyd v. Glucklich, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 116 Fed.

131, 8 Am, Bankr. Rep. 393.

Commitment for failure to turn over assets not imprisonment for debt. — The obligation of a bankrupt to surrender to his trustee property in possession belonging to his estate is not an obligation to pay a debt, the title to such property being in the trustee; nor can the bankrupt, by refusing to comply with an order of court requiring him to make such surrender, convert himself into a debtor, so as to render his commitment therefor an imprisonment for debt. Mueller v. Nugent, (1902) 184 U. S. 1, 22 S. Ct. 269, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 405; In re Rosser, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 562, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; Ripon Knitting Works v. Schreiber, (D. C. Wash. 1900) 101 Fed. 810, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299; In re Schlesinger, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 117, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 361; Schweer v. Brown, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 329, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178; Samel v. Dodd, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1906) 142 Fed. 68, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163; Moody v. Cole, (D. C. Me. 1906) 148 Fed. 295, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 818.

Contempt proceedings do not bar recourse to other remedies. - A contempt proceeding does not prevent the trustee from pursuing any other remedies given for the collection of a judgment from an insolvent debtor. In re Cole, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 180, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761.

In a habeas corpus proceeding to obtain relief from imprisonment for contempt, the petitioner is entitled to supplement the record by alleging such additional facts as tend to show that his misbehavior was not a contempt. Ew p. O'Neal, (N. D. Fla. 1903) 125 Fed. 967, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 196.

SEC. 42. RECORDS OF REFEREES. — a [Manner of keeping.] The records of all proceedings in each case before a referee shall be kept as nearly as may be in the same manner as records are now kept in equity cases in circuit courts of the United States. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 556.]

Records should be complete. — The records in a bankruptcy matter at the time of the final closing of the estate should be full and complete, so that any one interested may at any time ascertain from them all the facts in regard to any given transaction, without extrinsic explanation; and until such a record is made by the officers chargeable with that duty, showing a compliance with the requirements of the statute and the rules of the court, a final settlement will not be ordered. In re Carr, (E. D. N. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 556, Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

Upon final settlement of a bankrupt estate, a clear balance sheet should be presented, and proper vouchers should be filed, and the balance shown by such sheet should correspond with that shown by the statement of the depository, in which, by etatute and rules, all funds of the estate are required to be deposited. In re Carr, (E. D. N. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 556, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

b [Books and papers.] A record of the proceedings in each case shall be kept in a separate book or books, and shall, together with the papers on file, constitute the records of the case. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 556.]

c [Become part of court records.] The book or books containing a record of the proceedings shall, when the case is concluded before the referee, be certified to by him, and, together with such papers as are on file before him, be transmitted to the court of bankruptcy and shall there remain as a part of the records of the court. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 557.]

Sec. 43. Referee's Absence or Disability. — a. [Filling vacancy.] Whenever the office of a referee is vacant, or its occupant is absent or disqualified to act, the judge may act, or may appoint another referee, or another referee holding an appointment under the same court may, by order of the judge, temporarily fill the vacancy. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 557.]

Cross-reference: As to Reference of cases to referees generally, see section 22, supra, p. 593.

Absence or disability of referee. — When the referee to whom a case in bankruptcy would regularly be referred is absent or disqualified, the judge may appoint a special referee and refer the case to him. This may be done before the answer of the alleged bankrupt is filed, and does not require the consent or approval of the respondent or his attorney. Bray v. Cobb, (E. D. N. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

Sec. 44. Appointment of Trustees. — a The creditors of a bankrupt estate shall, at their first meeting after the adjudication or after a vacancy has occurred in the office of trustee, or after an estate has been reopened, or after a composition has been set aside or a discharge revoked, or if there is a vacancy in the office of trustee, appoint one trustee or three trustees of such estate. If the creditors do not appoint a trustee or trustees as herein provided, the court shall do so. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 557.]

Appointment by creditors.—The bank-rupt's creditors have the primary right to appoint the trustee for the bankrupt estate; and such right may be exercised at their first meeting or an adjournment thereof, or, first meeting or an adjournment thereof, or, for the purpose of filling a vacancy, at any subsequent time. Thus it has been held that whether the referee will or will not postpone the election of a trustee where claims are objected to is a matter of sound discretion; and if such a number of claims are duly objected to that an election by a majority in number and amount cannot be had, then, if the circumstances demand it, he may and should himself appoint the trustee. In re Evening Standard Pub. Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1908) 164 Fed. 517, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 156.

And where, at the first meeting of the creditors of a bankrupt, there was a contest over the election of trustee, and oral objections were made by the attorneys for one party to practically all of the duly proved claims of the other party, in support of which no proof was presented or offered, it was held that such objections were not sufficient to require the referee to adjourn the meeting until they could be tried, before proceeding with the election of the trustee. In re Syracuse Paper, etc., Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1908) 164 Fed. 275, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174.

If the majority of the creditors are present at all, they are present for all purposes. Selection of creditors usually permitted to stand.—The right to elect a trustee for a bankrupt being given to the creditors, their election should be permitted to stand, unless it clearly appears that, in conducting it, some principle of law intended to secure the administration of the bankrupt's estate in the interest of his creditors has been violated. Improper or irregular vote for trustee. – The selection of a trustee by creditors may, and usually will, be set aside where the meeting at which the selection was made was improperly or irregularly conducted, to such an extent that it cannot be said that the trustee appointed was fairly chosen. Effect of subsequent allowance of excluded claims. — Where claims, offered for proof and allowance at a meeting of creditors of a bankrupt, which are excluded from voting in the election of the trustee, being postponed for future consideration or disallowed, are afterwards allowed on hearing or on appeal, the court may set aside the election, and order a new vote to be taken, if it is made to appear that the result would be changed by allowing votes to be cast on such claims, but not otherwise. Friendly trustee. — There are instances, however, where a "friendly" trustee may be chosen; harmony of action between an honest bankrupt and an honest trustee tends to promote the creditors' interests, and there is no law against the election of a person as trustee merely because he is acceptable to the bankrupt. A trustee is not, like a receiver, a mere caretaker and manager of the estate to execute the orders of the court in the progress of administration, but he is the agent of the creditors, selected by them as a man of affairs to conduct the business of collecting the assets and distributing the proceeds among The statute invests him with the creditors. the title of the bankrupt, and makes him not only quasi owner, but the owner pro hac of all the property and rights of action belonging to the bankrupt. The management of the estate is committed to his discretion, and he is expected to exercise his powers and discharge his duties with the same intelligence that an owner would do, subject, of course, primarily, to the supervision of the creditors in their meetings called for the purpose, and the whole administration subject to the supervision of the court of bankruptcy. In re Baber, (E. D. Tenn. 1902) 119 Fed. 520, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406.

Right to possession.—On an adjudication in bankruptcy the trustee, on his appointment, is entitled to the possession of property of the bankrupt in the possession of a receiver appointed by a state court within four months; and if such right is not recognized it is competent for, and the duty of, the bankruptcy court to enforce it. Right to subrogation. — A bankrupt's trustee may pay out of the funds in his hands a debt secured by collateral in excess of the amount thereof, and claim subrogation to the rights of the creditor, for the benefit of the general creditors. In re Kessler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 127.

A trustee in bankruptcy represents only creditors who were such at the time of the filing of the petition, and he cannot assert rights as the representative of creditors who were parties to a prior composition with the bankrupt which they have not sought to avoid. Actions by trustee.—Scope of treatment.—In the performance of his duties, under section 47a (2), a trustee in bankruptcy has the undoubted right to bring action in any suitable form for the purpose of recovering possession of the property of the bankrupt estate, or, as expressed in the Act, for the purpose of collecting and reducing the assets to money. This subject has necessarily been considered under several sections throughout the statute, and it would serve no useful purpose to reiterate here such matters as are fully set out elsewhere; thus the jurisdiction of the referee to make an order to turn over property to the trustee in bankruptcy has been considered under section 38a (4), and also incidentally under section 23b; and the right to enforce such an order by proceedings for contempt has been treated generally under section 41a (1). The right to proceed against adverse claimants, and the jurisdiction of actions of that character, have been considered under section 23b; while actions in the Circuit Court (now the District Court), by or against adverse claimants, have been considered under section 23a. So, also, under section 60b, consideration has been given to actions for the recovery of voidable preferences; and the right of the trustee to recover property transferred in fraud of creditors within the four-months period is considered under section 67e; while his right to recover property transferred generally in fraud of creditors has been considered under section 70e, and the trustee's rights generally, as the owner of the property of the bankrupt estate, have been considered under the various subdivisions of section 70.

Trustee's duty to litigate questions, etc. -In In re Baird, (E. D. Pa. 1902) 112 Fed. 960, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448, McPherson, J., said: "It is certainly not the duty of a trustee to litigate every question that may be called to his notice by the creditors, however frivolous or apparently lacking in support it may be. On the other hand, he should not be permitted, by requiring indemnity in every instance against the costs and expenses of a suit, to cast the risk of controversy upon the particular creditor who may request him to undertake it. A general rule upon this subject would be very difficult to lay down, and I shall not essay the enterprise. It may be safely said, however, that if a trustee bears in mind that he is the representative of the estate considered as a whole, is bound to be vigilant and attentive in advancing its interests, and is under obligation to seek to carry out in the strictest good faith the provisions of the Bankrupt Act where they seem to apply plainly to the estate committed to his charge, he is not likely to go far wrong in doing, or in refusing to do, what may be asked of him by the creditors. In doubtful cases the referee and the court will solve his perplexities."

But it has been held that the trustee will not be permitted to seek the advice of the court upon a mere question of law about which he should have consulted an attorney, or, if necessary, tested the question by an action at law. In re Baber, (E. D. Tenn. 1902) 119 Fed. 520, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406.

On an application of a trustee in bankruptcy to the court for advice as to whether he should file a petition to have the claim of a creditor expunged for fraud, the referee has no authority to hear and determine the subject-matter of such petition on the merits. In re Baber, (E. D. Tenn. 1902) 119 Fed. 520, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406.

Trustee should have probable cause for action. — The duty of the trustee to institute litigation does not mean that he should burden the assets of the estate with costs and expenses arising out of all manner of questions that may be presented for litigation. There should be probable cause at least for believing that a right of action exists before the bankrupt estate is so burdened. In re Meadows, (W. D. N. Y. 1910) 181 Fed. 911.

When trustee may abandon claims. — It is not the privilege of a trustee in bankruptcy to use the estate committed to his charge to settle questions of law which may arise; and if success is doubtful in case of a claim alleged to be due the estate, and the result, if successful, will not enhance the value of the estate after paying the expense, it is his duty as a general rule to abandon the claim, unless at least a substantial majority of the creditors desire the litigation to proceed. If the trustee has an adequate remedy at law, a bill in equity cannot be maintained in any court. Whatever equitable jurisdiction may have been conferred upon the District Court by the Bankruptcy Act is confined to controversies relating to a bankrupt Within this limited area whether or estate. not a bill in equity may be maintained must be tested by the ordinary rules that govern bills before any other tribunal, and perhaps the most familiar test is to inquire whether the plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law. Sessler v. Nemcof, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 183 Fed. 656.

Sales of property — Court has discretionary control of sales. — As respects trustees, and their proceedings in selling the property of bankrupts, section 47a (2) vests the bankruptcy court with complete discretionary power of control. Court may entertain proposition to purchase assets. - The court has full power to entertain, and in its discretion to accept, a proposition to buy the assets of the estate; and when it does so and the contract raised by such judicial determination has been in part executed, but not wholly so, the matter remains in process of administration by the court of bankruptcy, and cannot be disturbed or changed without seriously impeding the enforcement of the act interfering with the administration of the estate. In such case there can be little doubt of the power of the court to restrain by injunction any proceeding which will have a damaging effect. In re Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., (W. D. In the exercise of the direction of section 47a (2), the court may, if it sees fit, in a particular case, disapprove the selection of an auctioneer to sell the property, which the trustee has made, and order him to select another designated by the court. And it seems that the court may make orders concerning the selection of an auctioneer even before the appointment of one by the trustee. In re Benjamin, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 175, 14 Am. Bankrupt corporation cannot interfere with purchaser of its business, good will, and name.
— In S. F. Myers Co. v. Tuttle, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 532, it appears that the S. F. Myers Company, doing a mail order jewelry business, became bankrupt, and its assets, including its good will and corporate name, were purchased by T. Thereafter the sons of Myers formed a corporation called the "S. F. Myers' Sons Company" and undertook to carry on a similar business at the same place occupied by the bankrupt corporation. This was enjoined, at the suit of T., and the new corporation was ordered either to change its name, so as not to produce confusion, or change its place of business; it also being enjoined from interfering with the business carried on by T. under the name of the old corporation. And it was held that the old corporation, having obtained a discharge in bankruptcy, but having no assets, was not entitled to enjoin T. from continuing to use the name of the old corporation; but such corporation could be restrained from interfering with the business of T. which he was carrying on under such name.

General order No. 17 prescribes the procedure to be pursued by the trustee in setting apart exempt property, and the time and manner in which exceptions may be taken to his report. In re Smith, (W. D. Tex. 1899) 93 Fed. 791, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190.

Provisions as to exemptions are mandatory. - The provisions of the bankruptcy law requiring the trustee to set apart the bankrequiring the cluster to set apart the bank-rupt's exemptions, and report the items and estimated value thereof to the court, are mandatory, and these duties cannot be per-formed by any one else. In re Grimes, (W. D. N. C. 1899) 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 160.

A payment to a bankrupt by his trustee of a sum claimed as an exemption, from the funds of the estate, will not be allowed on settlement of the estate, where it does not appear that the exemption was set aside by the trustee as required by the Bankruptcy Act. In re Hoyt, (E. D. N. C. 1903) 119 Fed. 987, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 574. Trustee acts ministerially.— In setting apart the property claimed by a bankrupt as exempt, after its appraisal, the trustee acts ministerially. In re Campbell, (W. D. Va. 1903) 124 Fed. 417, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

Exemption should be set aside promptly. It is the duty of the trustee to set apart the bankrupt's exemptions as soon as practicable after his appointment, without waiting until such exemptions shall have been allowed and set apart by state officers according to the procedure prescribed by the laws of the state. In re Camp, (N. D. Ga. 1899) 91 Fed. 745, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165.

Trustee not entitled to indemnity bond. -A trustee in bankruptcy has no right to demand from the bankrupt, as a condition upon his delivery to him of the property claimed as exempt and appraised for that purpose, a bond of indemnity. In re Brown, (W. D. Pa. 1899) 100 Fed. 441, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Trustee should deliver possession to bank-rupt, in absence of objection.—It is the duty of a trustee in bankruptcy, who has set apart for the bankrupt the personal property selected by him as exempt, pursuant to an order of the referee, and reported the same, to which report no exception was taken, to deliver possession of such property to the bankrupt. In re Soper, (D. C. Neb. 1909) 173 Fed. 116, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 868.

Allowing exemption prior to appointment of trustee. - The determination of a bankrupt's claim to a homestead exemption by the referee before the appointment of a trustee, although informal, and not in accordance with the regular course of procedure, may be sanctioned by the court in the exercise of its equity powers, where it appears that the bankrupt has no property except that involved in the claim; so that, if the exemption should be allowed, there would be no occasion for the appointment of a trustee. In re Allen, (W. D. Va. 1904) 134 Fed. 620, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518.

Exemption from proceeds of sale. - Where property claimed by a bankrupt as exempt has been sold by the trustee, the exemption should be set apart out of the proceeds of the sale. In re Park, (W. D. Ark. 1900) 102 Fed. 602, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 432.

Exemption in lands without jurisdiction. - A court of bankruptcy is without jurisdiction to allot to a bankrupt, domiciled within its district, a homestead in lands situated in another district. In re Owings, (E. D. N. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 739, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472.

Trustee's action not final. - While it is the duty of the trustee to set apart the exemption of the bankrupt, his action is not final, but the courts of bankruptcy are expressly given jurisdiction by section 2 (11) to determine all claims to exemptions. In re White, (D. C. Vt. 1900) 103 Fed. 774, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 613.

The fact that a bankrupt accepted the benefit of an order of a referee allowing him certain personal property exemptions does not preclude him from appealing from a part of the same order relating to his homestead exemption. In re Letson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 78, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506.

The trustee has the right to refuse to set apart the exemptions claimed in the bankrupt's schedules, where the bankrupt is not entitled to them, even if the claim is correct in form. In re Ellis, (N. D. Ohio 1903) 10

Am. Bankr. Rep. 754.

But it must be for some gross fault that a claim to exemption should be disallowed. In re Tollett, (6th Cir. 1901) 106 Fed. 866, 46 C. C. A. 11, 54 L. R. A. 222, 5 Am. Bankr. Effect of setting apart of exempt property

- Jurisdiction of bankruptoy court ceases.

- When the exempted property has been duly set apart to the bankrupt by the trustee, in accordance with the statutory mandate. the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court there-over ceases. In re Grimes, (W. D. N. C. 1899) 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 160; In re Hatch, (S. D. Ia. 1900) 102 Fed. 280, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349; In re Gordon, (D. C. Vt. 1902) 115 Fed. 445, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 255; In re Reese, (N. D. Ala. 1902) 115 Fed. 993, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411.

Exemption cannot be restored to former status. — After exempt property has been set aside, the ccurt of bankruptcy will not, on the petition of a creditor claiming a lien on such property by virtue of a chattel mortgage, order the bankrupt to restore the property to the trustee, in order that it may be sold by the latter for the benefit of the mortgagee. In re Hatch, (S. D. Ia. 1900) 102 Fed. 280, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349.

The trustee cannot administer on exempt property; nor can he determine the rights of creditors asserting waivers against it. After it has been set apart he loses all power and control over it. Bell v. Dawson Grocery Co., (Ga. 1904) 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159.

General creditor's interest ceases on set-ting apart of exemptions. — Where property claimed by a bankrupt as exempt has been set apart and delivered to him by the trustee, it passes out of the possession and control of the court of bankruptcy, and the trustee has no right or title thereto, nor the general creditors any interest or equity in such property. In re Hatch, (S. D. Ia. 1900) 102 Fed. 280, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349.

Rights of lienholder. - Setting aside property as exempt does not affect the rights of a lienholder, nor does it in any wise prevent a creditor, whose claim is not avoided by the discharge in bankruptcy, from proceeding against the property in the hands of the bankrupt, just as though he had not been adjudged a bankrupt. In re Hartsell, (N. D. Als. 1905) 140 Fed. 30, 15 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 177.

 $ar{m{E}}$ nforcement of claim against exemption. Where a trustee in bankruptcy retains out of the proceeds of the sale of the bankrupt's property a certain sum for the benefit of any liens or claims that might be established against the property, a state court has jurisdiction to hear and determine an action brought against such trustee to enforce a chattel mortgage executed by the bankrupt, and to recover the amount due on a note which the mortgage was given to secure, if the bankruptcy court does not enjoin the prosecution of such action. Skilton v. Codington, (1906) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 810, 185 N. Y. 80, 77 N. E. 790.

Estimating value of exemption.—The bankrupt may make his claim for exemptions, but the trustee must set it apart and estimate its value. In re Osborn, (W. D.

N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 780, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111; In re Manning, (E. D. Pa. 1902) 112 Fed. 948, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571.

Valuation by sale. - It has been held that a practical method for the determination of disputes arising from the valuation of property claimed to be exempt is to order the property in question sold, the trustee to set apart to the bankrupt the proceeds to the extent of the amount allowed as exemption by the state laws. In re Lynch, (S. D. Ga. 1900) 101 Fed. 579, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263. See, also, In re Richard, (E. D. N. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 633, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; In re Osborn, (W. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 780, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111.

Where a trustee finds the homestead property of the bankrupt, which exceeds in value the homestead exemption, indivisible, he may apply to the referee for an order of sale.

In re Oderkirk, (D. C. Vt. 1900) 103 Fed.

779, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 617.

Agreement as to conclusiveness of appraisal. — An agreement between a bankrupt and his creditors that the exemptions shall be valued and allotted by three appraisers, whose decision shall be final and not subject to exception, is void; and an order made by the referee, by consent of parties in the terms of such agreement, will be set aside. In re Grimes, (W. D. N. C. 1899) 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730.

Revaluation will be directed when necessary. — Where a trustee in bankruptcy, in setting apart to the bankrupt the property claimed as his homestead, has adopted the value placed upon it by appraisers fifteen years before, when it was allotted to the bankrupt as a homestead under process of a state court, but it appears that the property has since increased in value beyond the amount allowed as exempt by the laws of the state, the court of bankruptcy will direct the trustee to revalue the property, and set apart to the bankrupt so much thereof as shall not exceed in value the amount so allowed. In re McBryde, (E. D. N. C. 1899) 99 Fed. 686, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729.

Deduction from amount allowed as exempt - Where property is sold at bankrupt's request. - Where personal property which the bankrupts were entitled to claim as exempt was sold at the bankrupt's request that cash be allowed them instead of the property, the bankrupts should be charged with their percentage of the difference between the proceeds of the property and its appraised value, as against the amount of their exemptions. In re Ansley, (E. D. N. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 983, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457.

Storage charge deducted. - It has been held that if the trustee has no cash in hand with which to pay storage charges to a landlord whose property he has occupied for the storage of the bankrupt's goods, he may be ordered to sell sufficient personal property for that purpose; and this will take precedence of the bankrupt's claim to have his exemptions set apart out of such personalty. In re Grimes, (W. D. N. C. 1899) 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730.

Fees of court officers. - The exemptions allowed by the statute were not intended to exonerate the bankrupt from the payment of the fees provided for the court officers. In re Hines, (S. D. W. Va. 1902) 117 Fed. 790, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27.

Where the bankrupts converted a sum of money which was derived from the sale of goods between the time of the filing of the petition for adjudication and the time when the property was taken into custody by the deputy marshal, it was held that such sum should be deducted from the bankrupts' exemptions. In re Ansley, (E. D. N. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 983, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457.

And where the bankrupts failed to make a full disclosure of their personal property, but the amount of the concealment could not be ascertained, it was held that the trustee should not allow their personal property ex-emptions until all of the personal property had been accounted for, except on the orders of the court. In re Ansley, (E. D. N. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 983, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457.

The court cannot order a trustee in bankruptcy to pay rent, overdue at the time of the adjudication, out of the property to be set apart to the bankrupt as exempt, although the bankrupt had so agreed with the landlord before the commencement of the proceedings. In re Grimes, (W. D. N. C. 1899) 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730.

Costs and expenses. — In In re Le Vay, (M. D. Pa. 1903) 125 Fed. 990, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114, it was held that where the bankrupt has properly claimed his exemption, it cannot be diminished by, or put aside in favor of, the costs and expenses made in the proceedings, even where these have been incurred in steps taken to preserve the property, as by a sale of it by a receiver as perishable.

Objections to trustee's report. - Any creditor may object to the report of the trustee as to the bankrupt's exemptions, with respect to either their allowance, valuation, or other matter affecting the creditor's interest. In re Campbell, (W. D. Va. 1903) 124 Fed. 417, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723; Matter of Amos, (S. D. Ga. 1908) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723 804; Matter of Cotton, (S. D. Ga. 1909) 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 586; In re Cotton, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 532.

The bankrupt may also except to the trustee's report on exemptions. In re Ellis, (N. D. Ohio 1903) 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754.

Issue arises when report is filed. - No issue as to the bankrupt's right to the exemption arises until the trustee's report is filed; issue may then be taken by exceptions thereto which cast the burden of proving all facts essential to the right upon the bank-rupt. In re Campbell, (W. D. Va. 1903) 124 Fed. 417, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

The question of the status of a particular chattel claimed by the bankrupt as exempt, and by a creditor as assets of the estate, cannot properly come before the court for determination until a trustee has been appointed and has made his report of the articles set apart by him as exempt. Exceptions to the trustee's action may then be heard by the referee, and certified by him to the judge for final determination. In re Smith, (W. D. Tex. 1899) 93 Fed. 791, 2

Am. Bankr. Rep. 190.

Process unnecessary.—A creditor is not precluded from objecting to the allowance of exemption to a bankrupt because he is not armed with process; the bankruptcy proceedings themselves being in effect a seizure of all the debtor's property. In re Campbell, (W. D. Va. 1903) 124 Fed. 417, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

Verification of objections. — While an exception to the report of a trustee setting apart the bankrupt's exemptions is in some sense a pleading in that it makes an issue, it is doubtful if it need be verified, and in any event the lack of verification is not jurisdictional; and where not objected to on the hearing before the referee, objections cannot be made on a review of his decision by the court. In re Campbell, (W. D. Va. 1903) 124 Fed. 417, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723

Time to object. — Objections to a trustee's report setting apart the bankrupt's exemption must, by general order in bankruptcy No. 17, be filed within twenty days after the filing of the report. Matter of Amos, (S. D. Ga. 1908) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 804; Matter of Cotton, (S. D. Ga. 1909) 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 586, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332.

Where the last day comes on Sunday, a creditor has until the following day in which to file objections. Matter of Amos, (S. D. Ga. 1908) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 804.

A creditor desiring to object to the trus-

A creditor desiring to object to the trustee's report setting apart the bankrupt's exemption should file all of his objections within the time fixed by law, and cannot come in after the expiration of that time and add new and additional grounds to his objections already of file; but it is otherwise as to the enlargement or amplification of grounds originally taken. In re Cotton, (S. D. Ga. 1910) 183 Fed. 190, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 532.

Burden of proof.—One objecting to the allowance of a bankrupt's exemption must show affirmatively that the bankrupt was not entitled to claim the property. In re Rippa, (S. D. Fla. 1909) 180 Fed. 603. See also In re Grimes, (W. D. N. C. 1899) 94 Fed. 800, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 160; In re Filer, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 108 Fed. 209, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332.

The burden of showing that an article alleged to be exempt is within the provisions of the statute rests on the bankrupt. In re Turnbull, (D. C. Mass. 1901) 106 Fed. 867, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549.

- b [Concurrence of two out of three.] Whenever three trustees have been appointed for an estate, the concurrence of at least two of them shall be necessary to the validity of their every act concerning the administration of the estate. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 557.]
- c [File certified copy of decree of adjudication.] The trustee shall, within thirty days after the adjudication, file a certified copy of the decree of adjudication in the office where conveyances of real estate are recorded in every county where the bankrupt owns real estate not exempt from execution, and pay the fee for such filing, and he shall receive a compensation of fifty cents for each copy so filed, which, together with the filing fee, shall be paid out of the estate of the bankrupt as a part of the cost and disbursements of the proceedings. [(Inserted 1903) 32 Stat. L. 799.]
- Sec. 48. Compensation of trustees, receivers and marshals: (a) [Fee and commissions of trustee.] Trustees shall receive for their services, payable after they are rendered, a fee of five dollars deposited with the clerk at the time the petition is filed in each case, except when a fee is not required from a voluntary bankrupt, and such commissions on all moneys disbursed or turned over to any person, including lien holders, by them, as may be allowed by the courts, not to exceed six per centum on the first five hundred dollars or less, four per centum on moneys in excess of five hundred dollars and less than fifteen hundred dollars, two per centum on moneys in excess of fifteen hundred dollars and less than ten thousand dollars, and one per centum on moneys in excess of ten thousand dollars. And in case of the confirmation of a composition after the trustee has qualified the court may allow him, as compensation, not to exceed one-half of one per centum of the amount to be paid the creditors on such composition. [(Amended 1903 and 1910) 32 Stat. L. 799 and 36 Stat. L. 840.]

Commissions on payments to lienholders.

Commissions on payments to lienholders.—There can now be no question of the right of the trustee to commissions on money turned over to lienors, such commissions having been expressly provided for by the amendment of 1910; prior to that enactment, however, the question presented a conflict of opinion. See In re Anders Push Button Telephone Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 136 Fed. 995, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 643; In re Cramond, (N.

A trustee cannot be compelled to serve without compensation; and where there are no assets, if creditors insist upon the appointment of a trustee they must advance the statutory fee or otherwise arrange for the trustee's compensation. In re Levy, (E. D. Wis. 1900) 101 Fed. 247.

Extra compensation.—A court of bank-ruptcy is without authority to allow compensation to a trustee in excess of that fixed by section 48, notwithstanding the fact that such trustee has given his personal time and attention to the business of the estate, and by reason of his business ability he has realized from the bankrupt's assets far more than would ordinarily have been obtained. Bankr. Rep. 876. 104 Md. 648, 65 Atl. 430. And see the annotation under section 72.

A trustee who is also an attorney at law is not entitled to extra compensation for legal services rendered by him to the estate. In re George Halbert Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 134 Fed. 236, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 399.

- (b) [Where more than one trustee.] In the event of an estate being administered by three trustees instead of one trustee or by successive trustees, the court shall apportion the fees and commissions between them according to the services actually rendered, so that there shall not be paid to trustees for the administering of any estate a greater amount than one trustee would be entitled to. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558; (1910) 36 Stat. L. 840.]
- (c) [Withholding compensation.] The court may, in its discretion, withhold all compensation from any trustee who has been removed for cause. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558; (1910) 36 Stat. L. 840.]

Effect of trustee's negligence. — Where a receiver or trustee has been negligent in the performance of his duty, the court may, in a proper case, without the filing of any exceptions, deny him any commissions. In re Schoenfeld, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 219.

Where a bankrupt's trustee was allowed to resign to avoid the odium of removal because of his friendly attitude to the bankrupts, and his apathy to proceedings instituted to compel the bankrupts to turn over property which they had withheld, it was held that his claim for compensation should be at least partially denied. In re Fidler, (M. D. Pa. 1909) 172 Fed. 632, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 16.

(d) [Compensation of receivers and marshals appointed under section 2 (3).] Receivers or marshals appointed pursuant to section two, subdivision three, of this Act shall receive for their services, payable after they are rendered, compensation by way of commissions upon the moneys disbursed or turned over to any person, including lien holders, by them, and also upon the moneys turned over by them or afterwards realized by the trustees from property turned over in kind by them to the trustees, as the court may allow, not to exceed six per centum on the first five hundred dollars or less, four per centum on moneys in excess of five hundred dollars and less than one thousand five hundred dollars, two per centum on moneys in excess of one thousand five hundred dollars and less than ten thousand dollars, and one per centum on moneys in excess of ten thousand dollars: [(Inserted 1910) 36 Stat. L. 840.]

Compensation for preserving estate. appointment of receivers is authorized only when absolutely necessary for the preservation of estates, and their compensation should be measured by that provided for trustees for similar services. Dunlap Hardware Co. v. Huddleston, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1909) 167

Fed. 433, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 731.

Authority to compensate receiver appointed in another district. - Where, pending action on an involuntary petition, which was subsequently dismissed by the court, a receiver was appointed, who remained in possession of the property when defendants were adjudicated bankrupts in another district, it was held that the authority to compensate the receiver passed to the court making the adjudication, which took exclusive jurisdiction of the estate. In re Sears, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 128 Fed.

Irregular and improper receivership. -Where, immediately on the filing of a bankruptcy petition by a dry goods merchant, certain lawyers, by purchasing a claim and having the same assigned to a clerk in the office of one of them, obtained the appointment of one of them as receiver on false representations to the judge, and further secured other associated lawyers to be appointed as appraisers who made no proper appraisement, and then sought, but failed, to obtain an order for the immediate sale of the assets which was unnecessary, it was held that such receivership and the proceedings thereunder were irregular, and improper, and of no value to the estate; and hence an allowance would not be made for the services of the receiver or his attorney, or those of the appraisers. In re Desrochers, (N. D. N. Y. 1911) 183 Fed. 992.

Receiver's expenses - Court may order expenses paid out of assets in first instance. -After jurisdiction has attached in a bankruptcy proceeding, and a receiver has been appointed to take charge of the assets of the alleged bankrupt, the court has power in the first instance to direct that the needful expenses and compensation of the receiver be paid out of the property in his hands, though the proceedings are subsequently dismissed; it being no part of the receiver's duty to move to recover such expenses and compensation against the petitioning creditors. In re T. E. Hill Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1907) 159 Fed. 73, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73.

Court may compel petitioners to pay receiver's expenses. - A court of bankruptcy has authority, under its general equity powers, to order the petitioning creditors to pay the expenses of a receivership, where the receiver was appointed on their application on the filing of their petition, which was subsequently dismissed as unfounded. In re Lacov, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 960, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 290.

Unnecessary expenses. — A temporary receiver of a bankrupt is not entitled to charge for an expert examination of the bankrupt's books, nor for printing claim vouchers. In re Leonard, (D. C. Nev. 1910) 177 Fed. 503, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97.

Attorney services. - A receiver in bankruptcy being required to stand independent of the parties to the litigation, he will not be allowed to charge the estate for services rendered him by the attorney for either party during the continuance of such relation. In re T. L. Kelly Dry-Goods Co., (E. D. Wis. 1900) 102 Fed. 747, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528. See also In re Leonard, (D. C. Nev. 1910) 177 Fed. 503, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Where a receiver in bankruptcy was afterwards appointed trustee, and the receiver's counsel also acted as counsel for the trustee. it was held that the settlement of the receiver's fees and those of his counsel would be determined in connection with the claim for commissions and fees for services rendered to the estate as a whole. In re Carothers, (W. D. Pa. 1910) 182 Fed. 501.

Exceptions to the account of a receiver in bankruptcy should be verified; but the omission of a verification is a defect which is amendable. In re Ketterer Mfg. Co., (M. D.

Pa. 1907) 156 Fed. 719.

Marshal's compensation and expenses.— Where the court of bankruptcy, upon the filing of a petition in involuntary proceedings, orders the marshal to take possession of the property of the bankrupt and hold the same until a trustee is appointed, the marshal is entitled to receive, out of the estate, compensation for his services, under such order, in addition to the costs and expenses incurred. In re Adams Sartorial Art Co., (D. C. Colo. 1900) 101 Fed. 215, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107.

Fees for services. — In In re Damon, (W. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 775, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 133, it was held that the marshal is entitled to a reasonable fee for the service of papers in bankruptcy proceedings.

A deputy marshal appointed to take charge of the store of the bankrupt in a town other than that in which he resided, and to inventory the stock of general merchandise contained therein, will be allowed compensation at the rate of $2.50 per day, together with his actual and necessary expenses, but not including the cost of his board and lodging. In re Scott, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 404, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 625.

Such a deputy may also hire a watchman if he has reason to apprehend danger to the property; and a charge in his accounts of one dollar per day for the services of such watchman will be allowed by the court as expenses. In re Scott (E. D. N. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 404, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 625.

[On confirmation of composition.] Provided, That in case of the confirmation of a composition such commissions shall not exceed one-half of one per centum of the amount to be paid creditors on such compositions: [(Inserted 1910) 36 Stat. L. 841.

[When acting as mere custodian.] Provided further, That when the receiver or marshal acts as a mere custodian and does not carry on the business of the bankrupt as provided in clause five of section two of this Act, he shall not receive nor be allowed in any form or guise more than two per centum on the first thousand dollars or less, and one-half of one per centum on all above one thousand dollars on moneys disbursed by him or turned over by him to the trustee and on moneys subsequently realized from property turned over by him in kind to the trustee: [(Inserted 1910) 36 Stat. L. 841.]

(e) [Compensation for conducting business.] Where the business is conducted by trustees, marshals, or receivers, as provided in clause five of section two of this Act, the court may allow such officers additional compensation for such services by way of commissions upon the moneys disbursed or turned over to any person, including lien holders, by them, and, in cases of receivers or marshals, also upon the moneys turned over by them or afterwards realized by the trustees from property turned over in kind by them to the trustees; such commissions not to exceed six per centum on the first five hundred dollars or less, four per centum on moneys in excess of five hundred dollars and less than one thousand five hundred dollars, two per centum on moneys in excess of one thousand five hundred dollars and less than ten thousand dollars, and one per centum on moneys in excess of ten thousand dollars: [(Inserted 1910) 36 Stat. L. 841.

No additional compensation can be allowed beyond that provided for in section 48e. See section 2 (5), supra, p. 475, and see also the annotation under section 72.

Prior to the amendment of 1910, however, it was customary to allow additional compensation for conducting the business of the bankrupt. In re Shiebler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 336, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162; Matter of Pequod Brewing Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 352. Effect of transfer of proceedings. —

Where, on the filing of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, a receiver is appointed and authorized to continue the debtor's business, but a second petition is afterwards filed in another district, where an adjudication is made, and to which the proceedings are transferred, under general order No. 6, as being the district of his domicile, the court in the other district has jurisdiction to fix the com-pensation of its receiver and his counsel, although payment can only be made on order of the court having custody of the estate. In re Isaacson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 406, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 98.

[On confirmation of composition.] Provided, That in case of the confirmation of a composition such commissions shall not exceed one-half of one per centum of the amount to be paid creditors on such composition: [(Inserted 1910) 36 Stat. L. 841.]

- Sec. 49. Accounts and Papers of Trustees.—a The accounts and papers of trustees shall be open to the inspection of officers and all parties in interest. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]
- Sec. 50. Bonds of Referees and Trusters.—a [Referees' bonds.] Referees, before assuming the duties of their offices, and within such time as the district courts of the United States having jurisdiction shall prescribe, shall respectively qualify by entering into bond to the United States in such sum as shall be fixed by such courts, not to exceed five thousand dollars, with such sureties as shall be approved by such courts, conditioned for the faithful performance of their official duties. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]

The manifest purpose of Congress in requiring trustees, referees, and designated depositories to give bonds was to protect estates in bankruptcy from (among other acts on the part of these officers of the court) paying out funds otherwise than the law and rules permit. In re Hoyt, (E. D. N. C. 1903) 119 Fed. 987, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 574.

- b [Trustees' bonds.] Trustees, before entering upon the performance of their official duties, and within ten days after their appointment, or within such further time, not to exceed five days, as the court may permit, shall respectively qualify by entering into bond to the United States, with such sureties as shall be approved by the courts, conditioned for the faithful performance of their official duties. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]
- c [Creditors fixing amount of trustee's bond.] The creditors of a bankrupt estate, at their first meeting after the adjudication, or after a vacancy has occurred in the office of trustee, or after an estate has been reopened, or after a composition has been set aside or a discharge revoked, if there is a vacancy in the office of trustee, shall fix the amount of the bond of the trustee; they may at any time increase the amount of the bond. If the creditors do not fix the amount of the bond of the trustee as herein provided the court shall do so. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]
- d [Sureties' qualification.] The court shall require evidence as to the actual value of the property of sureties. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]
- e [Two sureties.] There shall be at least two sureties upon each bond. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]
- f [Value of property of sureties.] The actual value of the property of the sureties, over and above their liabilities and exemptions, on each bond shall equal at least the amount of such bond. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]
- g [Corporations as sureties.] Corporations organized for the purpose of becoming sureties upon bonds, or authorized by law to do so, may be accepted as sureties upon the bonds of referees and trustees whenever the courts are satisfied that the rights of all parties in interest will be thereby amply protected. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]
- h [Filing of and suit upon bonds.] Bonds of referees, trustees, and designated depositories shall be filed of record in the office of the clerk of the court and may be sued upon in the name of the United States for the use of any person injured by a breach of their conditions. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]

Action on trustee's bond — Jurisdiction. — in bankruptcy, in the name of the United A District Court of the United States has jurisdiction of an action brought by a trustee cover the value of property for which he has failed to account. U. S. v. Union Surety, etc., Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 118 Fed. 482, 9 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 114.

Manner of bringing action. — An action for breach of condition upon the bond of a trustee in bankruptcy may be maintained only in the name of the United States, and leave of court is not necessary for the bringing of such an action. Alexander v. Union Surety, etc., Co., (1903) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32, 89 App. Div. 3, 85 N. Y. S. 282.

Fugitive trustee not necessary party.—
In an action upon the bond of a defaulting trustee in bankruptcy, who is a fugitive from party. Alexander v. Union Surety, etc., Co., (1903) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32, 89 App. Div. 3, 85 N. Y. S. 282.

Order directing trustee to account, as prerequisite to action on bond. — Where a bank-rupt's trustee had not absconded without settling his accounts, but his account rendered had been allowed, showing the expendi-ture of the amount demanded by the bank-rupt in the administration of the estate, it was held that an order directing that the trustee should account was a necessary prerequisite to an action on his bond to recover property belonging to the estate. U. S. v. Sondheim, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 188 Fed. 378.

But where a trustee in bankruptcy absconded, and his whereabouts are unknown. an order directing him to account is not a necessary prerequisite to an action on his bond to recover funds of the estate embezzled by him. Scoffeld v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 1, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259.

Effect of settlement and allowance of trustee's account. - Where, after confirmation of a bankrupt's composition, the referee entertained an application to settle and allow the trustee's account, and allowed the same and discharged the trustee without any objection or appeal by the bankrupt, it was held that the referee could not thereafter disregard or dispute such allowance in a suit on the trustee's bond to recover the amount in his hands at the time the composition was confirmed. U. S. v. Sondheim, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 188 Fed. 378.

Surety's liability. - The liability of the trustee's surety extends to the necessary expenditure of the funds of the bankrupt estate as the immediate result of an embezzlement by the trustee; but it does not include the premium on the bond of the new trustee. Matter of Kajita, (D. C. Hawaii 1904) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19.

- i [Trustees' personal liability.] Trustees shall not be liable, personally or on their bonds, to the United States, for any penalties or forfeitures incurred by the bankrupts under this Act, of whose estates they are respectively trustees. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]
- j [Joint trustees.] Joint trustees may give joint or several bonds. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.7
- k [Vacancy by failure to give bond.] If any referee or trustee shall fail to give bond, as herein provided and within the time limited, he shall be deemed to have declined his appointment, and such failure shall create a vacancy in his office. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]
- l [Limitation of suits on referees' bonds.] Suits upon referees' bonds shall not be brought subsequent to two years after the alleged breach of the bond. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]
- m [Limitation of suits on trustees' bonds.] Suits upon trustees' bonds shall not be brought subsequent to two years after the estate has been closed. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.

Suits may be brought on a trustee's bond at any time within two years after the estate has been closed. Matter of Kajita, (D. C. Hawaii 1904) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19.
The trustee's bond does not become void on the first recovery, but continues in force for two years after the estate is closed, unless the amount thereof is previously exhausted. Matter of Kajita, (D. C. Hawaii 1904) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19.

- Sec. 51. Duties of Clerks. a Clerks shall respectively [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]
- (1) [Account for fees.] account for, as for other fees received by them, the clerk's fee paid in each case and such other fees as may be received for certified copies of records which may be prepared for persons other than officers; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]

(2) [Collect fees.] collect the fees of the clerk, referee, and trustee in each case instituted before filing the petition, except the petition of a proposed voluntary bankrupt which is accompanied by an affidavit stating that the petitioner is without, and can not obtain, the money with which to pay such fees; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 558.]

Necessity of paying filing fee.— A deposit of the statutory filing fee by a proposed voluntary bankrupt, not within the exception in favor of paupers, is a condition precedent to the filing of the petition. In re Barden, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 101 Fed. 553, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31.

The exemptions allowed by the Act do not excuse the payment from them of the fees of the bankruptcy court. In re Collier, (W. D. Tenn. 1899) 93 Fed. 191, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 182; In re Hines, (S. D. W. Va. 1902) 117 Fed. 790, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27; In re Mason, (S. D. Ala. 1910) 181 Fed. 899.

Thus it has been held that the bankrupt may be endered to pay such fees out of payments.

Thus it has been held that the bankrupt may be ordered to pay such fees out of pension money remaining in his hands at the time of the filing of the petition. In re Bean, (D. C. Vt. 1900) 100 Fed. 262, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53; In re Hines, (S. D. W. Va. 1902) 117 Fed. 790, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27 time of the ning of the petition. In re Dean, (D. C. Vt. 1900) 100 Fed. 262, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53; In re Hines, (S. D. W. Va. 1902) 117 Fed. 790, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27.

But a voluntary bankrupt whose petition is accompanied by an affidavit of inability cannot subsequently be required to pay such fees out of property set apart to him as exempt, or out of money earned by him after the filing of the petition. Sellers v. Bell, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 94 Fed. 801, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529.

Necessity of soliciting loan to pay fee.—
It has been held that a proposed voluntary bankrupt, who has not money enough to pay the filing fees, is not required to solicit gifts or loans from his friends for that purpose. Sellers v. Bell, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 94 Fed. 801, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; In re Mason, (S. D. Ala. 1910) 181 Fed. 899.
But see In re Hines, (S. D. W. Va. 1902) 117 Fed. 790, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27 where it

But see In re Hines, (S. D. W. Va. 1902) 117 Fed. 790, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27, where it was said that a fair construction of section 51 indicates that it was the intention of the Act to allow voluntary bankrupts to file their petition without the payment in advance of the fees therefor, only in case they did not have, and could not obtain, the money with which to pay such fees. In other words, if the bankrupt was absolutely without money or effects of any kind, but was able to borrow from his friends money with which to pay the court costs, he could not properly make the affidavit required in this case, and it would be his duty to pay the fees it would be his duty to pay the fees.

Filing in forma pauperis.— Upon presentation of a voluntary bankrupt's petition and schedules, accompanied by an affidavit that he is without, and cannot obtain, the money necessary to pay the filing fees, the clerk must file such petition. In re Collier, (W. D. Tenn. 1899) 93 Fed. 191, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 182; Sellers v. Bell, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 94 Fed. 801, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; In re Bean, (D. C. Vt. 1900) 100 Fed. 262, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53; In re Plimpton, (D. C. Vt. 1900) 103 Fed. 775, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 614; In re Hines, (S. D. W. Va. 1902) 117 Fed. 790; In re Mason, (S. D. Ala. 1910) 181 Fed. 899.

Pauper affidavit not conclusive. — In In re Collier, (W. D. Tenn. 1899) 93 Fed. 191, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 182, it was held that an affidavit of inability by the petitioner to pay the fees is not conclusive of his poverty; and if circumstances appear casting doubt upon the truth of the affidavit, the question may be sent to the referee, to investigate and report the facts as to petitioner's ability to deposit the fees.

Payment of filing fee as condition for discharge. —Where a petition was placed on file, and an adjudication made, without payment of the filing fee, it was held that an objection to such filing might be raised on the application for a discharge, and action on such application stayed until the filing fee was paid. It re Barden, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 101 Fed. 553, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31.

But in such case the referee has no au-

But in such case the referee has no authority to require the payment of the statutory fee as a condition to the granting of the discharge, as such power is given to the court alone, under general order No. 35 (4), and is to be exercised only on proof of the ability to pay such fee. In re Plimpton, (D. C. Vt. 1900) 103 Fed. 775, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 614.

- (3) [Delivery and return of papers.] deliver to the referees upon application all papers which may be referred to them, or, if the offices of such referees are not in the same cities or towns as the offices of such clerks, transmit such papers by mail, and in like manner return papers which were received from such referees after they have been used; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 559.]
- (4) [Pay referee's and trustee's fee.] and within ten days after each case has been closed pay to the referee, if the case was referred, the fee collected for him, and to the trustee the fee collected for him at the time of filing the petition. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 559.]

Sec. 52. Compensation of Clerks and Marshals. — a [Clerks' filing fee.] Clerks shall respectively receive as full compensation for their service to each estate, a filing fee of ten dollars, except when a fee is not required from a voluntary bankrupt. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 559.]

Cross-reference: As to Clerk's duty to collect and account for fees, see section 51a (1) and (2), supra, pp. 694, 695.

The fees provided by law to be paid the clerk are not debts, but are presumably for services for the benefit of the bankrupt. In re Bean, (D. C. Vt. 1900) 100 Fed. 262; In re Mason. (S. D. Als. 1910) 181 Fed. 899.

Mason, (S. D. Ala. 1910) 181 Fed. 899.

Fees for reference of petitions.—A clerk of a federal District and Circuit Court is entitled to his statutory per diem compensation for the days on which he refers, to the referee in bankruptcy, voluntary petitions in bankruptcy filed during the absence of the judge from the district, though such references are made without written orders to open the court for that or any other purpose. U. S. v. Marvin, (1909) 212 U. S. 275, 29 S. Ct. 297, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 510, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717

Rep. 717.

Fees for notifying creditors.—Clerks are not entitled to charge a fee of twenty-five cents for each notice sent to creditors on a petition for discharge, but are only entitled to the actual items of expense thereon for postage, stationery, and clerical work. In re Dunn Hardware, etc., Co., (E. D. N. C. 1905) 134 Fed. 997, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186.

b [Marshals' fees.] Marshals shall respectively receive from the estate where an adjudication in bankruptcy is made, except as herein otherwise provided, for the performance of their services in proceedings in bankruptcy, the same fees, and account for them in the same way, as they are entitled to receive for the performance of the same or similar services in other cases in accordance with laws now in force, or such as may be hereafter enacted, fixing the compensation of marshals. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 559.]

Cross-reference: As to Compensation of the marshal, see section 48 a and e, supra, p. 690 et seq.

- Sec. 53. Duties of Attorney-General. a The Attorney-General shall annually lay before Congress statistical tables showing for the whole country, and by States, the number of cases during the year of voluntary and involuntary bankruptcy; the amount of the property of the estates; the dividends paid and the expenses of administering such estates; and such other like information as he may deem important. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 559.]
- Sec. 54. Statistics of Bankruptcy Proceedings. a Officers shall furnish in writing and transmit by mail such information as is within their knowledge, and as may be shown by the records and papers in their possession, to the Attorney-General, for statistical purposes, within ten days after being requested by him to do so. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 559.]

CHAPTER VI.

CREDITORS.

Sec. 55. Meetings of Creditors. — a [Place and time.] The court shall cause the first meeting of the creditors of a bankrupt to be held, not less than ten nor more than thirty days after the adjudication, at the county seat of the county in which the bankrupt has had his principal place of business, resided, or had his domicile; or if that place would be manifestly inconvenient as a place of meeting for the parties in interest, or if the bankrupt is one who does not do business, reside, or have his domicile within the United States, the court shall fix a place for the meeting which is the most convenient for parties in interest.

If such meeting should by any mischance not be held within such time, the court shall fix the date, as soon as may be thereafter, when it shall be held. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 559.]

Time of holding first meeting. — The first meeting of creditors cannot be held until after the adjudication. In re Back Bay Automobile Co., (D. C. Mass. 1907) 158 Fed. 679, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

But see sec. 12a, supra, p. 540, whereby the bankrupt is authorized to offer composition to his creditors either before or after the adjudication. The right to offer composition before adjudication was inserted by the amendment of June 25, 1910, which also provides for the calling of a meeting for the purpose of taking action thereon. Technically, however, that meeting may not be considered such a "first meeting of creditors" as is contemplated by section 55a.

Referee may refuse to call meeting until petition and schedules are amended. — It is within the jurisdiction and discretion of a referee in bankruptcy to order amendments to be made in the petition and schedule of a voluntary bankrupt referred to him, in particulars as to which he finds them defective or insufficient, and to refuse to call a first meeting of creditors until such amendments be made. In re Brumelkamp, (N. D. N. Y. 1899) 95 Fed. 814, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Notice of meetings. — All known creditors are entitled to ten days' notice of the first and of all other meetings of the creditors; such notice must be given by the referee. In re Stein, (D. C. Ind. 1899) 94 Fed. 124, 1

Am. Bankr. Rep. 662.

An objection by an involuntary bankrupt to the regularity of a first meeting of his creditors, and to the validity of proceedings had thereat, on the ground that the notices of such meeting were prepared by the ref-eree before the bankrupt's own list of creditors was filed, whereby it resulted that some of the creditors were not notified, will not be sustained when it appears that the bankrupt's list of creditors was not filed within the time limited by the law, and was incomplete and imperfect. In re Schiller, (W. D. Va. 1899) 96 Fed. 400, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704.

Presence of creditors at meeting. - Creditors are not to be counted as present simply because their claims have been allowed. In order to be present they must attend in person or by duly authorized agent or attorney, and those creditors who do so attend constitute the meeting, whether they constitute a majority in number and value of the claims allowed or not. In re Kaufman, (W. D. Ky. 1910) 179 Fed. 552.

Bankrupt's presence at meeting. - It is not mandatory that the bankrupt be present at the first meeting of creditors unless so di-rected by the court or a judge thereof. In re Parker, (D. C. Kan. 1899) 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615.

b [Presiding officer — duties.] At the first meeting of creditors the judge or referee shall preside, and, before proceeding with the other business, may allow or disallow the claims of creditors there presented, and may publicly examine the bankrupt or cause him to be examined at the instance of any creditor. - d [Subsequent meetings of creditors.] A meeting of creditors, subsequent to the first one, may be held at any time and place when all of the creditors who have secured the allowance of their claims sign a written consent to hold a meeting at such time and place. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 559.]
- e [Meeting at call of court.] The court shall call a meeting of creditors whenever one-fourth or more in number of those who have proven their claims shall file a written request to that effect; if such request is signed by a majority of such creditors, which number represents a majority in amount of such claims, and contains a request for such meeting to be held at a designated place, the court shall call such meeting at such place within thirty days after the date of the filing of the request. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 560.]

The word "whenever," in section 55e, should be construed to mean "whenever after the first meeting," previously required to be held by section 55a, which can only be held not less than ten nor more than thirty days after adjudication. In re Back Bay Automobile Co., (D. C. Mass. 1907) 158 Fed. 679, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835, reversing 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 33.

f [Final meeting.] Whenever the affairs of the estate are ready to be closed a final meeting of creditors shall be ordered. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 560.]

Defective claims.—The absence of the date to a creditor's claim in bankruptcy is a fatal defect, which will prevent his participation in the creditors' meeting. In re Blue Ridge Packing Co., (M. D. Pa. 1903) 125 Fed. 619, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

But the mere fact that at the head of the proof of a claim in bankruptcy the title of the court is not given as required by general order 21 and form No. 31 is not sufficient to vitiate the proof so as to prevent the creditor's participation in the meeting. In re Blue Ridge Packing Co., (M. D. Pa. 1903) 125 Fed. 619, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

Assigned claims. — Where a claim has been assigned, the assignee is the real owner, and he alone can vote thereon at a creditors' meeting. In re Blount, (E. D. Ark. 1906) 142 Fed. 263, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97; In re Messengill, (E. D. N. C. 1902) 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669

Thus where one of the partners in a bankrupt firm has a claim against the firm, which he has assigned to a third person as collateral security for a debt, the holder cannot prove the claim nor vote on it, not being the owner of the claim; and, for a similar reason, the bankrupt partner cannot prove it. In re Eagles, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 695.

Presence at meeting. - Claims allowed are not to be counted where the creditor is not present, and the power of attorney of his proxy is insufficient. In re Henschel, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 443, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662, reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 109

Voting by attorney.—The mere relation of attorney for the creditors of a bankrupt does not authorize such attorney to vote in behalf of his clients at the election of trustee. In re Scully, (E. D. Pa. 1901) 108 Fed. 372, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 716; In re Lazoris, (E. D. Wis. 1903) 120 Fed. 716, 10 Am.

Where a power of attorney authorizing its holder to represent a creditor at a meeting of a bankrupt's creditors is mislaid, and not produced until the meeting is over, the attorney is properly refused the right to participate. In re Blue Ridge Packing Co., (M. D. Pa. 1903) 125 Fed. 619, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

In bankruptcy proceedings, under general order No. 21, which requires that a letter of attorney executed on behalf of a partnership must show that the person executing it is a member of the firm, the fact that such statement is contained in the proof of debt ac-companying the letter, though absent from the letter itself, is sufficient to entitle the attorney to represent the creditor in the creditors' meeting. In re Blue Ridge Packing Co., (M. D. Pa. 1903) 125 Fed. 619, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

An attorney should not be permitted to vote any claim which has come to him through the instrumentality of the bankrupt: but the fact that he so received claims is not sufficient ground for excluding his vote on claims which came to him unsolicited. In re Lloyd, (E. D. Wis. 1906) 148 Fed. 92,

17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96.

A power of attorney from a creditor of a bankrupt, running jointly to one of the bankrupt's attorneys and another, does not entitle either to vote on such claim at a creditors' meeting. In re Columbia Iron Works, (E. D. Mich. 1904) 142 Fed. 234, 14 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 526.
Effect of objection to claim — Generally. Claims should not be voted where duly verified legal objections are filed thereto; but the referee may proceed to take proof, and if the objecting party cannot produce sufficient evidence to sustain the objections the claim may be allowed. If, however, the objecting party shows legal cause for delay for the purpose of producing evidence not at hand, the reference may in some cases allow the claim for voting purposes. In re Evening Standard Pub. Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1908) 164 Fed. 517, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 156.

But it does not rest in the discretion of the referee to allow claims as a voting basis when objections are made which are apparently genuine. In re Malino, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 118 Fed. 368, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 205.

While the mere filing of objections to a claim should not exclude the creditor from voting on the election of a trustee, it has been held that such action by the referee will not be reviewed when no objection is made to the election, and no facts are presented on which to raise the question of the rights of creditors in such case. In re T. L. Kelly Dry-Goods Co., (E. D. Wis. 1900) 102 Fed. 747, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528.

Objecting creditors and the bankrupt are entitled to a hearing upon the objections for the purpose of determining, at least, whether they are honestly made and there is reason-able ground for their consideration; and if these facts are established the claims should not be allowed for the purpose of voting. In re Malino, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 118 Fed.

368, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 205.

b [Voting by secured creditors.] Creditors holding claims which are secured or have priority shall not, in respect to such claims, be entitled to vote at creditors' meetings, nor shall such claims be counted in computing either the number of creditors or the amount of their claims, unless the amounts of such claims exceed the values of such securities or priorities, and then only for such excess. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 560.]

As to the amendment of proofs of claims subsequent to the time allowed for proving the original claim, and the effect of such subsequent amendment, see the annotation under subdivision n of this section, infra, p. 712.

Amendment to avoid objection on ground of usury. - Where a creditor of a bankrupt sought to prove a note drawing usurious interest, and the claim was disallowed on account of such usury, the creditor is entitled to amend his original proof by substituting therefor a claim for money fraudulently obtained by the bankrupt and received to the claimant's use. In re Robinson, (D. C. Mass. 1905) 136 Fed. 994, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626.

Amendment of claim declared fraudulent disallowed. — Where a claim of lien under a mortgage had been declared fraudulent, it was held that the claimants were not entitled to amend so as to prove such claim as a general claim against the bankrupt's estate. In re Vogt, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 764.

Amendment to obtain undue advantage disallowed. - The court should not permit a creditor to alter his position materially for the express purpose of obtaining an advantage over other creditors, to which he would not otherwise be entitled. In re Miners' Brewing Co., (E. D. Pa. 1908) 162 Fed. 327, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717.

Who may prove claims - Creditors. - Any creditor whose claim is provable in bankruptcy may make the proof required by section 57a. As to what constitutes provable claims, see the several subdivisions of section 63, infra, p. 753.

But a creditor of a bankrupt, who is also his debtor in a larger amount, will not be permitted to prove his claim against the estate so long as his own debt remains unpaid. In re Gerson, (E. D. Pa. 1901) 105 Fed. 893. See also In re Wiener, etc., Shoe Co., (E. D. Pa. 1899) 96 Fed. 949, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200.

And where, under the law of the state, the assignee of a nonnegotiable judgment note takes it subject to all equities and defenses available against it in the hands of the assignor, he will not be entitled to prove it as a claim against the estate of the maker in bankruptcy, unless the assignor could have done so. In re Wiener, etc., Shoe Co., (E. D. Pa. 1899) 96 Fed. 949, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200.

Proof by attorney. - The attorney for a creditor may, in behalf of his client, make the proof required by the statute; but in such case the reason for the making of proof by the attorney, and the fact that he has the requisite information for that purpose, should be made to appear. In re Kimball, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 100 Fed. 777, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 144; In re McKenna, (N. D. N. Y. 1905) 137 Fed. 611, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4; Matter of Fils, (D. C. N. J. 1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep.

It is not improper for the attorneys of a bankrupt's trustee to make out and present formal proof of the claim of a creditor, where nothing appears to indicate that such attorneys did anything for the creditor that would in any way prejudice the interests of the bankrupt or his estate. In re McKenna, (N. D. N. Y. 1905) 137 Fed. 611, 15 Am. Bankr.

Proof by attorney in fact. — A corporation may make proof of its claim by agent or attorney in fact, when there is a sufficient reason why it should be so made, but not otherwise. Matter of Fils, (D. C. N. J. 1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215.

Proof by assignee. — It is the settled practice in bankruptcy that choses in action which have been assigned before a petition is filed are to be proved by the assignee as being the substantial party in interest. Leighton v. Kennedy, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 737, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229.

The form by which a claim against a bankrupt was transferred is immaterial, and cannot affect the right of the assignee to prove the claim, where it is sufficient to estop the original holder from asserting a right to it.

In re Miner, (D. C. Ore. 1902) 117 Fed. 953, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100.

A receiver appointed for an insolvent debtor may prove a claim against the bankrupt's estate for a significant state. tate for a debt due such insolvent debtor. Dight v. Chapman, (1904) 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 743, 44 Ore. 265, 75 Pac. 585.

An executor may make a proof of claim against the estate of a bankrupt, under section 57a, for a debt due to the estate which such executor represents. In re Woods, (D. C. Pa. 1904) 133 Fed. 82, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240.

Proof by legates. — Where an executor refuses to prove a claim due his decedent's estate, the legatees should be allowed to do so. In re Lough, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 182 Fed.

Proof by relative of bankrupt. - The fact that one presenting a claim against a bank-rupt is closely related to him, justifies a more rigid scrutiny than would otherwise be required, but does not of itself warrant its rejection. Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Mack, (S. D. Ohio) 163 Fed. 160 note, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 919; Baumhauer v. Austin, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 260.

An undischarged bankrupt should be allowed to prove against the estate of another bankrupt a claim which accrued subsequent to the filing of his own petition. Matter of Smith, (N. D. N. Y.) 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 37.

Effect of proving claims - Proof binds claimant. — A claimant who makes proof of his claim and secures its allowance is, in the absence of inadvertence, fraud, or mistake, bound thereby, because, when a creditor makes proof of his claim against a bankrupt's estate, he stands in the position of a plaintiff at law, and becomes a party to the suit. In re Kenyon, (S. D. Ohio 1907) 156 Fed. 863, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 195.

Proof fixes status as creditor. — One who has filed a formal proof of claim against a bankrupt's estate has a prima facie status as a creditor, which cannot be collaterally attacked, but continues, unless his claim is objected to and disallowed either when first presented or on reconsideration. In re Roanoke Furnace Co., (E. D. Pa. 1907) 152 Fed. 846, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 661.

Acquiescence in adjudication. - A creditor, by filing its claim in bankruptcy, acquiesces in the adjudication. In re New York Tunnel Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 166 Fed. 284,

21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

Proof does not waive right of action. -The filing of a proof of claim in bankruptcy is not a waiver of a right of action on the claim in another court. In re Buchan's Soap Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 169 Fed. 1017, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; Maxwell v. Martin, (1909) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93, 130 App. Div. 80, 114 N. Y. S. 349.

Toll of limitation period. — Where a written statement of claim, duly verified, is filed with the referee within the year, such filing is sufficient to take the claim out of the statutory limitation. In re Mertens, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 177, 16 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 825.

Withdrawal of proof of claim. — A creditor who has filed a proof of claim against a bankrupt estate may be permitted to with-draw it. In re Weaver, (N. D. Ga. 1904) 144 Fed. 229, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; In re Strickland, (S. D. Ga. 1909) 167 Fed. 867, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734; In re Stewart, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 178 Fed. 463.

Withdrawal as matter of right. - It has also been held that the withdrawal or abandonment of a claim is a matter of right in the creditor, and not a matter of discretion with the referee or judge. In re Stewart, (N.

D. N. Y. 1910) 178 Fed. 463.

Withdrawal to proceed in state court. - creditor may properly be permitted to withdraw his claim and intervention in order to prosecute his remedy in the state court. In re Strickland, (S. D. Ga. 1909) 167 Fed. 867, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734; In re Stewart, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 178 Fed. 463.

b [When claim founded upon writing.] Whenever a claim is founded upon an instrument of writing, such instrument, unless lost or destroyed, shall be filed with the proof of claim. If such instrument is lost or destroyed, a statement of such fact and of the circumstances of such loss or destruction shall be filed under oath with the claim. After the claim is allowed or disallowed, such instrument may be withdrawn by permission of the court, upon leaving a copy thereof on file with the claim. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 560.]

Failure to file a written instrument, which is the basis of a claim against a bankrupt's estate, or to attach the same to the proof of claim, does not raise a presumption against the existence of the writing. In re Dresser, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 495, 13

Am. Bankr. Rep. 747.

Where it did not appear that original notes and a mortgage, which were the basis of a claim against a bankrupt, were attached to the claim as required by the bankruptcy law, but no objection was urged on that ground, it was presumed that such original securities were present at the trial and not attached, or that their presence was waived. In re Carter, (W. D. Ark. 1905) 138 Fed. 846, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126.

Withdrawal of instrument. - After the proof and allowance of a claim, the referee may permit the withdrawal of the original note, on which the claim was based, on leaving a copy thereof on file. In re Loden, (N. D. Ga. 1910) 184 Fed. 965.

c [Filing claims.] Claims after being proved may, for the purpose of allowance, be filed by the claimants in the court where the proceedings are pending or before the referee if the case has been referred. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 560.]

Filing essential. - It has been held that a claim is not proved until it has been filed. In re Ingalls, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 137

Fed. 517, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 512.

Sufficient filing. — The presentation and de-livery of proof of claim to the trustee in bankruptcy within a year after the adjudicaof section 57c, when read in connection with general order in bankruptcy No. 21, which. provides that proofs of debt received by any trustee shall be delivered to the referee to whom the cause is referred. J. B. Orcutt Co. v. Green, (1907) 204 U. S. 96, 27 S. Ct. 195, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 390, 17 Am. Bankr.

A trustee in bankruptcy cannot file with himself his proof of his own claim against the bankrupt estate, nor will the delivery of such claim to his attorney, to be filed with the referee, be deemed the equivalent of a delivery to such referee. J. B. Orcutt Co. v. Green, (1907) 204 U. S. 96, 27 S. Ct. 195, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 390, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72.

d [When claims allowed.] Claims which have been duly proved shall be allowed, upon receipt by or upon presentation to the court, unless objection to their allowance shall be made by parties in interest, or their consideration be continued for cause by the court upon its own motion. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 560.7

Allowance of claims — Effect of formal proof. — If the formal proof of claim, made in accordance with the requirements of section 57a, sufficiently sets out a provable claim, it will be deemed to be prima facio evidence of the claim so asserted; and, in the absence of objection thereto, such claim will be allowed. Whitney v. Dresser, (1906) 200 U. S. 532, 26 S. Ct. 316, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 584, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 326; In re Carter, (W. D. Ark. 1905) 138 Fed. 846, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126; In re John H. 184 Fed. 338.

The "proof" and the "allowance" of claims are separate and distinct steps. re Mertens, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 147 Fed.

177, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 825.

Formal proof shifts burden. — A proof of claim in bankruptcy which complies with section 57a establishes the claim and entitles it to allowance in the first instance; the burden of overthrowing it is then on the trustee when appointed, and on the creditors of the bankrupt if they contest. In re Coventry Evans Furniture Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1909) 166 Fed. 516, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272.

But where a claimant does not stand on his formal proof of claim, but offers evidence thereof, he cannot thereafter insist on the rule that the formal proof had the probative force of a prima facie case. In re McIntyre, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 627, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

Allowance may be made without prejudice to others. - The referee has full power, both by his order and his subsequent control over the administration of the estate, to safeguard all interests from any prejudice because of the allowance of claims. Mackay v. Randolph Macon Coal Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 881.

Refusal of claim by referee. — The act of a referee in bankruptcy in refusing to accept a claim is not a judicial act, requiring an order and petition of review; but the creditor may move to compel him to accept proof thereof. In re John A. Baker Notion Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 180 Fed. 922.

Where an order of a referee in bankruptcy, sustaining the motion of a trustee to disallow a claim on the prima facie case made by the claimant, is reversed, the matter should be sent back to the referee if the trustee desires to submit evidence in opposition to the claim. In re John H. Livingston Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 144 Fed. 971, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 385.

Objections to allowance — Who may object. — The trustee, or any creditor, may object to the allowance of claims presented against the estate. In re Little River Lumber Co., (W. D. Ark. 1900) 101 Fed. 558, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682; McDaniel v. Stroud, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1901) 106 Fed. 486, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 685; In re Talbot, (D. C. Mass. 1901) 110 Fed. 924, 7 Am. Bankr. C. 1908) 161 Fed. 895, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470; Matter of Fletcher, (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 398; In re Bailey, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226.

An unsecured creditor of a bankrupt is a "party in interest" and may, as well as the trustee, object to the allowance of claims against the estate. In re Hatem, (E. D. N. . 1908) 161 Fed. 895, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. See also Dressel v. North State Lumber Co., (E. D. N. C. 1902) 119 Fed. 531, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541.

Where both a bankrupt and his assignee of exemptions claimed an interest in a fund derived from the sale of certain of his assets, it was held that they were both entitled to contest the allowance of the claim against it. In re Sloan, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 873, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

The term "parties in interest" applies only to those who have an interest in the res which is to be administered and distributed in the proceeding, and does not include those who are merely debtors or alleged debtors of the bankrupt. In re Sully, (Č. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 619, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123.

Effect of objection. — Section 57d intends that if objection to a claim is interposed, or if the court is not satisfied with the prime facie case made out by the claimant's sworn statement, the claim shall not be accepted as proved until the objection has been disposed of, or until the court is convinced of the validity of the claim. In re Summer, (E. D. N. Y. 1900) 101 Fed. 224, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Baumhauer, (S. D. Ala, 1910) 179 Fed, 966. And see annotation under subdivision f of this section, infra, p.

Objection barred by laches. - Where creditors were informed of the pendency of a claim, and made no objection to its allowance for more than eight months after the filing of the order, of which their attorney had notice, it was held that they were barred by laches from obtaining a petition for review. In re Nichols, (N. D. N. Y. 1909) 166 Fed. 603, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216.

Form of objection. - While there is nothing in the Act or the general orders in bank-ruptcy directing the form of objections, they should, nevertheless, be in writing, and the specifications should be sufficiently explicit to indicate to the claimant the nature and character thereof. In re Royce Dry Goods Co., (W. D. Mo. 1904) 133 Fed. 100, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258.

But it has been held that although, as a rule, objections to a claim by a trustee should be filed in writing prior to the hearing thereon, such practice is not imperative; and an oral statement of the objections may be permitted by the referee, in his discretion. In re Cannon, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 133 Fed. 837, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114.

Pleadings. — On the presentation of claims of creditors against a bankrupt, no pleadings are authorized except the claim duly verified, and such objections as the trustee or any creditor may interpose to the allowance thereof. In re Carter, (W. D. Ark. 1905) 138 Fed. 846, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126.

e [Claims of secured creditors.] Claims of secured creditors and those who have priority may be allowed to enable such creditors to participate in the proceedings at creditors' meetings held prior to the determination of the value of their securities or priorities, but shall be allowed for such sums only as to the courts seem to be owing over and above the value of their securities or priorities. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 560.]

Cross-reference: As to

What are priority claims, see the several subdivisions of section 64, infra, p. 766.

Allowance of secured and priority claims.

— In accordance with the statutory provision, the claims of secured and priority creditors may be allowed for the purpose of enabling them to participate in creditors' meetings; but such allowance shall only be made for the sums appearing to be due in excess of the value of the security held by such creditor. The separate proof of an unsecured claim

The separate proof of an unsecured claim does not debar a creditor of a bankrupt from subsequently proving a balance due on a secured claim, after the security has been exhausted. In re Ball, (D. C. Vt. 1903) 123 Fed. 164, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 564.

Fed. 164, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 564.

"Secured" defined. — In order to be "secured" within the meaning of section 57e, a creditor must either hold security against the property of the bankrupt himself, or be secured by the individual obligation of another who holds such security. Gorman v. Wright, (4th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 164, 69 C. C. A. 76, reversing (E. D. N. C. 1904) 132 Fed. 274.

Proof of claim must state facts.—The proof of a preferred or priority claim must state facts which show the claim to be entitled to preference or priority of payment. It is not sufficient to say in the claim that the debt therein mentioned is "preferred" or is a "preferred claim." In re Dunn, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 181 Fed. 701.

Proof of secured claim not obligatory.—
While the Bankruptcy Act contemplates that a secured creditor shall prove his claim, he may, notwithstanding, decline to make proof, and he does not thereby waive or lose his lien upon the property pledged. In re Goldsmith, (N. D. Tex. 1902) 118 Fed. 763; In re Stevens, (D. C. Ore. 1909) 173 Fed. 842, 23
Am. Bankr. Rep. 239.

Am. Bankr. Rep. 239.

Effect of proving secured claim — Waiver of security. — The filing of a claim against a bankrupt's estate and the receipt of dividends thereon is a waiver of the creditor's security, and this whether the claims to security arise in a bankruptcy court or out of it. Hutchinson v. Otis, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 937, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382, affirming (1903) 190 U. S. 552, 23 S. Ct. 778, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135; In re Fisk, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 185 Fed. 974; Kohout v. Chaloupka, (Neb. 1903) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267.

Proof by mistake. — But it has also been held that a lien creditor of a bankrupt, who inadvertently or by mistake proves his claim as an unsecured debt, may be permitted to amend his proof so as to save the benefit of his lien. In re Falls City Shirt Co., (D. C. Ky. 1899) 98 Fed. 592, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437.

Security unaffected as to exempt property.

— There seems to be no reason why a creditor holding a waiver note should not participate in bankruptcy proceedings and also assert, in a court of competent jurisdiction, his peculiar claim against exempt property. In re Loden, (N. D. Ga. 1910) 184 Fed. 966. See also In re Weaver, (N. D. Ga. 1904) 144 Fed. 229, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265.

No waiver where proof has been with-drawn.— The lien of a judgment on exempt property, which under the law of the state remains in force notwithstanding the bank-ruptcy of the defendant, is not affected by the fact that the creditor proved his judgment in the bankruptcy proceedings, where he was allowed by the court to withdraw such proof without prejudice. In re Weaver, (N. D. Ga. 1904) 144 Fed. 229, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265.

Proof does not waive right of rescission.

— A creditor of a bankrupt, for the price of goods sold, by proving his debt as one without security, does not waive his right as a vendor to assert a rescission of the sale under the state law. Sessler v. Paducah Distilleries Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 44, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

Express waiver of security.—A secured creditor may, if he wishes to do so, waive the security held by him and prove his claim as an unsecured debt. In re Eagles, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 735; In re Little, (N. D. Ia. 1901) 110 Fed. 621, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681; In re Stevens, (D. C. Ore. 1909) 173 Fed. 842, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 239; In re Havens, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 186 Fed. 583; In re Hurlbutt, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 198.

Waiver binds creditor.— A claimant who has waived a right to claim a preference is not thereafter entitled to leave to amend his claim, after the time for filing claims had expired, so as to claim such preference. In the Havens, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 186 Fed. 583.

And where an execution of a judgment creditor on a judgment waiving exemptions was set aside as an unlawful preference under the bankruptcy law, and the creditor thereafter filed his claim, waiving any lien he might have acquired under said execution, it was held that he was estopped from afterwards claiming a preference against the exempt property. In re Bolinger, (W. D. Pa. 1901) 108 Fed. 374, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

f [Objections to claims.] Objections to claims shall be heard and determined as soon as the convenience of the court and the best interests of the estates and the claimants will permit. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 560.]

Hearing should be prompt. - Where an objection is made to the allowance of a claim presented at a meeting of the creditors of a bankrupt, the question of its allowance should be heard as soon as feasible. In re Eagles, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 695. See also In re Quinn, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 144, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 264.

Evidence — Order of proof. — In proceedings to establish a claim against a bankrupt's estate, it is not necessary that the referee should adhere to any prescribed order of proof. In re Montgomery, (N. D. Tex. 1911)

185 Fed. 955.

Exclusion of immaterial evidence. - Where upon the hearing of a claim, testimony offered by objecting creditors is so clearly and affirmatively incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial that it would be an abuse of the process or power of the court to compel its production or permit its reception, the testimony should be excluded upon objection that it is wholly immaterial to the determination of the matter in issue, where no request is made that the testimony be taken notwith-standing the objection and no foundation is laid showing its pertinency and materiality. Matter of Clark, (S. D. Cal. 1909) 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 776.

When evidence may be disregarded .- While positive and uncontradicted testimony on a hearing in bankruptcy should not be disregarded arbitrarily, it may be disregarded if it is grossly or inherently improbable. In re Baumhauer, (S. D. Ala. 1910) 179 Fed. 966.

Production of books and papers. — Proceedings in bankruptcy to require a claimant of the bankrupt to produce instruments on the hearing of his contested claim are summary, and must be complied with. hauer v. Austin, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 260.

But the claimant may not be compelled, in violation of his constitutional rights, to produce books for the purpose of disclosing business transactions with persons other the bankrupt. Matter of Clark, (S. D. Cal. 1909) 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 776.

Determination. - On the hearing of a contested claim, the formal proof thereof must be accepted as a prima facie establishment of the claim presented thereby, and as casting upon the contestants the burden of proving their specifications of objection; and when such formal proof has been fairly met, the proceeding rests on the same basis as other actions in so far as p concerned. The decision of the refere conflicting ht and will evidence is entitled to great not be overturned exception for manifest error. Whitney v. Statutory requirement not penal.—The provision of section 57g for the surrender of preferences as a condition of allowing claims is not a penal requirement and need not be strictly construed. Pirie v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1901) 182 U. S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1171.

A creditor who holds a voidable preference has a claim that is provable in the sense that formal written proof of it may be made and filed, but he may not procure an allowance of it, nor vote at a creditors' meeting, nor obtain any advantage by his claim, under the bankruptcy law, until he has surrendered his preference. Stevens v. Nave-McCord Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 71, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 609.

Surrender optional. - Where it appears that a creditor who filed a claim against a bankrupt estate has received a preference, he has the option to surrender the preference or abandon his claim; but if he retains the preference he is not entitled to a dividend. In re Privett, (E. D. N. C. 1904) 132 Fed. 592, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151.

But the trustee may recover a voidable preference if he wishes to do so. See section 60b and the annotation thereunder, infra, p. 739.

Compulsory surrender. — The fact that a claimant has retained a voidable preference, or a void or voidable transfer, until he has been compelled to surrender the same by legal proceedings, does not affect the provability or allowance of his debt after such surrender has been made. Hutchinson v. Otis, (1903) 190 U. S. 552, 23 S. Ct. 778, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135, affirming (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 937, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; Keppel v. Tiffin Sav. Baker Notion Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 180 Fed. 922.

The word "surrender," as used in section

The word "surrender," as used in section 57g, includes a voidable preference of which a creditor is deprived by the judgment of a court, at the suit of the trustee, as well as a surrender by voluntary act. In re Otto F. Lange Co., (N. D. Ia. 1909) 170 Fed. 114, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

A creditor, preferred by a conveyance constructively fraudulent, may, after the preference is set aside, nevertheless prove the debt so voidably preferred. Keppel v. Tiffin Sav. Bank, (1905) 197 U. S. 356, 25 S. Ct. 443, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 790, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 552; Barber v. Coit, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 381, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419.

Referee to fix time for surrender and allowance. — On a finding by a referee, on the hearing of objections to a claim, that the creditor has received a voidable preference, he should fix a reasonable time within which the creditor may surrender the preference and have his claim allowed. In re Oppenheimer, (N. D. Ia. 1905) 140 Fed. 51, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267.

Dividend allowable against order for surrender.—A court of bankruptcy, in entering judgment compelling a creditor to surrender an unlawful preference, should permit the creditor to prove his claim against the bankrupt estate, and deduct from the amount of the preference, which he is required to surrender, the dividend which the court finds is coming to him. Page v. Rogers, (1909) 211 U. S. 575, 29 S. Ct. 159, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 332, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496.

Independent transactions. — There is a conflict of opinion as to whether or not a claim may be allowed without first surrendering a preference obtained by the claimant in connection with a separate and distinct transaction; the following cases hold that such a preference must be surrendered before the claim can be allowed. In re Dickson, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 726; In re Seay, (N. D. Ga. 1902) 113 Fed. 969; In re Meyer, (N. D. Tex. 1902) 115 Fed. 969; In m. Bankr. Rep. 598; Swarts v. St. Lossank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 11 117 Fed. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; Swarts J. Siegel, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 117 Gel. 1, 3, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689; Livingstone v. Heineman, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 786, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39; Dunn v. Gans, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 750, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 316.

Thus it has been held that a creditor who has several claims of the same class, upon one of which he has received a preference, must surrender the preference before any of his claims can be allowed. Swarts v. St. Louis Fourth Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 117 Fed. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

And in Dunn v. Gans, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 750, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 316, it was held that section 57g should be construed as dealing with the creditors and not with their claims; so that where a creditor has received a preference he is not entitled to segregate the bankrupt's indebtedness according to the notes by which it is evidenced, and apply the preference in payment of some of the notes, and prove the others as separate claims against the bankrupt's estate, without surrendering such preference.

But it has also been held that the allowance of a claim in bankruptcy is not affected by the receipt of a preference in connection with a separate and distinct transaction. In re Abraham Steers Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 406, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 110 Fed. 738, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 315; In re Seay, (N. D. Ga. 1902) 113 Fed. 969, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700; In re Bullock, (E. D. N. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 667, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; In re Wolf, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 122 Fed. 127, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

Thus where it appeared that a creditor received payment in full from his debtor within four months prior to the latter's bankruptcy, but without knowledge of his insolvency, and afterwards sold him another invoice of goods, which were not paid for at the time of the bankruptcy, it was held that the last sale created a new and separate debt, which was allowable without a surrender of the money received in payment of the previous debt. In re Wolf, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 122 Fed. 127, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

It has also been held that a creditor who presents a claim upon which he has received no preference cannot be compelled to surrender an alleged preference upon an entirely settled and extinguished debt which is disconnected with the other. In re Wolf, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 122 Fed. 127, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

And in In re Franklin, (E. D. N. C. 1907) 151 Fed. 642, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218, it was held that the receipt of a preference on a separate and distinct transaction does not divest a creditor of his vested rights to property or the proceeds thereof.

h [Securities held by secured creditors.] The value of securities held by secured creditors shall be determined by converting the same into money according to the terms of the agreement pursuant to which such securities were delivered to such creditors or by such creditors and the trustee, by agreement, arbitration, compromise, or litigation, as the court may direct, and the amount of such value shall be credited upon such claims, and a dividend shall be paid only on the unpaid balance. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 560.]

Determining value of securities. - The value of securities held by a claimant must be determined by converting them into money pursuant to the agreement under which they are held; if the agreement does not fix the mode of ascertaining the value of such securities, then their value must be determined by one of the ways specified in the statute, as directed by the court. Hiscock v. Varick Bank, (1907) 206 U. S. 28, 27 S. Ct. 681, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 945; In re Browne, (E. D. 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 945; In re Browne, (E. D. Pa. 1900) 104 Fed. 762, 5 Am. Bankr. The supervision of the court is confined to the ascertainment of value where the bankrupt and his creditor have themselves failed to deal with this subject. In such an event the court may direct how the value is to be ascertained, and may choose among the methods of agreement, arbitration, compromise, or litigation, supervising and controlling either form of proceeding. Hiscock v. Varick Bank, (1907) 206 U. S. 28, 27 S. Ct. 681, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 945; In re Browne, (E. D. Pa. 1900) 104 Fed. 762, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 220.

Bankr. Rep. 22.

The secured creditor cannot dispose of the The secured creator cannot dispose of the securities to himself, at a price fixed by himself, under the pretense of a sale, public or private, and then say the value has been fixed by a public or private sale to himself, and that the court has nothing further to say regarding the transaction. In re Mertens, (N. D. N. Y. 1905) 134 Fed. 104, 14 Am. Rephy. Rep. 298 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226.

Where bonds deposited as collateral to a corporation's note were simple promises, not secured, and had never been used by the bankrupt until delivered to secure the bankrupt's note, it was held that the creditor was not entitled to sell the bonds to realize funds with which to pay the note; since to do so would simply increase the corporation's indebtedness, to the prejudice of other creditors. In re Matthews, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 445.

But a creditor cannot be compelled to part with his securities for a debt, there being no preference, until the debt is paid in full, except in case the securities are sold or converted into cash, and in such case he is entitled to the proceeds of the sale or conversion to apply on the debt. In re Noyes, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 127 Fed. 286, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; In re Peacock, (E. D. N. C. 1910) 178 Fed. 851; In re Davison, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 179 Fed. 750.

Statute applies only to bankrupt's property. — Where the property held as security is not that of the bankrupt, the provisions of section 57h do not apply. In re Mertens, (N. D. N. Y. 1905) 134 Fed. 104, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226; In re Graves, (D. C. Vt. 1908) 163 Fed. 358, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Thus where a creditor was allowed to prove his claim as against a bankrupt indorser as an unsecured claim, it was held that he was not required to realize and credit the pro-ceeds of collateral securities held by him against the maker of the obligation, who was the principal debtor, before being allowed to participate in the distribution of the estate of the indorser. Gorman v. Wright, (4th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 164, 69 C. C. A. 76, reversing (E. D. N. C. 1904) 132 Fed. 274.

A creditor of a bankrupt partnership is not required to apply securities in his hands, which are the individual property of one of the partners, upon his claim against the partnership estate, but is entitled to the allowance of his debt in full against such estate, and to apply the securities upon his claim against the individual estate of the partner to whom the property belongs. Waiver of right to object to reconsideration. - A claimant who, on the hearing of a reconsideration of the allowance of his claim, appears and testifies before the referee without objection, thereby waives the right to object, after such hearing, that the petition for the reconsideration was not presented in due time. The failure to make such objec-tion has the same effect as has the general appearance of a defendant sued out of his district, or the action of a plaintiff who without objection goes on with his case in the federal court to which the case had been removed by a defendant, although the petition for removal had not been filed in time. The phrase "liquidated by litigation" is general, and the object of the exception which is made to the statutory limit of time is plainly to allow the proof of a claim after the expiration of a year by a creditor who, during that time, was engaged in litigation with the bankrupt's estate concerning its liability to him. Powell v. Leavitt, (C. C. A. lat Cir. 1907) 150 Fed. 89, 18 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 10.

The term "liquidated by litigation," as used in section 57n, permitting proof of claims after a year if liquidated by litigation, applies to a case where the creditor has claimed to hold security, and has litigated that question and been defeated, and thereafter attempts to prove as a general creditor. In re Salvator Brewing Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 522.

When the question litigated necessarily involves the determination of the net amount for which claims should be finally allowed, the claims are to be considered as "liquidated by litigation," within the meaning of section 57n. In re Keyes, (D. C. Mass. 1907) 160

Fed. 763, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183.

The term "liquidation," as used in section 57n, is not limited to proceedings having for their object only the ascertainment of the amount due on the claim, but it includes as well proceedings to ascertain the kind and character as well as the amount of the claim. In re Standard Telephone, etc., Co., (E. D. Wis. 1911) 186 Fed. 586.

Liquidation after one-year limitation.— Section 57n should be construed to mean that, if a final judgment be entered within thirty days before the expiration of the time specified, or at any time thereafter, the claim might be proved within sixty days after the rendition of the judgment. Powell v. Leavitt, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1907) 150 Fed. 89, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 10, followed In re Baird, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 154 Fed. 215, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; In re Coventry Evans Furniture Co., (N. D. Bankr. Rep. 623.

A proceeding to recover a preference or fraudulent transfer is within the phrase "liquidation by litigation; " and a defendant creditor, in such an action, may prove his claim against the estate within sixty days after the rendition of final judgment, even though it was not filed or proved prior to the expiration of the one-year limitation period. In re Fagan, (D. C. S. C. 1905) 140 Fed. 758, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520; Powell v. Leavitt, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1907) 150 Fed. 89, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 10; In re Otto F. Lange Co., (N. D. Ia. 1909) 170 Fed. 114, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414; In re Coventry Evans Furniture Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 673, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623. See also Hutch-inson v. Otis, (1903) 190 U. S. 552, 23 S. Thus it has been held that a creditor of a bankrupt, whose debt was paid within four months prior to the bankruptcy, but from whom the amount was recovered by the trustee by suit as a preference, is one holding a "claim liquidated by judgment," within the meaning of section 57n; and he may prove the same against the estate, within sixty days thereafter, although more than a year after the adjudication. In re Coventry Evans Furniture Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 673, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623. Compare In re Kemper, (N. D. Ia. 1905) 142 Fed. 210, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675, wherein it was held that a creditor who received a voidable preference which was subsequently recovered in a suit by the trustee cannot prove a claim therefor after the expiration of one year from the adjudication, either as an original claim or by way of amendment of a prior claim proved and allowed within the time limited. Attachment suit by creditor as liquidation.

A creditor, who at the time of the bankruptcy of his debtor has an attachment suit pending, is not required to prove his claim in bankruptcy until the termination of such suit; when, if defeated, he may prove the same, although more than a year has elapsed since the adjudication, as a claim liquidated by litigation. In re Baird, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 154 Fed. 215, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228.

On reopening of estate. - A creditor who has failed to prove his claim in the original proceedings cannot prove such claim on the reopening of the estate, where more than one year has elapsed. In re Shaffer, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 104 Fed. 982, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep.

But where a bankrupt scheduled no assets, and in consequence thereof no claims were proved and no trustee was appointed, and the estate was formally closed and the bank-rupt discharged, it was held that on the discovery of previously unknown assets, and the reopening of the estate, the court may permit the filing of claims for a year from the date of the order, although the year from the adjudication, to which the filing of claims is limited by section 57n, has expired. In re Pierson, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 174 Fed. 160, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58, wherein it was said that if, before the estate had been formally closed. there had been claims proved, and an actual administration of the estate, then only such claims could come in on the reopening.

Claims due United States. - Section 57# is a statute of limitations, and is not binding on the United States. In re Stoever, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 127 Fed. 394, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Hutchinson v. Otis, (1903) 190 U. S. 552, 23 S. Ct. 778, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135, affirming (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 937, 8 Am. Bankr. Thus it has been held that although the creditors of a bankrupt did not file their claim within one year following the adjudication, as required by the statute, an assignment thereof, filed with the referee by the assignee within the year, may be treated as sufficiently presenting the claim to permit an amendment thereof after the year. Dismissal of proceedings and notice required thereon, see sec. 59g, infra, p. 729.

When proceedings should be dismissed, see sec. 18 d, e, g, supra, p. 583 et seq.

Section 58a (8) and section 59g must be read and construed together, having in mind the rule that specific provisions relating to a particular subject must govern, in respect to that subject, as against general provisions, in other parts of the law, which might otherwise be broad enough to include it. In relevi, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 962, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 294.

Notice of a proposed dismissal of the proceedings is indispensable, and an order of dismissal without notice is erroneous. In re Plymouth Cordage Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 1000, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665.

Notice unnecessary where dismissal results from hearing.—The provision of section 58a (8) as to notice relates only to dismissals which withdraw the case without its having been submitted to the court for a decision on the merits, and not to dismissals which follow as the result of a trial or hearing. Neustadter v. Chicago Dry-Goods Co., (D. C. Wash. 1899) 96 Fed. 830, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96.

(9) [Applications for discharge.] there shall be thirty days' notice of all applications for the discharge of bankrupts. [(Inserted 1910) 36 Stat. L. 841.]

Cross-reference: As to

Application for discharge generally, see the several subdivisions of section 14, supra, p. 547.

Notice essential. - The application for discharge, and the issuance, publication, and mailing of notices to creditors upon the application, constitute a step, and one of extreme importance to the bankrupt, in the administration of the estate. In re Hatcher, (W. D. Tex. 1906) 145 Fed. 658, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722.

Discharge and examination notice combined. — The notice to creditors to attend in opposition to the discharge should embrace also a notice of the examination of the bankrupt. In re Price, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 91 Fed. 635, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419.

Mere irregularity immaterial. - The fact that the receiver for a creditor of a bankrupt did not receive the written notice of the bankrupt's application for discharge, owing to the fact that the creditor's address was not given in the schedules, although the receiver's name and address were disclosed by the proofs, is an irregularity merely, which is not suffi-cient ground for setting aside the order for discharge, where the notice was published as required, and in the absence of fraud. In re Fritz, (E. D. N. Y. 1909) 173 Fed. 560, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84.

b [First meeting — publication of notice.] Notice to creditors of the first meeting shall be published at least once and may be published such number of additional times as the court may direct; the last publication shall be at least one week prior to the date fixed for the meeting. Other notices may be published as the court shall direct. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 561.]

Cross-references: As to Creditors' meetings generally, see the several subdivisions of section 55, supra, p. 696.

Designation of newspapers, see section 28, supra, p. 646.

Notice must be published, as required by the statute, in a newspaper, and mailed by the clerk to the creditors. In re Hatcher, (W. D. Tex. 1906) 145 Fed. 658, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722.

Inability to obtain address of creditor must be shown. — Notice by publication to judg-ment creditors is insufficient to entitle a bankrupt to discharge, unless he shows that the addresses of such creditors cannot be ascertained after diligent search and inquiry. In re Dvorak, (N. D. Ia. 1901) 107 Fed. 76, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66.

c [Notices given by referee.] All notices shall be given by the referee, unless otherwise ordered by the judge. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 561.]

1904) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55. Corporations. — Municipal, railroad, insurance, and banking corporations are not entitled to the benefit of the statute as voluntary bankrupts. See section 4a, supra, p. 495, which, in this respect, was amended in 1910.

Filing voluntary petition not act of bankruptcy. — The filing of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy is not of itself an act of bankruptcy, but simply institutes a proceeding in which the court acquires jurisdiction to adjudge bankruptcy, if the facts warrant such an adjudication. In re Ceballos, (D. C. N. J. 1908) 161 Fed. 445, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Filing not obligatory. - There is nothing in the law requiring an insolvent person to file a petition under any circumstances. He has the right to do so when he finds that he is unable to pay his debts and desires to make a surrender of his property, under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, distribute it equally among his creditors, and be re-lieved from further liability. The right to file a voluntary petition is a privilege extended by the law, to be exercised or not by a debtor as he may see proper. It is the right of the creditor to institute and prosecute involuntary proceedings, but he cannot, under any conditions, compel the debtor to take the initiative. Richmond Standard Steel Spike, etc., Co. v. Allen, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 657, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Creditors may set up want of jurisdiction. - Upon the filing of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, and before an adjudication thereon, creditors may move to set the petition aside or dismiss it, on the ground that the court has no jurisdiction, the residence or domicile of the debtor being in another district; and thereupon the court may inquire into the facts of jurisdiction, and make the adjudication or dismiss the petition according to the result. In re Waxelbaum, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 98 Fed. 589, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392

Effect of previous involuntary petition. -A debtor may file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy even though his creditors have previously filed a petition in involuntary proceedings against him; in such case, however, the creditors will be notified and such action taken as the court may deem best for the interests of the estate. In re Waxelbaum. (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 98 Fed. 589, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392; In re Dwyer, (D. C. N. D. 1902) 112 Fed. 777, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 532; In re Stegar, (N. D. Ala. 1902) 113 Fed. 978, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665.

Effect of failure to apply for discharge in former proceedings. — Where the second proceeding is under a voluntary petition filed by the bankrupt, in which he brings into court no material assets for administration, and the sole purpose is to obtain a discharge from the debts involved in the former proceeding, no ground of relief is presented, and the proceedings should be dismissed as futile; or, at least, further proceedings in the case should be stayed, or the bankrupt restrained and enjoined from filing a petition for discharge therein. In re Pullian, (E. D. Tenn. 1909) 171 Fed. 595, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513.

So, also, it has been held that where a bankrupt made no application for a discharge in original bankruptcy proceedings, a judg-ment subsequently perfected on a claim provable therein does not create a new debt which could form a basis for a subsequent proceeding in bankruptcy. In re Schnabel, (E. D. N. Y. 1909) 166 Fed. 383, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22. And see to the same effect Kuntz v. Young, (8th Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 719, 65 C. C. A. 477; In re Weintraub, (D. C. N. J. 1905) 133 Fed. 1000, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 711; In re Kuffler, (2d Cir. 1907) 151 Fed. 12, 80 C. C. A. 508; In re Kuffler, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 1018; In re Bramlett, (N. D. Ga. 1908) 161 Fed. 588. And see also the annotation under section 14 a and b, supra, p. 547 et seq.

Where, however, new creditors are listed in the second proceeding, a different question arises. In re Pullian, (E. D. Tenn. 1909) 171 Fed. 595, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513.

The pendency of proceedings in insolvency, under a state law, on the debtor's voluntary petition, begun before the passage of the Bankruptcy Act, is not sufficient ground for dismissing the debtor's subsequent voluntary petition in bankruptcy, even though he has contracted no new debts. In re Mussey, (D. C. Mass. 1900) 99 Fed. 71, 3 Am. Bankr.

Withdrawal of voluntary petition. — Where a bankrupt, having been discharged in voluntary proceedings on Jan. 17, 1902, filed another voluntary petition on Jan. 11, 1907, it was held that he would not be permitted to withdraw the same over the protest of his creditors because he could not, under section 14b (5), obtain a discharge within twelve months after adjudication. In re Smith, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 688, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63.

b [Involuntary bankrupt.] Three or more creditors who have provable claims against any person which amount in the aggregate, in excess of the value of securities held by them, if any, to five hundred dollars or over; or if all of the creditors of such person are less than twelve in number, then one of such creditors whose claim equals such amount may file a petition to have him adjudged a bankrupt. Creditors having provable claims. — A petition in involuntary bankruptcy proceedings can only be filed by creditors, in the number and amount specified in section 59b, who have provable claims against the debtor whose adjudication is sought. Frederick L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., (1909) 212 U. S. 445, 29 S. As to what claims are provable, see section 63 a and b, infra, p. 753 et seq.

If a debt is wholly wanting in existence, if it has been paid, for example, or if it has been fabricated for that purpose, the defendant should be allowed to show that fact in some form. Gage v. Bell, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 124 Fed. 371, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

An adjudication in involuntary proceedings is intended to be the result of the respective rights and obligations of the debtor and his creditors as they exist at the time of the commission of an act of bankruptcy, or of the filing of the petition; but such an adjudication does not concern any one with whom the debtor has never dealt. The court is not, in every case, bound by the mere words of the Act to recognize the holder of a provable claim for the time being as necessarily entitled to maintain an involuntary petition. In re Lewis F. Perry, etc., Co., (D. C. Mass. 1909) 172 Fed. 752, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780.

Persons who have sold and assigned their claims against a debtor have no standing to petition that such debtor be adjudged a bankrupt. In re Burlington Malting Co., (E. D. Wis. 1901) 109 Fed. 777, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369.

The claim need not be proved; if it be a fair and honest claim of debt, which is provable in the sense that it is a claim that the court of bankruptcy after adjudication will hear and establish, if proved, the creditor should not be bound before the adjudication to so prove and establish it, but should be allowed to rely upon its provable quality, prima facie, to support an involuntary petition in bankruptcy. Gage v. Bell, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 124 Fed. 371, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

The petitioner's claim need not be payable, that is, allowable, at the time of the filing of the petition. The mere fact that the claim is a provable one under section 63 is sufficient to warrant the creditors joining in the petition. In re Hornstein, (N. D. N. Y. (1903) 122 Fed. 266, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 308; Gage v. Bell, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 124 Fed. 371, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696; In re Rothenberg, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 140 Fed. 798, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 485.

The Bankruptcy Act maintains throughout a clear distinction between the proof and the allowance of claims, and in section 59b the term "provable claims" is not the equivalent of "allowable claims." In re Hornstein. (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 122 Fed. 266, 10 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 308.

Thus the owner of a note not yet due, indorsed by an alleged bankrupt, holds a provable claim against him, and may join in a petition to have him adjudged an involuntary bankrupt; the fact that the claim is not allowable until the maturity of the note is immaterial. In re Rothenberg, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 140 Fed. 798, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 485.

Time when petitioner must be creditor.—There is nothing in section 59, or in any other provision of the Bankruptcy Act, requiring that a petitioning creditor should have been one at the time of the commission of the act of bankruptcy; all that the Act requires is that he have a provable claim against the alleged bankrupt when the petition is filed. In re Hanyan, (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 180 Fed. 498. See also In re Lewis F. Perry, etc., Co., (D. C. Mass. 1909) 172 Fed. 752, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780.

752, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780.

But it has been held that a petitioning creditor must have had a provable claim at the time the act of bankruptcy was committed. Beers v. Hanlin, (D. C. Ore. 1900) 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745; In re Brinckmann. (D. C. Ind. 1900) 103 Fed. 65, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551; In re Callison, (S. D. Fla. 1903) 130 Fed. 987, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 201, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 797.

Effect of petitioner's subsequent indebtedness to bankrupt's assignee.— Where the claim of a petitioning creditor was provable, when the petition was filed, for an amount exceeding $500, it was held to be immaterial that thereafter the creditor became liable to the bankrupt's assignee for the benefit of creditors because of a wrongful attachment. In re Bevins, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 434, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344.

Bankrupt oreditor.— Where one of the Bankrupt creditor. — Where one of the petitioners, in a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, becomes a bankrupt before the hearing, his trustee may be substituted in his place as a petitioner. Hays v. Wagner, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 150 Fed. 533, 18 Am.

The authority of an agent to act for his principal in petitioning for an adjudication in involuntary bankruptcy is material, and should be set forth in the affidavit, or otherwise established. Matter of Levingston, (D. C. Hawaii 1905) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357.

The president of a corporation may, under a by-law giving him general authority to transact its business, determine when bankruptcy proceedings should be instituted against its debtor, and his action in that behalf is conclusive until revoked by the board of directors. In re Winston, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 122 Fed. 187, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

Preferred creditors. — Since under section 57g a preferred creditor may surrender his preference and obtain the allowance of his claim, he may be a petitioner in involuntary Simonson v. Sinsheimer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 100 Fed. 426, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824; In re Miller, (W. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 764, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140; In re Herzikopf, (S. D. Must surrender preference.—A preferred creditor who petitions in involuntary proceedings must surrender his preference. In re-Miller, (W. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 764; In re Gillette, (W. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 769, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 119; In re Burling-ton Malting Co., (E. D. Wis, 1901) 109 Fed. 777, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369; In re Schen-kein, (W. D. N. Y. 1902) 113 Fed. 421, 7 Am. Bankr. And such creditor will not be counted as a petitioner, in ascertaining whether the required number have joined in the petition, until his preference has been surrendered. In re Miner, (D. C. Mass. 1900) 104 Fed. 520; In re Gillette, (W. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 769, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Hornstein, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 122 Fed. 266, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 308; Leighton v. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 71, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 609.

Creditors holding unliquidated claims. — A creditor may join in or file a petition in involuntary bankruptcy even though his claim be an unliquidated one; providing it is capable of being liquidated under section 63b, and provable under section 63a. Frederick L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., (1909) 212 U. S. 445, 29 S. Ct. 332, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 591, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484, affirming (W. D. N. Y. 1903) 125 Fed. 576, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 48, and (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 881, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349; In re Hilton, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 981, 4 Am. Bankr. Formerly, however, it was held that the ownership of an unliquidated claim was insufficient to support an involuntary petition. Beers v. Hanlin, (D. C. Ore. 1900) 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745; In re Brinck-mann, (D. C. Ind. 1900) 103 Fed. 65, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551; In re Morales, (S. D. Fla. 1901) 105 Fed. 761, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425; In re Big Meadows Gas Co., (W. D. Pa. 1902) 113 Fed. 974, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697.

Disqualification of creditors as petitioners Generally. - A creditor may, by his conduct, disqualify himself as a petitioner in involuntary bankruptcy proceedings; and such disqualification will be deemed to have taken place where it appears that a creditor, either by fraud, deceit, or unfair dealing, has brought about, or assisted in bringing about, the commission of an act of bankruptcy by the debtor. George M. West Co. v. Lea, (1899) 174 U. S. 590, 19 S. Ct. 836, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 1098, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463; In re Curtis, (S. D. Ill. 1899) 91 Fed. 737, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440, affirmed (C. C. Procuring issuance of execution. is no difference in principle between inducing or participating in an assignment and procuring a judgment creditor to issue execution for the sole purpose of enabling the pro-curer to file a petition in bankruptcy against a debtor, who, if permitted to utilize his resources, could continue in business and eventually meet all his obligations. In re Weiss, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 142 Fed. 279.

Proceeding in state court. - A creditor who has instituted a proceeding in a state court for the collection of his debt, on discovering that the debtor has given a preference or transferred his property, has the right, at his election, to abandon such proceedings and file a petition in bankruptcy against his debtor within four months. In re Smith, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 176 Fed. 426, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 864.

Creditors of an insolvent partnership are not estopped to maintain proceedings to have the firm adjudged an involuntary bankrupt, because of filing and proving their claims in a suit in a state court, under a state statute, for winding up the affairs of a bank owned by the partnership, instituted after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, where the alleged act of bankruptcy was a conveyance of property not employed in the banking business nor involved in the state suit. In re Salmon, (W. D. Mo. 1906) 143 Fed. 395, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122.

Having receivers appointed. - But where creditors of a corporation intervened in a suit against it in a state court, and assisted in having receivers appointed, and participated in such proceedings, while large sums were expended and sales of property negotiated by the receivers, they are thereby estopped to subsequently file a petition in bank ruptcy based on the appointment of such receivers as an act of bankruptcy. Lowenstein v. Henry McShane Mfg. Co., (D. C. Md. 1904) 130 Fed. 1007, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601.

Splitting claims. - Creditors who have split up claims for the sole purpose of using them in order to make up the required number of creditors or amount of indebtedness, thereby disqualify themselves as petitioners in involuntary proceedings. Leighton v. Kennedy, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 737, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229; In re Lewis F. Perry, etc., Co., (D. C. Mass. 1909) 172 Fed. 745, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 772; Stroheim v. Lewis F. Perry, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1910) 175 Fed. 52, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695; In re Pangborn, (W. D. Mich. 1910) 185 Fed.

But where there are no objectionable features connected with the transaction, claims against a bankrupt may be purchased in order to make up the requisite number of petitioning creditors to sustain an involuntary petition. In re Bevins, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 434, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Thus it has been held that a creditor is not disqualified as a petitioner because he acquired a claim by assignment after commission of an act of bankruptcy. In re Lewis F. Perry, etc., Co., (D. C. Mass. 1909) 172 Fed. 745, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 772.

And, generally, where the conduct of a creditor is fair, and consistent with an honest effort to secure the payment of a just indebt-edness, he will not be disqualified as a petitioner by the fact that he advised, or aided in fairly bringing about, the bankruptcy proceeding. In re Worcester County, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 808, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496; In re Gillette, (W. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 769, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Burlington Malting Co., (E. D. Rep. 344; In re Smith, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 176 Fed. 426, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 864.

Disqualification by participation in general assignment. - A creditor who has assented to a general assignment for the benefit of creditors is, as a general rule, disqualified thereby as a petitioner in subsequent involuntary proceedings in bankruptcy against the assignor, where an adjudication is sought on the ground that the assignment constitutes an act of bankruptcy. In re Romanow, (D. an act of bankruptcy. In re Romanow, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 92 Fed. 510, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; In re Miner, (D. C. Mass. 1900) 104 Fed. 520, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 710; Durham Paper Co. v. Lewis F. Perry, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1910) 175 Fed. 52, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695.

Effect of fraud, or nonassenting participation. - Creditors who are fraudulently induced to participate in a general assignment, or whose participation therein cannot be said to signify an assent thereto, are not precluded from filing a petition in involuntary bank-ruptev against the assignor, or from joining in such a petition. In re Curtis, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1899) 94 Fed. 630, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226; Durham Paper Co. v. Seaboard Knitting Mills, (E. D. N. C. 1903) 121 Fed. 179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29; Hays v. Wag-179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29; nays v. wag-ner, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 150 Fed. 533, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163; Canner v. Webster Tapper Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 519, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872; In re Lewis F. Perry, etc., Co., (D. C. Mass. 1909) 172 Fed. 745, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 772; In re Jacobson, (D. C. Mass. 1909) 181 Fed. 870. See also In re Hirose, (D. C. Hawaii 1904) 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154.

Officer's assent as individual does not disqualify corporation creditor. - The fact that an officer of a corporation creditor of a bankrupt agreed to act as the bankrupt's assignee in his capacity as an individual only, does not estop the corporation, which was not a preferred creditor under the assignment, from joining in a petition to have the debtor declared an involuntary bankrupt. In re Winston, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 122 Fed. 187, 10

Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

Rubmission of claim to assignee for comparison. — Creditors are not estopped to maintain a petition on the ground of their having participated in proceedings under an assignment, where they submitted to the assignee, at his request, unverified statements of their claims, merely for the purpose of enabling him to compare the same with the entries in the insolvent's books. Simonson v. Sinsheimer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 100

Fed. 426, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824.

Participation for purpose of attacking assignment. — A creditor who goes into the state court for the purpose of attacking as fraudulent certain alleged preferences in a general assignment, does not thereby waive his right to file a petition in involuntary bankruptey against the assignor. Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1899) 95 Fed. 637, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 385.

Delay in instituting bankruptcy proceedings. - Nor are creditors estopped from maintaining a petition because, having knowledge of an assignment and of the acts of the assignee thereunder, they delayed instituting proceedings in bankruptcy for about two months. Simonson v. Sinsheimer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 100 Fed. 426, 3 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 824.

II. FORM, AVERMENTS, AND AMENDMENT OF PETITION.

Form. — Petitions in bankruptcy should be made out in accordance with the forms and general orders in bankruptcy prescribed by the Supreme Court. Mahoney v. Ward, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 100 Fed. 278, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770; Westall v. Avery, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 626, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673. See also Matter of Wing Yick Co., (D. C. Hawaii 1905) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757; Matter of Gorman, (D. C. Hawaii 1906) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 587.

Prayer for intervention in earlier proceeding. — Where an involuntary bankruptcy petition was in fact an original petition, it will not be deprived of its status as such by the fact that it contained a prayer of the petitioner to intervene in earlier proceedings as a cautionary measure, in order that the petitioner might be represented in the pro-ceedings on the earlier petition for the administration and preservation of the estate. In re Haff, (2d Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 78, 68 C. C. A. 646, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362.

Assignee under general assignment cannot be joined with bankrupt. - The statute contains no specific provision authorizing any third person to be joined as a party to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy; and, even conceding that a general assignee of the alleged bankrupt is a proper party, it can only be for the purpose of enabling him to contest the adjudication, the result of which might be to prejudice his rights as assignee. He cannot, by being so joined, be thus brought into the case for the purposes of all future inquiries and determinations made during the administration of the estate. Sinsheimer v. Simonson, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 898, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537. Averment of facts. — All jurisdictional facts must affirmatively and distinctly appear in the petition; and all issuable facts should be set out clearly and with reasonable certainty. In re Cliffe, (E. D. Pa. 1899) 94 Fed. 354, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317; In re Rome

Young Nap, (D. C. Hawaii 1904) 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510.

Time of objecting for insufficiency. - After verdict or judgment an objection that the petition fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action is tenable only when the pleading fails to allege the substance or foundation of a cause of action; and the petition is impregnable to attack because it is otherwise defective, informal, indefinite, or incomplete, even though it was demurrable before answer or judgment. In re Belle Fourche First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 64, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265.

Averment as to amenability of debtor .-A petitioner in involuntary bankruptcy must show that the defendant is not within one of the classes excepted from the operation of the Act, either by a negative averment to that effect or by a direct averment of his principal business. In re Columbia Real-Estate Co., (D. C. Ind. 1900) 101 Fed. 965, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411; In re Taylor, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 728, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515; In re Elmira Steel Co., (N. D. N. Del. 1905) 138 Fed. 582, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 33; In re Callison, (S. D. Fla. 1903) 130 Fed. 987, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344; In re Blumberg, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 133 Fed. 845, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 343; In re White, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 199, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 241; Rise v. Bordner, (M. D. Pa. 1905) 140 Fed. 566, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 297; Edelstein v. U. S., (C. C. Thus it is necessary to aver, in a petition for involuntary bankruptcy, that the alleged bankrupt is not a wage earner, nor engaged chiefly in farming or the tillage of the soil, unless the other averments sufficiently exclude the fact of such occupation. In re Belah, (D. C. Del. 1902) 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310; Matter of Levingston, (D. C. Hawaii 1905) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357.

Petition subject to demurrer.—A petition

Petition subject to demurrer. — A petition in involuntary bankruptcy which does not show the business of the defendant, or that he does not come within the excepted classes, is subject to demurrer on such grounds. In re Taylor, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 728, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515.

Number of creditors and amount of claims. A petition in involuntary bankruptcy proceedings must aver the existence of the number of creditors, and the amount of claims, necessary to warrant the filing of such petition. In re Tirre, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 95 Fed. 425, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 493; In re Blair, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 99 Fed. 76, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588; In re Mason, (W. D. N. C. 1900) 99 Fed. 256, 3 Am. Bankr. The actual amount due to petitioners is immaterial, providing they are creditors to an extent sufficient to satisfy the Act. In re Hughes, (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 183 Fed. 872.

Where a petition shows on its face a sufficient petitioning creditor, and there is established upon the trial a sufficient petitioning creditor, the absence of a statement of amount in the petition may be disregarded. In re Pangborn, (W. D. Mich. 1910) 185 Fed. 673.

To entitle less than three creditors to maintain a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, it must appear that there were less than twelve creditors at the date of the filing of the petition. Moulton v. Coburn, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 201, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553.

The statutory right of a single creditor to have his debtor adjudged a bankrupt exists only under special circumstances, namely, that his claim shall be sufficient in amount, and that all of the creditors shall be less than twelve. Moulton v. Coburn, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 201, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553.

Time to ascertain number of creditors and amount of claims.—The time of the adjudication in bankruptcy, and not the time of the institution of the proceedings, is the time to test the sufficiency of the number of the petitioning creditors, and of the amount of their claims, to warrant the adjudication. In re Plymouth Cordage Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 1000, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665.

Preferred creditors counted. — Since the claims of preferred creditors are provable debts on surrender or recovery of the preference, they must be taken into account in determining the amount of indebtedness. In remode McMurtrey, (W. D. Tex. 1905) 142 Fed. 853, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427; In re Jacobson, (D. C. Mass. 1909) 181 Fed. 870.

Debtor cannot evade statute by transfer.—
An insolvent having more than twelve creditors cannot defeat bankruptcy proceedings against him by transferring his property for the benefit of some of his creditors, leaving less than three unprovided for, but leaving them to be counted so that those remaining will be insufficient in number to maintain a petition in bankruptcy. In re Blount, (E. D. Ark. 1906) 142 Fed. 263, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97. See also In re Jacobson, (D. C. Mass. 1909) 181 Fed. 870.

Averment of commission of act of bankruptcy. - The petition must allege the commission of an act of bankruptcy by the debtor; and such averment must be supported by such allegations of fact as are essential to bring the proceeding within the language of the statute. Davis v. Stevens, (D. C. S. D. 1900) 104 Fed. 235, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 763; In re Ewing, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 707, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 269; Bradley Timber Co. v. White, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 121 Fed. 779, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329; In re Nusbaum, (N. D. N. Y. 1907) 152 Fed. 835, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598. See also Seaboard Steel Casting Co. v. William R. Trigg Co., (E. D. Va. 1903) 124 Fed. 75, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594; In re Vetterman, (D. C. N. H. 1905) 135 Fed. 443, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 245. And see generally the annotation under the several subdivisions of section 3a, supra, p. 481, as to what constitutes acts of bankruptcy, and the constituent elements thereof.

May allege several acts of bankruptcy.—A petition is not objectionable for the joinder of several acts of bankruptcy which are known to the creditors, and which were committed by the insolvent within four months prior to the filing of the petition. Bradley Timber Co. v. White, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 121 Fed. 779, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329; In re Nusbaum, (N. D. N. Y. 1907) 152 Fed. 835, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598.

Sufficiency of averment. — An allegation of the commission of an act of bankruptcy in a creditors' petition should state the specific fact relied on, with time, place, and circumstances, so that the alleged bankrupt may be distinctly apprised of what he is required to answer. Therefore an allegation that the defendant committed various and sundry acts of bankruptcy by paying several of his creditors various sums of money while insolvent, with intent to give preferences, without stating the names of the creditors or the sums so paid, is wholly insufficient. Clark v. Henne, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1904) 127 Fed. 288, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 583.

Petitioning creditors are bound to as full a disclosure in their petition in respect to the acts of bankruptcy charged as their information enables them to make, supplemented by an explanation of its lack of completeness, so far as it may be thus lacking, and their case must rest on something more than rumor or vague hearsay or mere suspicion. In re Blumberg, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 133 Fed. 845, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 343.

Language of Act insufficient. — Allegations of acts of bankruptcy, in an involuntary petition, in the language of the Act, without setting forth any other facts or circumstances, are usually insufficient. In re Hark, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 603, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Averment of intent. - A petition alleging payments to a creditor while insolvent as an act of bankruptcy is demurrable, unless it further avers that such payments were made with intent to prefer such creditor over the other creditors. In re Ewing, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 707, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 269.

But, since the amendment of 1910, it seems that the averment should be as to a reasonable cause to believe that the transaction would effect a preference. See section 60b, infra, p. 739.

An averment that, "while insolvent, the debtors transferred portions of their property to one or more of their creditors, with intent to prefer such creditors over their other creditors," has been held to be insufficient because of the failure to specifically state the par-ticulars of such transfer, by describing the property transferred, and when and to whom the same was made. Conway v. German, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1908) 166 Fed. 67, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577.

Fraudulent concealment may be shown as well by circumstantial as by direct evidence, and where the evidence is wholly circumstantial it is impossible, and therefore unnecessary, to aver in the petition the precise details of the act of concealment. In re Bellah, (D. C. Del. 1902) 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310; In re Mero, (D. C. Conn. 1904) 128 Fed. 630, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

Preferential payments. — A petition in involuntary bankruptcy, which alleges as an act of bankruptcy preferential payments made by the bankrupt to certain creditors within four months and while insolvent, should set out the names of the creditors to whom such payments were made, if known; but if the petitioners do not know their names the petition is good, although it may only aver in general terms that the payments were made, adding a sufficient reason why a more specific allegation is not possible. In re Lackow, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 140 Fed. 573, 14 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 514.

 $\dot{U}$ nnecessary averments. — Only the constituent elements of the act charged need be alleged; thus, where insolvency is not essential to the commission of an act of bankruptcy, it need not be averred in the petition; and if averred, it need not be proved. See George M. West Co. v. Lea, (1899) 174 U. S. 590, 19 S. Ct. 836, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 1098, 2

Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

Amendment of petition. — Under its general powers, the court of bankruptcy may permit the amendment of involuntary petitions in bankruptcy, to the same extent as amendments of pleadings are allowed in other proceedings; and such amendments, when allowed, relate back to the filing of the original petition. Rep. 330; Millan v. Exchange Bank, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 753.

While rule 11 of the general orders in bank-ruptcy deals with amendments to a petition and schedules, it was not intended to abrogate or restrict the court's general power of amendment in other respects. In re Bellah, (D. C. Del. 1902) 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Amendment of statement of facts. — Thus a petition in involuntary bankruptcy may be amended to set forth more fully and clearly the facts which show that an adjudication should be made. Ryan v. Hendricks, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1908) 166 Fed. 94, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570.

Amendment to show claims of petitioners. And a petition may be amended to describe more fully and in detail the claims of the petitioners, if deemed insufficient in that respect. Conway v. German, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1908) 166 Fed. 67, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577.

Amendment to correct name. — So, also, the court may permit the amendment of an involuntary petition, correcting the name of the alleged bankrupt. Gleason v. Smith, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 895, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602.

Amended petition cannot be converted into an original. — An amended petition in bankruptcy executed as such by a creditor to be filed in proceedings previously instituted, cannot, after such execution, and after the proceedings have been dismissed by the court, be converted into an original petition by striking out the word "amended," and be made the basis of a new and independent proceeding; and where it has been so filed it will be dismissed on the facts being made to appear to the court. In re Hyde, etc., Mfg. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1900) 103 Fed. 617, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602.

Amendment of fatal defects. — Where the petition is fatally defective, an amendment thereof will not be allowed, unless the cause of the error in the original petition is shown, as required by general order in bankruptcy No. 11. White v. Bradley Timber Co., (S. D. Ala. 1902) 116 Fed. 768, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671; Wilder v. Watts, (D. C. S. C. 1905) 138 Fed. 426, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57; Woolford v. Diamond State Steel Co., (D. See also In re Sears, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1902) 117 Fed. 294, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713.

Jurisdictional defects. — Where a sufficient cause therefor is shown the federal courts have power to permit amendments of pleadings by the insertion or correction of jurisdictional as well as other averments. In re Blair, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 99 Fed. 76, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588; In re Plymouth Cordage Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 1000, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665; In re Hammond, (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 163 Fed. 548, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 776.

And it has been held that jurisdictional defects in bankruptcy proceedings should be considered by the court, even though called to its attention by creditors having no standing to contest the adjudication on its merits.

In re New York Tunnel Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 166 Fed. 284, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

But leave to amend should not be granted where the effect will be to withdraw the administration of the property from the Circuit Woolford Court, unless for cogent reasons. v. Diamond State Steel Co., (D. C. Del. 1905) 138 Fed. 582, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31.

Amendment of allegation as to act of bankruptcy. — The averments as to the acts of bankruptcy charged in the petition may be amended so as to cure any defect therein. In re Laughlin, (N. D. Ia. 1899) 96 Fed. 589, 3 Am, Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Hark, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 142 Fed. 279; Iowa First State Bank v. Haswell, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 200, 23 Am, Raph. Rep. 220

209, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330.

Additional acts of bankruptcy may also, in the discretion of the court, be inserted by amendment. In re Mercur, (E. D. Pa. 1899) 95 Fed. 634, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626; In re Lange, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 197, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 231; In re Miller, (W. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 764; In re Nusbaum, (N. D. N. Y. 1907) 152 Fed. 835, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598; Pittsburgh Laundry Supply Co. v. Imperial Laundry Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 662, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 756; In re Cleary, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 990.

But where a proposed amendment to an involuntary bankruptcy petition seeks to plead alleged acts of bankruptcy occurring subsequently to those stated in the original petition, which must have been known to some of the original petitioners at the time such original petition was filed, and the alleged amendment is not served on the bankrupt, and no excuse is offered why the acts sought to be so pleaded were omitted from the original petition, leave to file such amendment will be denied. Wilder v. Watts, (D. C. S. C.

1905) 138 Fed. 426, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57. It has also been held that the original bankruptcy petition cannot be amended by setting out acts of bankruptcy not therein referred to, and occurring more than four months before the application for an order allowing the amendment. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 680, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132.

Amendment of allegation as to amenability of debtor. - Averments showing the amenability of the debtor to bankruptcy proceedings may also be permitted. Armstrong v. Fernandez, (1908) 208 U. S. 324, 28 S. Ct. 419, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 514, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; Beach v. Macon Grocery Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 736, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762; In re Brett, (D. C. N. c [Petitions in duplicate.] Petitions shall be filed in duplicate, one copy for the clerk and one for service on the bankrupt. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 561.]

Cross-reference: As to Time of filing petition, see section 3b, supra, p. 492.

Filing of petition — Filing in duplicate. — The statute requires the filing within the specified period of four months of a petition in duplicate; one copy for the clerk and the other for service on the alleged bankrupt. In re Stevenson, (D. C. Del. 1899) 94 Fed. 111, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; In re Dupree, (E. D. N. C. 1899) 97 Fed. 28, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 321 note; In re Sykes, (W. D. Tenn. 1901) 106 Fed. 669, 6 Am. Rep. 357.

Waiver. — The objection that a petitioner in bankruptcy failed to file a duplicate of his petition is waived by an answer by the bankrupt within four months of the alleged acts of bankruptcy without presenting the objection. In re Plymouth Cordage Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 1000, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665.

Two originals unnecessary. — In Millan c. Exchange Bank, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 753, it was held that the statute is fully satisfied when an original and a copy are both filed in the clerk's office before the expiration of the four months period.

Promptness desired.—The various provisions of the Bankrupt Act clearly disclose a legislative intent that proceedings in bankruptcy shall be conducted and closed with all reasonable expedition; and, while it is true that a petition may be filed at such time on the last day of the period of limitation as to render impossible either the service or issuance of-process within that period, it was nevertheless the manifest intention of Congress that the duplicate copy for service should be filed within that period, ready to be served with all convenient speed. In re

Stevenson, (D. C. Del. 1899) 94 Fed. 111, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66.

Vacancy in judge's office immaterial.—A District Court does not cease to exist because of a vacancy in the office of iudge, in such sense that proceedings in bankruptcy may not be instituted therein; but in such cases it is the duty of the clerk to receive and file the petition when offered, and it seems that he may also issue a subpæna thereon, tested in his own name, as provided by R. S. sec. 911, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 560. In re Urban, etc., Realty Title Co., (D. C. N. J. 1904) 132 Fed. 140, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687.

Docket should show filing. — Under general order No. 1 in bankruptcy, providing that "the clerk shall keep a docket" which "shall contain a memorandum of the filing of the petition," the docket should show that the netition was filed in duplicate, as required by the statute, if this requirement of the law is really complied with. In re Stevenson, (D. C. Del. 1899) 94 Fed. 111, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; In re Dupree, (E. D. N. C. 1899) 97 Fed. 28, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 321 note.

Notice to creditors unnecessary. — The statute not having provided for notice to creditors of the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, such notice is not necessary. In re Billing, (M. D. Ala. 1906) 145 Fed. 395, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

The failure of the Bankruptcy Act to provide for notice to creditors of the filing of a petition in voluntary proceedings, does not deprive such creditors of their property without due process of law, in view of the provisions of the Act for ten days' notice of the first meeting of creditors, and of each of the subsequent steps in the administration, and of the various provisions relative to the granting of a discharge, and for revocation of the same when procured by fraud or not warranted by the facts. Hanover Nat. Bank r. Moyses, (1902) 186 U. S. 181, 22 S. Ct. 857. 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 1113, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

d [Notice to other creditors — hearing — dismissal.] If it be averred in the petition that the creditors of the bankrupt are less than twelve in number. and less than three creditors have joined as petitioners therein, and the answer avers the existence of a larger number of creditors, there shall be filed with the answer a list under oath of all the creditors, with their addresses, and thereupon the court shall cause all such creditors to be notified of the pendency of such petition and shall delay the hearing upon such petition for a reasonable time, to the end that parties in interest shall have an opportunity to be heard; if upon such hearing it shall appear that a sufficient number have joined in such petition, or if prior to or during such hearing a sufficient number shall join therein, the case may be proceeded with, but otherwise it shall be dismissed. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 561.]

Failure to allege number of creditors.—
The failure of an involuntary petition filed by a single creditor to allege that the creditors were less than twelve in number does not deprive the court of jurisdiction where three creditors with provable claims have united in earlier proceedings, and the bankrupt does not deny the claims of such creditors, nor file a list of all of his creditors, with their addresses, under oath. In re Haff, (2d Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 78, 68 C. C. A. 646, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362.

Determining number of creditors.—Whether the number of creditors of an involuntary bankrupt is less than twelve, so as to entitle a single creditor to file an involuntary petition, is to be determined as of the date of the petition. In re Coburn, (D. C. Mass. 1903)

126 Fed. 218, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212, affirmed (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 201.
The list of creditors required of the defendant debtor, when he sets up as a defense to a petition by a single creditor that the number of his creditors is more than twelve, should contain, besides the bare names and addresses of such creditors, at least a statement of the amount due each, the date of the debt, when it is due, whether due by note or account or by some other form of contract, the consideration therefor, whether owed jointly with another as partner or otherwise, and such full particulars as will enable the petitioning creditor to negotiate with others to join with him in the petition, and save the necessity and cost of a reference to ascertain the facts. Gage v. Bell, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 124 Fed. 371, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

Reference to settle dispute.— If the par-

Reference to settle dispute.— If the particulars of the debts shown in the list of creditors filed under section 59d, where it is alleged by the debtor that his debts are more than twelve in number, are not disclosed in the answer, the court will, if necessary, refer the case to ascertain them, and thus settle any dispute between the parties concerning them. Gage. v. Bell, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 124 Fed. 371, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

e [Computing number of creditors — employees and relatives.] In computing the number of creditors of a bankrupt for the purpose of determining how many creditors must join in the petition, such creditors as were employed by him at the time of the filing of the petition or are related to him by consanguinity or affinity within the third degree, as determined by the common law, and have not joined in the petition, shall not be counted. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 562.]

Corporation officers may be counted against it.—Where a corporation is insolvent, and has been forced by reason of its insolvency to commit acts of bankruptcy in failing to vacate executions levied on its property, the fact that directors and stockholders, who are also creditors, join with other creditors in a petition to have it adjudged a bankrupt in order to secure an equitable distribution of its assets, is not an evidence of bad faith or collusion which will avail the execution creditors to defeat the adjudication. Wilkes Barre First Nat. Bank v. Wyoming Valley Ice Co., (M. D. Pa. 1905) 136 Fed. 466, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448.

f [Appearance of creditors.] Creditors other than original petitioners may at any time enter their appearance and join in the petition, or file an answer and be heard in opposition to the prayer of the petition. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 562.]

Joining in petition. — It is well settled that creditors may join in a petition in involuntary bankruptcy proceedings at any time, even though it be more than four months after the alleged act of bankruptcy was committed; and creditors so joining may be counted to make up the number of creditors and amount of claims required for this purpose by section 59b. Joinder by assignee. — But since an involuntary bankruptcy petition relates to the date of its commencement, it has been held that an intervening creditor, who became such by taking an assigned claim after the petition was filed, could not be counted in determining whether enough creditors had joined to sustain the petition. Stroheim v. Lewis F. Perry, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1910) 175 Fed. 52, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695.

Petitioners may request creditors to join.

— A creditor who files a petition in bankruptcy has the right to ask other creditors to intervene, when such intervention becomes necessary to preserve the proceedings. In re Smith, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 176 Fed. 426, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 864.

Intervention after dismissal. — Where an involuntary bankruptcy petition has been dismissed for insufficiency of petitioning creditors, it is then too late for a nonparticipating creditor to intervene as a matter of right. In re Tribelhorn, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 137

Intervention does not advance date of filing.

— Amendments to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy filed by a single creditor, by which other creditors join therein, and setting out their claims, relate back to the filing of the petition, and, although such joinder was necessary to the sufficiency of the petition, do not advance the date of its filing. An objection to an application for inter-

Defective application for joinder curable.—
The fact that the petition of a creditor, who intervenes and joins in a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, is defective in matter of form in setting out his claim, is immaterial, where the deficiency is supplied by the proof on the hearing. Hays v. Wagner, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 150 Fed. 533, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163.

Creditor cannot be compelled to join. — No power is vested in a court of bankruptcy to compel a creditor to become a petitioner in an involuntary proceeding. In re Gillette, (W. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 769, 5 Am. Bankr.

Opposing petition — Involuntary proceedings. — Creditors may also, under section 59f, intervene in opposition to the petition in involuntary proceedings. In re C. Moench, etc., Co., (W. D. N. Contest by assignee for creditors. — Where the act of bankruptcy charged in an involuntary petition against a partnership is the transfer of its property to an assignee for the benefit of its creditors, such assignee is entitled to appear and contest the petition. Intervening oreditors may appeal. — Creditors who appear in opposition to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, against their debtor, and contest the adjudication thereon, as authorized by the Bankruptcy Act, have a right to appeal from a decree of the District Court making the adjudication. In re Meyer, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1899) 98 Fed. 976, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559.

Voluntary petition. — Section 59f does not authorize intervention in opposition to a petition in voluntary bankruptcy proceedings. In re Ives, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 911, 7 Am. Bankr. Withdrawal from petition. —A court of bankruptcy is authorized, in its discretion, to permit the withdrawal of a petition filed by a creditor asking leave to join in a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, which has been filed against the debtor, no action having been taken thereon. Moulton v. Coburn, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 201, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553; Cummins Grocery Co. v. Talley, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 187 Fed. 507.

But creditors who have joined in a petition in involuntary bankruptcy are not entitled to withdraw without the consent of all, when the effect of such withdrawal would be to require a dismissal of the proceedings. g [Notice of dismissal.] A voluntary or involuntary petition shall not be dismissed by the petitioner or petitioners or for want of prosecution or by consent of parties until after notice to the creditors, and to that end the court shall, before entertaining an application for dismissal, require the bankrupt to file a list, under oath, of all his creditors, with their addresses, and shall cause notice to be sent to all such creditors of the pendency of such application, and shall delay the hearing thereon for a reasonable time to allow all creditors and parties in interest opportunity to be heard. Notice to creditors. -- As provided by the amendment of 1910, before entering an application for dismissal, the court will require the bankrupt to file a verified list of all his creditors, with their addresses, and shall cause notices to be sent to all such creditors of the pendency of such application; and such creditors shall be given a reasonable time and opportunity to be heard. Even prior to this amendment it was the rule to give notice to all such creditors as were scheduled or known. Neustadter v. Chicago Dry-Goods Co., (D. C. Wash. 1899) 96 Fed. 830, 3 Am. Bankr. Thus it has been held that a petition in voluntary bankruptcy which schedules no property except such as is exempt under the laws of the state, and but a single debt, which is a judgment from which the petitioner would not be released by a discharge, fails to disclose any subject-matter upon which the court can act, and an adjudication of bankruptcy made thereon will be set aside on motion, and the proceedings dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Sec. 60. Preferred Creditors. — a [What constitutes preference.] A person shall be deemed to have given a preference if, being insolvent, he has, within four months before the filing of the petition, or after the filing of the petition and before the adjudication, procured or suffered a judgment to be entered against himself in favor of any person, or made a transfer of any of his property, and the effect of the enforcement of such judgment or transfer will be to enable any one of his creditors to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other of such creditors of the same class. Where the preference consists in a transfer, such period of four months shall not expire until four months after the date of the recording or registering of the transfer, if by law such recording or registering is required. ## I. CREATION OF PREFERENCES.

Section 60a furnishes the legal and controlling definition of the preference specified in section 57g, and other parts of the Bank-rupt Act. Swarts v. St. Louis Fourth Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 117 Fed. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

The primary purpose of section 60 a and b is to secure equality of distribution among creditors of the same class. In re Bloch, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 674, 15 Am.

Subdivision a defines what shall constia consequence of it, and gives a remedy against it. The former defines it to be a transfer of property which will enable the creditor to whom the transfer is made to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than other creditors. The latter provides a con-sequence to be that the transfer may be avoided by the trustee and the property or its value recovered, provided, however, that the preference was given four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy or before the adjudication, and the creditor had reason to believe a preference was intended. Pirie v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1901) 182 U. S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1171, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814.

Preference created by judgment. — A preference is given when, within four months prior to the bankruptcy of the debtor, a lien is secured on his property by a creditor by virtue of a judgment, entered against him by confession or otherwise, which enables the creditor to get out of the property, in any manner, more than he would have done had he remained a general creditor. Benjamin v. Chandler, (N. D. Pa. 1905) 142 Fed. 217, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439. See also In reRichards, (W. D. Wis. 1899) 95 Fed. 258, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; In re Heinsfurter, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 97 Fed. 198, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 109; In re Metzger Toy, etc., Co., (W. D. Ark. 1902) 114 Fed. 957, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 307; In re English, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 127 Fed. 940, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 674; In re Collins, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Wilson v. Nelson, (1901) 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142, 183 U. S. 191, 22 S. Ct. 74, 46 U. S.

A judgment which becomes a lien, or in consequence of which a lien has been created, within the four months period is annulled under section 67f. See the annotation there-under, infra, p. 797.
"Enforcing" defined.—Where a lien stands as security for an undisputed debt, "enforcing" it would mean nothing more than leaving it to stand as such security and permitting the plaintiffs to take it unless the bankrupt paid the debt. In re Crafts-Riordon Shoe Co., (D. C. Mass. 1910) 185 Fed. 931.

"Transfer" defined. — The word "transfer" in section 60a, both by the express terms of the bankruptcy law and by authori-tative decision, includes the sale and every other and different mode of disposing of or parting with property, or the possession of property, absolutely or conditionally, as a payment, pledge, mortgage, gift, or security. Coder v. Arts, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 943, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513.

All technicality and narrowness of meaning is precluded. The word is used in its most comprehensive sense, and is intended to include every means and manner by which property can pass from the ownership and possession of another, and by which the result forbidden by the statute may be accomplished.

In re Kellar, (N. D. Ia. 1901) 110 Fed. 348.

The words "transfer any of his property" include the giving or conveying anything of value — anything which has debt paying or debt securing power. Pirie v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1901) 182 U. S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1171, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Thus a trust deed securing an antecedent debt, without a new consideration, executed by a corporation, while insolvent, for the purpose of preferring one creditor over another, and which was accepted for that purpose and operated as a preference, was held to be a preferential transfer. Morgan v. Mannington First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 466, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639.

Indorsement. — The indorsement, without consideration, by an insolvent firm, within four months of the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, of individual notes of the partners, apparently for the purpose of enabling the holders of the notes to participate with the partnership creditors in the distribution of the partnership property, has been held to be a preference. In re Jones, (E. D. Mo.

be a preference. I 1900) 100 Fed. 781.

Purchase of partnership assets by member of firm. — In In re Head, (W. D. Ark. 1902) 114 Fed. 489, it is said that the dissolution of a firm while insolvent, and the purchase of its assets by a member thereof within four months of the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings, is in effect a gift by the insolvent firm to the creditors of the individual members, and therefore a preference to them over the partnership creditors, and that such dissolution should be set aside and the assets of the firm in the hands of both partners treated as partnership property.

Preference created by transfer. — Any transfer of the bankrupt's property, coming within the definitions set out in the preceding paragraphs, made or effected within four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and while the bankrupt was insolvent, will, under section 60a, be deemed to be a preference, if the effect of such transfer is such as to enable any one of the bankrupt's creditors to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other of such creditors of the same class. Pirie v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1901) 182 U. S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1171, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814; Carter v. Hobbs, (D. C. Ind. 1899) 94 Fed.

Tested by result of transaction. — When a person is adjudged a bankrupt his property is sequestrated by law for equal distribution among his creditors; and all transactions, payments, or transfers of property within the four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy are reviewable; and if it should appear that, as the result of any such transactions, one creditor has obtained, or is likely to obtain, a greater percentage of the estate than other creditors of the same class, such transaction shall be deemed to be a preference which must be surrendered so that equality may be preserved. In re Manning (D. C. S. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 181, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500.

The court must look at results, and not at the devious ways by which they are accomplished. In re McDonald, (D. C. S. C. 1910) 178 Fed. 487.

Whether a transaction is a preference must be determined by its effect to prefer the creditor receiving the benefit thereof, and not by its form. Rogers v. Fidelity Sav. Bank, etc., Co., (W. D. Ark. 1909) 172 Fed. 735, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

A creditor will not be permitted to obtain a preference indirectly by any colorable device or transaction intended to evade the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act. Hackney v. Raymond Bros. Clarke Co., (Neb. 1903) 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213.

Section 60a does not contemplate a usage of merchants, or a conventional arrangement between the parties, which would enable any one of the creditors of a bankrupt to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other of such creditors of the same class. Preference created by mortgage. — A preferential transfer may be, and very frequently is, created by a mortgage; and the fact that it was so made renders it none the less a preference, providing its effect is to enable one creditor to obtain, within the four months period, a greater percentage of his debt than is obtained by other creditors of the same class. N. Y. 1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148.

Where a bankrupt, after having used funds belonging to a township to purchase merchandise, executed a mortgage on his stock of goods in favor of the township, it was held that such mortgage operated as a preference, and was unenforceable by the township. Smith v. Au Gres, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 257, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep.

A mortgage executed by an insolvent partnership on its property, within four months prior to its bankruptcy, to secure the individual debt of a partner, is voidable as against partnership creditors. In re Floyd, (E. D. N. C. 1907) 156 Fed. 206, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438.

Time of giving mortgage. — A mere promise by a debtor, at the time the debt was contracted, to give a mortgage to secure it, without specifying the nature of the mortgage or the property on which it was to be given, does not create a mortgage; and the giving of one on a subsequent renewal of the debt, at a time when the debtor is insolvent, and within four months prior to his bankruptcy, constitutes a transfer of property to secure an antecedent debt, and creates a preference. Pollock t. Jones, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 163, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616.

Preference created by payment. — The payment of an existing indebtedness within the four months period and during insolvency, when it results in the preference of one creditor over another of the same class, constitutes a preferential transfer within the meaning of section 60a. Preferential payments to several creditors.

— A payment made by an insolvent corporation to a creditor, within four months prior to its bankruptcy, is no less a preference because some other creditors may also have obtained larger payments in proportion to their claims during such period. In re Mayo Contracting Co., (D. C. Mass. 1907) 157 Fed. 469, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551.

Payment on notes.—Payments by the bankrupt, while insolvent and within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy against him, upon his indorsed notes, which the indorsers would have paid if he had not, constitute a preference, whether the creditor preferred derived any benefit from these payments or not. Swarts v. St.

Louis Fourth Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 117 Fed. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

Where notes, given by a debtor to close an account for goods, were still held by the creditor and unpaid at the time a further indebtedness on account was contracted, it was held that both the notes and account constituted the indebtedness then due, and that a payment of the notes thereafter, when the debtor was insolvent, and within four months prior to his bankruptcy, constituted the giving of a preference. In re Jones, (D. C. S. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 128, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513.

The payment to a bank by an insolvent, within four months prior to his bankruptcy, of notes given to third persons, but which have been indorsed to and are owned by the bank, constitutes a preference given to the bank. In re George M. Hill Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 315, 12 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 221.

The subsequent payment of a post-dated check, while insolvent and within the pro-hibited period, constitutes a preference. In re Lyon, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 121 Fed. 723,

10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25.

Repayment of loan. — A payment made by a bankrupt two days before the bankruptcy and while insolvent, in repayment of a loan, constitutes a voidable preference. In re Kearney, (E. D. Pa. 1909) 167 Fed. 995, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 721.

Payment of rent by an insolvent is not necessarily a preference; but when it is done as a means and for the purpose of carrying on a business in fraud of creditors it should be so regarded. In re Lange, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 197, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 231.

Payment in goods.—Where, within a month prior to the filing of a bankruptcy petition, the bankrupts delivered certain goods to their father and another, in part payment of unsecured debts, it was held that such payment was a preference, and that the trustee was entitled to recover the goods or their value from the transferees. In re Ansley, (E. D. N. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 983, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457.

Directing another to pay creditors. -Where a partner of a bankrupt firm directed a mortgagee of firm property, who had foreclosed the mortgage and obtained a surplus after satisfaction of the mortgage debt, to pay such surplus to a firm creditor, it was held that the transaction was in effect a direct payment by the firm to the creditor, and constituted a preferential payment. Johnson v. Hanley, etc., Co., (D. C. R. I. 1911) 188 Fed. 752.

But the repayment of money stolen does not constitute a preference. McNaboe v. Columbian Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 967, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 684.

Payments made on open accounts and in due course of business within the four months period, and which are received in good faith, without the creditor's knowledge of the debtor's insolvency, leaving a net amount due from the bankrupt's estate, do not constitute a preference. Pirie v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1901) 182 U. S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1171; Jaquith v. Alden, (1903) 189

Sec. 60 s.

Payment by indorser. — Where an indorser of a bankrupt's paper, well secured by the indorser's collateral, paid the paper to the bank, and charged the amount against its debt on open account to the bankrupt, it was held that equity did not require that the payment be held to constitute a preference to the bank by the bankrupt on the theory that the transaction was an evasion of the Act. Mason v. National Herkimer County Bank, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 172 Fed. 529, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733.

Necessity of increasing bankrupt's estate. It has been held that it is only where new sales succeed payments, and the net result is to increase the value of the estate, that payments made by an insolvent debtor, or on a running account, are not to be considered as preferential transfers. Wild v. Provident L., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 562, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506.

Section 57g, providing that "the claims of creditors who have received preferences shall not be allowed unless such creditors shall surrender their preferences," will not be so construed as to require a creditor to surrender partial payments received by him on account in the usual course of business, where the transactions covered by the account between them, taken together, resulted in increasing the net indebtedness to the creditor, and correspondingly increasing the bankrupt's estate. In re Dickson, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 726, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep.

But even an increase of the bankrupt's estate, as a net result of the transactions between the bankrupt and a creditor within four months prior to filing the petition in bankruptcy, where the last transaction was a payment on account of the indebtedness, is not sufficient to relieve the creditor from surrendering this last payment as preferen-tial before he is permitted to prove the balance of his claim against the bankrupt's estate, when the account runs far back beyond the four months before the petition was presented and the transactions between them end with a large payment on account of the whole indebtedness. In re Watkinson, (E. D. Pa. 1906) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56.

Payment of valid lien. — The payment by a partnership, within four months prior to its bankruptcy, of a sum of money to the mother of the partners, on account of accrued interest on her statutory dower in real estate, owned by the partners through descent from their father, but upon which the mother had a lien for her dower and interest, cannot be assailed as a preference. In re Riddle, (E. D. Pa. 1903) 122 Fed. 559.

Banking transactions.—The deposit of money in bank by an insolvent within four months prior to his bankruptcy, on open account, subject to check, does not constitute a transfer of property amounting to a preference, although the bank may be at the time a creditor, and, under section 68a, have the right to set off so much of its claim as equals the balance in such account. In re George M. Hill Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 315, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 221; In re Scherzer, (N. D. Ia. 1904) 130 Fed. 631, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 451; Tomlinson v. Lexington Bank, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 824, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632; McDonald v. Clearwater Shortline R. Co., (C. C. Idaho 1908) 164 Fed. 1007; Mason v. National Herkimer County Bank, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 172 Fed. 529, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733; To re Elsasser, (E. D. Pa. 1901) 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215; West v. Lahoma Bank, (1905) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733, 16 Okla. 328, 85 Pac. 469. See also the annotation under section 68 a and b, infra, p. 805 et seq., as to the right of set-off.

Thus where an insolvent person borrows money from a bank, and executes his note therefor, and deposits the money in said bank subject to his check, such transaction does not constitute a preferential transfer under the Bankruptcy Act; and the bank may, before the depositor is declared a bankrupt, credit the amount of his deposit upon his debt due the bank, and such transaction will not entitle the trustee in bankruptcy to recover the amount of such deposit as a preference. West v. Lahoma Bank, (1905) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733,

The application by a bank of the amount standing to the credit of a depositor in his general account, subject to check on a note of the depositor, although within four months prior to his bankruptcy, and while he was insolvent, does not constitute a preference. In re Scherzer, (N. D. Ia. 1904) 130 Fed. 631, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 451.

Payment of overdraft. - So, also, where a bank allowed a customer to overdraw on the express agreement that the customer should assign good accounts for collection to pay the overdraft, it was held that the subsequent assignment of the accounts, although the customer was insolvent, did not constitute the giving of a preference. Tomlinson v. Lexington Bank, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 824, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632.

But see In re Kellar, (N. D. Ia. 1901) 110 Fed. 348, wherein it was held that deposits in a bank made by an insolvent within four months prior to his bankruptcy, and applied by the bank to the payment of an overdraft previously made, constitute a preference.

Deposit in pursuance of creditors' agreement. - A trustee in bankruptcy has no interest which he can enforce for the benefit of general creditors in an arrangement between the bankrupt and certain creditors by which money deposited with one, which was a bank, was to be held in trust and distributed pro rata between them, and which was not prohibited by the bankruptcy statute. Lowell v. International Trust Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1907) 158 Fed. 781, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 853.

Preferential payment to bank. - But a bank is not relieved from liability to refund. as a preference, a payment received on notes from a bankrupt while insolvent, under such circumstances that it had reasonable grounds to believe that a preference was intended, by the fact that the payment was made by a check on the debtor's deposit in the same bank, which, if it had remained until the debtor's bankruptcy, the bank might have retained as a set-off. Ridge Ave. Bank r. Studheim, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 798, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 863. And see to the same effect Pratt v. Columbia Bank, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 157 Fed. 137, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406; In re W. W. Mills Co., (E. D. N. C. 1908) 162 Fed. 42, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Payment of its officer by insolvent bank. -Where a day or two before the open insolvency of a bank its receiving and paying teller, with full knowledge of its insolvency. drew his check against the fund and paid himself $3,100 which he claimed as a creditor of the bank, it was held that such transaction constituted a preference which was recoverable by the bank's trustee in bankruptcy. In re Plant, (S. D. Ga. 1906) 148 Fed. 37, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272.

II. CONSTITUENT ELEMENTS.

Insolvency. — It is elementary to the definition of a forbidden preference, considered under any section of the bankruptcy law, and for any purpose, that it must have been made by the debtor "while insolvent." A solvent debtor cannot make a preference. Kaufman v. Tredway, (1904) 195 U. S. 271. 25 S. Ct. 33, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 190, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682; In re Baumann, (W. D. Tonn. 1890) 68 Fed 046. What constitutes insolvency has been considered under section 1a (15), supra, p. 465.

The instances where any one has a moral or ethical standing to attack a security given by a perfectly solvent debtor are rare, although they may sometimes occur, and such exceptional instances do not justify straining the statute. In re Sayed, (W. D. Mich. 1910) 185 Fed. 962.

Preference must be given to creditor.— It is essential, in order to constitute a preference under section 60a, that a creditor obtain some portion of the bankrupt's property; otherwise there can be no preference. Must have provable claim. — It seems to be an accepted doctrine that preferences are within the same subject-matter as claims provable; and that it is only with reference to claims provable that preferences can be declared. Richardson v. Shaw, (1908) 209 U. S. 365, 381, 28 S. Ct. 512, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 835; Clarke v. Rogers, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 518; In re Crafts-Riordon Shoe Co., (D. C. Mass. 1910) 185 Fed. 931.

It is undoubtedly the general construction of the statute that nothing is within its purview so far as preferences are concerned, except with reference to debts which can be proved for a dividend. On the other hand, it must be accepted that anything which can be proved for a dividend is within the purview of those portions of the statute which relate to preferences, whether or not they are strictly shadowed out by the words "creditor" and "debt," as especially defined in the statute, or as otherwise reasonably understood. Clarke v. Rogers, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 518.

Thus where a creditor of a bankrupt files a petition in the court of bankruptcy, setting up a claim to the ownership of a fund which has been paid into court subject to the rights of conflicting claimants, but does not seek to prove a claim as a general creditor of the estate, the amount of a preference received by such creditor cannot be deducted from such fund. In re West Norfolk Lumber Co., (E. D. Va. 1902) 112 Fed. 759, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648.

A surety or indorser for a bankrupt is a "ereditor" within the meaning of the statute. Kobusch v. Hand, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 156 Fed. 660, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 379; Huttig Mfg. Co. v. Edwards, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 160 Fed. 619, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340

Where a broker buys stock for a customer on a margin, the title to such stock is in the customer, and not in the broker, who holds the same merely as pledgee to secure the advances made by him in the purchase; hence the customer is not a creditor of the broker with respect to the transaction, and the transfer of the stock to the customer on the settlement of his account cannot be considered the giving of a preference by the broker on his bankruptcy within four months thereafter. Richardson v. Shaw, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 659, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 842, affirmed (1908) 209 U. S. 365, 28 S. Ct. 512, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 835.

Time of obtaining preference. — In order to constitute a preference within the meaning of the bankruptcy law, it is necessary that the transaction take place, or become effective as to creditors, within the four months preceding the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, or at some time thereafter and before the adjudication. Page v. Rogers, (1909) 211 U. S. 575, 29 S. Ct. 159, 53 U.S. (L. ed.) 332, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496; In re Folb, (E. D. N. C. 1898) 91 Fed. 107, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; In re Stevenson, (D. C. The title of one who purchases property from an embarrassed debtor cannot be impeached by the latter's trustee in bankruptcy subsequently appointed, on the ground that the purchase was made for the purpose of enabling the debtor to pay some of his creditors in preference to others, in fraud of the bankruptcy law, the proceeds having been so used, when the sale and the payments to creditors occurred more than four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. In re Kindt, (S. D. Ia. 1900) 101 Fed. 107, 3 Am. Bankr., Rep. 443.

The time is to be computed in accordance with section 31. The term "four months" means within four months from the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings. Whitley Grocery Co. v. Roach, (1902) 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505, 115 Ga. 918, 42 S. E. 282. See also the cases cited under section 31, supra, p. 653.

Thus it has been held that although a petition in involuntary bankruptcy was insufficient on its face to authorize the court to make an adjudication, because it showed less than the required number of legally qualified petitioners, but other creditors afterwards joined therein, the four months period within which transfers of property may be avoided as preferential runs back from the time when such joinder made the petition sufficient, which for such purpose must be considered as the date of filing. Manning v. Evans, (D. C. N. J. 1907) 156 Fed. 106, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 217.

Renewal of old indebtedness. - A pledge of property to secure notes executed within four months prior to proceedings in bank-ruptcy against the pledgor is not voidable as an illegal preference, where the notes so secured were renewals of prior notes also se-cured by a pledge of the same property; the original indebtedness having been created and the original pledge made prior to the four months period. Chattanooga Nat. Bank v. Rome Iron Co., (N. D. Ga. 1900) 102 Fed. 755, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441.

Effect of previous negotiation. - Where a transaction has resulted in a preference within the four months period, it will not be deprived of its preferential character by the fact that it was effected in the performance of a contract, or other negotiation, executed or agreed upon at a time antedating the bankruptcy proceedings by more than four months. Ratification of corporation agent's unauthorized act. — A transfer of property by a corporation as security for a past indebtedness, within four months prior to its bankruptcy, when it was insolvent and the creditor had reason to believe it to be so, is a preference, even though such transfer was made in ratification of an unauthorized trans-fer made by an officer of the corporation before the four months period. In re W. W. Mills Co., (E. D. N. C. 1908) 162 Fed. 42, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501.

Delivery of pledge pursuant to prior agreement. — An agreement to pledge personal property as security for a debt is not executed where the goods are not delivered to the creditor, nor set apart and treated as his property; and, where the creditor takes possession of the property a few days before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against the debtor, the transaction is voidable as a preference, notwithstanding that the original agreement was made more than four months before that time. In re Sheridan, (E. D. Pa. 1899) 98 Fed. 406.

But when an assignment of accounts is made more than four months prior to the bankruptcy, the fact that the accounts are not collected by the creditor until within four months does not make the transaction a preference. Lowell v. International Trust Co., (1st Cir. 1907) 158 Fed. 781, 86 C. C. A. 137, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 853.

So, also, it has been held that a bankrupt cannot be held to have given a preference, recoverable by his trustee, because of sums collected by a creditor, after the bankruptcy, from third persons under a contract which had been in force between the bankrupt and the creditor for a number of years. Ryttenberg v. Schefer, (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 131 Fed.

313, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 652.

Where recording required. — The purpose and effect of the amendment of 1903 was to change the rule applied to the original and prior acts, under which not only the requirement of recording but the effect of a failure to record was controlled by the state law, by making instruments of transfer required by the state law to be recorded, in the sense in which such phrase is ordinarily used, speak from the date of recording, and not the date of execution, upon the question of voidable preferences. A transfer by an instrument required by the state law to be recorded speaks from the time of the recording, and not from the date of its execution, and may be void as a preference, regardless of the effect of the failure to record it under the state law. Mattley v. Giesler, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1911) 187 Fed.

The word "required" has reference to the character of the instrument of transfer required to be recorded by the state law, rather than to the particular individuals who, by reason of adventitious circumstances, may or may not be affected by an unrecorded instrument. Buchanan County First Nat. Bank v. Connett, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 33, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662.

A state statute which requires a conveyance or transfer to be recorded, in order to be effectual against any class or classes of persons, is a law by which such recording is "required" within the meaning of section 60a. Loeser v. Savings Deposit Bank, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 975, 17

Am. Bankr. Rep. 628. In In re Floyd, (E. D. N. C. 1907) 156 Fed. 206, it appeared that a member of an insolvent partnership executed to a third person a mortgage on the firm's goods to secure money to purchase the share of another mem-ber. The mortgage was not filed until a few days before the assignment for the benefit of creditors, and within four months of the institution of bankruptcy proceedings, and it was held that the transaction was void as a preference.

What is or is not required to be recorded is to be determined by the law of the state. See the cases cited to this effect under section 67a, infra, p. 783.

Instrument valid under state law.—A chattel mortgage given by a bankrupt when solvent, in good faith and for a present consideration, does not become a preference because not recorded until within four months prior to the bankruptcy, where, under the state law as construed by its Supreme Court, the failure to record does not affect the validity of the mortgage as between the parties nor as against general creditors of the mortgagor, and it takes effect as of the date of its execution. In re Sturtevant, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1911) 188 Fed. 196.

Greater percentage. — Even though a transaction falls within the language of section 60a in all other respects, it must, in order to constitute a preference, be such as will enable one creditor to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other creditor of the same class. The test of a preference is the payment, out of the bankrupt's estate, of a larger percentage of the claim of a creditor than other creditors of the same class receive from that estate. Swarts v. St. Louis Fourth Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 117 Fed. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re Bloch, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 674, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 748.

The meaning of the term "class" should be derived, and the classification of creditors thereunder should be made, from the provisions of the Bankruptey Act. Swartz v. St. Louis Fourth Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 117 Fed. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

The test of the classification of creditors is the percentage of their claims which they are entitled to draw out of the estate of the bankrupt, and not the relations of the creditors to parties other than the bankrupt. If they are entitled to receive the same percentage they are in the same class; if different percentages they are in different classes. Swarts v. St. Louis Fourth Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 117 Fed. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

Exchange. — There is nothing in the bankruptcy law which forbids an exchange of securities, and if a person, even while insolvent, makes such an exchange as will not diminish the value of his estate, it is unimpeachable; but the court is bound, when such a transaction is reviewed, to satisfy itself that the securities exchanged are of undoubtedly equal value. b [Preferences voidable.] If a bankrupt shall have procured or suffered a judgment to be entered against him in favor of any person or have made a transfer of any of his property, and if, at the time of the transfer, or of the entry of the judgment, or of the recording or registering of the transfer if by law recording or registering thereof is required, and being within four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy or after the filing thereof and before the adjudication, the bankrupt be insolvent and the judgment or transfer then operate as a preference, and the person receiving it or to be benefited thereby, or his agent acting therein, shall then have reasonable cause to believe that the enforcement of such judgment or transfer would effect a preference, it shall be voidable by the trustee and he may recover the property or its value from such person. And for the purpose of such recovery any court of bankruptcy, as hereinbefore defined, and any state court which would have had jurisdiction if bankruptcy had not intervened, shall have concurrent jurisdiction. ## I. ELEMENTS OF VOIDABILITY.

Reasonable cause to believe transaction would effect preference. - Section 60b, as amended by the Act of June 25, 1910, makes voidable all preferences wherein "the person receiving it or to be benefited thereby, or his agent acting therein, shall then have reasonable cause to believe" that the transaction would effect a preference. Prior to that amendment it was necessary to show that there was reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended. It is evident, therefore, that the amendment has substituted the effect of the transaction, for the intention of the parties. Under the former law there are numerous cases to the effect that, notwithstanding the fact that a transaction resulted in a preference within the meaning of section 60a, and would have to be surrendered under section 57g before the person benefited could prove his debt, nevertheless such preference was not voidable so as to be recoverable by the trustee, within the meaning of section 60b, unless the preference was intended. Essentially each case turns on its own circumstances. Pirie v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1901) 182 U. S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1171; Kaufman v. Tredway, (1904) 195 U. S. 271, 25 S. Preferential and fraudulent transfers distinguished. — Transfers with intent to prefer a creditor are often referred to as "fraudulent preferences." While fraud, in one sense, is no doubt involved in all such transfers, it is fraud of a different kind from that involved in transfers "with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors" according to the ordinary meaning of those words. In a preferential transfer the fraud is constructive or technical, consisting in the infraction of that rule of equal distribution among all creditors which it is the policy of the law to en-force when all cannot be fully paid. In fraudulent transfer the fraud is actual, the bankrupt has secured an advantage for himself out of what in law should belong to his creditors and not to him. In re Maher, (D. C. Mass. 1906) 144 Fed. 503, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340.

Question of fact. — It was held prior to the amendment of 1910 that the question whether a preference was intended was one of fact. Kaufman v. Tredway, (1904) 195 U. S. 271, 25 S. Ct. 33, 49 U. S. A referee's conclusion on the question whether or not there was reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended will not be disturbed where it is founded on sufficient evidence. In re Tindal, (E. D. S. C. 1907) 155 Fed. 456, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773.

If there is no reasonable ground to believe that a preference would result from the transaction, either on the part of the person benefited or his agent, then of course the transaction would not fall within the language of section 60b as a voidable one. To this effect it was held, prior to the amendment of 1910, that where there was no reasonable ground to believe that a preference was intended the transaction was not voidable. In re Busby, (M. D. Thus where payments were made by bankrupts to one creditor within four months prior to the institution of bankruptcy proceedings, and the other creditors had no reasonable cause to believe that it was thereby intended to give a preference, it was held that the payments were not voidable by the trustee, nor was the creditor paid bound to surrender the same as a condition of his right to prove his debt in the bankruptcy proceedings. In re Maher, (D. C. Mass. 1906) 144 Fed.

503, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340.

Mere grounds of suspicion that a debtor is insolvent, or that it is intended to create a preference by a transfer, are insufficient to establish the fact that the creditor who receives it has reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended thereby. There must be substantial evidence of reasonable grounds for such a belief. Tumlin v. Bryan, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 166, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 319; Philadelphia First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 853, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436.

But if a party has knowledge of facts which cause him to fear or suspect that a transaction into which he is entering will work a preference, that knowledge as a rule will at least be sufficient to put him upon an inquiry which if prosecuted would disclose the real character of the transaction. Stern v. Paper, (D. C. N. D. 1910) 183 Fed. 228.

Financial embarrassment. — The fact alone that a creditor knows his debtor to be financially embarrassed, and is pressing for payment of his claim, is not sufficient to charge him with having reasonable cause to believe his debtor to be insolvent. Sharpe v. Allender, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 589, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 431; Page v. Moore, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 988.

The temporary failure of a debtor to discharge his obligations promptly when they fall due is not in itself sufficient to prove that a creditor who is aware of such a default has reasonable cause to believe that it was intended to give a preference by means of a transfer which he obtains. Philadelphia First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 853, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436. See also J. W. Butler Paper Co. v. Gombel, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 143 Fed. 295, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 26.

Debtor's knowledge insufficient. - The intention to give a preference cannot be presumed from the fact alone that the debtor knew himself to be insolvent. Hardy v. Gray, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 922, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387.

Positive knowledge unnecessary. - In order that a preferential transaction should be deemed voidable under the provisions of section 60b, it is not necessary that the person to be benefited thereby should know positively that the result of the transaction would be the effecting of a preference, but it will be sufficient if the person preferred, or his agent therein, have knowledge or notice of such facts and circumstances as would incite a person of reasonable prudence under similar circumstances to make inquiry, where such inquiry would have developed the facts essention to a knowledge of the situation. It was so held, prior to the amendment of 1910, as to the necessity of having knowledge of facts from which it might be known that a preference was intended. Pirie v. Circumstances sufficient. - Positive proof of collusion between debtor and creditor, by which one may be preferred, is not generally to be expected, and for that reason, among others, the law allows a resort to circumstances as the means of ascertaining the truth; and the rule of evidence is well settled that circumstances, inconclusive if separately considered, may by their joint operation, especially when corroborated by moral coincidences, be sufficient. In re McDonald, (D. C. S. C. 1910) 178 Fed. 487.

"Reasonable cause to believe," under section 60b of the Bankruptcy Act, covers substantially the same field as "notice" in determining whether a person is a bona fide purchaser of property. Coder v. McPherson, (8th Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 951, 82 C. C. A. 99; Stern v. Paper, (D. C. N. D. 1910) 183 Fed. 228

A creditor is required to exercise ordinary prudence, and, if he fails to investigate, he is chargeable with all the knowledge which it is reasonable to suppose he would have acquired if he had performed his duty in that regard. In re McDonald, (D. C. S. C. 1910) 178 Fed. 487.

Notice of facts which would incite a person of reasonable prudence to an inquiry under similar circumstances is notice of all the facts which a reasonably diligent inquiry would develop. Coder v. McPherson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 951, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 523.

Where the circumstances of a transaction are such as to indicate that a preference is intended, the representatives of a creditor seeking security cannot stop their ears and close their eyes to the obvious significance of things, and then say they did not hear or see, or did not understand. Burgoyne v. Mc-Killip, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 182 Fed. 452.

Creditor not chargeable with knowledge which inquiry would not have developed. A creditor of a bankrupt, who at the time of receiving a preference is put on inquiry as to the solvency of the debtor, is not for that reason charged with notice of facts which could only be learned from intimate and inaccessible sources of information, such as the books of the bankrupt; but he is bound only by such information as could be obtained by open observation and reasonable inquiry. In re Wolf Co., (M. D. Pa. 1908) 164 Fed. 448, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73.

So, also, it has been held that a creditor cannot be said to have had reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended, unless the evidence shows that it knew, or ought to have known, the substantial truth as to the bankrupt's financial condition. In re Houghton Web Co., (D. C. Mass. 1910) 185 Fed. 213.

When an offer to compromise is made, creditors are not bound to investigate the debtor's ability to pay the amount offered, and whether it is his intent to pay it to all creditors alike, but are entitled to believe that the offer is made in good faith to all creditors, unless something occurs to put them on inquiry. Smith v. Hewlett Robin Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 271.

Knowledge presumed. — Where a person benefited by a preferential transfer, or his agent therein, has, or is chargeable with, knowledge of such facts and circumstances as would indicate clearly to a man of ordinary intelligence that the transaction from which the preference resulted would naturally effect a preference, it will be deemed voidable under section 60b. Thus, prior to the amendment of 1910, it was held that where the facts and circumstances which were known or should have been known to the party benefited by a preference, or his agent therein, were sufficient to indicate to a man of ordinary intelligence that a preference must have been intended, the transaction would be presumed to be preferential. The sale by a retail merchant of his entire stock of goods puts the purchaser on inquiry to learn whether the seller is not in financial difficulty, and casts upon him the burden of proving that he used such means of knowledge as were at hand to ascertain the facts, in order to sustain his title as against creditors of the seller. So, also, it has been held that a mortgage given by an insolvent firm within four months of bankruptcy proceedings, to secure a past indebtedness, and which conveys all the firm property, is void as giving to the creditor a preference. In re Jones, (D. C. S. C. 1902) 118 Fed. 673.

A creditor who indirectly repurchased goods from a debtor who was insolvent, and sold the same again at a loss, is presumed to have had reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended. Hardy v. Gray, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 922, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387.

Knowledge of insolvency. — It has been held that a creditor had reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended so as to render it voidable, where he admitted that he knew the debtor was hard pressed and without credit, and that he had himself been persistently pressing his own claim for several months. Wright v. William Skinner Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 315, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 527.

Knowledge of bank president. — A bank is chargeable with notice of the insolvency of a debtor from whom it receives a payment, and that such payment constitutes an unlawful preference under the Bankruptcy Act, where its president had knowledge of such insolvency, gained while acting for the bank in the matter of such indebtedness. In re Gillette, (W. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 769, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123.

Knowledge of agent. — Where the agent of a creditor, when taking mortgages to secure the indebtedness to his principal within four months prior to the debtor's bankruptcy, had knowledge of facts which should have put him on inquiry as to the debtor's solvency, he and his principal are legally chargeable with knowledge of such facts as the inquiry would have disclosed. In re Nassau, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 140 Fed. 912, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 793.

Knowledge of fraudulent scheme. — Where, before bankruptcy proceedings, a bankrupt made a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, and afterwards conspired with certain creditors that his estate should be sold to their agent for less than half its value, who should resell, and out of the profits pay such creditors a part of their claims and return the surplus to the bankrupt, it was held that such application of the insolvent debtor's property to the payment of such creditors constituted an unlawful preference. Stern v. Louisville Trust Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 501, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305.

II. RECOVERY OF VOIDABLE PREFERENCES.

Trustee vested with rights of creditor.—Since the enactment of the amendment of 1910, trustees, as to all property in the custody or coming into the custody of the bankruptcy court, are vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a creditor holding a lien by legal or equitable proceedings thereon; and also, as to all property not in the custody of the bankruptcy court, they are vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a judgment creditor holding an execution duly returned unsatisfied. See section 47a (2), supra, p. 682.

A7a (2), supra, p. 682.

Necessity of recovering preferences. — A preferential transfer is not void, it is only voidable; the title of the recipient is good unless it is avoided; therefore, in order that a preference may become a part of the assets for distribution among the creditors, it is essential that the property be recovered by the trustee. Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey. (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 891, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 13; Coder v. Arts, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 943, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513; Van Iderstine v. Latham, (S. D. Ala. 1910) 181 Fed. 866.

Recovery of voidable preferences. trustee may recover property which has been preferentially obtained, or the value thereof, from the person receiving it or benefited thereby, where it is shown that all the elements of a voidable preference, as defined by section 60b, exist. Boonville Nat. Bank v. section 60b, exist. Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 891, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 13; In re Manning, (D. C. S. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 181, 10 Am. Bankr. Trustee's discretion. — The trustee as the representative, and in the interest, of all the creditors, and not of the petitioning creditors alone, is to determine in the first instance whether the transaction was undertaken with a view to give a preference, and whether the creditor had reasonable cause to believe that it was so, and if proof is forthcoming. He is to ascertain the facts, and to determine the probability of successful litigation, and whether the creditor sought to be pursued is responsible, so that the estate should not be mulcted in unnecessary litigation and costs. Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 891, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 13.

Only trustee can avoid preferential transaction.—A trustee in bankruptcy cannot assign to another his right to avoid a preferential transfer of property. Belding-Hall Mfg. Co. v. Mercer, etc., Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 175 Fed. 335, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 595.

The statute does not sanction the bringing of a suit by a receiver to recover a voidable preference. Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 891, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 13.

Trustee may prosecute action begun by creditors. — A pending action brought by creditors of an insolvent partnership to avoid, as an unlawful preference, a sale by an individual partner of his individual property, may be prosecuted to final judgment by the trustee in bankruptcy of the partnership estate, even though the cause of action arose from the state law, and the application of that law is essential to secure the relief sought. Miller v. New Orleans Acid, etc., Co., (1909) 211 U. S. 496, 29 S. Ct. 176, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 300, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 416, affirming (1906) 117 La. 821, 42 So. 329.

On recovery preference becomes part of estate.—Where an alleged preferential transfer is avoided, and the trustee recovers the fund sued for, it then becomes a part of the assets of the bankrupt estate in the possession of, and in the course of administration by, the bankruptcy court. Lovell v. Latham, (S. D. Ala. 1911) 186 Fed. 602.

All persons entitled to participate in the assets, or claiming a lien thereon, may come into that court, and, under the jurisdiction acquired by the proceeding in bankruptcy, have their rights adjudicated. Lovell r. Latham, (S. D. Ala. 1911) 186 Fed. 602. See also Allen v. McMannes, (W. D. Wis. 1907) 156 Fed. 615, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 276.

But the validity of all other claims against the bankrupt, and the question whether others have received voidable preferences and have not been required to surrender them, cannot be litigated in a suit in a state court to avoid an alleged unlawful preference, since this would, in effect, transfer the administration of the bankrupt's estate from the federal District Court to the state court. Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Jackman, (1907)

204 U. S. 522, 27 S. Ct. 391, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 596, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675.

Jurisdiction. - The state and federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction of an action brought by a trustee in bankruptcy to avoid a preference. Bowman v. Alpha Farms, (N. D. N. Y. 1907) 153 Fed. 380, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700; Teague v. Anderson Hardware Co., (N. D. Ga. 1908) 161 Fed. 765; McElvain v. Hardesty, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 169 Fed. 31, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; Bryan v. Madden, (N. Y. 1905) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; Drew v. Myers, (1908) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656, 81 Neb. 750, 116 N. W. 781. See also the annotation following section 23b, supra, р. 595.

Ancillary jurisdiction. - A federal District Court, of a district other than that in which a bankruptcy proceeding is pending, may entertain a suit by the bankrupt's trustee, to set aside an alleged fraudulent or preferential transfer by the bankrupt to parties residing in such district. Teague v. Anderson Hardware Co., (N. D. Ga. 1908) 161 Fed. 765. And see section 2 (20), supra, p. 480, which was added by the amendment of 1910, and which especially provides for the exercise of ancillary jurisdiction.

Recovery by bill in equity.—A trustee in bankruptcy may maintain a suit in equity to recover property which has been preferen-tially transferred; such action being in the nature of a creditor's suit to set aside a nature of a creditor's suit to set aside a fraudulent conveyance. Pond v. New York Nat. Exch. Bank, (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 124 Fed. 992; Wright v. Skinner, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 136 Fed. 694, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500; Parker v. Black, (W. D. N. Y. 1900) 143 Fed. 560, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202, affirmed (2d Cir. 1907) 151 red. 18, 80 C. C. A. 484; Morris v. Small, (D. C. Mass. 1908) 160 Fed. 142, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 138; Westall v. Avery, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 626, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673. See also the annotation following section 23b. supra. p. 595. notation following section 23b, supra, p. 595.

Federal courts, both when exercising general jurisdiction and also when exercising the special one conferred by the Bankruptcy Act in this particular, require suits to set aside deeds and contracts as fraudulent to be instituted in equity. Westall v. Avery, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 626, 22 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 673.

It is to be borne in mind that the equity practice of the federal courts is independent of, and unaffected by, state laws as to pro-Westall v. Avery cedure in state courts. (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 626, 22

Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

A bill by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover a payment of money made by a bank-rupt within four months prior to bank-ruptcy, by alleging that the transaction amounted to a preference or a fraudulent payment, and that in either case he was entitled to its return, does not unite inconsistent causes of action. Wright v. Skinner, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 136 Fed. 694, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500.

The decree of a state court, granting registration of title to land under the law of the state, does not bar a suit in equity by a trustee in bankruptcy to enforce a reconveyance of the land, alleged to have been conveyed by the bankrupt as a preference, against a defendant who was not a bona fide purchaser in good faith in reliance on the registered title. Morris v. Small, (C. C. Mass. 1908) 160 Fed. 142, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 138.

But where the trustee has an adequate remedy at law he cannot maintain a bill in equity in any court for the recovery of a preference. Warmath v. O'Daniel, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 87, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101; Sessler v. Nemcof, (E. D. Pa.

1910) 183 Fed. 656.

Jurisdiction not determined on demurrer. Though equity has cognizance of constructive and actual fraud, whether a bill in equity lies by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside a preferential payment to a creditor of a bankrupt will not be determined on demurrer to the bill, but the demurrer will be overruled, reserving the right to raise the question of jurisdiction at final hearing. Johnson v. Hanley, etc., Co., (D. C. R. I. 1911) 188 Fed. 752.

Recovery in assumpsit. — A trustee in bankruptcy may sue in assumpsit for the value of a preferential transfer of goods by the bankrupt to a creditor, for the reason that the creditor takes the goods impressed with the obligation created by the Bankruptcy Act to restore or pay on the trustee's electing to sue. Reber v. Ellis, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 185 Fed. 313.

Remedy by injunction pending recovery. -Under the rule that where equity will enforce a claim to specific property, an injunction may issue pendente life to prevent a transfer that would interfere with or prejudice the ultimate relief to which a claimant may be entitled, it has been held that a court of bankruptcy will, on proper showing, grant an injunction to restrain the disposi-In re Kimball, (W. Pleadings. - The pleadings must show all the essential elements of a voidable transfer in order to warrant a recovery. Deland v. Miller, etc., Bank, (1903) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 744, 119 Ia. 368, 93 N. W. 304; West v. Lahoma Bank, (1905) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733, 16 Okla. 508, 86 Pac. 59; Drew v. Myers, (1908) 81 Neb. 750, 116 N. W. 781.

Pleadings must comply with practice where suit is brought.—It is well settled that a proceeding instituted by a bankrupt's trustee to set aside illegal preferences is not a proceeding in bankruptcy, but, while ancillary to such proceeding and authorized by the Bankruptcy Act to be instituted in either the federal District Court or in a state court of competent jurisdiction, it must be governed, so far as pleading and practice is concerned, by the laws and rules of the court wherein it is instituted. Westall v. Avery, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 626, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

Evidence. — The burden of proving that the transaction which is attacked as having resulted in a preference is of such a character as to render it voidable under section 60b is on the trustee. In re Pfaffinger, (W. D. Ky. 1906) 154 Fed. 523; Getts v. Janesville Wholesale Grocery Co., (W. D. Wis. 1908) 163 Fed. 417, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 5; Powell v. Gate City Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 609; Reber v. Shulman, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 574; Hackney v. Raymond Bros. Clarke Co., (Neb. 1903) 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213.

But the defendant assumes the burden of proving an affirmative defense set up by him. Ommen v. Talcott, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911)

188 Fed. 401.

Proof of insolvency in partnership cases. - A trustee in bankruptcy may not recover a conveyance of partnership property as a preference, unless it is shown that the partners, as individuals, were insolvent at the time of the conveyance. Worrell v. Whitney, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 1014. See also the annotation under section 5a, supra, p. 501

Establishing the existence of other individual creditors is not essential to the prosecution, by the trustee of a bankrupt partnership, of a pending suit to avoid, as constituting a preference under the state law, a sale by an individual partner of his individual property, where, under such law, part-nership and individual creditors have a coequal right to payment out of his individual estate. Miller v. New Orleans Acid, etc., Co., (1909) 211 U. S. 496, 29 S. Ct. 176, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 300, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 416, affirming (1906) 117 La. 821, 42 So. 329.

Defenses — Expense in connection with preference. — It is no defense to an action for the recovery of a preference that the person receiving it has expended money thereon; a claim of that character must be presented for allowance against the estate. Is re Nechamkus, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 867, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189; Ommen v. Talcott, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 175 Fed. 259, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572.

Misconduct of creditor's agent. — The statute contains no exceptions to the effect that a preferred creditor may hold his advantage provided his agent and the insolvent have confidential relations, or provided his agent has self-interests antagonistic to a disclosure to his principal. To interpolate such exceptions is beyond the proper sphere of statutory construction and violative of the spirit of the Act wherein equality of distribution of the bankrupt's inadequate assets is a prime object. Campbell v. Balcomb, (C. C.

A. 7th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 766.

Cross bill for recovery of dividend.—A court of equity, in a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover a preference, will not entertain a cross bill for the recovery by de-fendant of the amount of the dividend to which he claims to be entitled from the bankrupt estate, but will require him to prove his claim in the bankruptcy court; but it may permit him, on the giving of security, to retain in his hands enough of the amount complainant is entitled to recover, to cover his dividend in case his claim shall be allowed. Ommen v. Talcott, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 175 Fed. 259, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572.

Finding on creditors' petition not res judicata as to trustee. — A finding on a creditors' petition that a charge of preferential transfer of property by the alleged bankrupts was not sustained, is not an adjudication which can bind a trustee, subsequently appointed on an adjudication made by another court, in a suit brought by him against the alleged preferred creditor to recover the property. In re Sears, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904)

c [Set-off of new credit after preference.] If a creditor has been preferred, and afterwards in good faith gives the debtor further credit without security of any kind for property which becomes a part of the debtor's estates, the amount of such new credit remaining unpaid at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy may be set off against the amount which would otherwise be recoverable from him. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 562.]

Right of set-off. - Where a creditor who has been preferred, afterwards, in good faith, extends further credit without security, for property which becomes a part of the debtor's estate, the unpaid amount of such new credit may be set off against the amount which would otherwise be recoverable from the creditor by reason of his having obtine creditor by reason of his having obtained a voidable preference. Kaufman v. Tredway, (1904) 195 U. S. 271, 25 S. Ct. 33, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 190, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 685; In re Morrow, (S. D. Ohio 1901) 134 Fed. 686, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392; Price v. See also the annotation following section 58a, supra, p. 715.

The requirement as to good faith in section 60c excludes any arrangement by which the creditor, seeking to escape the liability occasioned by the preference he has received, passes money or property over to the debtor with a view to its secretion until after the bankruptcy proceedings have terminated, or with any other wrongful purpose. It means that the creditor should not act in such a way as to intentionally defeat the Bankruptcy Act, but should let the debtor have the money or property for some honest purpose. Kaufman t. Tredway, (1904) 195 U. S. 271, 25 S. Ct. 33, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 190. 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 685.

The requirement that the property should broome a part of the debtor's estate excludes cases in which the creditor delivers the property to a third person on the credit of the debtor, or delivers it to him with instructions to pass it on to some third party. The purpose was that the property which passed from the creditor should in fact become a part of the debtor's estate, and that the credit should be only for such property. Kaufman v. Tredway, (1904) 195 U. S. 271, 25 S. Ct. 33, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 190, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 685.

Statute not applicable to innocent preferences. — Section 60c is not applicable to the mere preference defined in section 60a, and therefore does not entitle a creditor to the right of set-off against such a preference when required to surrender it, under section 57g, prior to proving his claim. But the right of set-off, provided for in section 60c, is only applicable where, under section 60b, the trustee brings action to recover the proprety or the value thereof. In re Christensen, (N. D. Ia. 1900) 101 Fed. 802, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; In re Keller, (N. D. Ia. 1901) 109 Fed. 118, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 334; In re Jones, (D. C. S. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 128, 10 Am. Bankr. d [Payments to attorneys — examination.] If a debtor shall, directly or indirectly, in contemplation of the filing of a petition by or against him, pay money or transfer property to an attorney and counselor at law, solicitor in equity, or proctor in admiralty for services to be rendered, the transaction shall be reexamined by the court on petition of the trustee or any creditor and shall only be held valid to the extent of a reasonable amount to be determined by the court, and the excess may be recovered by the trustee for the benefit of the estate. A payment or transfer to counsel is valid to the extent that it is reasonable. It is neither a preference under section 60b, nor a fraudulent transfer under section 67e. In re Wood, (1908) 210 U. S. 246, 28 S. Ct. 621, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 1046, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

Services rendered after institution of proceedings. — Section 60d is limited to the allowance of reasonable compensation to attorneys for services rendered to the bankrupt prior to and in contemplation of the com-mencement of the bankruptcy proceedings; it does not cover services rendered in resisting the creditor's petition for an adjudication of bankruptcy. Pratt v. Bothe, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 670, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529.

Previous services. — A payment made by a bankrupt to his attorney immediately prior to the bankruptcy for services previously rendered, so far as the question of its being preferential is concerned, stands upon the same ground as a payment to any other creditor. Re-examination of payment or transfer made to attorney. — Section 60d "recognizes the temptation of a failing debtor to deal too liberally with his property in employing counsel to protect him in view of financial reverses and probable failure. It recognizes the right of such a debtor to have the aid and advice of counsel, and, in contemplation of bankruptcy proceedings which shall strip him of his property, to make provisions for reasonable compensation to his counsel. And, in view of the circumstances, the Act makes provision that the bankruptcy court administering the estate may, if the trustee or any creditor question the transaction, re-examine it with a view to a determination of its reasonableness." Determination of reasonableness. — The provisions of section 60d, although aimed at the recovery of undue payments for "services to be rendered," are analogous in so far as they give the court an opportunity to determine what allowance shall be made, with the provisions of section 64b (3); hence, proceedings to test the propriety of payments to an attorney for all services, namely, those rendered before the payment as well as those services to be rendered in the bankruptcy proceeding itself, should be taken in the form of a motion to fix the allowance, and for an order directing the return of the balance, unless an issue is raised. In re Shiebler, (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 163 Fed. 545, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 777.

Jurisdiction. — A state court has no jurisdiction to re-examine the reasonableness of an attorney's compensation under section 60d. In re Wood, (1908) 210 U.S. 246, 28 S. Ct. 621, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 1046, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Swartz v. Frank, (1904) 183 Mo. 439, 82 S. W. 60.

SEC. 61. DEPOSITORIES FOR MONEY. — a Courts of bankruptcy shall designate, by order, banking institutions as depositories for the money of bankrupt estates, as convenient as may be to the residences of trustees, and shall require bonds to the United States, subject to their approval, to be given by such banking institutions, and may from time to time as occasion may require, by like order increase the number of depositories or the amount of any bond or change such depositories. Duties of trustee with reference to deposits and disbursements of funds, see section 47a (3) and (4), supra, p. 685.

Duty to designate depositories.—Section 61 of the Bankruptcy Act makes it the duty of courts of bankruptcy to designate, by order, banking institutions as depositories of funds of bankrupt estates, and to require of them bonds for the safekeeping and forthcoming thereof. Huttig Mfg. Co. v. Edwards, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 160 Fed. 619, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349.

Deposit creates relation of debtor and creditor with depository. — Where a receiver or other officer of a court of bankruptcy deposits money in a designated depository, the same relation of debtor and creditor is created as in the case of an ordinary bank deposit; so that the bankruptcy court no longer has the same jurisdiction over it as it has over funds or property in the possession of a receiver or trustee. Effect of failure of depository. — Where a state trust company, prior to failure, had been appointed a depository for bankruptcy funds, the question whether deposits made by trustees in bankruptcy were entitled to preference, under R. S. sec. 3466, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 45, giving preference to debts due the United States, is solely within the jurisdiction of the state supreme court, and cannot be determined on a motion in bankruptcy for an order requiring the superintendent of banks to pay out such deposits. In re Bologh, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 185 Fed. 825, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 726.

Thus where a depository of bankruptcy funds executed a bond to the United States to pay out all moneys deposited with it in such depository only as provided by the Acts of Congress and the rules of court applicable thereto, and to abide by all lawful orders and decrees of the court, it was held that such provisions applied only to the depository while in possession of its own assets and conducting its ordinary business, and did not confer on the bankruptcy court power to make summary orders for the payment of deposits made with the trust company by receivers and trustees in bankruptcy, after the trust company had passed into the hands of the state superintendent of banks for liquidation. In re Bologh, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 185 Fed. 825, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 726.

Sec. 62. Expenses of Administrating Estates. — a The actual and necessary expenses incurred by officers in the administration of estates shall, except where other provisions are made for their payment, be reported in detail, under oath, and examined and approved or disapproved by the court. Where, after the discharge of certain bankrupts and their trustee, their attorney, as the result of considerable effort in examining records, etc., and the accounts relating to the estate of the bankrupts' father, and certain titles to mortgaged property, discovered additional assets amounting to $2,000 to the credit of the estate of each of the bankrupts, it was held that an allowance to the attorney of $37.50 for fees was inadequate, and should be increased to $100 in each estate. In re Irwin, (W. D. Pa. 1909) 177 Fed. 284, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165 (modifying C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 642), affirmed in this respect 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487.

Fees of a bankrupt's attorney for services in prosecuting a petition for the bankrupt's discharge cannot be charged against objecing creditors. In re Gillardon, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 187 Fed. 289.

In voluntary proceedings. — The attorney for a voluntary bankrupt may be allowed fees from the estate for such services as were actually rendered in assisting the bankrupt to comply with the statute in the preparation of his schedules, etc. In re Terrill, (D. C. Vt. 1900) 103 Fed. 781, 4 Am. Bankr.

Entitled to priority. — It has been held that the services of an attorney rendered to a voluntary bankrupt in the necessary performance of the bankrupt's statutory duties are entitled to priority of payment under section 64b (3). In re Kross, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 96 Fed. 816, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187; Matter of Hitchcock, (D. C. Hawaii 1906) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 664. See also the cases cited under section 64b (3), infra, p. 772.

But it has also been held that, except as to services tending to preserve the estate, an attorney for the bankrupt in voluntary proceedings can only submit his claim for compensation as a general debt of the estate. In re Beck, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 92 Fed. 889, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 535.

Claiming exemption. - Logal services rendered to a bankrupt in having his exemption allowed is a matter between the bankrupt and his attorneys. In re Castleberry, (N. D. Ga. 1905) 143 Fed. 1018, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Where an attorney has been paid, by the bankrupt or any one else, before the bankruptcy, a sufficient compensation for his services, no further sum will be allowed out of the estate. In re O'Connell, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 98 Fed. 83, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 422; In re Smith, (E. D. N. C. 1901) 108 Fed. 39,

N. Y. 1903) 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 398.

Attorneys elected by creditors to represent them in bankruptcy proceedings must look to them for compensation, not to the bankrupt estate or to the court. In re Evans, (E. D. N. C. 1902) 116 Fed. 909, 8 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 730.

Claimants having claims against the tates of bankrupts must establish them at their own expense, and will not be allowed their costs and expenses from the estate. where it does not appear that the defense made by the trustee was captious or unwarranted. In re Stewart, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 178 Fed. 463.

Thus it has been held that a court of bankruptcy will not allow costs or attorney's fees from an estate to a creditor whose claim was unsuccessfully contested. In re Coventry Evans Furniture Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 673, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623.

Where trustee refuses to act. — Where one of the creditors of a bankrupt, by his attorney, objects to the allowance of a claim filed by another creditor, the trustee declining to interfere, and upon a contest and trial secures its rejection, thereby saving a considerable sum for distribution among the creditors generally, the attorney for such con-testing creditor may be allowed a fee for his professional services rendered, to be paid out of the estate. Claims for fees by attorneys for objecting creditors should be filed with the referee in the first instance, so that any party aggrieved by the referee's ruling thereon may have the same reviewed by appropriate proceedings. In rc Stoddard Bros. Lumber Co., (D. C. Idaho 1909) 169 Fed. 190, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

Expense incurred for benefit of creditors generally. — The only statutory allowance of attorney's fees is, under section 3c, upon a withdrawal or dismissal of a petition to take possession of the estate, or, as authorized by section 64b (3), to the attorneys for petitioning creditors. But it will be noticed that, under section 64b (2), creditors themselves may be allowed for the reasonable expense incurred in recovering any part of the estate which has been transferred or concealed; and such expense may, of course, include necessary attorney fees. Sec. 63. Debts which may be Proved. — a Debts of the bankrupt may be proved and allowed against his estate which are [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 562.]

Section 63a must be read in connection with section 17 limiting the operation of discharges. Crawford v. Burke, (1904) 195 U. S. 176, 25 S. Ct. 9, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 147, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659, reversing (1903) 201 Ill. 581, 66 N. E. 833. See also In re United Button Co., (D. C. Del. 1906) 140 Fed. 495, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 390; In re Havens, (E. D. N. Y. 1910) 182 Fed. 367.

N. Y. 1910) 13Z reu. 00... Creation and recognition of provability. — Creation of provability is one thing. mere recognition is another. The le however, whether express or implied, may have an important bearing upon the question of provability by indicating that the lan-guage used in section 63a to define provable claims was employed in a broader sense than would, without such recognition, have been attributable to it. It is proper that the section should be read in connection with section 17, section 64, or any other section calculated to throw light upon its scope and effect. The result may be that where the definition in section 63a of a class of prov-able debts is, in and by itself, susceptible to two interpretations, the more liberal will be adopted. In re United Button Co., (D. C. Del. 1906) 140 Fed. 495, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep.

The several subdivisions of section 63a are not to be regarded as an enumeration of a group of characteristics all of which are essential to a provable claim, but as a classification, each specifying a separate class of provable claims independently of the others; thus the provision of subdivision (1), which limits the claims provable thereunder to those which were a fixed liability absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition, does not impose the same limitation upon claims within other classes. In re Smith, (D. C. R. I. 1906) 146 Fed. 923, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112.

The general intent of Congress in the enactment of the statute was to make every debt and demand existing against the bankrupt at the time of his adjudication, which was recoverable either at law or in equity, provable in bankruptcy. In re Mahler, (E. D. Mich. 1900) 105 Fed. 428.

(1) [Fixed liability.] a fixed liability, as evidenced by a judgment or an instrument in writing, absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition against him, whether then payable or not, with any interest thereon which would have been recoverable at that date or with a rebate of interest upon such as were not then payable and did not bear interest; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 562.]

The status of a claim, as a fixed liability absolutely owing, is determined at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy; and if a claim is then a provable debt, it comes within the language of the statute; otherwise it does not. In Loeser v. Alexander, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 176 Fed. 265, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75, it appears that the bankrupt was surety on a bond given by a deputy collector of taxes, and that prior to his bankruptcy the deputy had become a defaulter by reason of the failure of a bank in which he deposited his collections; and it was held that the liability of the bankrupt on the bond was not contingent, but was a fixed liability provable against his estate, and that the right to prove the claim against the estate was not affected by the pendency of an action at law on the bond, nor by the fact that the public authorities had recovered a portion of the shortage from the receiver of the bank in which the fund was deposited, as these matters went only in reduction of the claim.

The remedies against a bankrupt principal, by filing a claim against his estate, and the action against such bankrupt's surety, on a surety bond, are separate and distinct, and may be simultaneously pursued. U. S. v. Schofield Co., (E. D. Pa. 1910) 182 Fed. 240. See also Loeser v. Alexander, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 176 Fed. 265, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep.

The fact that a surety has made a part payment on the debt does not affect the right of the creditor to prove for the entire amount. In re Heyman, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 95 Fed. 800.

Indemnity of another as surety. — Where trust deeds were executed by a bankrupt to secure the beneficiaries as sureties, it was held that such beneficiaries were not entitled to be paid personally the amounts of the debts for which they were sureties out of the bankrupt's estate, but were only entitled to have such debts paid to the creditors out of the proceeds of the property included in the deeds, and to a release of their liability as sureties. In re Randolph, (N. D. W. Va. 1911) 187 Fed. 186.

Stipulation for attorney fees.— In many instances the obligation by which a bankrupt's indebtedness is evidenced contains a stipulation for an attorney fee for the collection therefor; and in such cases, if the claim has been placed with an attorney for collection prior to bankruptcy, and collection proceedings were actually instituted, so that the attorney's fee was a fixed liability at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, such fee will constitute a provable debt against the estate of the debtor. Merchants' Bank v. Thomas, (5th Cir. 1903) 121 Fed. 306, 57 C. C. A. 374, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299; In re Edens Co., (D. C. S. C. 1907) 151 Fed. 940, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 643; In re V. & M. Lumber Co., (N. D. Ala. 1910) 182 Fed. 231; In re Torchia, (W. D. Pa. 1911) 185 Fed. 576.

Thus where notes given by a firm provided that if they were placed in the hands of an attorney for collection the makers and indorsers agreed to pay the holder an attorney fee of ten per cent. on the amount due, and the maker thereafter became bankrupt, and the notes were placed in the hands of an attorney for collection, it was held that the attorney's fee provided for was properly provable as a claim against the bankrupt's estate. Merchants' Bank r. Thomas, (5th Cir. 1903) 121 Fed. 306, 57 C. C. A. 374, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299.

So, also, where a mortgage executed by a bankrupt provided for the payment of the attorney's fees of the mortgagee in case he was required to employ counsel, it was held that the mortgagee was entitled to an allowance for a reasonable attorney's fee for services required in proving his claim and lien against the bankrupt's estate. In re Ferreri, (E. D. La. 1911) 188 Fed. 675.

A state rule to the effect that an attorney's commission, stipulated for in bond and mortgage in case of foreclosure, is subject to the control of the court, which may reduce the amount of such commission in its discretion, will be followed by a court of bankruptcy in that state. In re Wendel, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 152 Fed. 672, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665.

Where, however, the obligation has not been given to an attorney to collect, or no effort has been made to realize thereon such as would authorize the collection of the fee as part of the claim, the stipulated fee, in such cases, has not become such a fixed liability as to make it available as a provable debt in bankruptcy. In re V. & M. Lumber Co., (N. D. Ala. 1910) 182 Fed. 231.

Thus where judgments were entered against a bankrupt by confession, without suit, and included an allowance for attorney's fees, it was held that the bankrupt was entitled at the first opportunity, when such judgments were presented for allowance as claims against his estate, to object to the allowance of the attorney's fees because no testimony was offered as to the value of the services or the amount of the commissions which should be allowed, and his trustee in bankruptcy was entitled to raise the same objection. In re Torchia, (W. D. Pa. 1911) 185 Fed. 576.

Equitable claims. — An equitable claim which, at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, was a fixed liability on the part of the bankrupt may be proved against his estate. James v. But see In re E. T. Kenney Co., (D. C. Ind. 1905) 136 Fed. 451, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 611, wherein it was said that only such claims are provable in bankruptcy as are made provable by section 63, and it does not include equitable claims unless they are included under the description of unliquidated claims which are made provable only after they are liquidated. All other claims enumerated in section 63 are legal claims, and a statutory mode of proof is prescribed for them in section 57.

Thus where a bankrupt's assignee for the benefit of creditors redeemed a pawned diamond with his own funds, and later under compulsion delivered the diamond to the bankrupt's trustee, who sold it as a part of the bankrupt's estate for more than the amount advanced to redeem it, the assignee was entitled to receive the amount so advanced from the trustee. appears from Cooke, supra, the rule was laid down, not because of the words of the statute, but as a fundamental principle. We take our bankruptcy system from England, and we naturally assume that the fundamental principles upon which it was administered were adopted by us when we copied the system, somewhat as the established construction of a law goes with the words where they are copied by another state. No one doubts that interest on unsecured debts stops. See section 63 (1). Shawnee County v. Hurley, (8th Cir. 1909) 94 C. C. A. 362, 169 Fed. 92, 94." Contingent claims.—Claims which are of

The liability of a bankrupt on a guaranty, executed by him, of the payment by a corporation of dividends at a certain rate on its stock, owned by another, with respect to dividends not due or payable at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, is so far contingent that a claim based thereon is not a provable debt. Fed. 670, the court said that it is the duty of a trustee in bankruptcy to plead the statute of limitations, especially when required by creditors whom he represents. Where a bankrupt claims property as a homestead, and proceedings are taken before the referee to subject it to the payment of a prior debt, the bankrupt should be allowed an opportunity to set up the statute of limitations against such debt. In re Bean, (D. C. Vt. 1900) 100 Fed. 262, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53.

- Where duebills issued by a bankrupt corporation for money lent to it by a foreign corporation were adjudged invalid in the hands of an assignee, and refused allowance against the bankrupt estate, on the ground that in lending the money the foreign corporation was doing business in the state without having registered as required by the state law, it was held that such corporation could not prove the same indebtedness as a claim against the estate on the theory that, the duebills being void, the lender was entitled to recover on an implied contract as for money had and received; such contracts being equally within the statute. In re Montello Brick Works, (E. D. Pa. 1909) 174 Fed. 498, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 375.

Effect of ultra vires and illegality. — Bonds issued by a corporation which are ultra vires and void under the law of the state are not allowable against the corporation's estate in bankruptcy. In re Waterloo Organ Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 134 Fed. 341, 13 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 466.

Corporation's agreement to pay debts of third persons. - Where a corporation gave its promissory note to a bank for the indebtedness of third parties for which it was in no way responsible, and also for its own debt, it was held that, to the extent of the amount of the debts of the third parties, the note was invalid in the hands of the bank, which knew these facts, and that the claim of the bank against the estate of the bankrupt corporation must be reduced to the amount which the corporation owed the bank when the note was given, and the interest thereon. Mapes v. German Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 176 Fed. 89, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713.

So, also, it has been held that renewal notes, executed by a corporation to a bank, covering notes given for an indebtedness of another corporation, without any new consideration, are not enforceable in bankruptcy, under the rule that a corporation has no authority to pay the debts of a third person, in the absence of a binding obligation arising from an agreement to assume such third party's debts, based on a valuable consideration. In re Stanford Clothing Co., (N. D. Ala. 1911) 187 Fed. 172.

A corporation has no power to purchase shares of its own stock, where the transaction renders it insolvent, and in consequence operates as a fraud on its creditors; and notes given by it in such case for a part of the purchase price are invalid, and cannot be proved against its estate in bankruptcy by the selling stockholder. In re S. P. Smith Lumber Co., (N. D. Tex. 1904) 132 Fed. 618,

13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118.

But where stock had been issued for merchandise, the value of such consideration being fairly debatable, and the corporation enjoyed, used, and did its entire corporate business for several years on the property so conveyed to it, and where such property cannot be restored or the contract rescinded, and where no person was in any way induced to act or was misled or wronged by the maintenance of that status, it was held that the corporation had no such right against the stockholder as would prevent him from participating in the distribution of the estate to the amount of such sums as were rightfully due to him. In re L. M. Alleman Hardware Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 810.

But if the claimant does not require the aid of the tainted transaction in order to establish his claim, it may be proved. In re T. H. Bunch Co., (E. D. Ark. 1910) 180 Fed. 519.

Gambling transactions. — Where a claim against a bankrupt's estate was based on a note given by her in a marginal gambling transaction, it was held that the defense that it was based on an illegal consideration was available to her, and was, therefore, available to her trustee in bankruptcy. In re Hill, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 187 Fed. 214.

Claim against bucket shop owner. — Where a customer of a bankrupt who was a stockbroker filed a claim for a balance due on account of purchases and sales of stock, for the claimant's account, on the theory that the transactions were real purchases and sales, but the evidence showed that the creditor knew that the bankrupt was operating a bucket shop, and intended no real purchase or sale, it was held that the creditor was nevertheless entitled to the allowance of his claim for the amount of cash deposited with the bankrupt, and interest thereon, under a state statute which permitted such recovery as against the broker. Streeter v. Lowe, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 263.

(2) [Costs of suit.] due as costs taxable against an involuntary bankrupt who was at the time of the filing of the petition against him plaintiff in a cause of action which would pass to the trustee and which the trustee declines to prosecute after notice; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 563.]

Costs due when the petition was filed, and which were then a fixed liability, are provable. See Aiken v. Haskins, (1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 46, 34 Misc. 505, 70 N. Y. S. 293.

Costs adjudged against a complainant after his adjudication as a bankrupt, in a suit brought prior to such adjudication, do not constitute a provable debt against his estate, under section 63, and he is not entitled to be protected by the bankruptcy court from arrest on an execution therefor. In re Marcus, (D. C. Mass. 1900) 104 Fed. 331, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19; Aiken v. Haskins, (1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 46, 34 Misc. 505, 70 N. Y. S. 293.

(3) [Claim for taxable costs.] founded upon a claim for taxable costs incurred in good faith by a creditor before the filing of the petition in an action to recover a provable debt; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 563.]

Costs incurred by creditors in good faith and for the benefit of the estate are usually entitled to priority of payment, and have been considered under section 64b (2), infra, p. 771.

Costs in attachment proceedings depend usually, as provable or priority claims, on the law of the state, and have been considered under section 64b (5), infra, p. 777.

(4) [Open account or contract.] founded upon an open account, or upon a contract express or implied; and [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 563.]

Contracts and open accounts. - Claims founded on an express or implied contract, or on an open account, and which were a fixed liability at the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, are provable against the debtor's estate therein under section 63a (4). Rep. 643.

The contract of a mercantile agency whereby it agrees, in consideration of an annual fee, to furnish a subscriber with certain books and reports, is provable in bankruptcy for the subscription fee. Matter of Buffalo Mirror, etc., Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1905) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122.

A good faith "representation and corranty" made by one joint purchaser of timber to his co-purchasers as an inducement to the purchase, as to the quantity of lumber which could be cut from such timber, is not within the rules as to "warranties" in sales of property or insurance contracts to the extent of implying a promise to reimburse his co-purchasers for loss on account of the failure of the tract to cut as much as represented, so as to create a liability therefor on an implied contract provable against his estate in bankruptcy under section 63a (4). Switzer v. Henking, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 158 Fed. 784, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300.

On the proof of a claim arising from an executory contract, the measure of damages must be sought in the contract itself. In re Glick, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 184 Fed. 967.

The contract must be valid and binding; as in bankruptcy, as well as elsewhere, contracts which are void or voidable for illegality, ultra vires, or other causes, cannot successfully form the basis of a claim. In re Talbot, (D. C. Mass. 1901) 110 Fed. 924, Am. Bankr. Rep. 29; In re Ervin, (E. D. Pa. 1902) 114 Fed. 596, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180; In re S. P. Rep. 466.

Thus a contract made by a cotton mill company for the purchase of cotton for de-ferred delivery at different times, but which also contained a put and call clause, under which the parties had actually settled one loss by the company without any delivery, taken in connection with extrinsic testimony tending to show that no deliveries were intended by the parties, was held to be a gambling contract which the corporation had no power to make and which created no liability provable against its estate in bankruptcy. In re Ætna Cotton Mills, (D. C. S. 1909) 171 Fed. 994, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 629.

So, also, it has been held that a contractual obligation which, under the state law, ceases to be binding, is not provable in bank-ruptcy. Kenyon v. Mulert, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 825.

Effect of bankrupt's fraud. - A debtor will not be allowed to secure deposits of money by false and fraudulent representations of material facts, and afterwards be heard to say that the depositors shall not recover it on the ground that the ultimate use to be made of the money was to bet on horse races; any other conclusion would permit bankrupts, after successfully swindling the com-munity, to bid defiance to their creditors and enjoy the fruits of their iniquity unrestrained. In re Arnold, (E. D. Mo. 1904) strained. In re Arnold, (E. D. Mo. 1 133 Fed. 789, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320. Rescinded contract.—A claim by

In re Davis, (W. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 871.

Renting contracts. - Rent due at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy constitutes a provable claim against the estate of a bankrupt tenant; but rent to become due cannot, as a general rule, be so proved, for the reason that it was not, when bankruptcy occurred, a fixed liability. A landlord having a lien or charge for the rent due him on the property of his tenant at the time of the latter's bankruptcy, but the amount of which was adjudicated, in order to preserve his right to priority must establish his claim by proof under the Bankruptcy Act, the same as other creditors. Taxes and insurance premiums which a bankrupt covenanted to pay as a part of his rent, but which at the time of the bank-ruptcy were not due, nor the amount then capable of ascertainment, are not provable. In re Pittsburg Drug Co., (W. D. Pa. 1908) 164 Fed. 482, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 227.

Damages for the breach of a contract of the bankrupt to pay rents at times subsequent to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy do not constitute a provable claim, for the same reason that the claim for the rents is not provable. provided in section 63b.

Lease providing for rent to become due. -Where a lease provides that on default in the payment of any rent, the rent for the entire term should at once become due and payable, it has been held that, on the bankruptcy of the lessee while so in default, the rent for the term, so far as definitely fixed by the lease, is a "fixed liability absolutely owing." Breach of contract. — A claim for damages resulting from the breach of a contractual obligation by the bankrupt is, under section 63a (4), provable against his estate. In re Manhattan Ice Co., (S. D. Inability to perform. — Where a company which was furnishing its customers ice at so much per ton, payable weekly, under contracts covering a period of several years, broke such contracts, and became unable to continue them in the future, it was held that the claims of the customers for damages sustained by reason of the company's inability to fulfil the executory portions of the contracts were "provable claims" in involuntary bankruptcy proceedings against the company. In re Stern, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1902) 116 Fed. 604, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569.

Repudiation of contract of sale. — Where a bankrupt became insolvent and repudiated a contract which it had entered into for the purchase of machinery, it was held that the seller was entitled to prove its claim against the bankrupt estate for the profit which it would have made on the sale, where such profit can be shown with reasonable certainty. In re Saxton Furnace Co., (E. D. Pa. 1905) 142 Fed. 293, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 445.

Damage accruing in future. — Where certain claims for breaches of contract were undisputed, it was held that the mere fact that the damages therefrom were to accrue in the future did not prevent them from being provable. In re Frederick L. Grant Shoe Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 881, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349, following In re Stern, (2d Cir. 1902) 116 Fed. 604, 54 C. C. A. 60.

Rep. 569, it appears that an ice company agreed to deliver ice to the petitioning creditors in bankruptcy for specified terms, and at a specified price, and afterwards broke the agreement, and it was held that the loss for the entire term was provable, and not merely the current damages.

Time of performance in future. — Where a bankrupt shortly prior to his bankruptcy gave notice to the other party to an executory contract that he would be unable to perform on his part because of his financial condition, such other party may treat the contract as broken, although the time for performance has not arrived, and prove his claim for damages for the breach against the estate in bankruptcy under section 63a (4). In re Spittler, (D. C. Conn. 1907) 151 Fed. 942, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425. See also Phenix Nat. Bank v. Waterbury, (1908) 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140, 123 App. Div. 453, 108 N. Y. S. 391.

Breach occasioned by bankruptcy. — It has been quite generally held that the bankruptcy of one of the contracting parties is, in itself, a sufficient breach of the contract to support a claim against the estate of the party who has been declared bankrupt. In re Silverman, (W. D. Mo. 1899) 101 Fed. 219, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 83; In re Swift, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 315, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 374; In re Manhattan Ice Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 114 Fed. 399, 7 Am. Rep. 23.

Equivalent of refusal to perform.—It is not essential to the right to prove a claim against the estate of a bankrupt that it should have existed prior to the bankruptcy; but where the filing of the petition in bankruptcy itself operates as a breach of an executory contract, because equivalent to a refusal to perform, the other party may prove his claim for damages as one existing at the time of the filing of the petition. In re Swift, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 315,

7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 374.

Equivalent of disenablement and repudiation.—If a bankrupt, at the time of bankruptcy, by disenabling himself from performing a particular contract, and by repudiating its obligation, could give the other party the right to maintain at once a suit in which damages could be assessed at law or in equity, then such party may prove as a creditor in bankruptcy, on the ground that bankruptcy is the equivalent of disenablement and repudiation. In re Pettingill, (D. C. Mass. 1905) 137 Fed. 143, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728.

Thus where a bankrupt, prior to the appointment of receivers, had put the claimant to considerable trouble concerning a contract for the sale of wire, and the receivers and the bankruptcy adjudication accomplished a complete breach of the contract, it was held that the claimant was entitled to the allowance of an award of damages therefor in the bankruptcy proceedings. In re National Wire Corp., (D. C. Conn. 1909) 166 Fed. 631, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186.

So, also, it has been held that bankruptcy is such a breach of contract to purchase stock at a stated price and time, which time is subsequent to bankruptcy, that a claim for damages for the breach is a provable debt. In re Pettingill, (D. C. Mass. 1905) 137 Fed. 143, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728; In re Neff, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 57, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 23. See also In re Swift, (1st Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 315, 50 C. C. A. 264.

Where a corporation which, as part consideration for an exclusive license to manufacture under a patent, had contracted to pay the patentee a bonus or royalty on the patented articles sold, with a guaranty of a minimum number during the year, became bankrupt before the end of the year, it was held that the patentee was entitled to prove a claim for the amount of royalty which had accrued up to the time of the bankruptcy at the minimum rate, irrespective of the number of articles actually sold. In re Dr.

Voorhees Awning Hood Co., (M. D. Pa. 1911) 187 Fed. 611.

But where the contracting parties cannot be placed in statu quo, one who has defaulted in the performance thereof cannot rescind the contract and recover against the other's estate in bankruptcy. In re Morgantown Tin Plate Co., (N. D. W. Va. 1911) 184 Fed. 109.

Performance rendered impossible. — In In re Swift, (1st Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 315, 50 C. C. A. 264, it was held that bankruptcy made it impossible to fulfil an agreement to deliver stock, for the reason that it took the stock from the bankrupt and vested it, with all his property, in his trustee.

Injured party may prove or not at his election. — In the case of a contract of sale to be consummated at a future date when the vendee files a petition in bankruptcy prior to that date, the vendor at his election may treat the contract as broken by anticipation and assert and prove his claim in bankruptcy for the damages for the breach, or may ignore the repudiation and wait for the date fixed for the consummation of the sale, tender the goods, and sue for the purchase price. In the latter case the claim is not discharged by a prior adjudication in bankruptcy. Phenix Nat. Bank v. Waterbury, (1908) 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140, 123 App. Div. 453, 108 N. Y. S. 391. See also In re Spittler, (D. C. Conn. 1907) 151 Fed. 942, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425.

Necessity of present claim for damages. But an adjudication of bankruptcy in an involuntary proceeding against a corporation is not of itself a repudiation by the bankrupt of an executory contract by which it agreed to take and pay for a certain quantity of a product to be grown and delivered by the seller in each of a number of future years; nor is it the equivalent of a permanent disenablement to perform the contract, so as to give the seller a present claim for damages for breach, which may be liquidated and proved as a debt of the estate, where the time for performance has not arrived and there has not in fact been any tender of performance on the one part nor refusal nor repudiation on the other. In re Imperial Brewing Co., (W. D. Mo. 1906) 143 Fed. 579, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 110; and see to the same effect Watson v. Merrill, (8th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 363, 69 C. C. A. 185.

Nor can damages be recovered by the seller for the buyer's alleged breach of an executory contract of sale, resulting solely from the buyer's involuntary bankruptcy. In re Inman, (N. D. Ga. 1910) 175 Fed. 312, 23 Am.

Claims for tort. — Causes of action arising ex delicto may be proved in bankruptcy proceedings in all instances where a contractual relationship existed between the parties, and the tort results from a breach of such contract; and, in like manner, a tortious cause of action is provable where the wrong is of such a nature as to permit the waiver thereof, and a recovery in an action sounding in assumpsit on an implied contract, and this rule permits proof of those claims where, on waiver of the tort involved, the law raises an implied contract upon which a recovery is based. Crawford v. Burke, (1904) 195 U. S. (16, 25 S. Ct. 9, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 147, 12 Am. Bankr. Form of action immaterial.— If a debt originates or is "founded upon an open account, or upon a contract express or implied," it is provable against the bankrupt's estate, though the creditor may elect to bring his action in trover as for a fraudulent conversion, instead of in assumpsit for a balance due upon an open account. Crawford v. Burke, (1904) 195 U. S. 176, 25 S. Ct. 9, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 147, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659, reversing (1903) 201 Ill. 581, 66 N. E. 833.

A claim based on a tort as known at common law is undoubtedly provable whenever it may be resolved into an implied contract. For example, it is a settled rule that where a tortfeasor by conversion of personal property has sold the property converted, and received cash therefor, the true owner may sue him for money had and received as on an implied contract. Clarke v. Rogers, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 518.

Bankruptcy courts allow proof of debts founded upon "a contract express or implied." a construction sufficiently broad to include a quasi contract arising upon a conversion where the tort has been waived. Reynolds v. New York Trust Co., (C. C. A.

1st Cir. 1911) 188 Fed. 611.

Right of independent action for tort immaterial. — A claim on a warranty, as such, is necessarily a claim arising out of a contract, and is provable in bankruptcy even if, in case of actual fraud, there might be an independent claim purely in tort. Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., (1909) 212 U. S. 445, 29 S. Ct. 332, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 591, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484. See also In re

A claim arising out of a conversion by stockbrokers of shares purchased and held by them on a customer's account, charging him with commission and interest, and crediting him with amounts received as margins, is provable under section 63a, as a debt "founded upon an open account, or upon a contract express or implied." Crawford v. Burke, (1904) 195 U. S. 176, 25 S. Ct. 9, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 147, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659.

(L. ed.) 147, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659.

Conversion by partnership.— The rule which permits the owner of property converted to waive the tort and recover the value of the property as on an implied contract is based on the ground that defendant's estate has been unjustly enriched by the conversion; and where it was by a partnership, and inured to the benefit of the firm estate, whatever implied contract arises is that of the firm, and not of an individual partner, and the owner of the property, after having proved his claim against the partnership estate as one of contract, is not entitled to prove it against the individual estate of a partner, which would have the effect of giving them an advantage over creditors having express contracts with the firm. Reynolds v. New York Trust Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1911) 188 Fed.

Claimant cannot split demand. — Where a creditor filed a claim with the trustee for goods sold and delivered under a contract, but not for the value of goods obtained by fraud, it was held that he thereby elected to affirm the contract, and that he could not subsequently split his demand so as, at the same time, to file a claim for a return of a part of the goods sold which remained in the bankrupt's possession at the time of the filing of his petition. In re Hildebrant, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 120 Fed. 992, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184. See also Silvey v. Tift, (1905) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9, 123 Ga. 804, 51 S. E. 748.

Mere torts not provable.—Where, however, a claim arising ex delicto does not involve a breach of contract, but is a mere tort which may be waived so as to recover on an assumpsit, it is not provable in bankruptcy proceedings. Contingent claims. - The claim urged under a contract, express or implied, must have resulted in a fixed liability at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy; a claim depending on a contingency is not provable. What constitutes claim for taxes — Question for federal courts. — Whether or not a particular claim is one for taxes within the contemplation of section 64a of the Bankruptcy Act, and, as such, entitled to priority of payment, is a question for the ultimate determination of the federal courts. New Jersey v. Anderson, (1906) 203 U. S. 483, 491, 27 S. Ct. 137, 140, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 284, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; In re Otto F. Lange Co., (N. D. Is. 1908) 159 Fed. 586, 20 Am.

If the legislature of a state gives the name tax" to an exaction which is not a tax, and if the courts of the state join in the misnomer, the bankruptcy courts are not required to disregard the substance of the thing, to the detriment of the other claimants. The state courts may authoritatively expound the substance, and the federal courts will adopt such exposition; but whether the substance constitutes a tax or not is independent of the name. And, moreover, the latter part of section 64a seems to direct the bankruptcy courts to determine independently of the "legality of any such tax." In re Cosmopolitan Power Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 858, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604. See also In re Ott, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 95 Fed. 274, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 637.

But the construction placed upon a state statute by the state courts is entitled to careful and weighty consideration. In re Ott, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 95 Fed. 274, 2 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 637.
The word "tax," as used in the Bankruptcy Act, is not used in any restricted or narrow sense, but is used broadly to include all obligations imposed by the state and general government under their respective taxing or police powers for governmental or public purposes. That a tax so imposed may not be a general property tax does not deprive it of the character of a tax. Many taxes are imposed under the name of license fees, franchise taxes, or taxes for special purposes under some other name, and are therefore special taxes; but they are nevertheless taxes imposed for a public purpose, no matter what the name under which they are levied or imposed, and are clearly within the meaning of the term "tax" as used in the Bankruptcy Act. In re Otto F. Lange Co., (N. D. Ia. 1908) 159 Fed. 586, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 478. Taxes are not debts. They are imposts levied for the support of the government, or for some special purpose authorized by it. The consent of the taxpayer is not necessary to their enforcement. They operate in invitum. Nor is their nature affected by the fact that in some states an action of debt may be instituted for their recovery. form of procedure cannot change their character. New Jersey v. Taxes become "legally due and owing" on the day they are assessed within the meaning of the statute. In re Flynn, (D. C. Mass. 1905) 134 Fed. 145, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720.

Taxes assessed on returns made prior to the adjudication are legally due and owing and entitled to the preference given by section 64a although not collectible until after the adjudication. New Jersey v. Anderson, (1906) 203 U. S. 483, 27 S. Ct. 137, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 284, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63.

Taxes entitled to priority. - Taxes legally due and owing by the bankrupt to the United States, or to any state, county, district, or municipality, are entitled to priority of payment under the express provisions of section 64a. New Jersey v. The significance of section 64a, as applied to a municipality, is that a claim for taxes is paramount to all other claims, because of the pecuniary needs and requirements of the municipality, and so as to relieve the general taxpayers from the payment of an unfair proportion of taxes. Some seemingly unjust features may be presented by the application of the stringent provisions relating to priorities, but as the law is plain and singularly free from ambiguity, it is obvious that Congress intended that the statute should be strictly construed and applied, unless the facts disclose unjust or prejudicial results. In re Brinker, (W. D. N. Y. 1904) 128 Fed. 634, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122.

Tax accruing during bankruptcy. — The Bankruptcy Act does not withdraw the estates of bankrupts from the reach of the taxing powers, and they are subject, in consequence, to the payment of taxes imposed while they are in the hands of the trustees, the same as if they were not. Even though accruing after bankruptcy, taxes must be regarded as within the meaning of the statute, and entitled to priority, the same as those which antedated it. In re Prince, (M. D. Pa. 1904) 131 Fed. 546, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675; In re Flynn, (D. C. Mass. 1905) 134 Fed. 145.

The statute does not make funds in the hands of trustees in bankruptcy exempt from taxation, and the courts will order the trustees to pay all taxes which might have been assessed and collected had not bankruptcy supervened, and to which similar property in the same locality is subject. In re Sims, D. Ga. 1902) 118 Fed. 356; Swarts v. Hammer, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 256, affirmed (1904) 194 U. S. 441, 24 S. Ct. 695, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 1060.

In In re Conhaim, (D. C. Wash. 1900) 100 Fed. 268, the court said: "The manifest intent of the law is that, while the estate is in the hands of the trustee, his custody shall not constitute a barrier to prevent the collection of taxes which would be collectible under the law if the property had remained in the possession and control of the bankrupt himself."

Necessity of property coming into trustee's possession. — A city's claim against a bankrupt for taxes assessed against him is entitled to priority of payment by the trustee, though the property on which the taxes were levied never came into the hands of the trustee. But in such case the city is not entitled to a lien on the bankrupt's assets for the payment of such taxes. Waco v. Bryan, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1904) 127 Fed. 79, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 481; Chattanooga v. Hill, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1905) 139 Fed. 600, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep.

195. And see the next following paragraph.

Tam on emempt property.—A claim for a tax upon the bankrupt's property, even though the whole or part of the tax is upon property that is exempt by the laws of the state in which the bankrupt resides, and although, as a consequence, the property does not come into the custody of a court of bankruptcy, may be paid out of the proceeds of other property in the hands of the trustee; and the state or city to which the taxes are due is not required to collect its claim from the exempt property. In re Baker, (E. D. Tex. 1899) 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526. And see And see to same effect In re Tilden, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 91 Fed. 500, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300; In re Prince, (M. D. Pa. 1904) 131 Fed. 546, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 680.

Accumulated taxes. - All taxes which were collectible from the bankrupt prior to his bankruptcy must be paid, and it is immaterial that, through the negligence of the officers charged with their collection, taxes have accumulated until the aggregate amount with interest will absorb all or a large part of the estate. In re Weissman, (D. C. Conn. 1910)

Assessments for local improvements. - A city is entitled to preference in the payment of assessments levied for local improvements, as "taxes" within the meaning of section 64c. In re Stalker, (W. D. N. Y. 1903) 123 Fed. 961, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 709.

The franchise tax or license fee imposed by a state upon corporations organized under its laws is a "tax" within the meaning of section 64a of the Bankruptcy Act. In re Hal-sey Electric Generator Co., (D. C. N. J. 1909) 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401. And see to the same effect New Jersey v. Anderson, (1906) 203 U. S. 483, 27 S. Ct. 137, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 284. 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64; In re Clark Coal, etc., Co., (W. D. Pa. 1909) 173 Fed. 658, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 843; In re Mutual Mercantile Agency, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

Water rents due to a municipality, which are levied on property annually as a tax and made a lien in like manner, are "taxes which a trustee in bankruptcy is required to pay when levied against property of the estate in his possession. In re Industrial Cold Storage, etc., Co., (E. D. Pa. 1908) 163 Fed. 390, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 904.

But the contractual obligation of the bankrupt to pay water rent, primarily due by another person, cannot be regarded as within the statute as entitled to priority of pay-ment. In re Broom, (W. D. N. Y. 1903) 123 Fed. 639, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427.

Personal tax. — A personal tax due and owing to a municipality is a "debt" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act. Matter of Flatau, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 21 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 352.

Partnership tax. — Under a state statute which provides that "any individual of a partnership is liable for the taxes due from the firm," it has been held that taxes levied against a firm become an individual debt of a partner, and, by virtue of section 64a, must be paid from his estate in bankruptcy as a preferred claim. In re Green, (N. D. Ia. 1902) 116 Fed. 118, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553.

Taw on oigarette dealers. — In In re Otto F. Lange Co., (N. D. Ia. 1908) 159 Fed. 586, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 478, it was held that a tax imposed on cigarette dealers was within the meaning of the statute, and entitled to priority of payment.

But a liquor license, although designated a tax, does not come within the provisions of section 64a, and is not entitled to the priority therein given to taxes. In re Ott, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 95 Fed. 274, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 637.

Interest on tax claims. — It has been held that interest due on tax claims is recoverable therewith. In re Kallak, (D. C. N. D. 1906)

 147 Fed. 276, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.
 But see In re Fisher, (D. C. N. J. 1906)
 148 Fed. 907, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404, wherein it was held that section 64a does not provide for the payment of interest on taxes.

A penalty for the nonpayment of taxes, recoverable under the state law in lieu of interest, is collectible as part of the tax. In re Scheidt, (S. D. Ohio 1908) 177 Fed. 599, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 778.

Taxes due under lease. — A claim for taxes assessed by a municipality against property of which a bankrupt was lessee, and which by his lease he contracted to pay, is not entitled to preference of payment as taxes legally owing by the bankrupt. In re Broom, (W. D. N. Y. 1903) 123 Fed. 639, 10 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 427.

Taw not due by bankrupt. - An account settled by state officers against a bankrupt corporation on account of taxes imposed on its bonds, and due by the bondholders, is not a tax due from the bankrupt entitled to priority of payment. In re Wyoming Valley Ice Co., (M. D. Pa. 1906) 145 Fed. 267, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

Taxes erroneously claimed. - The court of bankruptcy may disallow such part of a tax as may have been assessed on nontaxable or nonexisting property, even if regularly assessed and beyond dispute under the state law. In re Otto Freund Arnold Yeast Cq., (E. D. N. Y. 1910) 178 Fed. 305.

Bonus required for increase of stock. bonus exacted by a state from a corporation for the privilege of increasing its capital stock is not a tax entitled to priority, but is a debt based on a contractual relationship, provable and entitled to a pro rata distribution with general creditors. In re York Silk Mfg. Co., (M. D. Pa. 1911) 188 Fed. 735.

Obligation to collect taxes. — The statutory duty of a corporation, through its treasurer, to collect from the holders of its obligations a tax of four mills, by deducting it from the interest due them, is not a tax on the corporation, and an account settled therefor by the state officers is not entitled to a priority in the distribution under the bankrupt law. In re York Silk Mfg. Co., (M. D. Pa. 1911) 188 Fed. 735.

Penalties imposed on a corporation for failure to return an increase of capital stock, file reports, etc., are not taxes within the meaning of any law, and are not entitled to priority under the Bankruptcy Act, and cannot be allowed except for the amount of the pecuniary loss sustained by the act or transaction out of which the penalty arose. A penalty is a fine or punishment or forfeiture, and does not become an obligation until imposed by lawful authority, and the penalties so imposed on the corporation are different from penalties for nonpayment of taxes, the latter being exacted in lieu of interest, while those on the corporation are by way of punishment. In re York Silk Mfg. Co., (M. D. Pa. 1911) 188 Fed. 735.

Claim against tax collector. — An indebtedness of a bankrupt for taxes collected by him as county tax collector, and not accounted for, or which should have been collected, and for which he is liable under the law of the state, is not one for "taxes." In re Waller, (D. C. Md. 1905) 142 Fed. 883, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 753. See also Moore v. Green, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 480,

16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648.

Order of priority. — In In re Prince, (M. D. Pa. 1904) 131 Fed. 546, it was said that taxes, as a class, are at the head of everything, even above the expense of preserving the estate and the cost of administration. And see to the same effect Chattanooga v. Hill, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1905) 139 Fed. 600, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 195; In re Weiss, (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 159 Fed. 295, 20 Am. Bankr.

And in In re Brinker, (W. D. N. Y. 1904) 128 Fed. 639, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122, it was said that the significance of section 64a, as applied to a municipality, is that a claim for taxes is paramount to all other claims, because of the pecuniary needs and requirements of the municipality, and so as to relieve the general taxpayers from the payment of an unfair proportion of taxes.

But it has also been held that state taxes are not entitled to priority of payment over the actual and necessary cost of preserving the estate subsequent to the filing of the petition. New Jersey v. Lovell, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 321; In re Halsey Electric Generator Co., (D. C. N. J. 1909) 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401.

Payment of taxes from proceeds of sale. -Where real property belonging to a bankrupt's estate is sold by authority of the court, and produces a fund larger than the liens for municipal taxes on such property, these taxes must be paid before any dividends are allowed in favor of the general creditors. In re Harvey, (E. D. Pa. 1903) 122 Fed. 745, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567. See also In re Veitch, (D. C. Conn. 1900) 101 Fed. 251, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112; In re Prince, (M. D. Pa. 1904) 131 Fed. 546, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep.

In In re Keller, (N. D. Ia. 1901) 109 Fed. 131, it was held that the sale of a stock of goods in bankruptcy proceedings does not affect a statutory lien for state taxes previously assessed against the same, but the court suggests that it is the duty of the trustee, in order to protect the purchaser, to provide for the payment of such taxes out of the remainder of the estate.

Where, however, the property has been sold subject to taxes, the tax claims are not entitled to priority of payment from the bankrupt's estate. In re Stalker, (W. D. N. Y. 1903) 123 Fed. 961, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 709. See also In re Hollenfeltz, (N. D. Ia. 1899) 94 Fed. 629, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 499.

But the foreclosure of an equity of redemp tion in certain lands by a city, under its charter provisions, to recover unpaid city taxes, in which the land was struck off to the city for less than the amount due, does not deprive the city of its right to priority of payment of the balance due on such taxes from the owner's estate in bankruptcy. In re Stalker, (W. D. N. Y. 1903) 123 Fed. 961, 10

Am. Bankr. Rep. 709.
Subrogation as to tax claims. — Purchasers of lands on which taxes are due are not, on the payment of such taxes by them, entitled to be subrogated to the right of the municipality to priority of payment. In re Harvey, (E. D. Pa. 1903) 122 Fed. 745, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567; In re Broom, (W. D. N. Y. 1903) 123 Fed. 639, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427; Cooper Grocery Co. v. Bryan, (C. C. 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427.

Payment of taxes by remainderman. — It has been held that a remainderman, who was charged with and paid a tax due by the life tenant, has an equitable claim upon the funds in the trustee's hands according to the doctrine of subrogation. In re Force, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114.

Proof of tax claims. — Taxes due from a bankrupt do not constitute a claim against his estate to be proved like those of creditors; but it is the duty of the court to direct the payment of such taxes together with such penalties or interest as have accrued thereon under the laws of the state to the time of actual payment. In re Harvey, (E. D. Pa. 1903) 122 Fed. 745, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567; In re Prince, (M. D. Pa. 1904) 131 Fed. 546, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; In re Kallak, (D. C. N. D. 1906) 147 Fed. 276, 17 Am. Bankr. Duty of trustee to pay taxes. — It has been held that it is the duty of the trustee to pay, in advance of dividends, all taxes due and owing by the bankrupt, including taxes assessed upon mortgaged property which the trustee has relinquished to the mortgage creditors. Chattanooga v. Hill, (C. C. A.

6th Cir. 1905) 139 Fed. 600, 3 Ann. Cas. 237 (and see note at p. 238). See also Waco r. Bryan, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1904) 127 Fed. 79.

It has been held that where taxes on property sold by the trustee in bankruptcy are assessed against the purchaser, but are properly chargeable to the trustee, the court will not, on petition of the purchaser, order the trustee to pay them, but will direct the trustee to have the property assessed in his name, as trustee, and to pay the amount to the proper official. In re Conhaim, (D. C. Wash. 1900) 100 Fed. 268.

Property in hands of trustee.—It is the duty of the trustee to pay the taxes assessed or becoming due on the property of the bankrupt while in his hands for administration, and he is not relieved from such duty by the fact that the taxes were allowed to remain unpaid until the property was sold, by consent of the court of bankruptcy, under a decree of foreclosure in a state court. In refisher, (D. C. N. J. 1906) 148 Fed. 907, 17

Am. Bankr. Rep. 404.

Taw on exempt property.— The trustee must pay out of the estate in his hands taxes legally assessed and due on the homestead of the bankrupt, and constituting a lien thereon at the time of the adjudication, although such homestead has been set apart to the bankrupt as exempt under the Act. In re Tilden, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 91 Fed. 500, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300.

Cost of preserving estate. — The actual and necessary cost of preserving the estate subsequent to the filing of the petition is, under section 64b (1), entitled to priority of payment. What items shall be allowed as such cost is purely a question for the determination of the court in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion. In re Youdelman-Walsh Foundry Co., (E. D. N. To express it otherwise, a laborer who by order of the court is employed on property in the hands of the court, as to the existent values in hand, will be paid by the court for the value of his services rendered to that property to which the liens of the creditors attach, and for the benefit of which his services were rendered."

Claim of assignee for creditors for preserving estate.—An assignment for the benefit of creditors, fairly made and intended to facilitate the equal distribution of the insolvent's property among his creditors, without any attempt to defraud or embarrass persons to whom he was indebted, is not so contrary to the policy of the Bankruptcy Act as to preclude the assignee from recovering for disbursements and services made for the benefit and preservation of the estate prior to the filing of the bankrupt's petition. Recognition of creditor's right to recover property for estate. — Section 64b (2)' of the Bankruptcy Act, as amended, clearly recognizes the right of a creditor to institute proceedings to recover, for the benefit of the estate of the bankrupt, property transferred by him either before or after the filing of the petition, and the Act makes no distinction as to the character of the transfer, whether it be one involving actual fraud, an intent to hinder, delay, or defraud the creditors of the bankrupt, which the law declares to be null and void, or a constructive fraud, which the law declares to be fraudulent without inquiring into its motive. Order of priority. - Fees of attorneys for the petitioning creditors in a proceeding in involuntary bankruptcy are allowable and given priority as a part of the cost of administra-tion, and such claims rank next after the wages of laborers, taking precedence, subject to tax claims, of all liens on the funds in the hands of the court for distribution. The statute does not authorize the allowance of fees for all legal work the attorney may do for the bankrupt in the proceeding, but only for that which the referee or the court may consider was required by the provisions of the law and the necessities of the proceeding. In re Payne, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 151 Fed. 1018, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192.

The services for which the attorneys of the bankrupt may be paid out of the bankrupt's estate, as part of the costs of administration, are the preparation and filing of the petition and schedules and the attendance upon the first meeting of the creditors; and the question is, what would be a reasonable fee for their services. Matter of Meis, (W. D. Ky.

Commissions included .- The term "wages," as used in this section, has received a very liberal construction; and it has been held to include commissions or other methods of payment. In re Dexter, (1st Cir. 1907) 158 Fed. 788, 89 C. C. A. 285, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 47; In re Fink, (E. D. Pa. 1908) 163 Fed. 135, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 897; In re Roebuck Weather Strip, etc., Co., (S. D. But commissions earned by an "inci-dental" agent, on whom there was no obli-gation to serve, are not "wages" within the meaning of the bankruptcy law. In re Waxelbaum, (N. D. Ga. 1900) 101 Fed. 228, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 120; Matter of Smith, (D. C. R. I. 1903) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647.

Damages occasioned by a breach of contract of employment for a fixed period are not wages within the meaning of the statute. In re Sweetser, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 131, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650.

A judgment recovered for the wrongful discharge of a salesman is not entitled to priority as a claim for wages. Matter of Lewis, (D. C. R. I. 1904) 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 279. Money loaned to pay wages. - The priority accorded by the statute is for the benefit of the wage earner alone, and does not entitle a lender to priority for money advanced to the insolvent for the payment of the wages of his laborers. In re North Caroline Car Co., (E. D. N. C. 1903) 127 Fed. 178, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 488. See also In re St. Louis Ice Mfg., etc., Co., (E. D. Mo. 1906) 147 Fed. 752, 17 Am. Bankr. Clerks. — The claim of a clerk for his wages, earned within three months of the bankruptcy of his employer, is a priority fixed by the Bankruptcy Act. In re Flick, (S. D. Ohio 1900) 105 Fed. 503, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465; In re Henry C. King Co., (D. C. Mass. 1902) 113 Fed. 110, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 619; In re Erie Lumber Co., (S. D. Ga. 1906) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 699; Matter of Strickland, (S. D. Ga.) 20 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 923.

Bookkeepers. — The word "clerk," as it is used in section 64b (4), includes a person who regularly keeps a bankrupt's books. In re Baumblatt, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 153 Fed. 485, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500.

Musicians employed at regular wages to play in a theatre or other place are "servants," and entitled to priority of payment from the estate of the employer in bank-ruptcy, for their wages earned within three months. In re Caldwell, (E. D. Ark. 1908) 164 Fed. 515, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 236.

A teamster, while not entitled to priority for charges for the use of his wagon and team, has a prior right of payment with respect to the services which he personally rendered. Matter of Winton Lumber, etc., Co., (E. D. Ky. 1906) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117.

The manager of a store has been held to be entitled to priority for sums due to him as wages. In re Andrews, (W. D. N. C. 1907)

19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441.

But the manager of a branch office of a broker in another city is not a "workman, clerk, or servant," and his claim for services is not entitled to priority on the bankruptcy of his employer. In re Brown, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 281, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496.

The president of a commercial corporation is not such a workman as will be entitled to priority under the statute. In re Grubbs-Wiley Grocery Co., (W. D. Mo. 1899) 96 Fed.

183; In re Carolina Cooperage Co., (E. D. N. C. 1899) 96 Fed. 950, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154.

The proprietor of a blacksmith shop is not entitled to priority of a workman, with respect to a claim due to him for services rendered to the bankrupt. Weaver v. Hugill Stone, etc., Co., (N. D. Ohio 1906) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 516.

An independent contractor is not a workman, nor is his compensation wages, within the meaning of the statute. In re Deutschle, (M. D. Pa. 1910) 182 Fed. 430.

A buyer, commissioned to buy goods for the bankrupt, as well as for other persons, is not entitled to priority. Matter of Smith, (D. C. R. I. 1903) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647.

Assignee of wage claim. — It has been quite generally held that an assignee of a wage claim is entitled to the priority given to such claim by the bankruptcy law; the priority being attached to the claim and not to the person. Shropshire v. Bush, (1907) 204 U. S. 186, 27 S. Ct. 178, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 436, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 77; In re Campbell, (E. D. Wis. 1900) 102 Fed. 686, 4 Am. Bankr. It was, however, formerly held in some cases that the assignee of a wage claim was not entitled to priority. In re Westlund, (D. C. Minn. 1900) 99 Fed. 399, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; In re St. Louis Ice Mfg., etc., Co., (E. D. Mo. 1906) 147 Fed. 752, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194.

The priority to which an assignee of a wage claim is entitled may be lost by novation. In re Fuller, (S. D. W. Va. 1907) 152 Fed. 538, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 443.

Subrogation is not a matter of strict right but purely equitable in its nature, dependent upon the facts and circumstances of each particular case. United Surety Co. v. Iowa Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed.

Order of priority. — Section 64b (4), giving priority to wages due to workmen, is not intended to give such priority over debts secured by valid liens. In re Proudfoot, (N. D. W. Va. 1909) 173 Fed. 733, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 106. See also In re Muhlhauser, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1903) 121 Fed. 629, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 231; In re Cramond, (N. D. N. Y. 1906) 145 Fed. 966, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; Matter of Meis, (W. D. Ky. 1907) 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 104.

But a priority of wage claims over liens, which is recognized by the law of the state, will also be recognized in bankruptcy proceedings. In re Byrne, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 97 Fed. 762, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268; In re Mat-thews, (W. D. Ark. 1901) 109 Fed. 603, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96. See also In re Erie Lumber Co., (S. D. Ga. 1906) 150 Fed. 817, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689, wherein it appears that priority was accorded a wage claim as one for the preservation of the estate. And see the annotation under section 64b (5), infra, p. 777.

Wage claims are entitled to priority over those claims falling within the subsequent classification in section 64b. In re Yoke Vitrifled Brick Co., (D. C. Kan. 1910) 180 Fed. 235; In re Pittsburg Industrial Iron Works, (W. D. Pa. 1909) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 851.

Application of payments. - A wage claimant, to whom wages were owing on a running account, is not required to credit payments made to him within the last three months to reduce wages earned within that period, but is entitled to credit all the payments to the earlier items of the account. In re Van Wert Mach. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1910) 186 Fed. 607. See also In re Flick, (S. D. Ohio 1900) 105 Fed. 503, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465; In re Andrews, (W. D. N. C. 1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441; Matter of McIntyre, (S. D. Miss. 1908) 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588.

Time of earning wages - Before filing petition. - A claim for wages, in order to be entitled to the priority accorded by the statute, must have been earned within the three months preceding the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy. In re Rouse, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1899) 91 Fed. 96, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 234, reversing (N. D. Ill. 1899) 91 Fed. 514, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 231; In re Flick, (S. D. Ohio 1900) 105 Fed. 503, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465; In re B. H. Gladding Co., (D. C. R. I. 1903) 120 Fed. 709, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700; In re Slomka, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 630, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635; In re Burton Bros. Mfg. Co., (N. But it has been held that the three months is to be computed from the time the bankrupt suspended business, and not from the time the petition was filed. In re Rouse, (N. D. Ill. 1899) 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 231.

Where only a part of a claim against a bankrupt for labor was for services performed within three months prior to the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, it was held that the claimant was entitled to priority only for such part as was earned within the three months period. In re Burton Bros. Mfg. Co., (N. D. Ia. 1905) 134 Fed. 157, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218.

Wages earned after filing petition. — In In re Gerson, (E. D. Pa. 1899) 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251, it was said: "While it is probable that all of these sums were not earned before the commencement of proceedings, and may not therefore be within the letter of the clause (4) of section 64, it would be a great hardship to exclude such claimants, who were without notice of the filing of the petition. from this right of priority, and such literal interpretation would not be within the spirit of the usual legislation on the subject, in which the purpose to fully protect such creditors is always apparent."

The amount of a wage claim allowable in bankruptcy is governed by clause (4), and not by clause (5), of section 64b. In re Shaw, (E. D. Pa. 1901) 109 Fed. 782, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501; In re Slomka, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 630, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

(5) [Debts owing to person entitled to priority.] debts owing to any person who by the laws of the States or the United States is entitled to priority. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 563.]

The amendment of 1910 does not attempt to repeal nor alter section 64 of the Bankruptcy Act, which regulates the order of distribution of assets, nor does it change clause 5 of that section, which provides that "debts owing to any person who by the laws of the states or the United States is entitled to priority" shall be given priority in the dis-tribution of the bankrupt's estate next after those claims which are given priority by previous clauses of the section. Rep. 1.
The controlling principle of construction applicable to section 64b (5) is that the creditor shall be allowed the same priority under the Bankruptcy Act which he would have had if such Act had not superseded the state laws governing the distribution of the estates of insolvent debtors. Priorities accorded by state or federal laws. Section 64b (5), in providing for the payment of debts in accordance with the priorities recognized by the laws of the state or the United States, is clearly an adoption of those laws, at least in so far as they do not conflict with the bankruptcy law. Therefore, whatever claims are entitled to priority of payment under the state or federal stat-utes and decisions will also be entitled to such priority of payment in bankruptcy proceedings. Rep. 345.
Priority dependent on state law. — Any priority of payment allowed under section 64b (5), so far as it is therein made to depend upon the "law of the state," must be evidenced by some statutory provision or by a judicial rule so certainly established as to put it upon the level of a statutory enactment; and it is clearly incumbent upon the person who claims priority to show the existence of such law. In re Potter, (W. D. Ky. 1906) 143 Fed. 407, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226.

Assignee entitled to priority. - A claim which is given priority because of a state statute by which the right of priority is given to the debt, and not to the creditor, may be assigned before bankruptcy, and the right of priority will pass to the assignee.

Am. Bankr. Rep. 704.

Priority of judgment lien. - Where a creditor of a bankrupt claims priority of payment out of his estate by virtue of an alleged judgment lien on the property of the estate, the burden is on such claimant to show that he has done everything required by statute to make his judgment attach as a lien. In re Wood, (E. D. N. C. 1899) 95 Fed. 946, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695. But see the following paragraph.

Claimant not bound to follow procedure prescribed by state statute. - An adjudication of bankruptcy brings the bankrupt's assets into the custody of the court of bankruptcy for administration; and a creditor of the bankrupt, having a lien on such property at that time, is not bound to follow the course of procedure prescribed by the state statute under which the lien arises, requiring certain action to be taken within a limited time for its preservation, but only to prove his claim as the Bankruptcy Law directs. In re Falls City Shirt Mfg. Co., (D. C. Ky. 1899) 98 Fed. 592, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437. But see the preceding paragraph.

The right to priority may be lost. where an infant obtained a bill of sale from a bankrupt to secure advances, and after his claim of preference by virtue of such bill of sale had been disallowed he elected to disaffirm the same because of his infancy, it was held that he was then only entitled to prove his claim for advances as a general creditor. In re Huntenberg, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) . 153

Fed. 768, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697.

So, also, it has been held that where payment of an alleged specific lien was made by a bankrupt's trustee, after notice to all creditors and without objection, a general judgment creditor claiming a prior lien cannot thereafter object, under the rule that lien creditors who are not prompt and persistent in asserting rights may lose them. In re Torchia, (W. D. Pa. 1911) 185 Fed. 576. And see to the same effect Keyser v. Wessel, (3d Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 281, 62 C. C. A. 650, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126. Pleading. — On an issue in bankruptcy as to the priority of a mortgage lien, the bill should allege the names of all the creditors of the bankrupt other than the mortgagee, the amounts of their debts, the character of the same, and when created. Teague v. Anderson Hardware Co., (N. D. Ga. 1908) 161

Proof. — While a verified petition for the allowance of a claim in bankruptcy is prima facie evidence of the claim itself, on which it may be allowed as a general claim, allegations therein of facts to establish the right of such claim to priority are not to be taken as prima facie true, but must be proved by evidence. In re Jones, (W. D. Mich. 1907) 151 Fed. 108, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206. See also In re Wood, (E. D. N. C. 1899) 95 Fed. 946, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695; In re Potter, (W.D. Ky. 1906) 143 Fed. 407, 16 Am. Order of priority. — Debts which come within section 64b (5), as entitled to priority under the laws of the state or the United States, are subordinate, in the order of priority, to the debts enumerated in the preceding clauses of section 64b; that is, they follow (1) the cost of preserving the estate, (2) the filing fees, (3) the cost of administration, and (4) claims due for wages. Priority as fixed by state statutes. — Section 64b (5) does not operate to place all preferred debts of the class therein provided for upon a plane of equality; but liens created by the laws of the state will attach to the property of a bankrupt in the hands of his trustee in the same relative rank and order in which they are fixed by the state statutes. not a landlord is entitled to priority for rent, as against his tenant's estate in bankruptcy, depends solely on the law of the state; the bankruptcy law does not expressly provide for such preference. But under section 64b (5), if the state law allows the landlord a priority over the creditors, such priority will be recognized and enforced in the bank-ruptcy court. In re Byrne, (S. D. Rep. 289.

Distress unnecessary. — Where a lease to a bankrupt contained a waiver of exemptions, and the landlord proved his claim for rent before the referee, it was held that he was entitled to receive such rent as a prior claim out of the proceeds of property from which the bankrupt claimed his exemption, and which was subject to distress for rent, though the landlord made no levy either before or after the filing of the bankruptcy petition. In re Sloan, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 873, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

Rent to become due. — Where the landlord of a bankrupt has a lien on the property on the leased premises for "rent due and to become due" by the express terms of the lease, which is entitled to priority under the law of the state, such lien is enforceable against the trustee in bankruptcy. Martin v. Orgain, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 772, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454.

Thus it has been held that where the lease expresses an intention to reserve the taxes assessed on the property as part of the rent, the landlord is entitled to the allowance of a claim for the whole amount of the rent due, including taxes as a secured claim. McCann c. Evans, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed.

Property not subject to landlord's claim. — A landlord is not entitled to priority of payment of rent due from a bankrupt out of the proceeds of a license to the bankrupt to sell liquors upon the demised premises, such license not being property subject to execution or to distress under the laws of the state. In re Myers, (E. D. Pa. 1900) 102 Fed. 869, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536; In re McFadgen, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 156 Fed. 715, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 481, affirmed (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 914, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540.

Commingled property. — Where property of a bankrupt, a part of which was subject to a landlord's lien and a part not, was sold to gether in gross without objection, the proceeds cannot be apportioned, so as to entitle the landlord to priority of payment from any part thereof. Vollmer v. McFadgen, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 914, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540, affirming (E. D. Pa. 1907) 156 Fed. 715.

A lessee who assigns his interest in his term has no right of distress unless such right is reserved in the assignment, and therefore is not entitled to priority in bankruptcy proceedings. In re Bayley, (W. D. Pa. 1908) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249.

Priorities provided for in state insolvency laws. — The rule that the enactment of the federal Bankruptcy Act supersedes all state insolvency or bankruptcy laws relating to persons or acts declared to be subjects of bankruptcy applies merely to the administration of the state laws in proceedings in the state courts; and it does not prevent the enforcement, in federal bankruptcy proceedings, of general priorities recognized by such state laws as substantive rights, and which do not depend on the particular remedies accessible only in the state courts, and are not in conflict with the express priorities declared by the Bankruptcy Act. In re Standard Oak Veneer Co., (E. D. Tenn. 1909) 173 Fed. 103, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 883. See also In re Western Implement Co., (D. C. Minn. 1909) 166 Fed. 576, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 167.

Thus it has been held that costs incurred in an action against a bankrupt, prior to the bankruptcy, which would constitute a preferred claim, under the insolvency laws of the state, are entitled to priority against the estate in bankruptcy. In re Daniels, (D. C. R. I. 1901) 110 Fed. 745, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 699.

Costs in attachment proceedings, if entitled to priority under the state law, will be so allowed in bankruptcy, notwithstanding the annulment of the lien. In re Lewis, (D. C. Mass. 1900) 99 Fed. 935, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51; In re Goldberg, (D. C. Me. 1906) 144 Fed. 566, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 521; In re Iroquois Mach. Co., (D. C. R. I. 1909) 166 Fed. 629, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183.

But in In re The Copper King, (N. D. Cal. 1906) 143 Fed. 649, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148, it was held that attachment costs were not entitled to priority.

Priority under deed of assignment.—A general deed of assignment is so far avoided by an adjudication in bankruptcy as to defeat the right of any claim against the bankrupt's estate to the preferences given by such deed. But, so far as the assignee would be allowed for the payment of the preferences set out in the deed, such claims may be preferred in the right of the assignee. Randolph v. Scruggs, (1903) 190 U. S. 533, 23 S. Ct. 710, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1165, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1. See also In re Mays, (S. D. W. Va. 1902) 114 Fed. 600, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 764.

1902) 114 Fed. 600, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 764.

Equitable rights.—The bankruptcy law recognizes the equitable rights existing between the parties prior to the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings. In re McGuire, (N. D. Ohio 1905) 137 Fed. 967, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; In re Chavez, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 73, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641; In re Tracy, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 185 Fed. 844; In re Ballantine, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 91.

Thus where creditors of a bankrupt fail to insist upon a lien to which they were entitled, because they collected their claims by what they mistakenly supposed were valid attachments of the bankrupt's property, they will be entitled to have such lien allowed in the bankruptey court, where no one has changed his position on the faith of their waiver. Hutchinson v. Otis, (1903) 190 U. S. 552, 23 S. Ct. 778, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135, affirming (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 937, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382.

And in McKay v. Hamill, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 11, it appears that the bankrupt (a corporation) organized the "S" corporation, in another state, to which it transferred all of its personal property in that state, taking all of the stock of the company at a nominal price. Thereafter the "S" company, to secure a debt due claimant, executed a deed of trust on such personal property, and, on the organizing corporation's becoming bankrupt, all of such property was treated as its own and sold as a part of its assets; and it was held that it was no objection to claimant's right to have its lien paid out of the proceeds of such property that he was not a creditor of the bankrupt but of the "S" company, the equity powers of the court being sufficient to authorize it to regard the lien as an incumbrance following the property.

Misappropriation by bankrupt.— Where a bankrupt improperly mingled funds belonging to its principal with its own funds, and it was not shown that the trust funds, either in their original or a substituted form, came into the hands of the bankrupt's trustee, it was held that the principal was not entitled to a prior right of payment therefor. John Deere Plow Co. v. McDavid, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 802, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep.

The federal decisions control in the determination of equitable rights. John Deare Plow Co. v. McDavid, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 802, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653.

State may claim priority.— A state is a person, and, under section 64b (5), is entitled to priority for a debt due it from the estate of a bankrupt which is given priority by its own laws. In re Western Implement Co., (D. C. Minn. 1909) 166 Fed. 576, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 167. But see the following paragraph.

Priority provided for decedent's estates.—Where, pending bankruptcy proceedings, the bankrupt dies, his estate is distributable according to the bankruptcy law, and not according to the state statutes of distribution; so that the state is not entitled to a preference in the payment of its claims by virtue of a statute providing therefor in such cases. In re Devlin, (D. C. Kan. 1910) 180 Fed. 170

c [After composition set aside or discharge revoked.] In the event of the confirmation of a composition being set aside, or a discharge revoked, the property acquired by the bankrupt in addition to his estate at the time the composition was confirmed or the adjudication was made shall be applied to the payment in full of the claims of creditors for property sold to him on credit, in good faith, while such composition or discharge was in force, and the residue, if any, shall be applied to the payment of the debts which were owing at the time of the adjudication. "Dividend" defined. - A dividend in bankruptcy is a parcel of the fund arising from the assets of the estate, rightfully allotted to a creditor entitled to share in the fund, whether in the same proportion with other creditors or in a different proportion. In re Barber, (D. C. Minn. 1899) 97 Fed. 547,

Am. Bankr. Rep. 306.

While it is true that the word "dividend," as commonly used, seems to be so almost in-separably associated with the idea of a percentage of the claim itself, that the proper significance of the term is readily lost sight of, it must be remembered that a dividend is not an aliquot portion of the claim, but an aliquot portion of the estate against which the claim is made. In re Gerson, (E. D. Pa. 1899) 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355.

The term "dividends" can have no appli-cation to priority claims, for the reason that the statute directs them to be paid out of the estate in full, seriatim, before the matter of declaring and paying dividends arises. In re Fielding, (W. D. Mo. 1899) 96 Fed. 800, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135.

While a secured creditor may ordinarily collect his debt by foreclosure or sale, as if no bankruptcy were pending, yet if, without his request, and solely to realize a surplus for other creditors, the court directs the sale of the property discharged from the incumbrance, his rights must be conserved; and the satisfaction of his secured debt from the proceeds of such sale may not be regarded as a dividend, nor charged with commission.

Dividends not subject to attachment. The law is well settled that the dividends in the hands of a trustee in bankruptcy are not subject to attachment. In re Hollander, (D. C. Md. 1910) 181 Fed. 1019.

And see In re Kranich, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 182 Fed. 849, wherein it appears that funds in the hands of the trustee were attached, and that an objection was interposed by creditor, but the trustee did not object, and McPherson, J., said: "The garnishee is an officer of this court, and has more than enough money in his hands to satisfy the judgment; and, while the state tribunal could not compel him to pay over the money, he himself has made no objection either to the judgment or to the order that is now asked for by the creditor. Under such circumstances I see no reason why this court should not pay due respect to a tribunal of the state, and recognize a claim that has thus been conclusively proved — although I re-peat that the allowance must be accepted as purely ex gratia.

A ruling of the state court permitting the garnishment of dividends, after they have been declared, by an officer of the state court as a receiver, administrator, or trustee, cannot affect the administration by a federal court of an estate in bankruptcy. Argonaut Shoe Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911)

Effect of failure to prove claims. - In the ordinary case of distribution by a trustee, the debtor's whole property, save that which is exempt, is applicable to the payment of his debts, and belongs to his creditors, and not to him, until their claims have been satisfied. After adjudication there is no voluntary offer to pay by the bankrupt, and no bargained re-lease by the creditor. The creditor takes all his debtor's property, whether the debtor likes it or not, and the debtor is released whether the creditor likes it or not. The bankrupt's right of property arises only in the event of a payment of his creditors in full. If a creditor will not prove his claim the bankrupt does not take that creditor's share, but it goes to swell the dividends of creditors more diligent. In re Lane, (D. C. Mass. 1902) 125 Fed. 772, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 137.

b [First and subsequent dividends.] The first dividend shall be declared within thirty days after the adjudication, if the money of the estate in excess of the amount necessary to pay the debts which have priority and such claims as have not been, but probably will be, allowed equals five per centum or more of such allowed claims. Dividends subsequent to the first shall be declared upon like terms as the first and as often as the amount shall equal ten per centum or more and upon closing the estate. Dividends may be declared oftener and in smaller proportions if the judge shall so order: [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 563; (1903) 32 Stat. L. 800.]

Equality essential. - Bankruptcy proceedings are equitable in their nature, and should be as far as possible conducted on broad lines to accomplish the ultimate purpose of distributing the assets of a bankrupt pro rata among his creditors. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Hurley, (8th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 503, 508, 82 C. C. A. 453; In re Faulkner, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 900, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 542.

Claims enjoying the first dividend are not allowed to share in the second distribution until those that were credited with no part of the first dividend shall have been paid a sum equal in amount to that received by other creditors. In re Scott, (N. D. Tex. 1899) 96 Fed. 607, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324.

The referee should withhold from distribution, upon the declaration of dividends, sufficient funds to recover all the expenses of administration and priorities, and claims that will probably be allowed. This includes those claims concerning which he has information such as justifies him in the conclusion that they will be allowed when presented. With these exceptions he should devote the whole sum in the hands of the trustee to the dividend. In re Scott, (N. D. Tex. 1899) 96 Fed. 607, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324.

Partial dividends.—In re Stein, (D. C. Ind. 1899) 94 Fed. 124, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662, it was said: "Partial dividends are authorized and required within thirty days after the adjudication, if the money of the estate in excess of the amount of claims which estate in excess of the amount of claims which have priority, and such claims as have not been but probably will be allowed, equals five per centum of the claims that are entitled to dividends. The only way in which this can be determined by the referee is by an examination of the schedules of liabilities filed by the bankrupt. Other dividends are required to be declared upon like terms, and as often as the amount of assets equals ten per centum or more of those claims, and also upon the closing of the estate."

Exceptions to distribution. — Exceptions to a proposed distribution of a bankrupt estate must be filed before the final decree of confirmation is entered; and exceptions, and a petition for review based thereon, not filed until after such confirmation and after the final dividend has been distributed in accordance therewith, will not be considered. In re Heebner, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 132 Fed. 1003, 13

Am. Bankr. Rep. 256.

Dividend cannot be set aside. - A dividend in bankruptcy, once declared and paid, cannot be set aside, notwithstanding it was errone-ously made so large as not to leave sufficient money in the trustee's hands for an equal dividend to creditors afterwards perfecting their proofs, in addition to the costs of administration. In re Scott, (N. D. Tex. 1899) 96 Fed. 607, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324.

[Amount of first dividend.] Provided, That the first dividend shall not include more than fifty per centum of the money of the estate in excess of the amount necessary to pay the debts which have priority and such claims as probably will be allowed: [(Inserted 1903) 32 Stat. L. 800.]

[Declaration of final dividend.] And provided further, That the final dividend shall not be declared within three months after the first dividend shall be declared. [(Inserted 1903) 32 Stat. L. 800.]

Final dividends. - Where all the known assets of a bankrupt estate have been collected and reduced to money, a final dividend may be declared at any time after the expiration of three months from the declaration of the first dividend; and any creditor who has not then proved his claim is debarred from participating in the fund. In re Bell Piano Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 272, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183, following In re Stein, (D. C. Ind. 1899) 94 Fed. 124, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662.

It is the duty of the courts to close estates as soon as practicable. In re Stein, (D. C. Ind. 1899) 94 Fed. 124, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Where a bankrupt's estate is ready for final dividend, it may be closed at any time after four months from the adjudication, on notice to all persons scheduled or appearing in any way in the proceedings as creditors. In to Eldred, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 686, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52.

c [Claims subsequent to payment of dividends.] The rights of creditors who have received dividends, or in whose favor final dividends have been declared, shall not be affected by the proof and allowance of claims subsequent to the date of such payment or declarations of dividends; but the creditors proving and securing the allowance of such claims shall be paid dividends equal in amount to those already received by the other creditors if the estate equals so much before such other creditors are paid any further dividends. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 564.]

Effect of subsequent proof and allowance of claims.—It was evidently contemplated by Congress that claims might be proved after dividends had been declared and paid, and that creditors who had been negligent in proving their claims should thereupon take their chances of obtaining an equal distribution with those creditors who had been more diligent. In re Stein, (D. C. Ind. 1899) 94 Fed. 124, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662.

Effect of laches.—One claiming the right to participate in the distribution of the bankrupt's estate may be barred by laches; thus standing silently by while the trustee pays out all the funds in dividends will preclude a claimant even though, before that time, he could have shown an equitable right to the fund or some part thereof. Claffin Dry Goods Co. v. Eason, (E. D. Tex.) 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263.

- d [Where persons adjudged bankrupt without United States.] Whenever a person shall have been adjudged a bankrupt by a court without the United States and also by a court of bankruptcy, creditors residing within the United States shall first be paid a dividend equal to that received in the court without the United States by other creditors before creditors who have received a dividend in such courts shall be paid any amounts. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 564.]
- e [Limit to amount collectible by claimant.] A claimant shall not be entitled to collect from a bankrupt estate any greater amount than shall accrue pursuant to the provisions of this Act. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 564.]
- SEC. 66. UNCLAIMED DIVIDENDS. a [Payment into court.] Dividends which remain unclaimed for six months after the final dividend has been declared shall be paid by the trustee into court. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 564.]

Cross-reference: As to Dividends generally, see section 65, supra, p. 781.

b [Distribution after one year.] Dividends remaining unclaimed for one year shall, under the direction of the court, be distributed to the creditors whose claims have been allowed but not paid in full, and after such claims have been paid in full the balance shall be paid to the bankrupt: Provided, That in case unclaimed dividends belong to minors such minors may have one year after arriving at majority to claim such dividends. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 564.]

Purpose of section 66.—In re Fielding, (W. D. Mo. 1899) 96 Fed. 800, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135, it was said: "To those familiar with the incidents following the administration of the Bankrupt Act of 1867, the purpose of the provisions of said section 66 is quite obvious. It occurred under that Act elsewhere, no doubt, as in this district, that dividends declared in favor of general creditors of the bankrupt, which were covered into the court registry or depository, remained uncalled for by the distributees for a great number of years; and this fund in some of the depositories was quite large. As this fund had not for so long a period been called for by the designated distributees, the question arose as to whether or not the courts ought not to hold that this seemingly abandoned fund, in equity, should either be distributed pro rata among the creditors who had not been paid in full, or returned to the bankrupt. But the better opinion seemed to be that such a contingency was a casus omissus of the Bankrupt Act, which section 66 of the Act of 1898 sought to remedy. Its phraseology strengthens the argument that the term 'dividends' employed in this statute pertains solely to the fund to be distributed pro rata among the general creditors. The uncalledfor dividends are to 'be distributed to the creditors whose claims have been allowed, but not paid in full,' etc. As no dividends could arise until after the claims entitled to priority have been paid in full, 'the creditors whose claims have been allowed, but not paid in full,' are clearly the general creditors."

SEC. 67. LIENS. — a [Claims not valid liens.] Claims which for want of record or for other reasons would not have been valid liens as against the claims of the creditors of the bankrupt shall not be liens against his estate. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 564.]

Validity determined by state law. — The decisions all agree that the validity of an alleged lien, attacked as ineffective under section 67a, is to be determined in accordance with the law of the state, whether statutory or existing by force of well-settled principles. Therefore, if an alleged lien be invalid as to creditors under the law of the state, either for want of recording or for any other rea-son, it will also be invalid as against the trustee in bankruptcy; but if, on the other hand, the transaction is one recognized as valid as against creditors under the state statutes and decisions, its validity will be equally recognized and enforced in bankruptcy proceedings. It has been held that a chattel mortgage, unfiled for a term of five years, is void as against the creditors of a mortgagor whose claims accrued prior to such filing; and although such creditors cannot, under the general rule, attack it until after the recovery of a judgment and issue of an execution, this rule is simply one of procedure and does not affect the right; and, therefore, where the recovery of a judgment is impracticable it is not an indispensable requisite to enforcing the rights of the creditor; hence a trustee in bankruptcy may, for the benefit of creditors, attack such a mortgage, though if a creditor seeks that relief in his own name it would be necessary that his claim be first put in judgment. Skilton v. Codington, (1906) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 810, 185 N. Y. 80, 77 N. E. 790.

Notwithstanding the fact that an unffled chattel mortgage is valid as between the parties, and that a trustee in bankruptey succeeds only to the rights of his bankrupt he is not thereby precluded from attacking amortgage made by his bankrupt for default in filing. b [Trustee subrogated to rights of creditor.] Whenever a creditor is prevented from enforcing his rights as against a lien created, or attempted to be created, by his debtor, who afterwards becomes a bankrupt, the trustee of the estate of such bankrupt shall be subrogated to and may enforce such rights of such creditor for the benefit of the estate. The statute does not vest the trustee with any better right or title to the bankrupt's property than belongs to the bankrupt or to his creditors at the time when the trustee's title accrues. The present Act, like all preceding Bankrupt Acts, contemplates that a lien good at that time as against the debtor and as against all of his creditors shall remain undisturbed. If it is one which has been obtained in contravention of some provision of the Act, which is fraudulent as to creditors, or invalid as to creditors for want of record, it is invalid as to the trustee; and if it is one which was invalid as to some particular creditor, though valid as to other creditors, the trustee in certain cases is subrogated to the rights of that creditor. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 564.]

Section 67c refers to a lien obtained in a proceeding at law or in equity for the benefit, not of the bankrupt's creditors in general, but of one or more creditors less than all of them. The words "such lien," in the second sentence of 67c, refer to any "lien created by or obtained in or pursuant to any suit or proceeding at law or in equity," mentioned at the beginning of the section, and not merely to a lien described by the language of clause 1, clause 2, or clause 3. It is not the intent of the section to dissolve a lien where its retention will benefit the general body of the bankrupt's creditors. Pittsburgh First Nat. Bank v. Guarantee Title, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 187.

Lien permitted in fraud.—A lien obtained by a foreign creditor of a bankrupt within four months prior to the bankruptcy, and while the bankrupt was solvent, on property of the debtor in a foreign country through judicial proceedings in the nature of an attachment, which were not opposed, is one sought and permitted in fraud of the provisions of the Act within the meaning of section 67c (3); and where the creditor realizes therefrom payment of a portion of his debt he is not entitled to prove the remainder as a claim against the estate in bankruptcy in this country without surrendering the amount so received so as to place him on equitable equality with other creditors. In re Pollmann, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 156 Fed. 221, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474.

Preservation of lieus. — Lieus preserved under section 67 b, c, and f, are thereby rendered inoperative as a preference, but are retained in favor of the trustee that the lieus may be distributed among the whole body of creditors. Reardon v. Rock Island Plow Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 654, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; Pittsburgh First Nat. Bank v. Guarantee Title, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 187.

d [Liens given in good faith.] Liens given or accepted in good faith and not in contemplation of or in fraud upon this Act, and for a present consideration, which have been recorded according to law, if record thereof was necessary in order to impart notice, shall, to the extent of such present consideration only, not be affected by this Act. [(Amended 1910) 36 Stat. L. 842.]

Cross-reference: As to Priority of liens and other claims under state and federal laws, see section 64b (5), supra, p. 777.

The amendment of June 25, 1910, inserted the words "to the extent of such present consideration only." That is, the security that a creditor has obtained to the extent of the original consideration shall not be affected.

In re Foster, (D. C. Vt. 1910) 181 Fed. 703.

Valid liens remain undisturbed. — Section 67d, set out above, is clearly in line with the other provisions of the statute which regulates the vesting of title in the trustee. Thus under section 70s (see note, infra, p. 811) it has been held that the trustee in bankruptey takes no better title than the bankrupt had as to bona fide lienors; in other words, that the trustee stands in the shoes of the bankrupt in the absence of fraud. And under section 70e (see note, infra, p. 844) the trustee is vested with power to avoid any transfer, which includes liens fraudulent as to creditors; but in all instances bons fide transactions are protected. Therefore it has been held, under section 67d, and in accordance with the language thereof, that liens given and accepted in good faith, and not in contemplation of or in fraud of the provisions of the statute, and for a present consideration, and which are valid under the laws of the state, as to recording and otherwise, shall be deemed valid and enforceable in bankruptcy deemed valid and enforceable in bankruptcy proceedings. Statute protects vigilant oreditors. — It is self-evident that Congress intended by using the words "shall . . . not be affected by this Act" that a vigilant creditor should not be affected; that is, should not be injured by bankruptcy proceedings. In re Foster, (D. C. Vt. 1910) 181 Fed. 703.

The security given for a present loan is not avoided by the fact that it actually hinders or delays creditors by the withdrawal of the security from application to the payment of their claims, unless it was given with an actual intent to defraud such creditors and the recipient had actual or legal notice of that purpose. Actual fraud in which the recipient of the lien or security participates is indispensable to the avoidance of a transaction of this nature. Powell v. Gate City Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 609.

Lienor not party to bankruptcy proceedings.

— The taking possession of the property of a bankrupt by the bankruptcy court does not operate as a caveat or sequestration of property owned by the bankrupt subject to valid liens, so as to make the holder of the lien a party to the proceedings. In re Platteville Foundry, etc., Co., (W. D. Wis. 1906) 147 Fed. 828, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291.

Thus it has been held that lienholders, unless they surrender their securities and prove their claims, are strangers to the bankruptcy proceedings, and are entitled to have their property rights adjudicated by the courts of the state in which such property is situated. Hicks v. Knost, (1900) 178 U. S. 541, 20 S. Ct. 1006, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1183, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178 note; In re Gerdes, (S. D. Ohio 1900) 102 Fed. 318, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346.

Validity of lien determined in bankruptcy proceedings on property in possession of court.—But where property belonging to a bankrupt, subject to valid liens, has been taken possession of by the bankruptcy court, the lien creditor cannot interfere therewith or maintain replevin against the receiver or trustee; but the lienee may petition the bankruptcy court for payment of the amount of his debt, in which case the court will have jurisdiction to determine the validity of the lien. In re Platteville Foundry, etc., Co., (W. D. Wis. 1906) 147 Fed. 828, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291.

Proceedings to enforce valid liens. — Where a valid lien has been secured more than four months prior to bankruptcy, proceedings to enforce the same do not conflict with the bankruptcy law, and may be instituted and prosecuted to the end, if that is requisite. Valid lien not lost by taking preferential mortgage. — Where a township was entitled to a preferential lien on a bankrupt's stock, arising out of the bankrupt's misappropriation of township funds, which he had used to replenish the stock, it was held that the township's lien was not lost by the taking of a mortgage on the stock which was unenforceable as a preference. Smith v. Au Gres Tp., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 257, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745.

The state law governs as to the validity of liens asserted thereunder; providing, of course, that there has been no fraud or preferential transfer in contemplation of bankruptcy within the four months period. Before a creditor can claim a lien given by a state statute on property of a bankrupt, he must perfect the same as required by such statute. In re Franklin, (E. D. N. C. 1907) 151 Fed. 642, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218.

In In re Grissler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 754, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508, it was said that "it would be most unfortunate to have a conflict of decision between the state courts and the courts of bankruptcy in respect to the meaning and effect of a statute affecting the titles to real estate, and if this situation can be averted by following the decision of the highest court of the state which settles the previously doubtful question of statutory construction, this court ought not to refuse, even though that decision may seem to us to be illogical and inconsistent with the previous decisions of that court."

Chattel mortgages. — In absence of fraud (see sec. 67e, infra, p. 792) or preferential transfer (see sec. 60 a and b, supra, p. 729), the validity of a chattel mortgage is to be determined in accordance with the law of the state; and if under the state statutes and decisions a mortgage is good as against creditors, it will be considered effective as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor; on the other hand, if under the laws of the state such mortgage is invalid as to creditors, either because of failure to record the same or for any other reason, it may be attacked by the trustee in bankruptcy because of such in-Thompson v. Fairbanks, (1905) 196 U. S. 516, 25 S. Ct. 306, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 577, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; Humphrey v. Tatman, (1905) 198 U. S. 91, 25 S. Proceeds of mortgage used to pay debts.— The fact that a mortgagee to whom a bankrupt gave a mortgage for a present consideration within four months prior to his bankruptcy knew that the proceeds were to be used to pay debts, does not impeach his good faith, nor render the mortgage void, unless he also knew, or had reasonable cause to believe, that the borrower was insolvent. In re Kullberg, (D. C. Minn. 1909) 176 Fed. 585, 23

Am. Bankr. Rep. 758.

A chattel mortgage given by an insolvent firm, in good faith within four months prior to its bankruptey, is not void under the Bankruptey Act, where it was given for a present loan of money which was used in paying debts of the firm, and was duly recorded so as to become effective prior to the bankruptcy, but is expressly protected by section 67d. Davis v. Turner, (4th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 605, 56 C. C. A. 669, 9 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 704.

A chattel mortgagor's mere inability to pay debts does not invalidate a chattel mortgage given for a present valid consideration advanced by a mortgagee having no reason to know that a fraud will be thereby committed. In re Mahland, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 184 Fed. 743.

Mortgage valid as to creditors precludes trustee. — Where a chattel mortgage on a bankrupt's personalty was not fraudulent as to the bankrupt, and there were no creditors in a position to set the same aside, it was held that the bankrupt's trustee could not attack the right of the mortgagee in possession at the time of the adjudication on the ground that the mortgage was fraudulent. Mattley v. Wolfe, (D. C. Neb. 1909) 175 Fed. 619, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

Consideration going into estate. — A chattel mortgage given upon the payment of cash which goes into the hands of the bankrupt and is used for the purposes of his estate, and of which his creditors have the benefit, is a valid mortgage, even if made within four months prior to the filing of the petition, if no actual fraud be shown. In re Mahland.

(E. D. N. Y. 1911) 184 Fed. 743.

Renewal mortgage. - Where a valid mortage was given as security for a present loan, the fact that a new mortgage on the same property, given within four months prior to the mortgagor's bankruptcy, was made to secure a renewal of the loan, does not render such mortgage voidable. In re Noel, (D. C. Md. 1905) 137 Fed. 694, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Cutting, (W. D. N. Y. 1906) 145 Fed. 388, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751.

Validity confined to present consideration. -It has been held that a mortgage, given within four months of an adjudication in bankruptcy, to secure a pre-existing debt and a cash consideration, is void as a preference to the extent of the prior indebtedness, and valid only for the present cash consideration. In re Sanderlin, (E. D. N. C. 1901) 109 Fed.

857, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384.

Where a defectively executed mortgage, under the local law, amounts to no more than an agreement to give a lien, and the property covered thereby passes into the hands of a trustee in bankruptcy before any proceedings are taken to reform the instrument, the trustee takes it in the plight in which it then stood; and in such case the title remains in the bankrupt, but there is an outstanding equity in the mortgagee. Foerstner v. Citizens' Sav., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 1.

Effect of bankruptcy on enforcement of mortgage. — The provision of the Bankruptcy Act that a lien shall not be affected by the bankruptcy proceedings has reference only to the validity of the lienholder's contract. does not have reference to his remedy to enforce his right. The remedy may be altered without impairing the obligation of his contract, so long as an equally efficient and adequate remedy is substituted. Every one who takes a mortgage, or deed of trust intended as a mortgage, takes it subject to the contingency that proceedings in bankruptcy against his mortgagor may deprive him of the specific remedy which is provided for in his contract. In re Jersey Island Packing Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 625, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

Bona fides presents question of fact. — The knowledge of the mortgagee as to the fraudulent intent of the bankrupt, as derived from knowledge of his financial condition, is a question of fact. In re Mahland, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 184 Fed. 743.

Where a bankrupt's trustee claimed that a chattel mortgagee was not entitled to property of the bankrupt acquired subsequent to the execution of the mortgage, it was held that the burden was on the trustee to show what property, if any, of that seized and sold by the mortgagee was acquired after the execution of the mortgage. Mattley v. Wolfe, (D. C. Neb. 1909) 175 Fed. 619, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

In In re Soudan Mfg. Co., (7th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 804, 51 C. C. A. 476, it was held that under section 67d of the Bankruptcy Act the validity of a mortgage given to secure a present loan of money within four months prior to the borrower's bankruptcy does not depend upon his solvency at the time, or upon notice of his financial condition by the mortgagee, actual or constructive; but to invalidate such a mortgage it must be shown that the borrower was insolvent, that the purpose of the loan was to accomplish an unlawful preference or otherwise violate the Act, and that the lender knew or was chargeable with knowledge of both of such facts.

Mechanics' and kindred liens. — Under the statutes of practically every state it is provided that mechanics, contractors, sub-contractors, laborers, materialmen, and the like, shall be entitled to a preferential lien for labor or material supplied in and about the erection of buildings. or the conducting of mercantile pursuits; and such liens, where valid under the law of the state wherein they are claimed, will be considered of equal validity under the bankruptcy law; but if, under the law of the state, a lien of this character would be ineffective as to creditors, such ineffectiveness will continue in bankruptcy proceedings as against the trustee of the person against whom the lien is claimed. Mechanics' liens are not created or obtained through legal proceedings, either according to the strict definition or in the ordinary meaning of the term. The filing of notice of a mechanic's lien has no necessary relation to the initiation or the prosecution of a suit. The filing is essential in order to maintain the action to foreclose the lien, because otherwise the lien does not attach; but it is no more a preliminary step in the suit than is the protesting of a note in a suit against the indorser. It is a proceeding of the same kind as filing a chattel mortgage or recording a deed. In re Emslie, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 291, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126. See also In re Grissler, (C. C. An adjudication in bankruptcy does not terminate a lease or change the legal relation of landlord and tenant, unless the landlord re-enters, or the trustee assumes the lease. in which event the adjudication operates like any other assignment and all liability of the tenant ceases. Witthaus t. Zimmerman, (1904) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314, 91 App. Div. 202, 86 N. Y. S. 315. And see the annotation, infra, p. 833, under section 70a (5),

Property subject to lien cannot be removed. Where a bankrupt is indebted to his landlord for rent, neither the bankrupt nor his trustee may remove from the rented premises such fixtures, placed thereon by the bankrupt, as are annexed to the freehold, without paying the rent due. In re Potee Brick Co., (D. C. Md. 1910) 179 Fed. 525.

Unaccrued rent. - In some jurisdictions a landlord is given a lien for rent, whether accrued or not, on the tenant's goods carried on the premises. In re McIntire, (N. D. W. Va. 1906) 142 Fed. 593, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Landlord must proceed in bankruptcy court. On an adjudication of bankruptcy against a tenant the latter's property is in custodia legis; the landlord, being thereupon precluded from enforcing his rent claim by distress, is only entitled to proceed against the trustee in the bankruptcy court. In re Bishop, (D. C. S. C. 1907) 153 Fed. 304, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

Sale in bulk. - Where a bankrupt's property was sold in bulk without objection by his landlord, so that it was impossible to determine the proportional value of the property covered by the landlord's lien, it was held to be proper to refuse to pay the rent in full out of the proceeds of the sale. Keyser v. Wessel, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 281, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126.

Rents collected by a trustee from property of a bankrupt which is subject to valid liens belongs to the lienholders and not to the general estate. In re Torchia, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 188 Fed. 207.

Pledges. — The rights of a pledgee in respect to his lien are not affected by the adjudication of bankruptcy of the pledgor or the appointment of his trustee. In re Mayer, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 836, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 356; In re Peacock, (E. D. N. C. 1910) 178 Fed. 851; In re Tracy, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 185 Fed. 844; Christ v. Zehner, (1905) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 788, 212 Pa. St. 188, 61 Atl. 822.

It has been held that pledges to secure money loaned at the time are valid; that an exchange of a security validly held for a new security, the old one being released, is not a preference; that a fair exchange of values may be made at any time notwithstanding insolvency; that an insolvent is not bound to abandon all dealing with his property, provided he does not give preference to antecedent debts, and does not so deal with it as to evidence a purpose to defraud or delay his creditors, and that preferences can only arise in case of antecedent debts. In re Durham, (D. C. Md. 1902) 114 Fed. 750, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115.

In Gordon v. Ware Nat. Bank, (8th Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 444, 65 C. C. A. 580, 67 L. R. A. 550, it was held that the owner of a policy of life insurance may lawfully and in good faith assign the same to a creditor who has no insurable interest in the assignor to secure the payment of a debt, and that on default of payment the creditor may foreclose the pledge and sell the policy at judicial sale. And see to the same effect Wilder r. Watts, (D. C. S. C. 1905) 138 Fed. 426, 15 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 57.

Collateral security. — So, also, as with the other liens specified under the present subdivision of the statute, the giving of collateral security to secure the repayment of a bona fide indebtedness will be binding in bankruptcy upon the trustee of the pledgor. Property transferred by a borrower at the time of receiving a loan and for the purpose of making the lender safe is security; and the validity of such a transfer, if not accompanied by positive fraud, will be recognized and enforced in bankruptcy. McDonald v. Clearwater Shortline R. Co., (D. C. Idaho 1908) 164 Fed. 1007, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 182.

Assignment for creditors.—An assignee in a general deed of assignment, which has been avoided by an adjudication in bankruptcy against his assignor on a petition filed within four months after the making of the assignment, has a lien on the bankrupt's estate for the sum paid by him for such services rendered to him prior to such adjudication as were beneficial to the estate. Randolph v. Seruggs, (1903) 190 U. S. 533, 23 S. Ct. 710, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1165, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

Rep. 909.

Where a creditor claims priority of payment out of the estate of a bankrupt on the ground of his having a lien on property of the bankrupt, and is opposed by the trustee and by other creditors, the attorney for such claimant, who successfully prosecutes the claim in the court of bankruptcy, and secures its allowance, is entitled to a lien for his services on the fund thus secured for his client; and the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to determine the right to such lien, fix its amount, and enforce it in the distribution of the property. In re Rude, (D. C. Ky. 1900) 101 Fed. 805, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 319.

Where a trustee in bankruptcy has paid to a lien creditor of the bankrupt his distributive share of the estate, but without any warrant or order of the referee or the court so to do, and the court afterwards determines that such creditor's attorney is entitled to a lien on the fund for his services in securing its allowance, the money must be regarded as still in the hands of the trustee, and he will be required to satisfy the claim of the attorney. In re Rude, (D. C. Ky. 1900) 101 Fed. 805, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 319.

Lien of banks. — Under some state statutes the lien given to a banker is limited to property taken by a banker in the usual course of the banking business, such as banks are in the habit of dealing in, or in taking on deposit, or for collection, or otherwise, as notes, bonds, stocks, and other choses in action: and does not include stocks of merchandise, etc., which cannot conveniently pass into. the actual possession of the bank. In re Gesas, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 734, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872.

Depositor not entitled to lien. check drawn against a sufficient deposit and presented two days before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy by the drawer was not paid or accepted by the bank because of rumors that such proceedings were contem-plated, it was held that the payee of such check acquired no claim against the bank or upon the fund; nor did a statement by the bank that it would take advice and pay the check if it could, amount to an acceptance, where it subsequently refused to accept or pay it. Auctioneer's lien. — An auctioneer employed by a stable company to sell its property, who made an advance to the company, taking a receipt which authorized him to deduct the amount from the proceeds of the property when sold, does not thereby acquire a lien which entitles him to priority over other creditors, on the bankruptcy of the company before the time for sale arrived, the bankrupt having retained possession of the property. Intent to hinder, delay, or defraud, essential. — The general rule, under section 67e, is that transfers made, liens created, and securities given, for a present consideration, are valid unless (1) they actually hinder, delay, or defraud creditors; and (2) unless the grantee knew, or had reasonable notice when he took them, that they were intended to hinder, delay, or defraud the creditors of the grantor, or were made in contemplation of bankruptcy, or in fraud of the statute. It was not intended to authorize an action to set aside any and all conveyances executed by the bankrupt within four months of the filing of his petition in bankruptcy, but only such as were made within that time for the purpose of hindering, delaying, or defrauding creditors. The Act does not make conveyances executed within that period prima facie fraudulent, and the burden is upon the person bringing an action thereunder to show as an essential element of his cause of action that the transfer was made for the purpose of defrauding creditors. Halbert v. Pranke, (Minn. 1904) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 620.

It is every intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors unlawfully only, and not every intent to hinder or delay them, that avails to avoid a transfer made for a pre-existing debt under section 67e. Coder v. Arts, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 943, 18 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 513.

Statute does not affect jus disponendi. -An insolvent debtor until the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy still has the jus disponendi of his property. He has the right to secure and pay his debts with it, and he has the right to secure and pay one creditor in preference to others, provided always the security or the payment is not violative of any of the Acts of Congress or of any of the statutes of the state. A preference of one creditor over others by such a payment or by such security, which is free from actual and intended fraud, and from any purpose to affect other creditors injuriously, beyond the necessary effect of the security or the payment, is valid and lawful, and it cannot evidence such an intent to hinder, delay, and defraud as will make it void or voidable under section 67e. Coder v. Arts, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 943, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513.

Effect of transaction insufficient. — The necessary effect upon other creditors of a mortgage executed by an insolvent within four months of the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, to secure a pre-existing debt, does not dispense with the necessity of showing the actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, which is essential under section 67e, in order to avoid such mortgage, where the mortgagee was ignorant of the insolvency of the mortgagor, and had no reason to be-lieve that a preference was intended. Payment by bank. — Where a bank, in ignorance of the filing of a petition in bank-ruptcy, paid the bankrupt's checks drawn on his deposit on the day the petition was filed, it was held that such payment was not a transfer by the bank of the bankrupt's assets, nor an improper meddling with a res over which the court of bankruptcy had jurisdiction, which would permit recovery by the trustee in bankruptcy against the bank. Payment of wife's debt. - A payment made by a bankrupt, while insolvent, on his wife's separate debt, cannot be recovered by the bankrupt's trustee as fraudulent in the absence of evidence and a finding that the bankrupt was actuated by a fraudulent intent. In re Kayser, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 383, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174.

Consideration for deferred annuity, contract. — An insurance contract, entered into by the company with one who was then insolvent and was subsequently adjudged a bankrupt, by which the insurer obligated itself to pay the insured a certain sum yearly, commencing in the future and continuing during the life of the insured, is not void; and the sum paid for such insurance cannot be recovered by the trustee in bankruptcy of the insured, on the theory that such payment was a transfer in fraud of creditors, and that the insurance company, though acting bona fide, was not a purchaser for value, be-cause it had not paid the purchase money or secured it in such a manner that it could not be relieved against payment. In such case, however, a bill, asking that the company be compelled to pay the trustee the sum received from the bankrupt upon the surrender of the contract, will be dismissed without prejudice to any right the trustee may have to claim whatever beneficial interest the bankrupt has, or may thereafter have, under the contract. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Smith, (C. C. A. lst Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 1.

Evidence of fraudulent intent. - An intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors is to be proven from the facts surrounding the transaction, either from the appearance of the transfer attacked or from evidence aliunde. If from the latter, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff. In re Elletson Co., (N. D. W. Va. 1909) 174 Fed. 859, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Agreement to withhold transfer from record. — An agreement between the mortgagor and mortgagee to withhold a chattel mortgage from record is evidence of a fraudulent intent. In re Hickerson, (D. C. Idaho 1908) 162 Fed. 345, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682.

Suspicion, fear, and facts that arouse suspicion and fear in the mind of the creditor, but give no reasonable ground for him to believe that the debtor intends a preference by his payment or security, do not make such a transfer voidable. Powell v. Gate City Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 609; In re Howard, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 180 Fed. 399.

A sale of the bankrupt's stock and fixtures in bulk is not, in an action by the trustee, prima facie fraudulent in the sense that such sale alone establishes the bad faith of the purchaser; the sale being merely a circumstance reflecting on the bona fides of the transaction. Shelton v. Price, (N. D. Ala. 1909)

174 Fed. 891, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 431. Transfer of partnership property. — An application of partnership property, by consent of all the members of the firm, to the payment of an individual debt of a partner with-in four months of the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, and while the partners and the partnership are insolvent, does not evidence any intent to hinder, delay, or defraud the creditors of the partnership within the meaning of section 67e. Sargent v. Blake, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 160 Fed. 57, 20 Am. Bankr.

A general assignment for the benefit of creditors, made within four months from the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, is void as against a trustee in bankruptcy, in so far as it interferes with his administering the property assigned. Randolph r. Scruggs, (1903) 190 U. S. 533, 23 S. Ct. 710, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1165, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Gutwillig. (S. D. N. Y. 1898) 90 Fed. 475, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647, 47 App. Div. 554, 62 N. Y. S. 618; Cohen v. American Surety Co., (1908) 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 65, 192 N. Y. 227, 84 N. E. 947. And see annotation under section 3a (4), supra, p. 488, as to an assignment for the benefit of creditors as an act of bankruptey.

Voluntary general assignments for the benefit of creditors made in conformity with the laws of the state are voidable by the trustee of the debtor in bankruptcy if made within four months of the adjudication, (1) because they are incompatible with the purpose and policy of the bankruptcy law and the rights of creditors thereunder to the appointment of the trustee and the supervision of the assets in bankruptcy; (2) because in fraud of creditors within section 70 of the Act, as the assignment deprives creditors of the important advantages secured to them under the statute; and (3) because if not voidable the clause of section 3, making such an assignment ipso facto "an act of bank-ruptcy," would be practically nullified, and rendered of no use to creditors. In re Gutwillig, (S. D. N. Y. 1898) 90 Fed. 475, 1 Åm.

Bankr. Rep. 78.

Fraud unnecessary.—A voluntary assignment, though as a matter of fact untainted with any fraudulent purpose, is yet, when made within four months of the filing of a petition in bankruptey, as matter of law, a constructive fraud upon the Act, and voidable by trustee under section 67e. In re Gray, (1900) 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647, 47 App. Div. 554. 62 N. Y. S. 618.

Validity determined by federal courts.—
The question of the effect of the bankruptcy law upon the validity of a general assignment made after its passage, in accordance with the provisions of a state statute, is not one which is governed by any rule or decision in a state, but will be determined independently by the federal courts. In re Plotke, (7th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 964, 44 C. C. A.

Transfer of corporate property by corporation officers. — The directors of a corporation who have loaned it money on credit cannot, when they find danger of insolvency pending transfer its property to themselves as security for their claims. In re Salvator Brewing Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 183 Fed. 910. See also Nelson v. Svea Pub. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1910) 178 Fed. 136.

A conveyance by a wife to her husband, made on the eve of bankruptcy, leaving her nothing to pay creditors, is prima facie fraudulent. Fouche v. Shearer, (N. D. Ga. 1909) 172 Fed. 592, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 828. And see to the same effect Henkel v. Seider, (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 163 Fed. 553, 20 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 773.

Transfers void under state law. — Whether a conditional contract of sale, chattel mortgage, or pledge of personal property, and the like, are valid as against the general creditors of the vendor, mortgagor, or pledgor, or his trustee in bankruptcy, must be determined by the local laws of the state in which the transaction is had. Pittsburgh First Nat. Bank v. Guarantee Title, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 187. And see the annotation under subdivisions a and d of this section, supra, pp. 783, 786. Assignments as collateral security for a loan of unallowed claims against the United States on account of contracts for furnishing materials to the various departments of the government, being in direct opposition to R. S. sec. 3477, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 7, making absolutely null and void voluntary transfers of claims against the United States before their allowance, can confer no interest on the assignees, as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the assignors. Good faith cannot inhere in a transaction where the transferee knows or has reason to believe that his grantor is insolvent, and that the purpose of the transaction was to defeat the Bankruptcy Act. In re Pease, (E. D. Mich. 1902) 129 Fed. 446, 12 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 66.

In a fraudulent transaction, the grantee is presumed to be a party to the fraud, and does not occupy the position of an innocent holder for value. If, therefore, an instrument has been made by a bankrupt and recorded within the statutory period, it is a question of fact whether it was done with intent to defraud, hinder, or delay his creditors, or to give a preference to any one of them. In re Mc-Kane, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 674, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 103.

Thus where the agent of an insolvent cor-poration sold its remaining assets without authority, and without the consent of all of the creditors, not in the ordinary course of its regular business, it was held that the purchasers were not purchasers in good faith in a legal sense, and that the sale was subject to vacation by the corporation's trustee in bankruptcy. Nelson v. Svea Pub. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1910) 178 Fed. 136. See also In re Salvator Brewing Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 183 Fed. 910.

Trustee vested with rights of creditor. -Since the enactment of the amendment of 1910, trustees as to all property in the custody or coming into the custody of the bankruptcy court are vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a creditor holding a lien by legal or equitable proceedings thereon; and also, as to all property not in the custody of the bankruptcy court, are vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a judgment creditor holding an execution duly returned unsatisfied. See section 47a (2),

Recovery by trustee. - The title to propcrty transferred, assigned, or encumbered, in violation of section 67e, is vested in the trustee upon the adjudication of the debtor as a bankrupt, and, where such course is necessary, the property may be recovered by the trustee in an appropriate legal proceeding brought for that purpose. The right of the trustee to have transfers annulled under section 67e is conferred upon him by the due operation of the Bankruptcy Law, and is irrespective of whether any other person might, or might not, have had that right in the absence of that law. Action for recovery — Plenary action. — Where the property claimed by the trustee is in the bona fide possession of a third person, a plenary action must be brought. See section 23b and annotation thereof, supra, p. 595.

Thus where a sheriff took possession of certain personal property under a replevin writ, in an action pending in a state court prior to the filing of a bankruptcy petition against the defendant, the plaintiff in such replevin suit claiming title on the ground that the property was purchased by means of the bankrupt's fraudulent representations, it was held that the bankruptcy court had no jurisdiction by a summary order to compel the sheriff to deliver the property to a receiver in bankruptcy, under section 67e, as such section only applies to property of the bankrupt. In re Rudnick, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 160 Fed. 903, reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 158 Fed. 223, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 750.

The trustee may maintain a suit in equity for an accounting in the United States District Court against fraudulent transferees of the bankrupt, where the transfer consists of a large number of items, the actual value of which can only be ascertained by an accounting, though the complainants knew the face value of such items. Property in possession of court. — A court

Property in possession of court.—A court of bankruptcy which, by its trustee, has possession of the property of a bankrupt, has jurisdiction to determine all questions in respect to title or to liens thereon, and may entertain and determine a suit or petition by the trustee against a mortgagee of the property to set aside the mortgage as one given within four months prior to the bankruptcy and void under section 67e. In re McMahon, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 684, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 530.

Where a trustee proceeds in the state courts to recover property of the bankrupt fraudulently conveyed, he is entitled to all remedies and all relief that would be afforded any other party litigant under the same facts. Sheldon v. Parker, (1902) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 152, 66 Neb. 610, 92 N. W. 923.

Ancillary jurisdiction also has been provided for by the amendment of 1910. See section 2 (20) and the annotation thereunder, supra, p. 480.

f [Liens, etc., created through legal proceedings.] That all levies, judgments, attachments, or other liens, obtained through legal proceedings against a person who is insolvent, at any time within four months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against him, shall be deemed null and void in case he is adjudged a bankrupt, and the property affected by the levy, judgment, attachment, or other lien shall be deemed wholly discharged and released from the same, and shall pass to the trustee as a part of the estate of the bankrupt, unless the court shall, on due notice, order that the right under such levy, judgment, attachment, or other lien shall be preserved for the benefit of the estate; and thereupon the same may pass to and shall be preserved by the trustee for the benefit of the estate as aforesaid. Legal proceeding defined. - A legal proceeding is any proceeding in a court of justice by which a party pursues a remedy which the law affords him. The term embraces any of the formal steps or measures employed in the prosecution or defense of a suit. In section 67f it obviously refers to the use of judicial process, the phraseology being "levies, judgments, attachments, or other liens obtained through legal proceedings." In re Emslie, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 291, 4 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 126.

The term "all levies" has been used in its most comprehensive sense, and it covers any and all seizures of the property of the bankrupt within the four months period, under legal process, looking to the enforcement of claims against the bankrupt which would be released by his final discharge. In re Hymes Buggy, etc., Co., (W. D. Mo. 1904) 130 Fed. 977, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477.

A proceeding, under a state law, whereby a trust fund is subjected to the payment of the claims of creditors, is a lien obtained through legal proceedings, which if acquired within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy would have been rendered void by section 67f. In re Tiffany, (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 133 Fed. 799, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310. See also In re Porterfield, (N. D. W. Va. 1905) 138 Fed. 192, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11.

Replevin. — It has been held that the goods of a bankrupt taken on a replevin suit, brought by a creditor within four months of the bankruptcy proceedings, must be returned to the trustee; such proceeding being within the meaning of section 67f. A mechanic's lien is not one "obtained through legal proceedings," within the meaning of section 67f. In re Emslie, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 291, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126. And see cases cited to this effect under section 67d, supra, p. 786.

A livery stable keeper's lien, given by statute, is not a lien "obtained through legal proceedings," and is not dissolved by an adjudication in bankruptcy. In re Mero, (D. C. Conn. 1904) 128 Fed. 630, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171. See also cases cited to this effect Annulment of liens obtained through legal proceedings. — Under the express terms of section 67f all liens obtained through legal proceedings, within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, against a person who is insolvent, shall be deemed null and void in the event of such insolvent being adjudged a bankrupt, unless such lien has been preserved by the court for the benefit of the estate. The statute makes no exceptions in favor of any lien creditor whose lien has been ob-tained through legal proceedings against the bankrupt within four months prior to the filing of the petition, other than such person who may have obtained title by virtue of such proceedings, and has been a bona fide purchaser for value without notice or reasonable cause for inquiry. In re Green, (W. D. Pa.

The rule that the trustee takes the estate of the bankrupt in the same plight as the bankrupt held it is not applicable to liens which, although valid as to the bankrupt, are invalid as to creditors. Baltimore First Nat. Bank v. Staake, (1906) 202 U. S. 141, 26 S. Ct. 580, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 967, 15 Am. Bankr.

Thus it has been held that a sheriff, holding property of an involuntary bankrupt under writs levied within four months before the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, has no right, as against the trustee, to retain possession of such property until payment of his costs. ### II. TIME OF ACQUIRING LIEN.

Time of acquiring lien. — In order to be affected by the provisions of 67f, a lien obtained through legal proceedings must have been acquired within the four months immediately preceding the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. Metcalf v. Barker, (1902) 187 U. S. 165, 174, 23 S. Ct. 67, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 122; In re Richards, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1899) 96 Fed. 935, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; In re Engle, (E. D. Where the lien has been obtained more than four months prior to the filing of the petition, it is not only not to be deemed to be null and void on adjudication, but its validity is recognized. A lien acquired subsequent to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, it has been held, is not annulled by section 67f. In re Engle, (E. D. Pa. 1901) 105 Fed. 893, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; Kinmouth v. Braeutigam, (1900) 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345, 65 N. J. L. 165, 46 Atl. 769; Kinmouth v. Braeutigam, (1902) 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 85, 63 N. J. Eq. 103, 52 Atl. 226.

The time is to be computed, in accordance with section 31, from the time the lien actually accrues to the time of the filing of the petition. Dutcher v. Wright, (1876) 94 U. S. 553, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 130; In re Stevenson, (D. C. Del. 1899) 94 Fed. 110, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; Parmenter Mfg. Co. v. Stoever, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1899) 97 Fed. 330, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 220; In re Bailey, (D. C. Ore. 1906) 144 Fed. 214, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289; Peck Lumber Mfg. Co. v. Mitchell, (Pa. 1899) 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701; Jones v. Stevens, (1901) 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571, 94 Me. 582, 48 Atl. 170; In re Tonawanda St. Planing Mill Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38; In re Warner, (D. C. Conn. 1906) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519. And see also the cases cited under section 31, supra, p. 653.

Thus it has been held that an attachment made on Feb. 8th was dissolved by an adjudication on a petition filed on June 8th following, and that the time of day when the attachment was made or the petition filed is immaterial. In re Warner, (D. C. Conn. 1906) 144 Fed. 987, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519. And in Jones v. Stevens, (1901) 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571, 94 Me. 582, 48 Atl. 170, it appears that an attachment was made on Sept. 9th, at 10 A. M., and the petition was filed on Jan. 9th following, at 2 P. M.; and it was held that, in accordance with section 31, in order to determine whether or not the attachment was within four months prior to the filing of the petition the time must be reckoned back from the 9th day of January, 1899, and so reckoned the 9th day of the preceding September was held to be clearly within the four months period.

III. JUDGMENT LIENS.

Judgment liens. - The statute does not affect a mere judgment which has not resulted in the creation of a lien; but where a judgment, either of itself or by virtue of any process issued thereon, or statutory authority therefor, has culminated in a lien within the four months immediately preceding the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the lien so created is rendered null and void by virtue of the provisions of section 67f. A judgment itself does not necessarily constitute a lien upon property, unless made so by statute. In re Bailey, (D. C. Ore. 1906) 144 Fed. 214, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289.

And a judgment which does not create a lien upon the bankrupt's estate is not annulled by section 67f. Plaut v. Gorham Mfg. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 174 Fed. 852, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42.

Judgment authorized by power of attorney.

— It has been held that a lien acquired within the four months period, on a judgment recovered by virtue of a warrant of attorney which was given more than four months before the institution of proceedings in bankruptcy, was annulled under section 67f. Wilson v. Nelson, (1901) 183 U. S. 191, 22 S. Ct. 74, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 147, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142.

A judgment for a fine, imposed under a state liquor law for a violation thereof, comes within the language of section 67f; and an execution issued on such a judgment, at the instance of the state, will be restrained; it is immaterial, in such case, whether the claim for which the judgment was recovered was provable in bankruptcy, or whether it would be affected by a discharge of the bankrupt. In re Green, (W. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 870.

Judgment appointing receiver in state court.— The word "judgment," in section 67f, is sufficiently broad to apply to the judgment of a state court in appointing a receiver of an insolvent corporation, obtained within three months of an adjudication as an involuntary bankrupt. Mauran r. Crown Carpet Lining Co., (R. I. 1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734.

Lien by creditor's bill dependent on acquiring judgment. — Where, under the state law, a judgment creditor who files a creditor's bill to reach equitable assets or to set aside fraudulent conveyances thereby acquires an equitable lien, depending for its perfection and enforcement upon the recovery of a valid judgment in his suit, such judgment is annulled by the adjudication of the debtor as a bankrupt within four months thereafter, and the creditor's lien falls with it, and he has no rights in the fund superior to those of other creditors. In re Lesser, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.

Judgment acquired after adjudication.—Property of a bankrupt, the title to which has vested in his trustee under section 70, is not subject to seizure on execution against the bankrupt issued on a judgment recovered after the adjudication. Judgment acquired prior to four months period. — Where a mortgage lien was obtained long prior to a period of four months next preceding the date of filing of the petition in bankruptcy, although suit was commenced and a decree of foreclosure rendered within that period, it was held that neither the mortgage lien nor the judgment lien was denounced by any provision of the bankruptcy statute. In re Rohrer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52. And see supra, p. 799, II. Time of Acquiring Lien.

So, also, it has been held that where a judgment, recovered against a bankrupt and claimed to be a lien on his remainder interest in certain real estate, was entered more than four months before the filing of the bankruptcy petition, it was not affected by section 67f, though the bankruptcy court had jurisdiction to control the disposition of the property subject to the lien in the interest of the entire estate. In re Arden, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 475.

IV. ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT LIENS.

Attachment and garnishment liens. Whether or not an attachment or garnishment proceeding has resulted in a lien is a question to be determined from the state statutes and decisions. The bankruptcy law reaches only the lien, not the preliminary steps; and whenever it appears that the proceeding has become a lien, and such lien has been obtained within the four months immediately preceding the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the provisions of section 67f are applicable, and the lien becomes void, unless preserved by the court for the benefit of the estate. Metcalf v. Barker, (1902) 187 U.S. 165, 23 S. Ct. 67, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 122; Baltimore First Nat. Bank r. Staake, (1906) 202 U. S. 141, 26 S. Ct. 580, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 967, 15 Am. Bankr. Thus it has been held that an adjudication in bankruptcy, whether in voluntary or involuntary proceedings, renders void a judgment against a garnishee rendered in an action brought against the bankrupt within four months prior to the filing of the petition, and when he was insolvent, and discharges the garnishee from liability thereon; and such judgment must thereafter be treated as a nullity whenever drawn in question, whether directly or collaterally. N. Y. S. 102.

Section 67f makes two distinct provisions for the disposition of the property of an insolvent attached within four months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against him. First, such attachments shall be declared null and void, and the property affected shall be deemed released, and shall pass to the trustee of the estate of the bankrupt; or, second, the court may order that the right acquired by the attachment shall be preserved for the benefit of the estate. In the first case the whole property passes free from the attachment. In the second, so much of the value of the property attached as is represented by the attachments passes to the trustee for the benefit of the entire body of creditors, that is, "for the benefit of the estate" - in other words, the statute recognizes the lien of the attachment, but distributes the lien among the whole body of creditors. The first provision contemplates the attachment of property to which the bankrupt has the complete legal and equitable title, which, as soon as the attachment is dissolved, passes at once to the bankrupt's trustee as part of his estate. The second provision evidently does not apply to this, as there is no object in preserving the lien of the attachment for the benefit of the estate, since under the first clause the entire value of the property attached passes to the trustee free from the attachment. The second clause contemplates property in which the bankrupt has an interest which has been secured to attaching creditors by the levy of the writ, but which might have passed to another person, as, for instance, a purchaser under an unre-corded deed, but for the fact that the attaching creditors had acquired a prior lien there-In such case the statute recognizes the validity of the lien, but preserves it for the benefit of the entire body of creditors, by reason of the fact that the attachment was dissolved as a preferential lien in favor of the attaching creditors, by the institution of proceedings in bankruptcy. Baltimore 1909) 171 Fed. 940, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 803.

Dissolution of attachment not impairment of contractual obligation. — The dissolution of an attachment lien under section 67f is not in any sense an impairment or divestiture of contractual rights. Wood v. 1903) 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577. Wood v. Carr, (Ky.

Interference with attached property in pessession of bankruptcy court. - Where a sheriff, after having attached property of a bankrupt, was informed of the adjudication and requested by the referee to hold the property for the referee until a trustee could be appointed, the attachment having been dissolved by the adjudication, it was held that the sheriff was in possession as custodian of the bankruptcy court, so that a seizure from the sheriff on writs of replevin constituted a direct interference with the court's custody of the property. In re Walsh, (N. D. Ia. 1908) 159 Fed. 560, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472.

Enjoining proceedings on attachment. Where the act of bankruptcy alleged in an involuntary petition, on which an adjudication is made, is that the debtor suffered certain creditors to obtain a preference through the levy of attachments on his goods, and failed to discharge such levy before sale, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction upon a rule to show cause, entered in the bank-ruptcy proceedings, to enjoin the attaching creditors from the further prosecution of their attachment suits. Bear v. Chase, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1900) 99 Fed. 920, 3 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 746. Prosecution of attachment proceeding as against surety, - A court of bankruptcy may properly permit an attachment creditor, where the bankrupt had given a bond, to prosecute his action to judgment against the bankrupt for the purpose of perfecting his right of action against the surety, where the estate is protected from loss. Rep. 14.

Lien obtained prior to four months period. Where a lien is obtained at the time the attachment is made, it is not avoided by the provisions of section 67f if the attachment is made more than four months before bankruptcy, though the judgment or decree in enforcement of the lien is not obtained until within the four months period referred to. In re Crafts-Riordon Shoe Co., (D. C. Mass. 1910) 185 Fed. 931, following In re Blair, (D. C. Mass. 1901) 108 Fed. 529.
So, also, where a foreign attachment was levied on the property of a bankrupt more than four months prior to the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, it was held that the lien of a fl. fa., on a judgment subsequently obtained, related back to the date of the attachment and was not divested by the Bankruptcy Act. In re U. S. Graphite Co., (E. D. Pa. 1908) 161 Fed. 583, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573. And see supra, p. 799, II.

Time of Acquiring Lien.
Fund in custody of state court. — Irrespective of whether the lien upon the funds impounded by the service of the summons of garnishment attaches before final judgment or not, the service of the summons of garnishment so far places the funds found in the hands of the garnishee (especially when the money is paid into court, or in lieu thereof a dissolving bond given) into the custody and control of the court administering the case that it will be entitled to hold and subject the fund, despite the subsequent bankruptcy of the defendant, if the petition in bankruptcy be filed more than four months after such custody is obtained. National Surety Co. v. Medlock, (Ga. 1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Attachment of exempt property. - As to the attachment of exempt property, see infra, this page, V. Liens on Exempt Property.

V. LIENS ON EXEMPT PROPERTY.

A lien acquired on exempt property, it has been quite generally held, is not annulled by section 67f. Powers Dry Goods Co. v. Nelson, (N. D. 1901) 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; Jewett v. Huffman, (1905) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738, 14 N. D. 110, 103 N. W. 408. See also In re Driggs, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 897; Mc-Kenney v. Cheney, (1903) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54, 118 Ga. 387, 45 S. E. 433; Sharp v. Woolslare, (1904) 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 251.

Thus it has been said that the lien of an attachment on the personal property of a bankrupt is not destroyed by a mere discharge of the debt secured by the lien, through a discharge in bankruptcy; and unless such lien is one which is itself declared void by said act it may be enforced, through a modified form of judgment, as against the property on which the lien exists. Powers Dry Goods Co. v. Nelson, (1901) 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506, 10 N. D. 580, 88 N. W. 703.

But it has also been held that section 67f is applicable to liens acquired through legal proceedings against the bankrupt within four months prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition without reference to whether the lien was acquired on exempt or nonexempt property; so that an attachment on property of the bankrupt, subsequently exempted to him as a homestead, is dissolved by bankruptcy proceedings, although the property did not pass to the trustee. In re Forbes, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 79, following In re Tune, (N. D. Ala. 1902) 115 Fed. 906, and distinguishing Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, (1903) 190 U. S. 294, 23 S. Ct. 751, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1061. See also In ro Bolinger, (W. D. Pa. 1901) 108 Fed. 374, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep.

VI. ENFORCEMENT OF PRE-EXISTING LIENS.

Enforcement of pre-existing lien. - There is a clear distinction between the bald creation of a lien within the four months and the enforcement of one previously acquired. Thompson v. Fairbanks, (1905) 196 U. S. 516, 25 S. Ct. 306, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 577, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; Woods v. Klein, (1909) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722, 223 Pa. St. 257, 72 Atl. 523.

And where a valid lien was in existence more than four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy the lawful enforcement of such lien is not prohibited by the statute. Metcalf v. Barker, (1902) 187 U. S. 165, 23 S. Ct. 67, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 122, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; In re McKane, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 158 Fed. 647, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594; Hillyer v. Le Roy, (1904) 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733, 179 N. Y. 369, 72 N. E. 237. See also Mencke v. Rosenberg, (1902) 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323, 202 Pa. St. 131, 51 Atl. 767; Fairlamb v. Smedley Constr. Co., (1908) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 17.

Thus it has been held that it is the lien created by a levy, or a judgment, or an attachment, or otherwise, that is invalidated; and where the lien is obtained more than four months prior to the filing of the petition, it is not only not to be deemed to be null and void on adjudication, but its validity is recog-When it is obtained within four months the property is discharged therefrom, but not otherwise. A judgment or decree in enforcement of an otherwise valid pre-existing lien is not the judgment denounced by the statute, which is plainly confined to judgments creating liens. Metcalf v. Barker, (1902) 187 U. S. 165, 23 S. Ct. 67, 47 U. S.

(L. ed.) 122, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36. Lien created by enforcement. — But where the enforcement of a pre-existing lien is, in itself, the creation of a new lien, such new lien is rendered void under the provisions of section 67f of the Bankruptcy Act. Thus, under a Pennsylvania statute it has been held that a judgment lien entered of record in the County Court does not create a lien on the goods or chattels, or on the rights and credits, of the debtor in such county, or on his real estate in a neighboring county. To secure a lien upon these, the plaintiff must resort to the legal process the law has placed at his command; that is, to his writs of fl. fa., at-tachment execution, or testatum fl. fa. But tachment execution, or testatum fi. fa. But all of these liens are "obtained through legal proceedings," and if so obtained within four months of the filing of a petition in bank-ruptcy they will be stricken down by the paramount law. Mencke v. Rosenberg, (1902) 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323, 202 Pa. St. 131, 51 Atl. 767; Fairlamb r. Smedley Constr. Co., (1908) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824, 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 17. See also Clarke v. Larremore, (1903) 188 U. S. 486, 23 S. Ct. 363, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 555, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476.

Enforcement enjoined. - A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction over a judgment creditor of the bankrupt, for the purpose of enjoining him from proceeding in a state court for the enforcement of his judgment against property of the debtor, where the judgment was rendered null or inoperative by the adjudication of the debtor as a bankrupt within four months after its rendition, because all creditors are parties to the proceedings in bankruptcy, and because the court has power to restrain any person from illegally possessing himself of assets of the estate. In re Lesser, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 100 Fed. 433, 3

Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.
In In re Oxley, (N. D. Wash. 1910) 182
Fed. 1019, it was held that, in order to give effect to section 67f, a court of bankruptcy has full jurisdiction over property held under liens obtained through legal proceedings, and may enjoin a sale thereon. And see the annotation under section 11a, supra, p. 531.

Proceeds of execution sale in sheriff's hands. - The proceeds of an execution sale remaining in the sheriff's hands at the time of the adjudication do not belong to the judgment creditor, but to the estate of the bankrupt, and the court of bankruptcy has power and jurisdiction to order the sheriff to pay over such proceeds to the trustee when appointed. Clarke v. Larremore, (1903) 188 U. S. 486, 23 S. Ct. 363, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 555, 9 Am. 23 S. Ct. 303, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 405, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476; In re Kenney, (C. C. The trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to the entire proceeds of an execution sale remaining in the sheriff's hands, less costs of sale, after the allowance of the exemption when it is claimed from such proceeds. In re Duguid, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 100 Fed. 274, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 794.

Proceeds released from claim of execution creditor.—The proceeds in the hands of a sheriff, realized from a sale under an execution, are released from the claim of the execution creditor by the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against the debtor within four months after the judgment is rendered, by virtue of the provisions of section 67f. Clarke v. Larremore, (1903) 188 U. S. 486, 23 S. Ct. 363, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 555, 9 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 478.

Distribution of proceeds enjoined. — The right of the bankruptcy court to restrain a sheriff from paying money collected on an execution, issued against the property of the bankrupt, and invalidated by the bankruptcy proceedings, to a judgment creditor, and to require the sheriff to pay such proceeds to a trustee of the bankrupt estate, while those proceeds still remain in his custody, is now firmly established. In re Knickerbocker, (W. D. N. Y. 1903) 121 Fed. 1004, 10 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 381.

Proceeds paid over to execution creditor. -Where an execution was issued against an insolvent debtor within four months prior to his bankruptcy, and a levy and sale made, and the proceeds paid over to the judgment creditor before the filing of the petition, the case does not fall within section 67f, and a referee in such case is without power summarily to direct a repayment of the money; the remedy of the trustee, if any, being by a plenary action to recover the amount as a preference under section 60b. Order of court necessary.—The trustee in bankruptcy is not, by section 67f, subrogated by mere operation of law to the rights of a levying creditor. But he must obtain an order of court preserving the rights of the levying creditor for the benefit of the bankrupt's estate. Pittsburgh First Nat. Bank v. Guarantee Title, etc., Co., (C. C. Court may order surrender of property affected. — Where the bankrupt's property has been seized by an abuse of process, as where the taking was after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, on a writ of replevin which did not describe the property, but other and different property, it was held that the court has power to order its surrender by the person in possession to the trustee or receiver in bankruptcy. Bona fide purchasers protected. — Section 67f expressly provides for the protection of bona fide purchasers for value. Clarke v. Larremore, (1903) 188 U. S. 486, 23 S. Ct. 363, 47 U. S. And see also the cases cited to the same effect under section 67e, supra, p. 792, and section 70 a and a (5), infra, pp. 811, 823.

Subdivisions  $\sigma$  and f of section 67 refer only to existing liens created by legal proceedings, and are not applicable to a case in which such a lien has become merged into a title by the consummation of an execution sale. In such case the property does not belong to the bankrupt, and could not have been levied upon under an execution against him at the time of the initiation of the bankruptcy proceedings. Nelson v. Svea Pub. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1910) 178 Fed. 136.

The burden of proving the bona fides of a sale of the bankrupt's property within the four months period rests on the purchaser. Mencke v. Rosenberg, (1902) 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323, 202 Pa. St. 131, 51 Atl. 767.

But in a suit against a sheriff, for the seizure and sale of property on an attachment proceeding within the four months period, the provision for the protection of bona fide purchasers is not applicable. Jones v. Stevens, (Me. 1901) 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571.

Sec. 68. Set-Offs and Counterclaims. — a [Mutual debts and credits.] In all cases of mutual debts or mutual credits between the estate of a bankrupt and a creditor the account shall be stated and one debt shall be set off against the other, and the balance only shall be allowed or paid. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 565.]

The word "debt," as used in section 68a, includes any debt provable in bankruptcy. Germania Sav. Bank, etc., Co. v. Loeb, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 188 Fed. 285.

Any debt, liquidated or unliquidated, owing to the bankrupt from a creditor of his, whether for damages or on contract, express or implied, which passes to the trustee, may be used by him to reduce the claim of such creditor when presented, or to extinguish it altogether. In re Harper, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 175 Fed. 412, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 918.

Thus it has been held that the word debts," in section 68a, should be construed to include a right of action against the creditor for injury to the bankrupt's property, which passed to the trustee under section 70a (6), although unliquidated. In re Harper, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 175 Fed. 412, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 918.

So, also, a creditor may set off a claim which was unliquidated at the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, where it has been liquidated subsequently thereto. Morgan v. Wordell, (1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 167, 178 Mass. 350, 59 N. E. 1037, 55 L. R. A. 33.

Surety debts. - A surety who pays the debt of his bankrupt principal, after the adjudication in bankruptcy, may set off the amount so paid against his own debt to the bankrupt. In re Dillon, (D. C. Mass. 1900) 100 Fed. 627, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63.

Mutual debts and credits, under the language of the statute, may be set off against each other, the balance only being allowable and payable, in bankruptcy proceedings. New York County Nat. Bank v. Massey, (1904) 192 U. S. 138, 24 S. Ct. 199, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 380, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42, reversing (1902) 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515; In re Little, (N. D. Ia. 1901) 110 Fed. 621, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681; Walther v. Williams Mercantile Co., C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 169 Fed. 270, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328; Booth v. Prete, (1909) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 579, 15 Ann. Cas. 306, 81 Conn. 636, 71 Atl. 938.

If, however, the claim asserted as a set-off does not fall within the language of the Act as a mutual transaction, it will not be allowed as a set-off. In re Crystal Spring Bottling Co., (D. C. Vt. 1900) 100 Fed. 265, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55; In re Shults, (W. D. N. Y. 1904) 132 Fed. 573, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84; In re Becker, (M. D. Pa. 1905) 139 Fed. 366, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; In re Bevins, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 434, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344.

Thus, the mere fact that the stockholders of a bankrupt corporation are also bondholders, and as such entitled to share in the distribution of the estate, does not entitle them to set off their claims as such in a suit against them by the trustee in bankruptcy to recover unpaid subscriptions. Babbitt v. Read, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 173 Fed. 712, 23

Am. Bankr. Rep. 254.

So, also, where five persons, only one of whom was solvent, had a joint claim against the estate of a bankrupt, and each of them had severally become liable to the trustee in bankruptcy, the amounts of such liabilities aggregating more than the claim, but it did not appear that the joint liability and the separate debts grew out of the same transaction, or that either formed the inducement or consideration for the other, it was held that there could be no set-off of such claims. In re Crystal Spring Bottling Co.. (D. C. Vt. 1900) 100 Fed. 265, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Liability to trustee included. — Section 68a includes a liability on the part of a creditor which has accrued to a trustee in bankruptcy as such, though not to the bankrupt himself, when the creditor's claim and such liability are mutual. In re Crystal Spring Bottling Co., (D. C. Vt. 1900) 100 Fed. 265, 4 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 55.

Money retained by creditor under agreement.—Where, in a proceeding by a bankrupt's trustee to recover a sum of money from the manager of one of the bankrupt's stores, the answer, admitted to be true, alleged that prior to the bankruptcy there were mutual accounts between the defendant and the bankrupt, and that the defendant applied to the payment of the balance due him by the bankrupt for salary the sum claimed which he was authorized to do in accordance with his custom and under an agreement with the bankrupt when he undertook the management of the business, it was held that the money so applied did not belong to the bankrupt's estate at the time the petition was filed, and could not, therefore, be recovered in such proceeding. In re Lebrecht, (W. D. Tex. 1905) 135 Fed. 878, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 445.

Payments on running accounts. — Payments made from time to time to apply on a running account do not constitute mutual debits or credits within the meaning of section 68. In re Christensen, (N. D. Ia. 1900)

101 Fed. 802, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202.

Cash payments on account, made within four months of the filing of the petition, are not such debts or credits as entitle the creditor to state the account, and hold the bankrupt only for the balance found under section 68a. In re Ryan, (N. D. Ill. 1900) 105 Fed.

The rule stated in the foregoing paragraph is, however, applicable only in the absence of fraud or collusion between the bankrupt and the bank with a view to create a preferential transfer of the bankrupt's property to bank. In rc Shults, (W. D. N. Y. 1904) 132 Fed. 573, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84.

Set-off prior to filing of petition.—The fact that a set-off was made by the bank prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition does not affect the question, because, in such case, it did only what the law would have done had the bank waited until the petition was filed. Booth v. Prete, (1909) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 579, 15 Ann. Cas. 306, 81 Conn. 636, 71 Atl. 938.

Claim maturing subsequent to filing of petition.—A bank has the right to set off a deposit against the debt of the bankrupt whether matured or not at the date of the adjudication in bankruptcy. Irish v. Citizens' Trust Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1908) 163 Fed. 880; Germania Sav. Bank, etc., Co. v. Loeb, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 188 Fed. 285; In re Philip Semmer Glass Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665, affirmed (2d Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 77, 67 C. C. A. 551, 14 Am. Bankr. Mistake in failing to claim set-off. — And where a bank pays, by mistake, to the trustee in bankruptcy the amount on deposit to the eredit of the bankrupt, instead of setting off the same against a debt due the bank by the bankrupt, the amount so paid the trustee in bankruptcy may be recovered by the bank. Union Nat. Bank v. McKey, (7th Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 662, 42 C. C. A. 583.

One bank assuming rights and liabilities of another. — Although a bank cannot, after the insolvency of the debtor, acquire his obligation for the purpose of using it as a set-off or counterclaim, it has been held that this rule does not apply where the bank acquires the depositor's obligation in the transaction by which it assumes the liability to pay the deposit; i. e., where one bank takes the assets and assumes the liabilities of another bank the former is entitled to the right of set-off belonging to the latter. Frank v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, (1905) 182 N. Y. 264, 74 N. E. 841, 108 Am. St. Rep. 805, affirming 100 App. Div. 449, 91 N. Y. S. 488.

Set-off of deposit not preference. — A deposit of money to one's credit in a bank does not operate to diminish the estate of the depositor, for when he parts with the money he creates at the same time, on the part of the bank, an obligation to pay the amount of the deposit as soon as the depositor may see fit to draw a check against it. It is not a transfer of property as a payment, pledge, mortgage, gift, or security. It is true that it creates a debt, which, when set off under section 68, amounts to permitting a creditor of that class to obtain more from the bankrupt's estate than creditors who are not in the same situation, and do not hold any debts of the bankrupt subject to set-off; but this fact does not operate to enlarge the scope of the section relating to preferences so as to prevent set-off in cases coming within the terms of section 68a. New York County Nat. Bank v. Massey, (1904) 192 U. S. 138, 24 S. Ct. 199, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 380, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42, reversing (1902) 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515, and distinguishing Pirie v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1901) 182 U. S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1171, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814.

Bet-off as against special deposit. — But where the deposit is made not as a general deposit subject to check, but in trust for some special purpose of which the bank has notice, the bank is not at liberty to set off the deposit against a debt due it from the depositor. In re Davis, (W. D. Tex. 1903) 119 Fed. 950, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670; Lynam v. Belfast Nat. Bank, (1904) 98 Me. 448, 57 Atl. 799.

Depositor may set off account. - On the bankruptcy of a banking partnership, a depositor having a credit balance in his account is entitled to set off the same against a note on which he is indebted to the bank. In re Shults, (W. D. N. Y. 1904) 132 Fed. 573, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84.

Claims not due at institution of proceedings. - As claims maturing subsequently to the filing of the petition are provable against the estate, they necessarily are the subject of set-off under the provisions of section 68. Germania Sav. Bank, etc., Co. v. Loeb, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 188 Fed. 285; Frank v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, (1905) 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 125, 182 N. Y. 264, 74 N. E. 841; Morgan v. Right and duty of trustee to claim set-off.

If a claimant is indebted to the estate, such debt is an asset of the estate, and it is the duty of the trustee to interpose the same as a set-off or counterclaim. In re Royce Dry Goods Co., (W. D. Mo. 1904) 133 Fed. 100,

13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258.

A trustee in bankruptcy may set up, as a set-off against a claim filed by a creditor, a claim for unliquidated damages existing in favor of the bankrupt against such creditor which passed to the trustee, and which under the law of the state the bankrupt, but for his bankruptcy, might have pleaded as a counter-claim in an action by the creditor; and the trustee may have such claim liquidated by the referee, unless some other mode of liquidation is directed. In re Harper, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 175 Fed. 412, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 918.

In re Wiener, etc., Shoe Co., (E. D. Pa. 1899) 96 Fed. 949, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200.

Burden of proof. - Where the debt of a creditor against the estate of a bankrupt has been duly proved, the burden of proof rests upon the trustee to establish a set-off pleaded by him. In re Harper, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 175 Fed. 412, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 918

Claim of set-off as consent to jurisdiction. -Where a creditor of a bankrupt, who was also a director, on filing his claim, sought to set off his own indebtedness as a credit thereon, and went to trial on such issue, he thereby gave his "consent," within the meaning of section 23b, that the court of bankruptcy should determine the amount due from him and enter judgment therefor on the disallowance of the set-off claimed. In re White, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 194, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197.

Unliquidated claim. — Section 68b (1) does not prevent a set-off of a claim which was liquidated at the later moment merely because, for some reason, it did not admit of proof when the proceedings were commenced. Morgan v. Wordell, (1901) 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 167, 178 Mass. 350, 59 N. E. 1037, 55 L. R. A. 33.

Failure to prove claim does not prevent its use as set-off. — Section 57n, limiting the time for proving claims to one year, has reference to the bankruptcy proceedings alone; and if the claim of a creditor, who is also a debtor of the estate, is one provable in its nature, the fact that he has not proved it within the year does not affect his right to plead it as a set-off or counterclaim, in an action by the trustee to recover his indebtedness to the estate, as a claim "provable against the estate." within the meaning of section 68b. Sec. 69. Possession of Property.—a A judge may, upon satisfactory proof, by affidavit, that a bankrupt against whom an involuntary petition has been filed and is pending has committed an act of bankruptcy, or has neglected or is neglecting, or is about to so neglect his property that it has thereby deteriorated or is thereby deteriorating or is about thereby to deteriorate in value, issue a warrant to the marshal to seize and hold it subject to further orders. Before such warrant is issued the petitioners applying therefor shall enter into a bond in such an amount as the judge shall fix, with such sureties as he shall approve, conditioned to indemnify such bankrupt for such damages as he shall sustain in the event such seizure shall prove to have been wrongfully obtained. Such property shall be released, if such bankrupt shall give bond in a sum which shall be fixed by the judge, with such sureties as he shall approve, conditioned to turn over such property, or pay the value thereof in money to the trustee, in the event he is adjudged a bankrupt pursuant to such petition. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 565.

Duty to seize property. - It is the duty of the court on its own motion, in a proper case, to take actual possession and custody of the bankrupt's estate, either through a receiver or by a direction to the marshal. In re Abrahamson, (N. D. N. Y. 1898) 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44. See also Davis v. Bohle, (8th Cir. 1899) 92 Fed. 325, 34 C. C. A.

Wherever it appears that it is necessary for the preservation of the property claimed to be a part of the bankrupt's estate, after a petition in bankruptcy has been filed, that the court should take possession of the same, pending the adjudication of title, it is within the jurisdiction of the court to order the marshal or a custodian to take possession of such property; and wherever the petition, duly verified, avers that the alleged bankrupt has transferred his property for the purpose of hindering, delaying, and defrauding cred-itors, and sets forth facts tending to show that the transfer is null and void under the Bankruptey Act, and that the party in pos-session is financially irresponsible, and that there is danger that goods alleged to belong to the bankrupt will be lost to his estate without the interposition of the court, such court has the power, and it was its duty, to lay its hand upon the property and hold the same until the claims thereto or rights therein can be determined. The object of the bankruptcy law, which is to have the property of the bankrupt equally distributed among his creditors, would be entirely de-feated if in such a case the court was com-pelled to wait for the appointment of a trustee to bring a suit to recover such property, for by the time such suit could be determined the property in the hands of an irresponsible person might have been entirely dissipated. But the power to make such seizure should not be lightly exercised, or abused, so as needlessly to oppress or injure those who claim title; and in all cases creditors who pray for such an order of seizure should be required to give bond to indemnify the party injured, in the event that it should be determined thereafter that the party in whose possession the goods are is lawfully the owner thereof. In re Knopf, (D. C. S. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 245, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 432.

It is not necessary to allege that property to be seized is not exempt from seizure. Hoffschlaeger Co. v. Young Nap, (I Hawaii 1904) 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510. (D. C.

After adjudication of voluntary bankruptcy, an application by creditors, in which the bankrupt unites, to appoint a receiver or . custodian to preserve the assets of the estate, otherwise wholly unprotected, will usually be granted, especially in the absence of any charge of fraud or collusion, and where the creditors and other persons interested make no objection whatever. In re Huddleston, (S. D. Ga. 1908) 167 Fed. 428, 21 Am. Bankr.

Statutory requirements must be complied with. - A warrant will not be issued, under section 69, excepting where the statutory requirements are strictly complied with. Thus it has been held that the statute does not authorize the court to issue a warrant for the seizure of an alleged bankrupt's property, against whom an involuntary petition is pending, on the application of the petitioning creditors, merely supported by the affidavit of the bankrupt, averring that he waives proof showing that he has committed an act of bankruptcy, that he has neglected his property and that it has thereby deteriorated in value, and that he waives the giving of the required bond, and that he agrees that the warrant may issue. In re Sarsar, (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 120 Fed. 40, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576.

A petition must be filed before the warrant of seizure may issue. In re Kelly, (W. D. Tenn. 1899) 91 Fed. 504, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep.

The purpose of requiring a bond, either under section 3e or under section 69, is to indemnify the alleged bankrupt before his property may be taken from his possession by petitioning creditors prior to an adjudication of bankruptcy. In re Haff, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 742.

Property in possession of adverse claim-Section 69 does not authorize the court to issue a warrant to the marshal to take property away from the possession of a third party who holds it under a bone fide elaim of right or title. 68 C. C. A. 374, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132. Thus in In re Kelly, (W. D. Tenn. 1899) 91 Fed. 504, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306, it was said that section 69 was not designed as a general grab-all attachment proceeding, nor a statutory remedy for the seizure of property fraudulently conveyed by an alleged insolvent debtor, nor is it in any sense to be made a summary proceeding against anybody but the alleged bankrupt, nor against any property except that which is in his own hands or those of his acknowledged agents.

It has also been held that it is error for a court of bankruptcy to appoint a receiver to take possession of property, and to make a summary order for the sale thereof, without the consent of an adverse claimant who is in actual possession of such property claiming it as owner. Beach v. Macon Grocery Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1902) 116 Fed. 143, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751.

The amendment of section 23 by the Act of Feb. 5, 1903, does not affect the original meaning of section 69, nor enlarge its scope so as to authorize a court of bankruptcy to make a summary order directing the transfer of property in the possession of a bons fide adverse claimant. In re Andre, (2d Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 736, 68 C. C. A. 374, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132.

The mere filing of a petition does not give the bankruptcy court constructive possession of property held under an adverse claim; and such a claimant cannot be summarily de-prived of his possession by the trustee in bankruptey of an alleged owner. Morning Tel. Pub. Co. v. S. B. Hutchinson Co., (Mich.

1906) 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425. But see In re Knopf, (D. C. S. C. 1906) 144 Fed. 245, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 432, wherein it was held that whenever, after the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, it appears to be necessary for the preservation of property claimed to be a part of the bankrupt's estate, it is within the jurisdiction of the court to order the marshal, or a custodian, to take possession of such property, although in possession of an adverse claimant, pending the adjudication of title; such proceeding being one in bankruptcy, and not a controversy at law or in equity.

But where the possession of an adverse claimant was acquired subsequent to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy the prop-erty may be seized under an order of court. Thus in Bryan v. Bernheimer, (1901) 181 U. S. 188, 21 S. Ct. 557, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 814, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623, it was held that a court of bankruptcy has authority, after the adjudication, to order the marshal or receiver to take possession of the property of the bankrupt from a third party who acquired his possession and alleged right there-to after the filing of the petition, and before the adjudication of bankruptey. In re Moody, (N. D. Ia. 1904) 131 Fed. 525, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 718.

Determination of adverse claim. - In In re Young, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 158, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14, it was said that when third parties claim title to property which has been seized by the marshal under a warrant, as forming part of a bankrupt's estate, it will sometimes be found most convenient to settle the controversy summarily on a mere motion filed in the bankruptcy proceedings; but in other cases, where the claimant's right depends upon a decision of contested issues of fact or disputable questions of law, it will be found most expedient to require the controversy to be determined by a plenary action either in the bankruptcy court or in some other court of competent jurisdiction. As such controversies arise the bankruptcy courts can best determine how the issues involved can be tried with least delay, inconvenience, and expense, and with the greatest assurance of reaching a correct result. Therefore they should be allowed to direct the course of procedure in such cases, and orders made in that behalf should not be disturbed unless the case discloses a clear abuse of this discretionary power.

Thus where a marshal took possession of property which he found in the bankrupt's possession, and which was surrendered to him by the bankrupt as his own, it was held that there was no error in refusing, on a mere motion, to order such property returned to a mortgagee, upon his claim that he was legally in possession under his mortgage when it was seized, the validity of his mortgage being denied by creditors; and that the court acted within its discretion in requiring such claimant to assert his rights by a plenary action in which they could be more properly tried and determined. In re Young, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 158, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14. And see to the same effect In re Bender, (W. D. Ark, 1901) 106 Fed. 873, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632.

Summary determination. — Although section 69 extends only to the taking custody of property belonging to the bankrupt, or which is in his possession, or that of a third person as his bailee or agent, and not to property in the possession of an adverse claimant, this power, nevertheless, confers jurisdiction upon the bankruptcy court to ascertain whether the property is in the possession of the bankrupt, or his bailee or agent, or whether it is in the possession of an adverse claimant, and to institute and entertain an appropriate proceeding for that purpose; and such proceeding must necessarily be a summary one because, as no trustee has been appointed, there is no person to represent the estate as a party to a formal suit. In re Andre, (2d Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 736, 68 C. C. A. 374, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132. And see to the same effect in re Rochford, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 124 Fed.

But it is the duty of all courts to see that such process as they may issue directing the seizure of property is not abused or so executed as to needlessly oppress or injure third persons who are strangers to the litigation. Ordinarily they should act with as much expedition as possible when complaint is made that under color of process the rights of third parties have been invaded. In re Young, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 158, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14.

Interference with property restrained. -Where property, claimed to belong to one against whom an involuntary petition in bankruptcy is filed, is also claimed by a third person who is about to remove it, the court, on petition of the creditors, will restrain such third person from removing such property or making any change therein. In re Smith, (N. D. Ga. 1902) 113 Fed. 993, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55, relying on Bryan v. Bern-heimer, (1901) 181 U. S. 188, 21 S. Ct. 557, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 814, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623. And see also the annotation under section lla, supra, p. 531.

And where an ancillary receiver was properly appointed in bankruptcy proceedings, it was held that the property in his hands, as such receiver, was in custodic logis, and was not subject to attachment. In re John L'

Nelson, etc., Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 149 Fed.

590, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66.
So, also, it has been held that after an adjudication in bankruptcy an action of replevin in a state court cannot be commenced and maintained against the bankrupt to recover property in the possession of and claimed by the bankrupt at the time of that adjudication, and in the possession of a referee in bankruptcy at the time when the action of replevin was begun. White v. Schloerb, (1900) /178 U. S. 542, 20 S. Ct. 1007, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1183, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178.

But see In re Ward, (D. C. Mass. 1900) 104 Fed. 985, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215, wherein it was held that the court had no power to enjoin a third party from disposing of property in his possession and claimed by him adversely to the bankrupt.

I. NATURE OF TRUSTEE'S TITLE.

Section 70 is to be construed with section 47a (2) as amended by the Act of June 25. 1910, which vests the trustee with the rights of a creditor holding a lien. In re Hammond, (N. D. Ohio 1911) 188 Fed. 1020.

Trustee takes bankrupt's title.—Section 70s vests the trustee, by operation of law, with such title as the bankrupt had prior to his adjudication; and, in the absence of fraud, the trustee takes no better title. So, also, it has been uniformly held that, with respect to the character of his title, the trustee occupies the same relation to creditors that the bankrupt sustained prior to the inception of the proceedings. Hewit v. Berlin that the Dankrupt sustained prior to the inception of the proceedings. Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, (1904) 194 U. S. 296, 24 S. Ct. 690, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 986, 11 Am. Bankr. 279, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 668.

The statute does not undertake to vest the bankrupt with title to property to which he had no title prior to his adjudication, but only relates to property the title to which he had acquired to such an extent as to ren-der the same liable to seizure and sale under execution for his debts; thus the statute does not cover property which the bankrupt held as bailee only, although he may have had an option to purchase any part of the same at any time. Walter A. Wood Mowing, etc., Mach. Co. v. Vanstory, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 375, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740.

Nor does the statute cover property the title to which has vested, bona fide, in third parties prior to the institution of the bankruptey proceedings. In re Ozark Cooperage, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 180 Fed.

A title or lien acquired by an assignee under a general assignment, valid according to the law of the state where it is made, that is to the advantage of the estate when it has subsequently passed into bankruptcy, is not necessarily destroyed by the suppression of

The provisions of section 70 are in themselves sufficient to vest the trustee in bankruptcy, when appointed, with the title to property of the bankrupt held by an assignee under a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, executed prior to proseedings in bankruptcy, if an adjudication subsequently follows within the statutory period of four months. In re Gutwillig, (S. D. N. Y. 1898) 90 Fed. 475; Davis v. Bohle, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1899) 92 Fed. 325.

And a sale of property by an assignee for the benefit of creditors vests the purchaser with no title as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the assignor, subsequently appointed on an adjudication based on the assignment, where such purchaser has made no payment for the property. So, also, it has been held that the title to the property of a bankrupt in possession of a state court receiver, appointed within the four months period, passes to and becomes vested in the trustee in bankruptcy, by operation of law, as of the date of the adjudication; and the rights of the trustee will be enforced by the bankruptcy court, if not recognized by the receiver. The trustee is in no sense a bona fide purchaser for value, nor entitled to protection as such. Zartman v. Waterloo First Nat. Bank, (1910) 216 U. S. 134, 30 S. Ct. 368, 23 Am. Bankr. Thus it has been held that the trustee of a bankrupt corporation, which took title to property expressly subject to certain chattel mortgages, cannot attack the validity of such mortgages on the ground that they were not recorded in a county where one of the original mortgagors resided, as required by the state statute; his rights being measured by those of the bankrupt. In re Columbia Fireproof Door, etc., Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1909) 168 Fed. 159, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 714.

But a trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to possession of all of the bankrupt's property, and to administer the same, although it may be subject to liens or in possession of a state court in proceedings to enforce a lien instituted within four months prior to the bankruptcy. In re Kaplan, (N. D. Ga. 1905) 144 Fed. 159, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267, explaining Metcalf v. Barker, (1902) 187 U. S. 165, 23 S. Ct. 67, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 122.

Trustee vested with rights of creditor.—

Trustee vested with rights of creditor.—Since the enactment of the amendment of 1910, trustees as to all property in the custody or coming into the custody of the bank-ruptcy court are vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a creditor holding a lien by legal or equitable proceedings thereon, and also, as to all property not in the custody of the bankruptcy court, are vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a judgment creditor holding an execution duly returned unsatisfied. See section 47a (2) support p. 682

(2), supra, p. 682.

Liens invalid as to creditors. — But the rule that the trustee takes the estate of the bankrupt in the same plight as the bankrupt held it is not applicable to liens which, although valid as to the bankrupt, are invalid as to creditors. Baltimore First Nat. Bank v. Staake, (1906) 202 U. S. 141, 26 S. Ct. 580, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 967, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639; In re Rudnick, (D. C. Wash. 1900) 102 Fed. 750, 4 Am. Bankr. Unlike an assignee for the benefit of creditors, who has no rights beyond those of his assignor, by whose voluntary act the assignment was made, a trustee in bankruptcy takes title by operation of law entirely independent of the bankrupt, and is expressly invested with the rights of creditors, and with authority to avoid any transfer by the bankrupt of his property which any creditor might have avoided. Fourth St. Nat. Bank v. Millbourne Mills Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1909) 172 Fed. 177, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442.

II. TIME WHEN TITLE PASSES.

Effect of commencement of proceedings -Generally. — In Shawnee County v. Hurley, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 169 Fed. 92, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209, it was said that on the day of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy the property of the bankrupt passes from his control to the court or to its officers, and thence to the trustee in trust for the creditors of the bankrupt in proportion to the amounts of their claims at that time. that date there vests in each creditor, as a cestui que trust, an equitable estate in such a part of the property of the bankrupt as the amount of his provable claim at that time bears to the entire amount of the provable claims against the estate. On that date the bankruptcy law deprives the creditor of all his common-law remedies to collect his debt out of the property of his debtor and to collect subsequent interest on his claim against that property, and gives him in lieu thereof this equitable estate in the property of the bankrupt. Thus the filing of a petition upon which a subsequent adjudication of bankruptcy is rendered places all the property of the bankrupt "which prior to the filing of the petition he could by any means have transferred or which might have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against him" in custodia legis. From that hour the bankrupt is divested of the power to appropriate it to the payment of his debts or to use and dispose of it at will, and that authority is vested in the District Court. Every suit against him upon a provable claim may be stayed from the date of the filing of the petition (see sec. 11a, supra, p. 531). Every person is forbidden to receive from the bankrupt any material amount of property after that date with intent to defeat the Act (see sec. 29b, supra, p. 646). Every intentional preference after that date is voidable (see sec. 60b, supra, p. 739). Upon the filing of the petition the court may take im-mediate possession of the property if the bankrupt is neglecting it so that it is deteriorating in value (see sec. 69a, supra, p. 808). And upon the appointment of the trustee all the property of the bankrupt which, prior to the filing of the petition, he could have transferred, or which could have been seized or sold under judicial process against him, passes to this officer of the court (see sec. 70a (5), infra, p. 823. Indeed, the condition at the time of the filing of the petition measures the extent of the estate and the rights of all creditors of the bankrupt, and all parties interested in the property, throughout all the provisions of the law.

It is the established doctrine that bankruptcy proceedings are in rem, and when commenced all of the property then held by the bankrupt or for his use (aside from exemptions) is subjected to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, and that, when bankruptcy is adjudicated, the sequestration reaches all such property at least, and becomes operative from the institution of proceedings, as "a caveat to all the world," preventing interference by attachments or other means in derogation of the interests of the estate. While title rests in the bankrupt up to adjudication, and in form until a trustee qualifies, it is subject to the pending sequestration, and no rights can be acquired thereunder which are not equally amenable. Chicago State Bank v. Cox, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 91, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32. See also In re Duncan, (D. C. S. C. 1906) 148 Fed. 464.

Section 70s is not antagonistic to clause (5) thereof in respect to the time the trustee's title takes effect. The words "as of the date he was adjudged" refer to time merely, while the apparently contradictory words "property which prior to the filing of the petition he could by any means have transferred," etc., used in clause (5), refer to what title passes, rather than the time of westing. This view protects ad interim purchasers and keeps going concerns alive, for the benefit of the ereditors if adjudications follow, and the benefit of the debtors themselves if dismissals result. Nor can it be said that, by recognizing a valid title in the bankrupt until adjudication, creditors may be at the mercy of a dishonest debtor; Congress, foreseeing that, also enacted section 69, by which creditors may take possession of the property of debtors likely to take advantage of the situation. In re Pease, (W. D. N. Y. 1900) 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 578, disapproving In re Harris, (N. D. Ill. 1899) 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 359.

The commencement of bankruptcy proceedings marks the division of the bankrupt's old financial condition and his new financial condition. The alleged bankrupt is supposed to give up everything and to be freed of his debts, and it is not in the spirit of the bankruptcy law to allow him, subsequent to the commencement of bankruptcy proceedings, to change his status so as to claim any greater rights out of the property than he possessed at the time the proceedings were commenced. Matter of Fletcher, (N. D. Ohio 1906) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 491.

Where a bankrupt was designated as beneficiary in a policy on the life of his mother, which directed that it should be paid to the beneficiary of the insured last designated on the back of the policy, if living, and the insured died four days after the filing of the bankruptcy petition, leaving the bankrupt as a designated beneficiary, it was held that his interest in the policy was one which he could have transferred under the state law, and therefore it vested in the trustee in bankruptcy of the beneficiary. In re Hogan, (W. D. Wis. 1911) 186 Fed. 537.

Although property fraudulently conveyed before the passage of the Bankruptcy Act, by a debtor who is subsequently adjudged bankrupt, would be beyond the reach of the court of bankruptcy, yet if the title to the same has revested in the bankrupt, and is in him at the time of the filing of the petition, it is a part of his estate to be administered in bankruptcy. In re Brown, (D. C. Ore. 1898) 91 Fed. 358.

Removal of property enjoined. — Where property, claimed to belong to one against whom an involuntary petition in bankruptcy is filed, is also claimed by a third person, who is about to remove it, the court, on petition of the creditors, will restrain such third person from removing such property or making any change therein. In re Smith, (N. D. Ga. 1902) 113 Fed. 993, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55. See also the annotation to this effect, supra, under sec. 2 (3), p. 472; sec. 11a, p. 531; sec. 23b, p. 595; and sec. 69, p. 808.

But see In re Laplume Condensed Milk Co., (M. D. Pa. 1906) 145 Fed. 1013, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729, wherein it was said that bankruptcy proceedings undoubtedly put the property within the control of the court, if it sees fit to exercise the power; but pending and prior to an adjudication, it is still the bankrupt's, title only vesting in the trustee, as of that date, after an adjudication has been obtained. Subject then to the right of the trustee to avoid it as a preference, an honest disposition of his property by the bankrupt, even after proceedings have been instituted, therefore stands.

Property in oustodia legis. — It seems to be generally conceded that from the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy the estate of the alleged bankrupt is in custodia legis. Chicago State Bank v. Cox. (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 143 "ed. 91, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32; In re Laplume Condensed Milk Co., (M. D. Pa. 1906) 145 Fed. 1013, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729; In re Duncan, (D. C. On the filing of a petition in bankruptcy all property held by or for the bankrupt is brought within the custody of the court of bankruptcy, and upon adjudication that court is vested with jurisdiction thereover coextensive with the United States. Effect of want of notice. — Where a bank paid checks drawn by a depositor, in ignorance of the filing late the day before of an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the depositor, and the receiver, who qualified on the day of the payment of the checks, made no demand for the depositor's funds until after the checks were honored, it was held that the trustee, subsequently elected, could not recover from the bank the amount paid on the checks. In re Zotti, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 84, wherein it was said that the rule that the filing of a petition is a caveat to all the world cannot be applied to a bank which has honestly paid checks of a depositor without notice that any petition in bankruptcy has been filed against him and who may never be adjudicated a bankrupt at all. On the other hand, it would apply if the bank had refused to pay moneys which it had received prior to the filing of the petition and still had, or moneys which it had colhusively transferred.

Effect of adjudication. — It has been frequently decided that the title to the bankrupt's property formally passes to his trus-tee by operation of law as of the date of the adjudication. Metcalf v. A trustee is vested with title to the bank-rupt's property as of the date of the adjudi-cation; such title relates back to the commencement of the proceedings, and as between courts of different districts, in each of which a petition has been filed, and either of which would have jurisdiction, priority of juris-diction is determined by the date of the filing of the petitions, and not by the date of adjudication. In re Elmira Steel Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1901) 109 Fed. 456, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

An adjudication in bankruptcy operates in rem, and from the time it is entered the bankrupt's property is in the custody of the court. In re Hughes, (D. C. N. J. 1909) 170 Fed. 809, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 303.

An adjudication in bankruptcy operates as a seizure of the bankrupt's property, by which it is taken in custodia legis wherever situated within the United States, and the title and right of possession pass by operation of law to the trustee, as custodian for the court, at once on his selection and qualification. In re Granite City Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 818, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404. And see to the same effect In re

Property acquired subsequent to adjudication. - The bankrupt's creditors have no interest in, or claim to, property acquired by the bankrupt after his adjudication; therefore, the title to such property does not vest in the trustee. Thus a liquor license, granted to a person after he has been adjudicated a bankrupt, belongs to him personally, and not to his estate in bankruptcy; and the receiver has no right to sell such a license as an asset of the bankrupt's estate. Whitlock's License, (1909) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262, 39 Pa. Super. Ct. 34.

And where a bankrupt, subsequent to the filing of an involuntary petition and an adjudication thereon, fell heir to a certain interest in an estate, it was held that he was entitled to the benefit of such bequest in full. so far as his general creditors were concerned. In re Woods, (D. C. Pa. 1904) 133 Fed. 82, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240.

The portion of the monthly salary of a public officer of a state which was earned, but not payable, at the time of his filing a petition in bankruptcy, does not pass to his trustee. In re Doherty, (D. C. Conn. 1904) 135 Fed. 432, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549.

So, also, it has been held that since, under R. S. sec. 3477, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 7 et seq., prohibiting the assignment of claims against the United States prior to allowance and ascertainment of the amount due, a bankrupt could not have assigned an expectancy of reward for information concerning smugglers prior to the allowance of the reward by the secretary of the treasury, which did not occur until after the bankruptcy adjudication, the reward subsequently awarded passed to the bankrupt, and not to his trustee for the benefit of creditors. In re Ghazal, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 809, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178.

Necessity of appointment of trustee. — It has been held that an adjudication of bankruptcy divests the owner of property of the title thereto, which thereupon becomes in oustodia legis, and on the appointment of a trustee his title relates back to the date of the adjudication. In re Frazin, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 174 Fed. 713, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289. And see to the same effect In re Letson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 78, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; In re Lineberry, (N. D. supra, this subdivision, p. 813 et seq.

On the other hand it has also been held that the appointment of a trustee is essential to divest the bankrupt of the title to his property. Rand v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., (1906) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692, 186 N. Y. 58, 9 Ann. Cas. 542, 78 N. E. 574, reversing (1904) 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162; Gordon v. Mechanics', etc., Ins. Co., (1907) 120 La. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 886, 45 So. 384.

And it is certain that, until a trustee has been appointed, there is no legal representative of the bankrupt's estate clothed with title or authority regarding it. In re Rubel, (E. D. Wis. 1908) 166 Fed. 131, 21 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 566.

But in this connection it must be borne in mind that, the property being in custodia legis, it is under the authority of the bank-ruptcy court; and that a receiver or the marshal may, under sections 2 (3), 3e, and 69, be appointed to take possession of it when the facts warrant such action. See the annotation under the sections referred to, supra, pp. 472, 494, 803, and see also the preceding paragraphs of this subdivision.

It is true that, technically, the title to his property remains in the bankrupt until the trustee has been appointed and qualified. But during the period between the filing of the petition and the qualifying of the trustee, the bankrupt's title is that of a trustee, he occupying a sort of fiduciary relation to his creditors. No title can be acquired to the property through any act of his, or by operation of law, during that period. Matter of Fletcher, (N. D. Ohio 1906) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 491. And see the cases cited throughout this subdivision to the same effect.

See also Rand v. Sage, (1905) 94 Minn. 344, 102 N. W. 864, wherein the court said: "While the full legal title and control of the property does not pass to the trustee until one is appointed and qualified, yet if the creditors do not, for any reason, act within the time limited, the power is expressly conferred upon the court to appoint such trustee, and, if necessary, in the meantime, to take possession of the property and exercise dominion and control over it for the benefit of the creditors through the medium of a receiver specially appointed, or the marshal of the court. These powers would not have been granted if it had been the intention to deprive the court of dominion over or jurisdiction of the estate pending the time a trustee might be ap-pointed. Title remaining in the bankrupt is inconsistent with control of the estate by the court. There must be either one thing or the other. The bankrupt retains title to his property, with power to exercise dominion over it, to transfer and encumber it, or the title passes conditionally to the court for the bene-At of the creditors until a trustee is appointed or the estate is closed. The latter is the only rational view consistent with the provisions of the Act."

III. BURDENSOME PROPERTY.

Acceptance optional with trustee—Generally.—It is always optional with the bankrupt's trustee whether he will accept, or refuse to accept, such assets as are of an onerous and unprofitable character. In re Slingluff, (D. C. Md. 1900) 106 Fed. 154, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76; Gordon v. Mechanics', etc., Ins. Co., (1907) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649, 120 La. 441, 45 So. 384.

Thus the trustee in bankruptcy has the option to assume or renounce leases and other executory contracts of the bankrupt, as he may deem for the best interest of the estate. Watson v. Merrill, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 359, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454.

If the trustee is confronted with the alternative of an immediate ejection from the premises, with the consequent depreciation of the personal estate, or the assumption of an undesirable lease and the payment of a large sum for unsecured rent, whereby an unsecured creditor will secure a preference, a court of equity should relieve him from the coercion of the situation. If time is essential for an equitable adjustment of the various rights, the court may impose such delay as is reasonably necessary upon the enforcement of any particular right, making pecuniary compensation therefor whenever that is adequate. In re Chambers, (D. C. R. I. 1900) 98 Fed. 865, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537.

A trustee in bankruptcy is not bound to take property which may involve him in litigation. Oldmixon v. Severance. (1907) 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 823, 117 App. Div. 921, 102

N. Y. S. 1144.

Nor is the trustee obliged to accept title to the property surrendered by the bankrupt, if to do so would not benefit the creditors, or would prejudice them. Gordon v. Mechanics', etc., Ins. Co., (1907) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649, 120 La. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 886, 45 So. 384

Where it is doubtful whether a proceeding to set aside a voidable transfer of property would result in any benefit to the estate, such transfer will not be set aside at the instance of creditors, except upon their giving bond to indemnify the trustee for any loss which the estate may suffer. In re Finlay, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 675, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745.

The trustee may, at the request of the creditors and with the sanction of the court, execute a quitclaim deed for property in which the bankrupt has an equitable interest, and which is deemed to be unprofitable. Kenyon v. Mulert, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 825.

Encumbered property. — A trustee in bank-ruptcy is not required to take charge of, or sell, any portion of the estate so heavily encumbered with valid liens that nothing can be realized therefrom for the unsecured creditors. In re Cogley, (N. D. Ia. 1901) 107 Fed. 73, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 731.

The trustee has the election to refuse to take possession of mortgaged property, if its value, over and above the incumbrance, is not sufficient to justify an attempt to administer it. In re Jersey Island Packing Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 625, 14 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 692.

Where it appears that the entire assets of a bankrupt corporation consist of a manufacturing plant encumbered by a mortgage for more than its value; that the trustee, after diligent effort, has been unable to sell the same, either at public or private sale, for any sum near its value; and that the property is a source of expense, the court of bankruptcy should permit it to be turned over to the mortgage, subject to the right of the trustee of general creditors to contest the validity of the mortgage, if desired, in any court having jurisdiction. Equitable Loan, etc., Co. v. Moss, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 609, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111.

When trustee must act.—A bankrupt's

When trustee must act.—A bankrupt's trustee has a reasonable time after his appointment to determine whether he will on the accept such assets as appear to him to be unprofitable. In re Rubel, (E. D. Wis. 1908) 166 Fed. 131, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566.

It is the duty of the trustee to elect whether he will assume an existing executory contract and continue its performance and ultimately dispose of it for the benefit of the estate, or renounce it, and leave the injured party to such legal remedies for the breach as the case affords. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Hurley, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 503, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396.

Where property is encumbered the trustee should act promptly in the premises, and if he concludes not to redeem the property, he should at once notify the bankrupt of such conclusion, in order that the latter may redeem it if he wishes to do so. In re Novak, (N. D. Ia. 1901) 111 Fed. 161, 7 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 27.

But the rule that where the trustee declines to take the property the bankrupt can assert title thereto has no application when the trustee is ignorant of the existence of the property and has had no opportunity to make an election. Jacksboro First Nat. Bank v. Lasster, (1905) 196 U. S. 115, 25 S. Ct. 206, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 408, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698.

IV. EXEMPT PROPERTY.

Title remains in bankrupt.— The title to exempt property, under the express provisions of the Bankruptcy Law (secs. 70a and 6) remains in the bankrupt, and does not vest in his trustee. Lockwood r. Exchange Bank. (1903) 190 U. S. 294, 23 S. Ct. 751, 47 (U. S. (L. ed.) 1061; In re Russie, (D. C. Ore. 1899) 96 Fed. 609, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 6; In re Marquette, (D. C. Vt. 1900) 103 Fed. 777, 4 Am. Section 6 must be construed with section

Section 6 must be construed with section 70a, in so far as exempt property is concerned, so that both provisions may be given effect. Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, (1903) 190 U. S. 294, 23 S. Ct. 751, 47 U. S. (L. ed.)

1061, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107.

The purpose of the Bankruptcy Act is to give creditors only such rights as would have been theirs if bankruptcy had not supervened, and to save to the bankrupt and his family every right and exemption which would have been theirs as against creditors enforcing their claims by ordinary judicial process. In re Cohn, (D. C. N. D. 1909) 171 Fed. 568, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761.

On the death of a debtor, property which would have been set apart to him under his exemption, had he lived, remains a part of his estate, and goes to his administrator. In re Seabolt, (W. D. N. C. 1902) 113 Fed.

766, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 60.

Even though exempt property may be temporarily in the possession of the trustee, he has no title or beneficial interest therein, and the possession, in effect, remains in the bankrupt, within the meaning of the state statute, and the trustee will be directed to surrender it to the bankrupt. In re Durham, (E. D. Ark. 1900) 104 Fed. 231, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760.

Notes taken for rental of exempt property.

Notes taken by a bankrupt after adjudication, for the future rental of land which is exempt, do not constitute assets of his estate in bankruptcy. In re Oleson, (N. D. Ia. 1901) 110 Fed. 796, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

Waiver of exemption.—The fact that a bankrupt has given notes in which he waived his right to exemptions does not give the bankruptcy court jurisdiction to administer his exempt property, nor affect his right to have the same set apart to him. Goodman v. Curtis, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 644, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504.

Homesteads — Generally. — Since homestead property does not pass to a bankrupt's trustee, the fact that it was mortgaged to certain creditors does not make it assets to be administered in bankruptcy. In re Bailey, (D. C. Utah 1910) 176 Fed. 990, 24 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 201.

The homestead of a bankrupt, exempt from his general debts under the laws of the state, does not pass to his trustee, and the court of bankruptcy is without power to order its sale because a particular creditor may have the right, under such laws, to subject it to the payment of his debt. Ingram v. Wilson, (C. C. A. Sth Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 913, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192.

In the absence of a local rule to the contrary, the mere use by an insolvent of non-exempt funds or assets in acquiring a homestead does not make it subject to the claims of his creditors in bankruptcy. In re Letson,

(C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1997) 157 Fed. 78, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506.

Land acquired by the bankrupt under the United States homestead law cannot be subjected, in the bankruptcy proceedings, to the payment of any debt contracted by him be-fore the issuance of the patent for such land, it being exempt as to all such debts by the terms of the Homestead Act. In re Daubner, (D. C. Ore. 1899) 96 Fed. 805, 3 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 368.

Interest in homestead passing to trustee. -The interest or title of the bankrupt in the land allotted as a homestead exemption, after the termination of the time for which such property is exempted from sale, is property; hence it is the duty of the trustee to reduce to money, by sale, such property or title or reversion, and apply the proceeds to the pay-ment of debts proved according to law. In re-Woodard, (E. D. N. C. 1899) 95 Fed. 260, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 339.

The rule that the title to exempt property does not pass to the trustee has reference to an exemption covering all the property of the bankrupt, and is not applicable to an exemption of a homestead or real estate of a specified value, less than the actual value, where the trustee is directed by the statute to determine the claim of the bankrupt to the exemption and report its estimated value to the court so that any excess value may be preserved for the benefit of creditors. In re Forbes, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 79. But see In re Manning, (D. C. S. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 180, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498, wherein it was said that it is the intent of the homestead laws that a homestead in real estate in kind shall be set aside whenever practicable, and a bankrupt is entitled to retain the land assigned as his homestead, although valued in excess of the limit of exemption, on payment of the excess.

Life insurance pelicies. - Life insurance policies which are exempt under the law of the state must be so considered under the bankruptcy law, and therefore do not pass to the trustee. Holden v. Stratton, (1905) 198 U. S. 202, 25 S. Ct. 656, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1078, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94, reversing (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 141, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615; Hiscock v. Mertens, (1907) 205 U. S. 202, 27 S. Ct. 488, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 771, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484; Steele v. Buel, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 968, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165, reversing (S. D. Ia. 1899) 98 Fed. 78, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549. And see infra, p. 835, under the proviso to section 70a (5) Policy of Insurance.

Lands allotted to an Indian, within the Umatilla reservation, under the Act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. L. 340), is incapable of being alienated, encumbered, or sold on execution; and, therefore, such land remains exempt to the allottee and cannot pass to his trustee in bankruptey. In re Russie, (D. C. Ore. 1899) 96 Fed. 609, 3 Am. Bankt. Rep. 6.

V. RECLAMATION PROCEEDINGS.

Right to reclaim. - Whenever the trustee in bankruptcy obtains possession of the property of persons other than the bankrupt, the owner of such property has the undoubted right to recover it from the trustee in some appropriate proceeding. Claim allowed from proceeds of sale. -And if the property claimed has been sold by the trustee, and the claimant proves his right thereto, the claim will be allowed out of the proceeds of such sale. In re Randolph, (N. D. W. Va. 1911) 187 Fed. 186.

Property taken by receiver under erroneous order. — Where property of a defendant is taken from his possession by a receiver against his consent, under an erroneous order, which he successfully resists in an appellate court, he is entitled to the return of such property without charge of any kind against it or against him by reason of the proceedings. Beach v. Macon Grocery Co., (5th Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 513, 60 C. C. A. 557, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 104.

A trustee in bankruptoy has no equities greater than those of the bankrupt; and he will be ordered to do full justice, even in some cases where the circumstances would give rise to no legal right, and perhaps not even to a right which could be enforced in a court of equity as against an ordinary litigant. Indeed, bankruptcy proceeds on equitable principles so broad that it will order a repayment when such principles require it. notwithstanding the court or the trustee may have received the fund without such compulsion or protest as is ordinarily required for recovery in the courts either of common law or chancery. In re Chase, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 753, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677.

In In re MacDonald, (D. C. Conn. 1905) 138 Fed. 463, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 797, it appears that the bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy was conducting a shipyard, and had contracted with the several petitioners to build vessels for them, the contracts provid-ing for the making of partial payments by them at certain stages in the progress of the work, and that title should vest as each payment was made. At the time of the bank-ruptcy one of said vessels had been practi-cally completed, so far as the work of the bankrupt was concerned, the payments had been made, and it had been launched and delivered to the petitioner for whom it was built, who was to complete it himself. The others remained in the yard in various stages of construction, but the required payments had been made, and exceeded the value of the structures. None of such vessels were scheduled by the bankrupt, but all were taken possession of by the trustee, who declined to complete the contracts. It was held that the title to such vessels, so far as completed, was in the several petitioners, who were entitled to their possession.

Question of fact. — The question of title is, under conflicting evidence, one of fact. In re U. S. Restaurant, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 187 Fed. 118; In re Donnelly, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 187 Fed. 121.

The burden of proof rests on the claimant. In re Hurlbutt, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 958, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 198; In re Kessler, (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 165 Fed. 508, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 583; In re Sweeney, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 612, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 866; In re Burke, (S. D. Ga. 1909) 168 Fed. 994, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69; In re J. M. Acheson Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 427, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338; Ellet-Kendall Shoe Co. v. Ward, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1911) 187 Fed. 982; Matter of Mundle, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 490.

In In re Mayer, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 156 Fed. 432, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480, a claim to property which was in the possession of a bankrupt at the time of the filing of the petition was held not to have been sufficiently established by the unsupported testimony of the claimant, where; if it had been true, he could have produced other evidence in corroboration thereof.

Reclamation precluded by act of claimant - Filing claim. — A claimant who deposited money with a banking firm four days before it was adjudged a bankrupt on a voluntary petition, receiving a certificate of deposit therefor, on learning of the insolvency of the bank when it received his deposit, was bound to elect promptly whether to rescind the contract for the alleged fraud or to affirm it, and the fact that he filed a claim against the estate was held to constitute an irrevocable election, by which he was precluded from also claiming a rescission. In re Kenyon, (S. D. Ohio 1907) 156 Fed. 863, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 195. So also it has been held that creditors of a bankrupt, by filing their claims for the price of goods alleged to have been wrongfully transferred by the bankrupt to defendant corporation, waived their right to dispute the passing of the title in the goods to the bank-rupt prior to bankruptey. Lynch v. Bronson, (D. C. Conn. 1908) 160 Fed. 139, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409.

And where a firm of brokers, prior to their bankruptcy, without authority, pledged stocks of customers in their hands to secure loans to themselves, the action of such a customer in proving his claim against the estate for the value of his stock, without reservation, with full knowledge of the facts, was held to con-stitute an election of remedies, which prevented him from reclaiming such stock on its subsequent return to the trustee. In re Berry, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 409, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27.

Claimant bound by election made prior to bankruptcy. - Where a corporation provided a bond issue with which to take up preferred stock, and a holder of such stock, on being tendered bonds in the place thereof, refused the tender and demanded money, to which he was entitled under the retirement proceedings, after which the bonds so tendered were kept in the corporation safe in an envelope, with the stockholder's name indorsed thereon, for more than a year, until the corporation became bankrupt, it was held that the stock-holder was bound by his election, and that he could not then demand the bonds from the trustee in exchange for his stock. Reading Hosiery Co., (E. D. Pa. 1909) 171 Fed. 195, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 562.

In In re Esmark, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 188 Fed. 687, it appears that a claimant, having received the bankrupt's judgment notes for money advanced, afterwards distrained for rent due him as landlord from the bankrupts, and levied on certain property as belonging to them; and it was held that he could not in bankruptcy thereafter claim title to such property as having been purchased by the bankrupts with claimant's funds, under an agreement that he should hold the title until the money was repaid, In re Esmark, (E. D. Pa. 1911) 188 Fed. 687.

Jurisdiction.—When a court of bankruptcy having jurisdiction in the premises, through its receiver or a trustee in bankruptcy, has taken actual possession of property scheduled by the bankrupt as assets of his estate, and holds the same for administration in bank-ruptcy, it is not competent for a stranger claiming to be the owner of such property to maintain a suit in a state court against the trustee for the purpose of establishing his title and restraining the officer from selling the property. His remedy is by petition in the court of bankruptcy. Keegan v. King, (D. C. Ind. 1899) 96 Fed. 758, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79.

So, also, it has been held that a person claiming to be the owner of property in possession of the bankrupt, and which has passed into the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy, will not be allowed to prosecute re-plevin in a state court without the consent of the court of bankruptcy. In re Russell, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 248, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658, wherein it was said that the claimant might have brought an action in the state court against the trustee for the recovery of the value of the property, but that replevin could not be maintained because it was an interference with the possession of the court of bankruptcy.

Where the seller of goods, which had been delivered to the buyers prior to the institu-tion of bankruptcy proceedings against them, rescinded the sale for fraud after such proceedings were commenced, and applied to the court in which the proceedings were pending for leave to commence a replevin action for the goods in the state court against the receiver in bankruptcy, and after such petition was denied applied for an order directing the receiver to set aside and hold the goods in question for petitioners, which was also denied, it was held that such seller thereby became a party to the bankruptcy proceed-ings, and was bound to prosecute its claim to the goods in the court where such proceedings were pending. In re Mertens, (N. D. N. Y. 1904) 131 Fed. 507, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698.

Practice — Reference to master. — Where petitions for the reclamation of property from a trustee are presented to a court of bank-ruptcy, it is the prevailing practice to refer the same to a special master, instead of to the referee in bankruptcy; and such practice should not be changed, except by a general order of the Supreme Court which would be uniform in its operations. In re Tracy, (C.

C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 366.

A referee in bankruptcy has authority to entertain and consider the claim of an intervening petitioner to property or its proceeds in the hands of a trustee, alleged to be the property of the petitioner, and not of the estate in bankruptcy. In re Drayton, (E. D. Wis. 1904) 135 Fed. 883, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Trial by jury. — But a bona fide claimant has the right to a trial by jury in the federal court; and he cannot be compelled to submit the final determination of his claim to adjudication in a summary proceeding, on petition, rule to show cause, and reference of the case to the master or referee in bankruptcy. Is re Russell, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 248, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658. And see also the annotation under section 23b, supra, p. 595.

Creditors have a right to be heard as to ownership of any property which was in the possession of the debtor at the time of the institution of bankruptcy proceedings. In Potteiger, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 181 Fed. 640.

Forms in reclamation proceedings are given in (1902) 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 763. Stoppage in transitu.— Where goods, previously ordered, were shipped to a bankrupt after his bankruptcy and delivered to his receiver, who paid the freight and took possession of them, it was held that it was then too late for the seller to lay a foundation for reclaiming them from the trustee by an attempted exercise of the right of stoppage in transitu. In re Allen, (M. D. Pa. 1910) 178 Fed. 879.

Conflict of law. — Where the trustee in bankruptcy and a transferee of the bankrupt both claim certain property which once belonged to the bankrupt, it may be difficult to decide how far the title to the property in question depends upon the state law which determines the effect of the bankrupt's conveyance, and how far upon the Bankrupter Act which declares what property the trustee shall take. The one law regulates the passage of title from the bankrupt, and is interpreted by the state court. The other law regulates its passage to the trustee, and is interpreted by the federal court. In re Loveland, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1907) 155 Fed. 838, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18.

(1) [Documents.] documents relating to his property; [(1898) 30 Stat. *L. 565.*1

All documents included. — By section 70a (1) of the Bankruptcy Act the trustee takes, by operation of law, the bankrupt's title to all documents relating to his property. In re Madden, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1901) 110 Fed.

348, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 614.

Section 1a (13), given supra, p. 465, defines a "document" to include any book, deed, or instrument in writing, and includes deeds, all other muniments of title, contracts, securities, bills receivable, notes, bankbooks, bills of exchange, account books, and all papers and books relating to the business of the bankrupt. These books and papers which come within the designation of documents are regarded by the Bankruptcy Act as personal property, the title to which, by operation of law, is vested in the trustee. They are valuable not so much as an asset that can be converted for the purpose of meeting the demands of creditors, as they are for their importance as evidence by which assets can be discovered by the trustee. In re Hess, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 134 Fed. 109, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559.

Where a bankrupt pleads his constitutional privilege against a production of books of accounts, alleged to contain incriminating evidence, he should be required to bring such books and papers either before the court or the referee in bankruptcy for the determination of the question whether the plea is well founded in fact, and for the making of an or der for the protection of the bankrupt from the discovery of such evidence, and, if possible, to enable the trustee to obtain other necessary information from such books. Compare In re McDonnell, (N. D. Ia. 1900) 101 Fed. 239, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92, wherein it was held that the statute does not declare that the bankrupt's interest in patentable inventions, or in pending applications for patents, shall be vested in the trustee, but only his interest in patents and patent rights; and that the words "patent rights" were intended to include rights acquired under a patent to a third party, such as a license or manufacturing right, and the word "patents" to include cases wherein the title in the letters patent, in whole or in part, is vested in the bankrupt, either by the issuance of the letters in his name or by proper assignment in writing from the patentee. And see to the same effect, In re Dann, (N. D. Ill. 1904) 129 Fed. 495, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27, emplaining Fisher v. Cushman, (1st Cir. 1900) 103 Fed. 860, 43 C. C. A. 381, 51 L. R. A. 292.

Rep. 351. Bona fide transactions are, of course, unaffected. Thus in Lovell v. Newman, (E. D. La. 1911) 188 Fed. 534, it appears that the bankrupts, having sold a quantity of cotton through their broker to various Italian spinners, forged certain bills of lading purporting to show shipment of the entire quantity to be carried to New Orleans and thence to Genoa by the line specified in the contract, consigned to the shippers' order, with instructions to notify the broker. They then drew drafts for the value of the cotton at the price for which it had been sold, and annexed the fraudulent bills of lading, together with the insurance certificates and invoices, the whole apparently in strict conformity to the contract, discounted the drafts, and received the money. The spinners ultimately paid the drafts. More than two months after the time the cotton should have been delivered under the contract, the bankrupts did ship an identical quantity of cotton, consigned according to the forged bills, and after obtaining bills of lading for this cotton held the same in their hands, but before the cotton had cleared the port, bankruptcy intervened, and a quantity of it was claimed by the receivers from the steamship on which it had been placed. It was held that the contracts of sale being valid, they were fulfilled and became executed when the cotton was actually delivered to the carriers, the stipulations as to time of delivery, and time and manner of payment, being incidental merely, and that the bankrupts and their trustee were estopped to deny that the cotton shipped belonged to the buyers.

A transfer between husband and wife, as a gift, and good under the law of the state, is also valid in bankruptcy, in the absence of an actual intention to defraud. Tucker v. Curtin, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 929, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 354, reversing (D. C. Mass. 1904) 131 Fed. 647, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

I. IN GENERAL.

Transferable and leviable property passes to trustee. — Subdivision (5), set out above, is clearly the most comprehensive clause of section 70a; and the decisions thereunder are unanimous to the effect that this clause means precisely what its language imports, namely, that the trustee in bankruptcy is vested, by operation of law, with the title of the bankrupt to all property which, prior to the filing of the petition, the bankrupt could by any means have transferred, or which might have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against such bankrupt. The maxim "expressio unius est exclusion alterius" does not apply; and the trustee's right to any particular asset will not be denied merely because it does not fall literally within the statute. In re Baudouine, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 96 Fed. 536, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

Thus it has been held that clause (5), in connection with the other subdivisions of section 70a, embraces every species of property, and interests in property, of which one can be invested with ownership. In re Barrow, (W. D. Va. 1899) 98 Fed. 582, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

But the word "property" is not to be construed in any loose, popular sense, but with regard to the limitations which the law attaches to it. Fisher v. Cushman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 103 Fed. 860, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654.

Decree of state court available to trustee.

— The trustee is entitled to avail himself, in like manner as any judgment creditor, of a decree of a state court declaring certain transfers and conveyances of the debtor to have been fraudulent and void; and he may elaim the property affected by such fraud as assets of the estate in bankruptcy, subject to any

I. IN GENERAL.

Transferable and leviable property passes to trustee. — Subdivision (5), set out above, is clearly the most comprehensive clause of section 70c; and the decisions thereunder are unanimous to the effect that this clause means precisely what its language imports, namely, that the trustee in bankruptcy is vested, by operation of law, with the title of the bankrupt to all property which, prior to the filing of the petition, the bankrupt could by any means have transferred, or which might have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against such bankrupt. Knapp c. Milwaukee Trust Co., (1910) 216 U. S. 545, 30 S. Ct. 412; In re Baudouine, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 96 Fed. 536, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55; In re Barrow, (W. D. Va. 1899) 98 Fed. 582, 3 Am. Bankr. The maxim "expressio unius est exclusio alterius" does not apply; and the trustee's right to any particular asset will not be denied merely because it does not fall literally within the statute. In re Baudouine, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 96 Fed. 536, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

Thus it has been held that clause (5), in connection with the other subdivisions of section 70s, embraces every species of property, and interests in property, of which one can be invested with ownership. In re Barrow, (W. D. Va. 1899) 98 Fed. 582, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

But the word "property" is not to be construed in any loose, popular sense, but with regard to the limitations which the law attaches to it. Fisher v. Cushman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 103 Fed. 860, 4 Am. Bankr. Ren. 654.

Rep. 654.

The interest of a bankrupt in a stock pool to advance the market in a certain stock and then sell to the public, constitutes "property" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act.

In re Lathrop, (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 184 Fed. 534.

Local law governs. — Whether property is subject to seizure and sale under execution must, generally, be determined by the local law. In re Shenberger, (N. D. Ohio 1900) 102 Fed. 978, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487; Fisher v. Cushman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 103 Fed. 860, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654; In re Butterwick, (W. D. Pa. 1904) 131 Fed. 371, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 636.

Condition of property immaterial.—Section 70s (5) is concerned only with furnishing a definition and prescribing a test to determine what property shall pass by operation of law from the bankrupt to his trustee, so as to become a part of the estate for administration and distribution among the creditors. Its purpose is to distinguish between what passes and what does not pass, as regards specific property and property rights, without regard to the condition of the property, whether in possession or in action. With reference to its condition, the property might be found in adverse possession of a third person, or to have been fraudulently transferred, or under an invalid pledge or lien, in all of which cases suit by the trustee would or might become necessary in order to bring in the property or its proceeds; but these several conditions are provided for in other sections of the act. Bush v. Export Storage Co., (E. D. Tenn. 1904) 136 Fed. 918, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 138.

Transfers and incumbrances ineffective as to creditors. — Where, under the state laws, a transfer or incumbrance of property is void or voidable as to creditors, for want of record or otherwise, so as to be subject to execution, the property passes to the trustee in bankruptcy under section 70s (5). Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., (1910) 216 U. S. 545, 30 S. Ct. 412; Chesapeake Shoe Co. v. Seldner, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 593, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 466; In re Tweed, (N. D. Is. 1904) 131 Fed. 355, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648; Foerstner v. Citizens' Sav., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 1.

Defeasible or contingent interest.—The marketability and assignability of property are quite distinct, and the fact that an interest in property is defeasible or contingent does not prevent it from being transferable within the meaning of the bankruptcy law. In re Wright, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 544, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454, reversing (W. D. N. Y. 1907) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 778.

The fact that transferability depends on the consent of a stranger does not defeat the claim of creditors in bankruptcy to realize what can be obtained on a transfer if made. Fisher v. Cushman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 103 Fed. 860. 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654.

Nontransferable property does not pass.—
It was clearly the intention of Congress that property should not pass to the trustee which could not be the subject of conveyance or disposition by the bankrupt at the time the bankruptcy proceedings were inaugurated. Hesseltine v. Prince, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 95 Fed. 802, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600; In re Russie, (D. C. Ore. 1899) 96 Fed. 609, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 6; In re Burka, (E. D. Mo. 1900) 104 Fed. 326, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12.

Thus the interest of a legatee under a will which provided that "no income or principal shall in any case be assignable, or alienable by anticipation, or subject to attachment, levy, or seizure by any creditor of the beneficiary, prior to his or her actual receipt thereof," does not pass to the legatee's trustee in bankruptcy. Munroe v. Dewey, (Mass. 1900) 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 264.

1900) 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 264.

A claim of a wife for alimony is not a property right, and property awarded to her as alimony after her bankruptcy does not become a part of her estate in bankruptcy. In re Le Claire, (N. D. Ia. 1903) 124 Fed. 654, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733.

A bankrupt's right to earn wages in the future, and dispose of the fruits of his labor, is not "property" as that term is used in section 70s (5). In re Home Discount Co., (N. D. Ala. 1906) 147 Fed. 538, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168.

II. INTERESTS IN REAL PROPERTY, ETC.

Generally. — It is well settled that the trustee in bankruptcy is, on his appointment, vested, by operation of law, with all the right, title, and interest to real property which, prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the bankrupt might have transferred, or which might have been sold under judicial process issued against him. In re Woodard, (E. D. N. C. 1899) 95 Fed. 260, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 339; In re St. John, (N. D. N. Y. 1900) 105 Fed. 234, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190; In re Twaddell, (D. C. Del. 1901) 110 Fed. 145, 6 Am. And it has also been held that the interest

And it has also been held that the interest of a bankrupt in his father's estate, vested prior to bankruptcy, goes to the trustee, even though such interest has not been determined. In re Mosier, (D. C. Vt. 1901) 112 Fed. 138, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268.

Life interest.—So, also, a bankrupt's life

Life interest. — So, also, a bankrupt's life interest in real property becomes a part of his estate on his adjudication. In re Force, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114.

Interest under contract.—The trustee is also entitled to any interest which the bank-rupt may have under a contract for the sale of land. In re Clark, (M. D. Pa. 1902) 118 Fed. 358, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252.

Landlord's interests. — Upon his adjudication as a bankrupt the interests of a landlord, as such, pass to his trustee. In re Hays, etc., Co., (W. D. Ky. 1902) 117 Fed. 879, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 144.

Rents accruing after adjudication for mortgaged property of the bankrupt which comes into the possession of the trustee, and before the mortgagee has taken such action as to entitle him to possession of the property, belong to the estate. Tenant's interest in leasehold.—When a tenant has been declared bankrupt, his trustee, on his appointment, is vested with title to the leasehold subject to his acceptance thereof within a reasonable time. In re Frazin, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 174 Fed. 713, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289.

The tenant's trustee is not obliged to accept the lease, and if there be no acceptance the title thereto never passes; therefore the property which may be said to pass immediately to the trustee is not the lease itself, but the option of accepting it. (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 28.

Term not affected. — Bankruptcy does not, of itself, terminate the lease. Watson c. Merrill, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 359, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454. And see the annotation infra, p. 833, IX. Contractual Interests and Obligations.

And a lessee's covenant not to assign, mortgage, or pledge the lesse, or underlet the property, without the lessor's consent, is not violated by the lessee's bankruptcy. In re Frazin, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 174 Fed. 713, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289.

And where an involuntary bankrupt is tenant under a lease containing a covenant against assignment, an adjudication in bankruptcy is not a breach, and the lease passes to the trustee. In re Bush, (D. C. R. I. 1904) 126 Fed. 878, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 415.

When the trustee accepts a lease, or a contract for a lease, made by the bankrupt, he must assume every obligation and be bound by all the conditions that the contract imposes upon the bankrupt. In re Beachy, (E. D. Wis. 1909) 170 Fed. 825, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 538.

In the event of an acceptance, the vesting of the trustee's title relates back to the time of the adjudication. In re Frazin, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 28.

And where, after the sale of a bankrupt's assets located on leased premises was confirmed, the trustee abandoned possession to the purchaser, and the landlord might have entered on that day, it was held that the trustee was not chargeable with the purchaser's occupation thereafter. In re Rubel, (E. D. Wis. 1908) 166 Fed. 131, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566.

If the trustee refuses to accept the lease the bankrupt retains the term on precisely the same footing as before, with the right to occupy, and the obligation to pay rent. In re Ella, (D. C. Mass. 1900) 98 Fed. 967; In re Frazin, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 28.

Trustee not trespasser. — Where a bank-rupt's receiver and trustee entered under the bankrupt's lease, it was held that they were not trespassers, and could not be made so by a state statute. In re Rubel, (E. D. Wis. 1908) 166 Fed. 131, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566.

Right of trustee as against subsequent lessee. — Where, prior to the bankruptcy of a tenant, the landlord took no steps to regain possession of the premises for rent in arrear, on the appointment of the tenant's trustee it was held that the latter was entitled to possession under the tenant's lease, as against lessees of the landlord subsequent to the adjudication. In re Adams, (D. C. Conn. 1905) 134 Fed. 142, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 23.

Waiver of re-entry provisions. — The acceptance of rent from the trustee constitutes a waiver of provisions authorizing re-entry in such case the trustee may sell the lease and convey title to the purchaser, without being subject to re-entry on the part of the landlord, so long as the purchaser complies with the other provisions of the lease. In refrazin, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 174 Fed. 713, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289.

Lease terminated by dispossession. — Where a lease on the premises occupied by a bankrupt was terminated by a warrant of dispossession issued at least four days before a receiver in bankruptcy was appointed, and after the receiver took possession he appeared and announced in open court that he had finished the business and disposed of the bankrupt's assets contained in the premises, and made no objection to the dissolution of an injunction restraining the landlord from interfering with his possession, it was held that the bankrupt had no lease which could be an asset of his estate in bankruptcy, nor had the receiver either wrongfully parted with or been deprived of the premises by force of the warrant to dispossess; and hence the federal court had no jurisdiction of an action by a trustee to establish the lease as an asset of the estate. Plaut v. Gorham Mfg. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 174 Fed. 852, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42.

Forfeiture enforced. — Where, prior to his having been adjudged a bankrupt, a tenant was notified of the forfeiture of his lease in accordance with the terms thereof, it was held that, on petition of the lessor, the court of bankruptcy properly decreed the enforcement of the forfeiture, and directed the trustee to surrender possession of the property as the only effective remedy for the protection of the rights of the lessor. The trustee of a bankrupt whose property has been seized under a mortgage and is in possession of a receiver appointed in a fore-closure suit by a state court of competent jurisdiction is entitled to the possession of the property not covered by the mortgage, and to the excess of the proceeds of a sale of the mortgaged property over the mortgage debt and costs of foreclosure. Carling c. Seymour Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 483, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29.

And where a corporation executed trust deeds for all of its property to secure debts not then due, such deeds not being absolute conveyances, it was held that the grantor retained an interest in the property conveyed, which passed to its trustee in bankruptcy for the benefit of unsecured creditors. In reJersey Island Packing Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 625, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

Where a bankrupt holds the legal title to mortgaged property when the adjudication is made, it will pass into the custody of the bankruptcy court, and by operation of law the title of the bankrupt will vest in the trustee as of the date of such adjudication. Contingent interests. — Where, under the provisions of a will, the bankrupt's interest in an estate was contingent as to whether he should ever take, and not as to the time when he or his heirs should surely take, it was held that he had no vested interest which could pass to his trustee in bankruptcy. Dower and curtesy rights. — Where, under the state law, a husband's interest in the real estate of his wife is not property which he could convey or assign, it will not pass to his trustee in bankruptcy as assets of his estate. Hesseltine v. Prince, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 95 Fed. 802, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600.

See also to the same effect as to dower rights, which, it has been held, are not affected by section 70a (5), In re Hays, (C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 674. And see the annotation under section 8, supra, p. 527.

The wife of a bankrupt is not estopped to claim and recover her interest in the land, as against the general creditors of her husband, by any representations by him as to his sole ownership, made without her consent or knowledge. In re Garner, (N. D. Ga. 1901) 110 Fed. 123, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596.

Annuity in lieu of dower.—But where a widow accepts an annuity in lieu of her dower and subsequently becomes a bankrupt, it has been held that such annuity passes to a trustee in bankruptcy, being a right which could have been assigned by her, or seized by her creditors. In re Burtis, (E. D. N. Y.

1911) 188 Fed. 527.

Community property.—By the civil law which is in force in New Mexico, except as changed by statute, community property acquired by either husband or wife during the marriage, whether by purchase or their individual or joint labor, is held by them as partners, being primarily a fund for the payment of community debts; and, therefore, on the bankruptcy of a husband having only a community estate, the claims of an antenuptial creditor must be postponed until those of community creditors are satisfied in full. Fed. 654, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733.

Interest in grewing creps. — If the bank-rupt's interest in growing crops is such that he could have transferred it before filing his petition, the title to such interest vests in the trustee as of the date of the adjudication; and the bankrupt must account for such part as he has disposed of. #### III. PLEDGES.

Property held by bankrupt pledges. — As a general rule a bona fide pledge will be recognized in bankruptcy proceedings; and where such property comes into the possession of a trustee in bankruptcy of the pledgee, the pledgor may assert his rights thereto. Is re McCord, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 820, 23 Am Bankr. Rep. 164.

Property pledged by bankrupt. — Where, prior to his adjudication, the bankrupt makes a bona fide pledge of his property, which would be effective as against his creditors, the trustee takes title to the property so pledged subject to claims of the pledgee. Van Kirk v. Vermont Slate Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1905) 140 Fed. 38, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 239; In re Mertens, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 818, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362; In re Bartlett, (M. D. An agreement of pledge, made by one who subsequently became a bankrupt, authorizing the pledgee to sell the security pledged at public or private sale, with or without notice, and to purchase the same, is valid, and a sale made in accordance therewith at public auction, but without notice, and a purchase thereat by the pledgee, cannot be impeached by the trustee in bankruptcy of the pledgor, unless fraud or bad faith is affirmatively shown. In re Mertens, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 818, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362.

Where certain warehouse receipts were pledged to a bank, by a corporation while insolvent, to secure a certain note then executed and any liability thereafter contracted, and there was no evidence to impugn the good faith of the bank, it was held that the bank was entitled to maintain its right to the property so pledged not only for the payment of such note, but for other notes subsequently discounted, as against the corporation's trustee in bankruptcy, although the pledge was made within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. Love v. Export Storage Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 1, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

A distilling company's warehouse receipts, calling for whiskey stored in its distillary warehouse, which is in practical effect, under the internal revenue laws, in the custody of the United States, and incapable of delivery by the distiller without payment of the tax, represent the property itself, and their transfer to a purchaser or pledgee in good faith, together with the gauger's certificates, in accordance with the usages of the business, under the law of Pennsylvania operates as a delivery of the whiskey; and, if made more than four months prior to the bankruptey of the distiller, the sale or pledge is valid as against its trustee. Taney v. Penn Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 187 Fed. 689.

Pledge must be surrendered to trustee.—

It has been held that a trustee in bankruptcy is vested by law with title to all the assets of the bankrupt, including securities in the hands of a creditor as collateral; and such ereditor has no right to hold the securities until paid the amount of his debt, nor to sell or cancel them, or realize on them by the aid of a court or otherwise, independently of the bankruptcy proceedings, but he must surrender them to the trustee, who has sole au-thority to reduce them to money, and the claim of the creditor to priority of payment out of the proceeds will be adjudged and ad-ministered in the bankruptcy court, which alone has jurisdiction of the matter. In re Cobb, (E. D. N. C. 1899) 96 Fed. 821, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129.

Invalid pledge. — A transaction intended as a pledge of property, but which for want of delivery is ineffectual as such, does not create an equitable lien as against a trustee in bank-ruptcy. relation of pledgor and pledgee. — Where a broker buys stock for a customer on a margin, the title to such stock is in the customer, and not in the broker, who holds the same merely as pledgee to secure the advances made by him in the purchase. A customer is entitled to any shares purchased for his account and owned by him, so long as he thereby does not become debtor to the broker or his bankrupt estate. In re Carothers, (W. D. Pa. 1910) 182 Fed. 501.

Where a broker who was carrying stocks for a customer, which he had bought on a margin, made a general assignment, and a few days afterwards the customer wrote him asking the amount of his account, which he did not know, and stating that he would remit the amount and take up the stocks; and no action was taken by the broker or assignee on such letter, the stocks having been previously pledged by the broker and sold by the pledgee, and the broker was subsequently adjudged a bankrupt, it was held that the letter constituted a demand, the failure to comply with which was a breach of the contract, and gave the customer an immediate right of action; it being shown that he was able and willing to pay the amount due from him to the broker. In re Swift, (D. C. Mass. 1902) 114 Fed. 947, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep.

In In re Meadows, (W. D. N. Y. 1909) 173 Fed. 694, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 124, it appears that the bankrupts, who were stockbrokers in Buffalo, received orders from the petitioner to buy certain stocks, which they executed through their New York correspondents, who purchased the stocks, paid for the same, and charged the amount to the bankrupts' general account. They subsequently had the stocks transferred and certificates therefor issued in petitioner's name, but retained the same as security for the bankrupts' account. On being advised of the purchase, the petitioner paid the bankrupts for the stocks, but they did not remit the money to the New York brokers, and the stocks had not been delivered when the bankruptcy occurred. The bankrupts' indebtedness to the New York brokers was paid from the proceeds of a seat in the stock exchange, on which they had a lien under the rules of the exchange, and the stocks were delivered to the bankrupts' trustee. It was held that on the payment for the stocks the title vested in petitioner, subject, possibly, to a lien in favor of the New York brokers for the purchase price, and, such price having been paid from other property, on which they also had a lien, she was entitled to the certificates, as between her and the trustee.

Money deposited for stock. — Where a customer, on the morning of the failure of the bankrupts, paid a certain sum to them as a margin for the purchase of stock which the bankrupts thereupon ordered, but bankruptcy intervened before its delivery, it was held that the contract was avoided, and that the customer was entitled to a return of the money. In re Tracy, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 185 Fed. 844.

A deposit of securities with a stock broker by a customer as margin, and as security against losses in stock transactions, under an agreement which does not contemplate a sale or disposition of such securities by the broker except in the event of losses, consti-tutes a pledge, and does not create the rela-tion of debtor and creditor; and where the securities have not been sold by the broker to meet marginal requirements prior to his bankruptcy, they may be recovered by the pledgor from the bankrupt's trustee. In re Berry, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 176, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 467, affirmed (1908) 209

Effect of right to use stock.—Where a stock certificate is pledged to a firm of stock brokers, with the right to them to use the stock in their business, the stock remains the property of the pledgor; and where it survives the purposes for which it was pledged, and is capable of identification, it must be returned to him. In re McIntyre, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 955.

Failure of customer to assert rights.—Where stockbrokers in bankruptcy had in the possession of their New York correspondents securities belonging to customers whose rights were not asserted, or were either surrendered or lost subsequent to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, it was held that the proceeds of such securities were applicable to the claims of the general creditors, and not to the owners of other specific securities contained in such New York account. In re Carothers, (W. D. Pa. 1910) 182 Fed. 501.

Effect of conversion by broker. — Where stock brokers prior to bankruptcy had converted certain corporate stock belonging to a customer, and at the time of bankruptcy had one hundred shares of the same stock in their possession, it was held that the owners of the converted stock of that character, if more than one, were entitled to the stock on hand as tenants in common, and if only one, he was entitled to have such stock delivered to him, as against the bankrupt's general creditors. In re Brown, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 254, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659.

Where a bankrupt sold the stock of a corporation, a part of which was owned by him and a part by others, for whom he acted as agent, and received the proceeds, which fact he concealed from the other owners, who after his bankruptcy were unable to trace the money into any particular fund or property, and who filed their claims as general creditors, it was held that the bankrupt could not avoid accounting to his trustee for the proceeds of all of the stock, on the ground that a part of it did not belong to his estate. Cummings v. Synnott, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 718.

Even if a contract to purchase stock was originally invalid as a gambling transaction on margins in violation of a state law, it was held that such illegality could not be asserted by the broker's trustee in bankruptcy against a claim by the purchaser, where the contract was executed by the broker purchasing the stock, and where he disposed of it without the claimant's knowledge and consent, and misappropriated the proceeds. In report, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 276.

When a broker, prior to his bankruptcy, had pledged to a bank, as collateral to a loan, securities of others in his hands, which he had no right to hypothecate, and also others which he had authority to pledge, it was held that the owners of the first class of securities had a superior equity, and should be subrogated to the right of the bankrupt against the owners of the other class. In re Ennis, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 187 Fed. 720.

Where it appears that stockbrokers, prior to their bankruptcy, had violated every obligation which they owed to a customer, and had at some time not shown converted the stocks which they pretended to carry for him, the court should not require him to make good losses for which he would have been liable, if the stocks had been kept, as a condition to his recovery of securities deposited to protect his account. In re Ennis, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 187 Fed. 726.

But persons whose stock has been used by a bankrupt for his own purposes cannot establish title to specific certificates of stock, found after bankruptcy, as collateral to some loan, unless they identify those certificates as representing the shares which the bankrupt took from the claimant. ## IV. CONDITIONAL SALES.

Validity of conditional sales. — Where goods have been sold on condition, and such condition is good and effective as against the bankrupt and his creditors, it will of course be effective as against the bankrupt's trustee; but where the sale is of such a character as to vest title in the bankrupt, or to make the property sold subject to execution on judicial process as the property of the bankrupt, or to be ineffective as to creditors, the property sold will vest in the trustee in bankruptcy. The validity of such sales, however, does not depend on any provision of the bankruptcy law, but is governed by the general rules of law, and such state statutes as have been enacted for the regulation thereof. Where ranges were sold to a bankrupt under a conditional contract of sale, it was held that the vendor's property therein before payment of the price, as against the bankrupt's trustee, was not impaired by the fact that the use of the ranges on the buyer's property was inconsistent with the idea of a return to the seller, nor because of the claim that the ranges became a part of the real estate, and were therefore incapable of continued ownership in the vendor. In re Cohen. (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 163 Fed. 444, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 796.

Where machines in possession of a bankrupt under contracts of conditional sale, which required monthly payments from the bankrupt, called "rental" in the contracts, were reclaimed by the vendors after the bankruptcy, it was held that they could not recover such contract rentals for the time the machines remained in the possession of the trustee during the determination of their rights; but, if the trustee used the machines without their consent, the extent of their right is, on proof, to recover the reasonable value of such use. Recording requirements. — Under a state statute which provides that contracts for the conditional sale of chattels which are delivered to the purchaser, unless recorded, shall be void as against his judgment creditors or purchasers from him without notice, it has been held that property in possession of such a purchaser, under an unrecorded contract at the time of his bankruptcy, is property which he could have transferred, and which might have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against him, and passes to his trustee under section 70a (5). ## V. TRUST FUNDS AND DEPOSITS.

Where bankrupt is benedicary.— The trustee, on his appointment, is vested with any interest which the bankrupt formerly owned in any trust fund or estate, and which, at the institution of the proceedings in bankruptcy, was capable of transfer, or subject to sale under judicial process. 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41.

Where bankrupt is trustes.— As to such property as was held by the bankrupt, at the time of his adjudication, in trust for another, it comes into the hands of his trustee in bankruptcy impressed with the rightful claims of the beneficiary thereof, whose interests will be fully protected upon proper proof. In re Davis, (D. C. Mass. 1901) 112 Fed. 129, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258; In re Mulligan, (D. C. Mass. 1902) 116 Fed. 715, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 8; In re Cattus, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 733.

Burdon of proof.—A trust creditor of a bankrupt is not entitled to a preference over general creditors merely because of the character of his claim; but he must show that the trust fund, or the property into which it was converted, came into the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy, although the specific property need not be identified. In re Brunsing, (N. D. Cal. 1909) 169 Fed. 668, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129. And see to the same effect In re Marsh, (D. C. Conn. 1902) 116 Fed. 396, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576; In re Mulligan, (D. C. The burden of showing that his property has been wrongfully mingled in the mass of property of the wrongdoer is upon the owner who seeks to follow the same; but, when this is done, the burden shifts to the wrongdoer to show that the owner's money or property has passed out of his hands, and, in that respect, his trustee in bankruptcy stands in the same position. Smith v. Mottley, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 266.

A. 6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 266.

Loss of identity as trust fund. — Money held by a bankrupt as guardian, which he has mingled with his own funds, thereby loses its identity as a trust fund; and the bankrupt cannot withhold property or its proceeds from his trustee on the ground that it was purchased with the money of his wards; but the wards, in such case, are merely creditors, who must share with the general creditors in the distribution of the estate. In re Richard, (E. D. Tenn. 1900) 104 Fed. 792, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700.

A bankrupt who, prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, had used in his business certain money in his hands as trustee, which he thereafter paid back to himself as trustee, must restore the same to his trustee in bankruptcy to whom the title passed. In re Longbottom, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 142 Fed. 291, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437.

So, funds that have been dissipated, or that have been used to pay other creditors, or that have been spent to pay current business expenses, are not recoverable, because they are gone and there is nothing remaining to be the subject of the trust. In re J. M. Acheson Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 427, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338.

If there has been expenditure, and the funds are gone, and no specific property or money is found instead of the funds, it is inequitable that some other property found should be applied to pay one creditor in preference to another. In re J. M. Acheson Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 427, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338.

Trust agreement as to property delivered to be sold, and proceeds thereof. — Where a contract, under which certain merchandise was furnished to the bankrupt, provided that all goods on hand and the proceeds of all sales of goods received under the contract, whether consisting of notes, cash, or book accounts, should be held by the bankrupt as collateral security, in trust for the benefit of the person furnishing the merchandise, and subject to his order until all obligations due thereunder should be paid in full, it was held that such contract was not one of conditional sale, but one creating a trust for the benefit of the petitioner, and on the bank-ruptcy he was entitled to reclaim the goods on hand from the bankrupt's trustee. Walter A. Wood Co. v. Eubanks, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 169 Fed. 929, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 307; Walter A. Wood Mowing, etc., Mach. Co. c. Vanstory, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 375, 22 Am. Bankr. Deposits — Creating trust. — Where a claimant deposited money in the private bank of a bankrupt, at a time when the latter was insolvent and knew himself to be so, although the claimant did not, it was held that a trust for the benefit of the claimant was impressed on the general fund with which his deposits were commingled, and followed that fund, so long as it was never exhausted but remained greater than the amount of his deposits and finally came into the hands of the trustee; and, in such case, the claimant was entitled to reclaim his deposits, even though it affirmatively appears that the general fund was kept up by the deposits of subsequent depositors who did not draw out their deposits and have not been paid. In re Stewart, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 178 Fed. 463.

In In re Salmon, (W. D. Mo. 1906) 145 Fed. 649, it appears that several banks entered into an agreement to the effect that they were not to compete with each other in bidding for the deposit of the county funds, that the bank receiving the deposit was to share it with the others, and that the funds so distributed were not to be drawn upon except to meet county warrants or checks. This arrangement was carried out, and the bank receiving the deposit subsequently became insolvent and the illegal contract became known. It was held that, as against the general creditors of the insolvent bank, the county had a superior claim to an allotment of the original deposit held by one of the conspiring banks, because the latter bank was in contemplation of law a principal debtor to the county therefor, and further because the money was demandable only by the insolvent bank to meet county warrants. See also Crawford County v. Patterson, (N. D. Ohio 1906) 149 Fed. 229.

Deposit creating debt only.— Where an alleged special deposit made with a bankrupt, a mercantile concern, amounts merely to a loan or an investment in the business, and is not secured by a mortgage or other instrument giving a lien to the depositor or creditor, it constitutes only a personal debt, which is to be settled in accordance with the claims of general creditors. Riley v. Pope, (S. D. Ga. 1911) 186 Fed. 857.

So, also, where it appeared that a bankrupt corporation had been a general depository for the funds of a grocer's association of, which its president was treasurer, its other directors having been told by him that such deposits were authorized by the association to be repaid on demand, it was held that the corporation did not hold such funds as a special deposit in trust, but that the association was a general creditor only, and not entitled to priority. In re Smith, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 900, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350.

And where a town supervisor deposited town funds with a private banker, without any agreement that he should hold and keep the money separate from his other funds or that he should not use them in the usual course of his banking business, the relation created was held to be that of debtor and creditor only, so that on the insolvency of the banker the supervisor had no lien or preference over other creditors. In to Nichola, (N. D. N. Y. 1909) 166 Fed. 603, 22 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 216. And see to the same effect In re Smart, (N. D. Ohio 1905) 136 Fed. 974, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 672.

VI. PROPERTY FRAUDULENTLY OBTAINED.

Recovery by vendor. — Where property has been fraudulently obtained by the bankrupt, and the fraud is of such a nature as to warrant a rescission of the sale and the recovery of property by the vendor, the property so obtained comes into the hands of the trustee subject to such right of rescission and recovery, providing it be exercised in due time. In re Weil, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 111 Fed. 897, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90; In re Davis, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 112 Fed. 294, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 276; In re O'Connor, (N. D. Ga. 1902) 114 Fed. 777; In re Hildebrant, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 120 Fed. 992, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184; In re Patterson, (N. D. Tex. 1903) 125 Fed. 562, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 748; In re Hess, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 138 Fed. 954, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647; In re Levi, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 148 Fed. 654, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 430; Lowry v. Hitch, (1908) 110 S. W. 833, 33 Ky. L. Rep. 573, 17 L. R. A. N. S. 1032.

Thus it has been held that one from whom a bankrupt obtains goods on time, on false representation that they are to fill an order, when the bankrupt has no order, the goods being turned over to secure a bondsman of the bankrupt in another matter, and being secreted, is entitled thereto, the whole transaction being a fraud. Bloomingdale v. Empire Rubber Mfg. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1802) 114 Fed. 1016, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74.

False representation need not be sole consideration.—It is not essential that false representations, made by a bankrupt to secure goods on credit, should have been the sole consideration of the credit, in order to entitle the seller to reclaim the goods; but it is sufficient if they were material, and the credit would probably not have been given otherwise. In re Gany, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 103 Fed. 930, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576.

Obtaining release of mortgage by fraud.—A bill against a trustee in bankruptcy of a corporation which alleges facts showing that the complainant was induced by the fraudulent representations of the bankrupt, through its officers having apparent authority to release a mortgage or its property, and offers to restore the consideration received therefore states a cause of action for equitable relief by a restoration of the lien, the question of the intervening rights of creditors being one to be determined on the hearing. Cleminshaw v. International Shirt, etc., Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1908) 165 Fed. 797. 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616.

1908) 165 Fed. 797, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616.

Necessity of disaffirming sale.—A contract, under which goods were delivered on fraudulent representations, cannot be affirmed in part and disaffirmed as to the rest; the vendor cannot proceed to obtain a return of all the goods found, and procure the allowance of its claim for the balance of the account under and pursuant to the terms of the contract, at the same time. In re Hildebrant, (N. D. N. Y. 1903) 120 Fed. 992, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184; Standard Varnish Works v. Haydock, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 318, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286.

But one from whom a bankrupt obtains goods by means of fraudulent representations has his election to confirm the sale and assume the position of a creditor for the price, or to repudiate the sale and recover the goods. Standard Varnish Works v. Haydock, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 318, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286.

Effect of ignorance of facts constituting fraud. — The proof and allowance of a claim, and the payment and acceptance of a dividend, do not bar a rescission or constitute an irrevocable election when the party proving the claim is ignorant of the facts constituting the fraud which gives him the right to rescind the contract and recover the property obtained. In re Stewart, (N. D. N. Y.

1910) 178 Fed. 463.

Evidence — Required proof. — To authorize the rescission of an executed sale of goods to one who subsequently became a bankrupt, on the ground that he obtained the same by false and fraudulent representations, it must be shown that he made such representations knowing them to be false, or without reasonable grounds for believing them to be true, and they must have induced the seller to consummate the sale when he otherwise would not have done so. In re Roalswick, (D. C. Mont. 1901) 110 Fed. 639, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 752.

The burden of proof rests on the party claiming the right to rescind the sale and recover the property. In re Berg, (D. C. Mass.

1910) 183 Fed. 885.

VII. SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR STOCK.

Trustee may recover stock subscriptions.—A trustee in bankruptcy, as the representative of a corporation's estate, is vested with the right of such corporation to recover subscriptions for its stock; and where the corporation, in the absence of bankruptcy, could have recovered the amounts due for such subscriptions, the trustee in like manner may recover them. In re Remington Automobile, etc., Co., (2d Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 345, 82 C. C. A. 421; In re Eureka Furniture Co., (E. D. Pa. 1909) 170 Fed. 485, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 395; In re L. M. Alleman Hardware Co., (3d Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 810, 104 C. C. A. 320, reversing (M. D. Pa. 1909) 172 Fed. 611, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 871; Thrall v. Union Maid Tobacco Co., (Ohio 1909) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287.

But where the state law does not give the corporation itself a right of action against the stockholders for the recovery of their subscriptions, no such right vests in the trustee. In re Jassoy Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 178

Fed. 515.

Trustee not estopped by act of bondholders.

The fact that bondholders of a bankrupt corporation may be estopped, by a waiver expressed in the bonds or mortgage, to assert any personal claim against the stockholders, is no defense by the stockholders to a suit by the trustee to enforce their liability on unpaid subscriptions, where there are other creditors who are not so estopped. Babbitt c. Read, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 173 Fed. 712, 23

Am. Bankr. Rep. 254.

Determination of amount due. — Where plenary suits are necessary to collect unpaid subscriptions from stockholders of a bankrupt corporation, it is not necessary that the bankruptcy court should determine the amount due from the stockholders, which may be left to the courts in which such suits are brought, and authority given by the bankruptcy court to the trustee to collect such amounts as may be due is a sufficient demand on the stockholders. Babbitt v. Read, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 173 Fed. 712, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254.

Jurisdiction. — A District Court, as a court of bankruptcy, has jurisdiction of a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy of a corporation, against a number of defendants, to recover unpaid subscriptions to the stock of the corporation; such suit being one which could not have been maintained by the bankrupt. Skillin v. Magnus, (N. D. N. Y. 1907) 162 Fed. 689, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 397.

So, also, it has been held that a court of bankruptcy has power to order assessments on unpaid subscriptions to the stock of a bankrupt corporation. In re Eureka Furniture Co., (E. D. Pa. 1909) 170 Fed. 485, 22

Am. Bankr. Rep. 395.

Hearing confined to necessity of "call."—
While the bankruptcy court has jurisdiction to make a call on the stockholders of a bankrupt corporation, the hearing before the referee to take evidence on such question should be expressly limited to the question. "Should there be a call on the shareholders of unpaid stock, and, if so, to what amount?" In re Munger Vehicle Tire Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 168 Fed. 910, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 395.

VIII. MEMBERSHIP IN STOCK EXCHANGE.

Property rights in seat on stock exchange pass to trustee. — It has been frequently decided that, under section 70a (5), the property rights of a member of a stock exchange (usually called a seat) pass to his trustee in bankruptcy subject, of course, to the lawful rules and regulations of that body. Page c. Edmunds, (1903) 187 U. S. 596, 23 S. Ct. 200, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 318, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 277, affirming (E. D. Pa. 1900) 102 Fed. 746, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 467; In re Gaylord, (E. D. Mo. 1901) 111 Fed. 717, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 195; Burleigh v. Foreman, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 13, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88; In re Hurlbutt, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 504, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50; O'Dell v. Boyden, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fcd. 731, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757, 10 Ann. Cas. 239; In re Gregory, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 629, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270, 27 L. R. A. N. S. 613; In re Currie, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 263; Wrede r. Gilley, (1909) 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 821, 132 App. Div. 293, 117 N. Y. S. 5.

Transfer compulsory. — In In re Hurlbutt. (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 504, 13 Am. Bankr, Rep. 50, it was held that, where s member of a stock exchange contributed his membership to a firm which thereafter became bankrupt, the court of bankruptcy had jurisdiction to compel such member to execute a transfer thereof for the benefit of the firm's trustee in bankruptcy.

Distribution of proceeds from sale of membership. — Where, on the bankruptcy of a member of a stock exchange, his seat is sold and his transactions on the floor closed out under its rules, the proceeds of both pass to the member's trustee in bankruptcy, subject, however, to the rules of the exchange that they should be appropriated, first, to the payment of the member's indebtedness to the exchange, second, to claims arising against him out of the transactions on the floor of the exchange, and, third, loans from members, as against his general areditors. In re Gregory, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed, 629, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270; In re Currie, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 263.

Subject to valid liens. — The title taken by the trustee to a membership in the stock exchange is, like all other property, subject to any valid lien that may exist against it. Wrede v. Gilley, (1909) 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 821, 132 App. Div. 293, 117 N. Y. S. 5.

IX. CONTRACTUAL INTERESTS AND OBLIGA-

Bankruptcy does not terminate contractual relations. - Under the rule that the trustee in bankruptcy takes the property of the bankrupt subject to all valid claims, liens, and equities, it has been held that contractual obligations existing at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy are not terminated by the adjudication; and that, throughout the entire field of contractual obligations, the adjudication in bankruptcy absolves from no agreement, terminates no contract, and discharges no liability. Thompson r. Fairbanks, (1905) 196 U. S. 516, 25 S. Ct. 306, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 577; Zartman v. Waterloo First Nat. Bank, (1910) 216 U. S. 134, 30 S. Ct. 368, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635, affirming (1907) 189 N. Y. 533, 82 N. E. 1126; Watson v. Merrill, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 359, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454; In re Wright, (W. D. N. Y. 1907) 151 Fed. 361, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 199, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 544; In re Spitzel, (E. D. N. Y. 1909) 168 Fed. 156, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729; Franklin v. Stoughton Wagon Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 857, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; In re Boschelli, (M. D. Pa. 1910) 183 Fed. 864.

Assumption of executory contracts optional with trustee. — The effect of the adjudication is to transfer to the trustee all the property of the bankrupt except his executory contracts, and to vest in the trustee the option to assume or to renounce these. It is the assignment of the property of the bankrupt to the trustee by operation of law. It neither releases nor absolves the debtor from any of his contracts or obligations, but, like any other assignment of property by an obligor, leaves him bound by his agreements and subject to the liabilities he has incurred. Watson v. Merrill, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 359, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454.

If the trustees elect to assume a contract, they take it cum onere, as the bankrupt held it, subject to all of its provisions and conditions; and any valid modification of a written contract which may have been made by the bankrupt before adjudication, whether oral or in writing, and whether known or unknown to the trustees, will be binding upon them. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Hurley, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 503, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396.

Assignment of money to become due under a contract is binding on trustee. — Where a party to a contract assigned to his creditor the money to become due under the contract, and the party's receiver and trustee in bankruptcy carried out the contract, it was held that the money becoming due must be used to discharge the debt due the creditor, though on the failure of the receiver and trustee to complete the contract there would have been no money to which the assignment could apply. In re De Long Furniture Co., (E. D.

Contract vesting title in bankrupt.—Where certain agency contracts appointed the bankrupt agent for the sale of manufacturers' furniture and carpets for a certain period, the contract providing that the bankrupt on final termination of the agreement agreed "to buy and pay for at the then current prices, and on the regular terms, such goods as may be then on hand," it was held that the contract was not executory as to the goods remaining at the termination of the contract, but, as to such goods, constituted a sale, so that the title to the goods or remaining passed to the bankrupt's trustee. Parlett v. Blake, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1911) 188 Fed. 200.

The interest of an insurance agent in a contract for renewal premiums on policies previously written has been held to be property capable of transfer which passes to his trustee in bankruptcy, subject to the terms of the contract under which such interest was earned. In re Wright, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 544.

Fire insurance policy.—So, also, the interest of the bankrupt in a policy of fire insurance vests in his trustee, on his appointment, by operation of law; and in case of loss the trustee may recover. Fuller r. New York F. Ins. Co., (1903) 184 Mass. 12, 67 N. E. 879. See also In re Hamilton, (W. D. Ark. 1900) 102 Fed. 683; Gordon v. Mechanics', etc., Ins. Co., (1907) 120 La. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 886, 45 So. 384.

The mere adjudication as a bankrupt of the insured in a fire insurance policy does not work a forfeiture of the policy under a clause providing in effect that the policy shall become void upon any sale or transfer of the property. Fuller v. New York F. Ins. Co., (1903) 184 Mass. 12, 67 N. E. 879; Fuller v. Jameson, (1904) 98 App. Div. 53, 90 N. Y. S. 456, affirmed (1906) 184 N. Y. 605, 77 N. E. 1187.

Compare Bronson v. New York F. Ins. Co., (1908) 64 W. Va. 494, 63 S. E. 283, wherein it was held that the appointment of a receiver in bankruptcy proceedings avoided a policy providing in effect that the policy should become void if any change took place in the interest, title, or possession of the subject insured, whether by legal process or judgment. or by the voluntary act of the assured, or otherwise, or if the policy was assigned before loss.

The trustee cannot take advantage of a mistake made by the bankrupt when reducing to writing a contract made by him; and such mistake is not an asset in the hands of the trustee, nor does the bankruptcy bar the reformation of the contract because of it. Zartman v. Waterloo First Nat. Bank. (1910) 216 U. S. 134, 30 S. Ct. 368, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635, affirming (1907) 189 N. Y. 533, 82 N. E. 1126.

N. E. 1126.

Where a bankrupt contractor was entitled to a mechanic's lien at the date of his adjudication in bankruptcy, such right cannot be enforced by the trustee in a court of bankruptcy, but must be enforced in the state courts, unless the adverse parties consent to be sued in the United States Circuit Court. In re Grissler, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 754, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508.

X. LICENSES.

Liquor license. — The general rule is that a liquor license is an asset of a licensed bankrupt's estate which, upon compliance with the law of the state, may be reduced to money by his trustee in bankruptcy. In re Brodbine, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 93 Fed. 043, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53; In re Fisher, (D. C. Mass. 1899) 98 Fed. 89, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406, affirmed (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 103 Fed. 860, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; In re Becker, (E. D. Pa. 1899) 98 Fed. 407, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Olewine, (M. D. Pa. 1903) 125 Fed. 840, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re Baumblatt, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 153 Fed. 485, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500; In re Wiesel. (E. D. Pa. 1909) 173 Fed. 718, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59; In re May, (D. C. Minn. 1900) 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

Even though, under the state law, the license itself cannot actually be sold, nevertheless the trustee may sell the lease of the licensed premises and the fixtures, etc., conditioned on the transfer of the license by the court. Snyder v. Bougher, (1906) 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 792, 214 Pa. St. 453, 63 Atl. 893.

A license to occupy a stall in a city market is property of the licensee, which will pass to his trustee in bankruptcy. In re Emrich, (W. D. Pa. 1900) 101 Fed. 231, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89.

XI. EFFECT OF COMMINGLING PROPERTY.

When identity is lost. — Where the money or other property of third persons is so far commingled with that of the bankrupt as to lose its identity as a separate fund or chattel, the owner will not be entitled to a preferential claim for the value thereof as against the general creditors represented by the trustee, excepting where it is shown that the result is a net gain to the bankrupt's estate. In re Richard, (E. D. Tenn. 1900) 104 Fed. 792; In re Kurtz, (E. D. Pa. 1903) 125 Fed. 992, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129; John Deere Plow Co. r. McDavid, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 802, 14 Am. The court will go no farther than to give a lien when the facts are that there remain in the estate specific funds or property which have increased the assets of the estate, and which represent the proceeds of the specific property intrusted to the bankrupt. In re J. M. Acheson Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 427, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338.

Thus it has been held that where cotton was by mistake delivered to factors to whom it was not consigned, and by mistake of a warehouseman it was sold, and the proceeds deposited in bank to the factors' account, and subsequently, on the bankruptcy of the factors, a balance greater than the amount of the cotton passed from the bank to the bankrupt estate, the owner of the cotton was entitled to the value thereof. In re Woods, (S. D. Ga. 1903) 121 Fed. 599, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615.

In Smith r. Au Gres Tp., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 257, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745, it appears that a bankrupt, who was a township trustee, used the township's money with which to purchase goods for sale in his business as a merchant, and so mingled the goods that it was impossible to distinguish them from the rest of his stock, and it was held that the township was entitled at least to an equitable lien on the proceeds of a sale of the entire stock by the bankrupt's trustee for the amount so appropriated; the general creditors of the bankrupt being entitled only to share in the residue, if any.

In In re City Bank, (W. D. Mich. 1910) 186 Fed. 250, it appears that prior to its adjudication as a bankrupt, the "D" bank collected a check payable to the "C" bank, the proeceds of which were mingled with the general funds, and the latter drew on the New York correspondent of the "D" bank for the amount, which it refused to pay, though it had sufficient funds which were subsequently transmitted to the trustee; and it was held that the payee of the check was entitled to a preferential lien for the amount thereof.

[Policy of insurance.] Provided, That when any bankrupt shall have any insurance policy which has a cash surrender value payable to himself, his estate, or personal representatives, he may, within thirty days after the cash surrender value has been ascertained and stated to the trustee by the company issuing the same, pay or secure to the trustee the sum so ascertained and stated, and continue to hold, own, and carry such policy free from the claims of the creditors participating in the distribution of his estate under the bankruptcy proceedings, otherwise the policy shall pass to the trustee as assets; and [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 566.]

Policies having surrender or other value. - The earlier decisions show considerable conflict as to what is meant by "cash surrender value," and in some cases it has been held that the phrase signified only a cash surrender value expressly stipulated for in the policy; but that view has been overruled, and it has been finally determined by the United States Supreme Court that the phrase "cash surrender value" signifies such a value as will be paid by the insurance company on the surrender of the policy, whether it be expressed in the policy or merely recognized by a rule or concession on the part of the company; therefore all policies of insurance having a surrender value within this definition, and not exempt under the law of the state, pass to the trustee in bankruptcy, subject to the right of the bankrupt to retain it, under the provisions of the statute, by paying or securing to the trustee the ascertained value thereof. Purpose of provision. — It was not the intent of Congress in the enactment of the insurance proviso to deprive the family of a debtor of the protection which he may have secured to them in taking out policies for their benefit payable at his death; but it was intended to prevent debtors from availing themselves of the opportunity of making investments for their own benefit in the form of endowment policies, or policies payable to themselves, and holding the same, while seeking a discharge from their debts through the Bankrupt Act. Retention of policy by bankrupt — Right to retain policy passes to bankrupt's representatives. — The right of a bankrupt to retain a life insurance policy which has a cash surrender value, on payment of such value to the trustee, is not affected by his death after adjudication, but passes to his legal representatives. Van Kirk v. Vermont Slate Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1905) 140 Fed. 38, 15 Am.

After the payment of the cash surrender value of a policy, or where there is no cash surrender value, the bankrupt may be entitled to hold, own, and carry such policy free from the claims of creditors. In re Josephson, (S. D. Ga. 1903) 121 Fed. 142, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608.

Failure of bankrupt to pay value. — Where the policy passes by operation of law to the trustee, and the privilege given by the insurance proviso in section 70a (5) of the Act is not availed of by the bankrupt, the duty devolves upon the trustee, having regard to the recommendation of the creditors, the probable value of the policy, and all the circumstances of the case, to apply to the court for direction as to whether he shall retain the policy and keep it alive, or shall surrender it to the bankrupt or other person interested in it. Actual value the test. — The test by which to determine whether a trustee shall retain a policy or shall deliver it to the beneficiary is not whether the policy has a cash surrender value, in the sense that by its terms or by practice a cash payment can be obtained from the company for its surrender, but whether or not it has an actual value which will be of benefit to the bankrupt's creditors.

In re Slingluff, (D. C. Md. 1900) 106 Fed.

It makes no difference whether the surrender value was stipulated in a policy or universally recognized by the companies. In either case the purpose of the statute would be subserved, which was to secure to the trustee the sum of such value and to enable the bankrupt to "continue to hold, own, and carry such policy free from the claims of the creditors participating in the distribution of the estate under the bankruptcy proceedings." Hiscock v. Mertens, (1907) 205 U. S. 202, 27 S. Ct. 488, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 771, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483, affirming (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 445, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701.

Where a bankrupt is the holder of life insurance policies which, although containing no provision for a cash payment in their surrender, possess an actual cash value which, according to the uniform practice of the company, will be paid on their surrender, the bankrupt will be permitted to retain the same on payment to his trustee of such actual value. In re Mertens, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 445, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701, affirmed (1907) 205 U. S. 202, 27 S. Ct. 488, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 771, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483.

Loan and paid-up value. — Where certain insurance policies belonging to a bankrupt had no cash surrender value, but they had a collateral loan value and a paid-up insurance value, it was held that they had an inchoate value to which the bankrupt's trustee was entitled as property which, prior to the filing of the petition, the bankrupt could have transferred. In re Coleman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 818, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461.

Vested interest under policy passes.— The right to receive at a certain date a specified sum of money, contingent upon his surviving to that date, is a vested right of property existing in the bankrupt, which passes to the trustee. It is a property right which he could have transferred, and it falls within the comprehensive language of section 70a, which vests title in the trustee. In re Welling, (C. C. A 7th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 189, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340.

Partly paid-up life insurance policies, with the usual contingencies and provisions as to changing the beneficiaries and as to surrendering policies and receiving the benefits thereof, are assets of the insured's estate in bankruptcy to which creditors are entitled. 1019, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 433.

The contingent right of the insured, like the statutory right to seize and hold and sell remainder and contingent interests in real estate, is something that the trustee may hold for the benefit of the creditors; or he may waive it altogether under circumstances which justify it. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Smith, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 1.

Transferable interest as beneficiary passes.

Where a bankrupt was designated as beneficiary in a policy on the life of his mother, which directed that it should be paid to the beneficiary of the insured last designated on the back of the policy, if living, and the insured died four days after the filing of the bankruptcy petition, leaving the bankrupt as designated beneficiary, it was held that his interest in the policy was one which he could have transferred under the state law, and therefore it vested in the trustee in bankruptcy of the beneficiary. In re Hogan, (W. D. Wis. 1911) 186 Fed. 537.

D. Wis. 1911) 186 Fed. 537.

Thus in In re Judson, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 702, it appears that bankruptcy proceedings having been instituted against a firm consisting of father and son, the father committed suicide prior to adjudication, leaving certain life policies, payable to his wife and children, share and share alike. He left him surviving a wife and three children, one of whom was a son also bankrupt. It was held that the son had an interest in such policies prior to his father's death which constituted property he was bound to schedule, and being transferrable by the son as a chose in action, such interest passed to the trustee in bankruptcy under section 70a (5), the policies not being within the proviso of such section relating to insurance policies having a cash surrender value payable to the bankrupt, his estate or personal representatives.

But see In re McDonnell, (N. D. Ia. 1900) 101 Fed. 239, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92, wherein it was held that a trustee in bankruptcy takes no title to policies of life insurance wherein the bankrupt is named as a beneficiary when the bankrupt is not himself the contracting party with the insurance company, and would not be entitled to receive the value of the policies if surrendered at the date of the adjudication.

Policies not payable to bankrupt, or his restate or personal representatives.—Section 70a (5) does not include policies payable to the wife of kindred of the assured, but only pplies to policies payable to the assured, or his estate, or his personal representatives. Pulsifer v. Hussey, (1903) 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 657, 97 Me. 434, 54 Atl. 1076; Allen v. Central Wisconsin Trust Co., (1910) 143 Wis. 381, 127 N. W. 1003.

Effect of right to change beneficiary. — A policy of insurance which authorizes the bankrupt to nominate or change the beneficiary at will is property which he might have "transferred," and as such passes to a designated beneficiary. In re Orear, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 632. And see to the same effect In re Wolff, (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 165 Fed. 984, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 452; In re Hettling, (2d Cir. 1909) 175 Fed. 65, 99 C. C. A. 87, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161; In re Herr, (M. D. Pa. 1910) 182 Fed. 716; In re Dolan, (E. D. Pa. 1910) 182 Fed. 949.

Surrender value subject to valid liens—Payment of premiums.—Where a policy of ife insurance was made payable to the wife if the assured if he died during the term, or to himself if living at the expiration of the stipulated period, and was issued upon their joint application, and for several years before the bankruptcy of the husband the wife saved the policy from lapsing by paying the premiums out of her own money, it was held that the bankrupt's interest in the surrender value of the policy, upon passing to his trustee, was subject to an equitable lien or right in the wife to be reimbursed for such proportion of the premiums paid by her as had gone to keep the policy alive for the benefit of the husband's interest. In re Diack, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 100 Fed. 770, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

Pledge.—A bona fide assignee of life insurance policies, pledged more than four months before the bankruptcy of the pledgor, is entitled to hold the same against the trustee in bankruptcy. Van Kirk v. Vermont Slate Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1905) 140 Fed. 38, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 239; In re Davison, (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 179 Fed. 750; In re Judson, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 702.

Thus where a life insurance company loans to the insured, who subsequently was adjudged a bankrupt, a sum greater than the cash surrender value thereof, and takes an assignment of the policies as collateral security for the loan, the policies do not pass to the trustee, for the reason that on the day the title vested in the trustees the cash which the company had agreed to pay on surrender would, if surrender were claimed, have been entirely absorbed in releasing the lien of the company, whether the privilege of surrender were exercised by the bankrupt or by the trustees. Burlingham r. Crouse, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 479.

Exempt policies do not pass. — As to whether a policy of insurance, exempt under the laws of the state from levy and execution by creditors, passes to the trustee in bankruptcy, there was formerly a contrariety of opinion; but this question has also been solved by the federal Supreme Court, and it is now well settled that the provisions of section 70 are limited by those contained in section 6 of the Act; and that in accordance with section 6 a policy of insurance which is exempt under the law of the state does not pass to the trustee in bankruptcy of the insured. Holden r. Stratton, (1905) 198 U. S. 202, 25 8. Ct. 656, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1018; Hiscock v. Mertens, (1907) 205 U. S. 202, 27 S. Ct. 488, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 771, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483. afterming (C. Bankr. Rep. 657, 97 Me. 434, 54 Atl. 1076.

Policies having no actual value.—It has been held that a policy of life insurance which, at the time of the adjudication, has no actual cash value, does not vest in the trustee in bankruptcy of the insured. In re Buelow, (D. C. Wash. 1899) 98 Fed. 86, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389; Gould v. New York L. Ins. Co., (E. D. Ark. 1904) 132 Fed. 927, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 233; Morris v. Dodd, (1900) 110 Ga. 606, 36 S. E. 83, 50 L. R. A.

33, 78 Am. St. Rep. 129.

Thus it has been held that a policy of insurance on the life of a bankrupt, which has no cash surrender value, and no value for any purpose except the contingency of its becoming valuable at the death of the bankrupt if the premiums are kept paid, does not vest in the trustee in bankruptcy as assets of the estate. In re Buelow, (D. C. Wash. 1899) 98 Fed. 86, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389.

Where a deceased bankrupt had no valuable interest in certain policies on his life, he having borrowed beyond his interest in all of them, the loans being admittedly valid, it was held that the bankrupt's executors, and not his trustee, were entitled to the proceeds of such policies in excess of the liens for loans held by the insurance company. In re Judson, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 702.

Effect of abandonment by trustee. — Where the trustees of a bankrupt failed to have insurance policies on his life appraised, or to provide for the payment of premiums thereon, but abandoned the same to the bankrupt as valueless to the estate, which abandonment was subsequently approved by the court, it was held that the trustee was not entitled to recover the proceeds of such policies, on the death of the bankrupt pending the proceedings, from the beneficiaries, the premiums having been kept up by them or by the bankrupt. Meyers v. Josephson, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 734, affirming (S. D. Ga. 1903) 121 Fed. 142, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608.

Deposits to secure payment of insurance.— There would seem to be no reason why the deposits in a life insurance company to secure a sum payable to the assured at a given date, if he should be then alive, should be treated differently from a similar contract with a savings bank or building association. In re Slingluff, (D. C. Md. 1900) 106 Fed. 154, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76.

Deferred annuity contract. - An insurance contract, entered into by the company with one who was then insolvent and was subsequently adjudged a bankrupt, by which the insurer obligated itself to pay the insured a certain sum yearly, commencing in the future and continuing during the life of the insured, is not void; and the sum paid for such insurance cannot be recovered by the trustee in bankruptcy of the insured, on the theory that such payment was a transfer in fraud of creditors, and that the insurance company, though acting bona fide, was not a purchaser for value, because it had not paid the purchase money or secured it in such a manner that it could not be relieved against payment. In such case, however, a bill asking that the company be compelled to pay the trustee the sum received from the bankrupt upon the surrender of the contract, will be dismissed without prejudice to any right the trustee may have to claim whatever beneficial interest the bankrupt has, or may thereafter have, under the contract. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Smith, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. I.

(6) [Rights of action.] rights of action arising upon contracts or from the unlawful taking or detention of, or injury to, his property. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 566.]

The bankrupt's trustee is vested by operation of law with title to all the bankrupt's books, papers, contracts, securities, etc., relating to his business. In re Hess, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 134 Fed. 109, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559. And see the annotation, supra. p. 833, IX. Contractual Interests and Obligations.

A right of action for injury to "business, employment, or property" passes to the trustee in bankruptcy, even though it sounds in tort. Cleland t. Anderson, (1905) 75 Neb. 273, 105 N. W. 1092, 5 L. R. A. N. S. 148, reversing (1902) 66 Neb. 276, 92 N. W. 306, 96 N. W. 212, 98 N. W. 1075, 5 L. R. A. N. S. 147.

Malicious attachment of corporate property is not a personal tort, but gives rise to a cause of action for injury to property, which passes to the trustee in bankruptcy of the corporation. Hansen Mercantile Co. r. Wyman, (1908) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 877, 105 Minn. 491, 117 N. W. 926.

An action to recover damages for false and fraudulent representations, wherein the bankrupt is plaintiff and which is pending at the time of his adjudication, alleging that the bankrupt had been induced to purchase certain bonds from the defendants, who were in the same business, at prices greater than their value, by false and fraudulent representations made by the defendants regarding facts materially affecting the value of the bonds, and claiming damages for alleged losses to the plaintiff resulting from the purchase, is a right of action arising from injury to the bankrupt's property, and passes, as such, to his trustee under section 70s (6) of the Bankruptcy Act. In re Gay, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 182 Fed. 260.

Action for death of child.—Under a state law providing that an action may be brought by an administrator, but that the recovery shall pass to decedent's next of kin, it was held that a father being entitled to the entire recovery for the wrongful killing of his son, his right thereto constitutes assets belonging to his estate in bankruptcy. In re Burnstine, (E. D. Mich. 1903) 131 Fed. 828, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596.

The right to sue for a personal tort, such as slander, malicious prosecution, assault, etc., is strictly personal. It cannot be assigned, is not subject to levy and sale upon judicial process, and the statute does not contemplate that the bankrupt's right to maintain an action to recover damages for such wrongs shall constitute any part of his estate in bankruptcy. The law follows. in this respect, section 14 of the Bankruptcy Act of 1867, in the construction of which it was uniformly held that rights of action for personal torts did not vest in the assignee in bankruptcy. In re Haensell, (N. D. Cal. 1899) 91 Fed. 355, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286; Sibley v. Nason, (1907) 196 Mass. 125, 12 Ann. Cas. 938, 81 N. E. 887.

Action for conspiracy. — A trustee in bankruptcy cannot maintain an action in tort for conspiracy, in assisting a bankrupt to place his property beyond the reach of his creditors, against persons who are alleged to have performed their acts of conspiracy during the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings but before the adjudication therein, where no allegation is made that any of the defendants received any portion of the bankrupt's estate, and the sole result of the conspiracy is to turn the bankrupt's property into money in his hands for which he himself failed to account to his trustee. Friedman v. Myers, (1907) 19 Am. Bankr, Rep. 883, 30 Ohio Cir. Ct. Rep. 303.

Action for partition. — The bankrupt's right to partition does not arise out of contract. Partition does not involve unlawful taking, or detention of, or injury to property. Hobbs v. Frazier, (1908) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 684, 56 Fla. 796, 47 So. 929, 20 L. R. A. N. S.

Right of action in creditors only. - Where a state statute which provides that "if the indebtedness of any stock corporation shall exceed the amount of its capital stock the directors and officers of such corporation as-senting thereto shall be personally and indi-vidually liable for such excess to the creditors of such corporation," as construed by the Supreme Court of the state, gives a right of action against officers which belongs exclusively to creditors, such right of action is not an asset of the estate of the corporation in bankruptcy, and does not pass to its trustee, but may be enforced by creditors as a secondary security independently of the bankruptcy proceedings. In re Beachy, (E. D. Wis. 1909) 170 Fed. 825, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529 538.

Money due to a bankrupt on a paving contract at the time of the filing of his bankruptcy petition, though subject to valid liens, was held to have been properly paid to the bankrupt's trustee to be administered and paid over to those entitled thereto under the direction of the bankruptcy court. In re Cramond, (N. D. N. Y. 1906) 145 Fed. 966, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22

Damage by change of grade. - The trustee is entitled to a sum awarded as damages to real estate, resulting from a change of street grade. In re Torchia, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 188 Fed. 207. And see the annotation supra, p. 000, II. Interests in Real Property.

After the close of bankruptcy proceedings, and discharge of the trustee, an asset of the bankrupt (right of action to recover, with penalty, usurious interest paid) which has passed to the trustee by the bankruptcy proceedings, though he had no knowledge of its existence, may be recovered by the bankrupt himself, where neither the creditors nor the trustee assert any rights in it. Lasater v. Jacksboro First Nat. Bank, (1903) 96 Tex. 345, 72 S. W. 1057.

b [Appraisal and sale.] All real and personal property belonging to bankrupt estates shall be appraised by three disinterested appraisers; they shall be appointed by, and report to, the court. Real and personal property shall, when practicable, be sold subject to the approval of the court; it shall not be sold otherwise than subject to the approval of the court for less than seventy-five per centum of its appraised value. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 566.]

And such appointment should be made by the referee in the exercise of his independent judgment and should not be submitted to a vote of the creditors, especially where there is a sharp conflict of views and interests between them. Oualification of appraisers. — An appraiser must be a disinterested person. In re Frazin, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 307.

It has been held, however, that a person is not disqualified for appointment as an appraiser of a bankrupt's property merely because some of the officers and directors of a corporation creditor are also officers and directors of another corporation of which such appraiser is president. In re Columbia Iron Works, (E. D. Mich. 1904) 142 Fed. 234,

14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526.
The purpose of the appraisement, which is directed to be made, is to secure for the benefit and protection of all parties concerned a designation and estimate of the property which passes into the hands of the trustee, for which in the first instance he is to be accountable. In re Gordon Supply, etc., Co., (M. D. Pa. 1904) 133 Fed. 798, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 352.

In certain contingencies the amount of the appraisal determines the validity of a sale of the property appraised, and in all cases the values are of the utmost importance in determining the question of the confirmation of the sale. In re Frazin, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 307.

The particularity with which such appraisement is to be made depends somewhat upon the circumstances. It should, however, be general and not special, and should not go into the detail practiced by a merchant taking an inventory of stock; only such particularity being indulged in as is sufficient to reasonably identify the property in character and quantity, and give a fair idea of its value. In re Gordon Supply, etc., Co., (M. D. Pa. 1904) 133 Fed. 798, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 352.

II. SALES.

Lien claims transferred to proceeds.—A court of bankruptcy has power to order property of a bankrupt which has come into the possession of his trustee sold free of liens, and to transfer all claims against it to the proceeds, notwithstanding the objection of one claiming a lien thereon. In re E. A. Kinsey Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 694. See also In re Worland, (N. D. Ia. 1899) 92 Fed. 893, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450; In re U. S. Graphite Co., (E. D. Pa. 1908) 161 Fed. 583, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573.

Legal and equitable interests protected.—
In McKay v. Hamill, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 11, Gray, J., said: "Undoubtedly the general rule is that the property of the bankrupt is taken by the trustee in the situation in which it was held by the bankrupt, and that any disposition of said property made by the trustee must be made with reference to the superior rights of lienholders when legally ascertained. But the court of bankruptcy, in the exercise of its equitable powers, in selling and disposing of the proceeds of the bankrupt's estate, will take care of and protect the legal and equitable interests of third parties attaching thereto."

Where a bankrupt merchant's landlord was equitably entitled only to security for future rent to accrue under the lease, it was held that an order approving a sale of the lease sufficiently protected the landlord's rights, by ordering the purchaser to execute a bond to the trustee securing the payment of such rent, especially since the rental value of the premises exceeded the rent provided in the lease, and the landlord had additional recourse against the new tenant, by proceeding against the latter's stock of goods or to dispossess. In re Varley, etc., Clothing Co., (N. D. Ala. 1911) 188 Fed. 761.

Whether property is within the district or not is immaterial to affect the exclusive right of the court which made the adjudication to direct its sale, and to determine all claims thereto, on proper notice to the parties in interest, whether they reside within or without the district; the filing of the petition in bankruptcy itself being a caveat to all the world. In re Granite City Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 818, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404.

Levy by sheriff under execution does not prevent sale by trustee. — An adjudication in bankruptcy draws to the bankruptcy court jurisdiction to administer all the property of the bankrupt estate not in the actual custody of some other court, and the trustee is entitled to sell property to the exclusion of a sheriff, although the latter may have a valid lien thereon by virtue of the levy of an execution more than four months prior to the bankruptcy. In re Vastbinder, (M. D. Pa. 1904) 132 Fed. 718, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148.

Validity, extent, and priority of liens.— Where the bankruptcy court has acquired the lawful custody of property to which conflicting liens attach, it has jurisdiction to determine the validity, extent, and priority of such liens, though the trustee has no interest in such question. Chauncey r. Dyke, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 119 Fed. 1, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; In re Miners' Brewing Co., (E. D. Pa. 1908) 162 Fed. 327, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717; In re Torchia, (W. D. Pa. 1911) 185 Fed. 576.

But the court may order a sale of the estate of the bankrupt upon which a lien is asserted, without first determining either the validity or amount of the lien. In re Union Trust Co., (1st Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 937, 59 C. C. A. 461: In re Loveland, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1907) 155 Fed. 838. 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18.

Fed. 838, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18.

Failure of lienholders to object to sale equivalent to assent.—Holders of liens on realty of a bankrupt, who with knowledge of proceedings by the trustee for the sale of the same free from liens permit such proceedings to continue without objection, and the proceeds of the property to be used in the payment of expenses of administration, by necessary implication assent to the same and cannot afterward object to such proper expenditures. In re Torchia, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 188 Fed. 207.

Effect of pending composition proceeding.

Where the money necessary to pay taxes and other debts having priority, required to be deposited by section 12b as a condition to the enforcement of a composition, had not been deposited, though several months had intervened since the court declared that such deposit must be made before any composition could be confirmed, it was held that the pendency of the petition for such composition was no defense to a petition for the sale of the bankrupt's assets. In re Fisher, (D. C. N. J. 1905) 135 Fed. 223, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 366.

When sale free from incumbrances will be ordered - Generally. - The court of bankruptcy will not order the trustee to sell encumbered property of the bankrupt free of its incumbrances unless it appears that a price will probably be realized substantially greater than the amount of the liens; that there are no rights which cannot be brought before the bankruptcy court, and which would require foreclosure proceedings proper; that the court is accurately informed as to the facts; and that all parties in interest have had notice and full opportunity to be heard. In re Pit-telkow, (E. D. Wis. 1899) 92 Fed. 901, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472. And see to the same effect In re Goldsmith, (N. D. Tex. 1902) 118 Fed. 763, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; Chauncey v. Dyke, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 119 Fed. 1, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; George Carroll, etc., Co. v. Young, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1903) 119 Fed. 576, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 643; In re Shoe, etc., Reporter, (C. C. Rep. 483.

Essential that estate be benefited. — The power of the court in ordering a sale of mortgaged property should never be exercised un-less the bankrupt estate will be benefited thereby or the mortgagee proves his claim on the mortgage in the bankruptcy proceedings. In re Foster, (D. C. Vt. 1910) 181 Fed.

The court of bankruptcy will not order a trustee in bankruptcy to sell the bankrupt's real property free of liens, unless satisfied that the interests of the general creditors will be advanced thereby, and that the interests of creditors holding liens on such property will not be injuriously affected. In re Styer, (E. D. Pa. 1899) 98 Fed. 290, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424; In re Shaeffer, (E. D. Pa. 1900) 105 Fed. 352, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 248.

Value need not affirmatively appear. -Where a bankrupt's trustee applied to sell all the interest of the bankrupt in the estate of his father, and the referee found that there was a purchaser who was willing to give a substantial sum for the proposed transfer, and it did not plainly appear that the bankrupt had no right in his father's estate which passed to his trustee, the sale was authorized. In re Gutterson, (D. C. Mass. 1905) 136 Fed. 698, 14 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 495.
Necessity of notice. — An order directing a sale of a bankrupt's property on which valid liens exist should be granted only on notice to lien creditors, and the record should affirmatively disclose that every creditor whose lien will be discharged by the sale has received such notice. In re Platteville Foundry, etc., Co., (W. D. Wis. 1906) 147 Fed. 828, 17

Am. Bankr. Rep. 291.

Where the time fixed in an order by a referee authorizing a private sale of the property of a bankrupt at a specified upset price had expired without a sale having been made, it was held that notice to creditors and others interested was essential before the making of a new order of sale. Allgair v. Fisher, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 962, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278.

But see In re Hawkins, (W. D. N. Y. 1903) 125 Fed. 633, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49, wherein it was held that under general order No. 18 (2) a court of bankruptcy or a referee has discretionary power to order a private sale of a bankrupt's property, with or without notice; and that the action of a referee in directing such a sale ought not to be disturbed, unless it clearly appears that his discretion was improvidently exercised.

Lienors entitled to hearing. — If the trustee desires to sell the real estate free of liens, without redemption, he must give the lienholders their day in court, because they are entitled to be heard before the property is discharged from their liens, and the liens transferred to the fund arising from the sale thereof. In re Gerdes, (S. D. Ohio 1900) 102 Fed. 318, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346; In re Saxton Furnace Co., (E. D. Pa. 1905) 136

Fed. 697, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483.

Lienor may be brought into court on rule to show cause. — One claiming a lien on the property of a bankrupt, which is in the possession of his trustee, may be brought into the court of bankruptcy by service of a rule to show cause for the purposes of a petition by the trustee for an order to sell the property free of liens and transferring all liens to the proceeds. A plenary suit is not absolutely required, and is not usual when the trustee is in possession of the property, and the controversy is only of a matter of procedure in administration, the substantial rights of the parties not being affected. In re E. A. Kinsey Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 694.

Manner of selling assets. — The power to sell is under the direction of the court; the trustee has no authority with reference to the estate, to which he has the statutory title, except such as is expressly or impliedly given by the law. Hobbs r. Frazier, (Fla. 1908) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 684. See Fed. 153, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210.

The court will direct the method of sale and distribution so as to protect the rights and interests of all parties concerned. In re Worland, (N. D. Ia. 1899) 92 Fed. 893, 1

Am. Bankr. Rep. 450.

Private sale. — The bankruptcy court, under the broad powers given by the statute, may order the sale of either real or personal property at private sale. In re Edes, (D. C. Me. 1905) 135 Fed. 595, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep.

A bankrupt is not entitled to object to a private sale of his interest in the estate, before appraisement, for the first time before the judge; but should raise such objections on an application to the referee for a modification of the original judgment. In re Gutterson, (D. C. Mass: 1905) 136 Fed. 698,

14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495.

Sale by auctioneer. - The statute authorizes the appointment of an auctioneer by the court to sell property of a bankrupt's estate, in advance of any particular occasion therefor. In re Benjamin, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 175, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 481.

The court may appoint commissioners to make the sale; there being no requirement that such sales shall be made by the trustee. Sturgiss v. Corbin, (4th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 1, 72 C. C. A. 179, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543.

Attorney cannot sell assets. - The general employment of an attorney at law, as counsel and attorney by the receiver of a bank-rupt, does not authorize the attorney to make a sale of the bankrupt's assets, nor to take the proceeds thereof. Mason v. Wolkowich, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 699, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 714.

Joinder of all trustees in petition for sale. -Where the creditors of a bankrupt appointed two trustees at their first meeting, who applied for a sale of the bankrupt's assets, pending which a third trustee was elected, who qualified and joined in the petition for sale, the fact that the petition was presented by two trustees only in the first instance was no objection thereto, since, if title to the bankrupt's estate was not vested in the two trustees on their appointment and qualification, it became vested in the three on the appointment and qualification of the third. In re Fisher, (D. C. N. J. 1905) 135 Fed. 223, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 366.
Liens must be paid. — When a sale of the Lienor not liable for expenses of estate. -A court of bankruptcy has no power to take the proceeds of mortgaged property of the bankrupt, which belongs to the lien creditor, to pay the expenses of the general estate, or the expense of conducting the bankrupt's business through a receiver or the trustee, without the consent of the lien creditor, express or implied. Sale of assets free of dower rights. Where a bankrupt's wife, by letter to his trustees, agreed to extinguish her dower interest in her husband's real estate for a specified price, it was held that she thereby consented to a sale of the real estate free from her dower interest, which the court thereupon had power to order. Sale subject to incumbrances. — An order by the bankruptcy court directing a sale of the bankrupt's property without mentioning liens will be construed as authorizing only a sale subject to existing liens. In re Platte-ville Foundry, etc., Co., (W. D. Wis. 1906) 147 Fed. 828, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291. Where the property of a bankrupt has been sold subject to incumbrances, the purchaser takes title subject to existing municipal claims and taxes. In re Gerry, (R. D. Pa. 1902) 112 Fed. 957, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep.

Effect of sale as to adverse claimant. -Unless there is some special direction in an order for the sale of real estate of a bank-rupt, the trustee sells only the interest of the bankrupt therein; and one claiming an interest adverse to the bankrupt, and who is a stranger to the proceedings, is not affected by the sale, and has no interest in the proceeds; nor has the court of bankruptcy, after the property has been sold and conveyed, jurisdiction to adjudicate the rights of such claimant therein. In re Muhlhauser, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1903) 121 Fed. 669, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 236.

Setting sale aside - Subsequent offer. - A sale will not be set aside except for gross inadequacy of price, or circumstances impeaching its fairness. A subsequent offer of a better price than that realized cannot, alone, authorize a resale. In re Ethier, (E. D. Wis. 1902) 118 Fed. 107, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 160; In re Belden, (N. D. N. Inadequacy of price. — While a sale may be set aside on the sole ground of inadequacy, it must be such as to be unconsciousable. In re Shapiro, (M. D. Pa. 1907) 154 Fed. 673, 19 Am. Rankr. Rep. 165. Fed. 673. 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 125.

Agreement to raise bid. - An anction sale of property by a trustee in bankruptcy is not invalid because of a private arrangement be-tween the attorney for the purchaser and the auctioneer, that the bid of any other person should be raised a certain amount each time until a sign to stop was given. In re Retterer Mfg. Co., (M. D. Pa. 1907) 156 Fed. 719, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

Bidding prevented. - A sale will be set aside on petition of a creditor who was prevented, from bidding by the action of the trustee, on his giving security to make a substantially higher bid for the property at a resale. In re Shea, (D. C. Mass. 1903) 122 Fed. 742, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 481.

Trustee's misconduct. — A court of bank-ruptcy has general authority to set aside a sale of a bankrupt's property, made under an order of a referée, on the ground of misconduct of the trustee in making such sale, without proof of fraud on the part of the pur-chaser, and although the order of the referee did not require the sale to be made subject to the approval of the court. In re Shea, (D. C. Mass. 1903) 122 Fed. 742, 10 Am. Bankr.

Purchase by appraiser. — The principles of equity and considerations of public policy forbid a purchase, at the sale of a trustee in bankruptcy, by one of the appraisers of the property; and, in such case, the sale will be set aside with leave to the District Court to restore the parties so far as practicable to their original situation. In re Frazin, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 307.

Purchase by trustee.—So, where the property has been purchased by the trustee, the sale must be set aside. In re Hawley, (N. D. Ia. 1902) 117 Fed. 364, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 61.

On the setting aside of a private sale, the purchaser thereat, when not in fault, will be protected to the extent of the price paid, and the improvements made, by him. In re Fisher, (D. C. N. J. 1906) 148 Fed. 907, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404.

Review of order setting aside sale. — An order of a District Court in bankruptcy, setting aside a sale of property and directing a resale, is not reviewable on a petition to su-perintend and revise, until after the resale has been made and confirmed. Sturgiss v. Corbin, (4th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 1, 72 C. C. A. 179, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543.

c [Trustee to convey title.] The title to property of a bankrupt estate which has been sold, as herein provided, shall be conveyed to the purchaser by the trustee. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 566.]

Court may summarily enforce contract of sale. - Whenever the receiver of a bankrupt, by direction of the court appointing him, makes a sale of assets in his possession, the parties concerned are bound to recognize him as an officer of the court; and hence such court not only has power to enforce in a summary manner the completion of the contract of sale, but the parties involved are deemed to have consented to such proceeding. Mason v. Wolkowich, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 699, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 714; In re Jungmann, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 186 Fed.

Purchaser has right to be heard. — Under a contract made with a receiver in bankruptcy for the purchase of property of the estate, including a stock of goods, by which the purchaser agreed to take "all salable merchandise in good condition at the lowest market purchase price," it was held that he could not be required to accept the inventory and prices made by the appraisers appointed by the court, without having an opportunity to be heard as to the condition and market price of the goods. In re Jungmann, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 302.

Bankrupt corporation cannot interfere with purchaser of its business, good will, and name. — In S. F. Myers Co. r. Tuttle, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 188 Fed. 532, it appears that the S. F. Myers Co.npany, doing a mail order jewelry business, became bankrupt, and its assets, including its good will and corporate name, were purchased by T. Thereafter the sons of Myers formed a corporation called the "S. F. Myers' Sons Company" and undertook to carry on a similar business at the same place occupied by the bankrupt corporation. This was enjoined, at the suit of T., and the new corporation was ordered either to change its name, so as not to produce confusion, or change its place of business; it also being enjoined from interfering with the business carried on by T. under the name of the old corporation. And it was held that the old corporation, having obtained a dis-charge in bankruptcy, but having no assets, was not entitled to enjoin T. from continu-ing to use the name of the old corporation; but that such corporation could be restrained from interfering with the business of T. which he was carrying on under such name.

d [Composition set aside — vesting title in trustee.] Whenever a composition shall be set aside, or discharge revoked, the trustee shall, upon his appointment and qualification, be vested as herein provided with the title to all of the property of the bankrupt as of the date of the final decree setting aside the composition or revoking the discharge. They have no lien or other right which entitles them to recover the excess paid or secured to the preferred creditor. Batchelder, etc., Co. σ. Whitmore, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 355, 10 Am. e [Avoiding certain transfers — recovery of property.] The trustee may avoid any transfer by the bankrupt of his property which any creditor of such bankrupt might have avoided, and may recover the property so transferred, or its value, from the person to whom it was transferred, unless he was a bona fide holder for value prior to the date of the adjudication. Such property may be recovered or its value collected from whoever may have received it, except a bona fide holder for value. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 566.]

May seize property conveyed to corporation for personal benefit. — Where it is shown that a bankrupt, while insolvent, organized a corporation to which he conveyed his property, and which he conducted solely for his own benefit, for the evident purpose of placing such property beyond the reach of his creditors, his trustee may properly be ordered to seize such property as assets of the estate. the passing of a bankruptcy adjudication and the appointment of a trustee, the assets of a corporation, in which the bankrupt was a large stockholder, were sold at the instance of the majority stockholders, in such a manner and for such a consideration as to prejudice the bankrupt's estate, and to apply the bankrupt's interest to an indebtedness owing to a single creditor, it was held that such sale was subject to vacation by the trustee, after his appointment, suing as a stockholder for an alleged abuse by the majority. Rep. 461.
Trustee vested with rights of creditor. -Since the enactment of the amendment of 1910, trustees as to all property in the custody or coming into the custody of the bankruptcy court are vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a creditor holding a lien by legal or equitable proceedings thereon; and also, as to all property not in the custody of the bankruptcy court, are vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a judgment creditor holding an execution duly returned unsatisfied. See section 47a (2), supra, p. 682.

Since the amendment of 1910 decisions holding that a trustee has no other right than belonged to the bankrupt are no longer controlling. In re Gehris-Herbine Co., (E.

D. Pa. 1911) 188 Fed. 502.

And even prior to the amendment of 1910 it was held that when, under section 70e, the trustee seeks to set side a fraudulent or voidable transfer of the bankrupt antedating the four months period, he does so in the creditors' right, to which he is subrogated, and which is vested in him exclusively. In re Gray, (1900) 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647, 47 App. Div. 554, 62 N. Y. S. 618.

A creditor of one discharged in bankruptcy cannot maintain a suit to set aside an alleged fraudulent transfer of the property of the bankrupt, although such transfer may have been made more than four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. The right to sue for such property, and subject it to the payment of the bankrupt's debts, is vested alone in the trustee, and the failure of the trustee to bring such suit within the time prescribed by law does not transfer the right to do so to the creditor. In re Adams, (N. D. N. Y. 1898) 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94; Ruhl-Koblegard Co. v. Gillespie, (1907) 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 643, 61 W. Va. 584, 11 Ann. Cas. 929, 56 S. E. 898.

Sec. 70 a.

But prior to the appointment of a trustee it would seem clear that the general creditors, by bill or other appropriate proceedings, may take steps to set aside fraudulent transfers of property; and under section 11 the suit so pending might then be continued by the trustee after his appointment. See Guaranty Title, etc., Co. v. Pearlman, (W. D. Pa. 1906) 144 Fed. 550. And see the annotation under section 64b (2), supra, p. 771.

Trustee cannot recover when creditor could not do so. - A trustee in bankruptcy cannot set aside a transfer in the interest of creditors, when the creditor himself would have no standing to do so. In re Sayed, (W. D. Mich. 1910) 185 Fed. 962.

Bona fide transactions are excepted from the operation of the statute, as, indeed, they would have been without being expressly excepted; therefore the power conferred on the trustee, under section 70e, does not warrant interference with, or the disturbance of, the rights of bona fide purchasers for value.

In re Rudnick, (D. C. Wash. 1900) 102 Fed.

Buzzell, (D. C. Me. 1910) 178 Fed. 596.

Cannot enjoin disposition of property. The statute does not vest a court of bankruptcy with jurisdiction to take property alleged to belong to the bankrupt out of the possession of a third party, unless by his consent, either permanently, by a plenary suit, or temporarily and by summary process, pending adjudication on a petition filed; and, lacking such jurisdiction, it is without power to enjoin the third party from disposing of such property. In re Ward, (D. C. Mass. 1900) 104 Fed. 985, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215; In re Berkowitz, (E. D. Pa. 1906) 143 Fed. 598, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251. But see the annotation under section 11a, supra, p. 531.

Burden of showing bona fides. — In proceedings by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside a fraudulent transfer made by the bankrupt, the burden is on the defendants to show that they are bona fide purchasers for value, such a defense being an affirmative one. Lawrence v. Lowrie, (M. D. Pa. 1903) 133

Fed. 995, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 297.
Valid liens protected. — Under the rule heretofore stated (see annotation supra, p. 811, under section 70a generally) the title of the trustee to the property of the bankrupt is subject to all valid liens, and to all legal and equitable claims existing against it; and this rule also applies where recovery is sought under section 70e. Philadelphia Fourth St. Bank v. Yardley, (1897) 165 U. S. 634, 17 S. Ct. 439, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 855. And see to the same effect Duplan Silk Co. v. Spencer, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 689, 8 Am. Thus, if under the state law it is not unlawful for an insolvent debtor to prefer a creditor by a transfer of property, if made in good faith and for an adequate consideration, the trustee of a bankrupt cannot set aside such a transfer under section 70c. Manning r. Evans, (D. C. N. J. 1907) 156 Fed. 106, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 217.

So, also, where a bankrupt treats certain property as having been sold by him, and assigns the proceeds thereof as collateral security for a loan, neither he nor his trustee will be heard to assert the contrary. Philadelphia Fourth St. Bank v. Yardley, (1897) 165 U. S. 634, 17 S. Ct. 439, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 855; Aldine Trust Co. v. Smith, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 182 Fed. 449.

Reducing claim to judgment.—The title of the bankrupt having vested in the trustee under the general provisions of section 70a, it is not necessary that the trustee should reduce his claim to judgment prior to proceeding for the recovery of property under the provisions of section 70c. Mitchell v. Mitchell, (E. D. N. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 280, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; Zartman v. Water-17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; Zarşman v. vyaterloo First Nat. Bank, (1905) 109 App. Div. 406, 96 N. Y. S. 633, affirmed (1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27, 189 N. Y. 267, 82 N. But the trustee does not, by obtaining a judgment against the bankrupt for the proceeds of a trapafer in fraud of creditors, make an election which prevents him from suing in equity to set aside such transfer. Thomas v. Sugarman, (1910) 218 U. S. 129,

30 S. Ct. 650.

[Jurisdiction.] For the purpose of such recovery any court of bankruptcy as hereinbefore defined, and any State court which would have had jurisdiction if bankruptcy had not intervened, shall have concurrent jurisdiction. [(Inserted 1903) 32 Stat. L. 800.

Jurisdiction of bankruptcy court. - Under the statute, as enacted originally, the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court over actions for the recovery of property under section 70s was not provided for, and it was held that such jurisdiction depended on the consent of the adverse party. Apparently for the purpose of correcting this and other defects, section 23b was amended in 1903; but the amendment failed to expressly specify section 70e. and for that reason there was a conflict of authority as to whether actions instituted under section 70e could be prosecuted in the bankruptcy court without the consent of the defendant; this subject, however, was finally set at rest by the amendment of section 220 by the Act of June 25, 1910, which provides that in such cases the consent of the defendant is not necessary in order to confer jurisdiction on the court of bankruptcy. See sec. 23b and annotation thereunder, supra, p. 595. See also Hurley v. Devlin, (D. C. Kan. 1906) 149 Fed. 268, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 797; Palmer r. Roginsky, (S. D. N. Where a trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to assets of the bankrupt which are in the possession of a receiver appointed by a state court of competent jurisdiction, comity re-quires, as a general rule, that the trustee should first make application to the state court, instead of to the bankruptcy court, for an order for the possession of such assets. Carling c. Seymour Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 483, 8 Am. Bankr.

Rep. 29.

Referees. — Prior to the amendment of section 230 by the Act of June 25, 1910, it was held that a referee had no jurisdiction of an action under section 70e to recover property. for the reason that in such case the property is not in the possession of the court. In re Overholzer, (N. D. N. Dak. 1909) 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 10, disapproxing In re Shultz, (W. D. N. Y. 1904) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690. And see supra, p. 595, the annotation under section 23b.

Ancillary jurisdiction. - The District Court of a district other than that in which the bankruptcy proceedings are pending may en-tertain a suit to set aside a fraudulent transfer made by the bankrupt to parties residing in such other district. Lawrence v. Lowrie, (M. D. Pa. 1904) 133 Fed. 995, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 297. And see section 2 (20) and the annotation thereunder, supra, p. 480.

Prior to enactment of the amendment of 1910 it was held that when a trustee in bankruptcy seeks to enforce rights or to recover property in a district other than that of the court which appointed bim, he stands in the position of those whose rights he has acquired, and can resort only to the same courts, state or federal, and is confined to the same remedies, subject to the exceptions made by the bankruptcy law. Hull v. Burr, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 945, 18

Am. Bankr. Rep. 541.

Remedies available. - The trustee may prosecute any suit to recover assets in the hands of third parties, or to enforce the payment of claims, that could have been prose-cuted by the creditors themselves had no proceedings in bankruptcy been instituted. Mitchell v. Mitchell, (E. D. N. C. 1906) 147 Fed. 280, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; Thomas v. Roddy, (1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 873, 122 App. Div. 851, 107 N. Y. S. 473. See also Hull v. Burr, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 945, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541. And see the annotation under section 23b, supra,

And in such action the presumption is that the trustee has complied with all the requirements of the bankruptcy law, and is qualified to act. Breckons v. Snyder, (1905) 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112, 211 Pa. St. 176, 60 Atl. 575.

The plaintiff, as the trustee in bankruptcy of a mortgagor, has the same rights as a creditor armed with an attachment or an execution. Zartman v. Waterloo First Nat. Bank, (1907) 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27, 189 N. Y. 267, 82 N. E. 127. And see section 47a (2), supra, p. 682.

It has also been held that the bankruptcy law, instead of vesting in the trustee the remedies of the creditors against the property, such as judgment, execution, and creditor's bills, vests in him at once the title to the property — makes him the owner of it.
Mitchell v. Mitchell, (E. D. N. C. 1906) 147

When plenary suit necessary. — Where a third person is in possession of goods alleged to belong to the bankrupt, and such property is held under claim and color of title, the claimant is entitled to retain them until dispossessed in a plenary suit. In re Jackier, (M. D. Pa. 1910) 179 Fed. 720; In re Shinn, In re Jackier, (D. C. N. J. 1911) 185 Fed. 990. And see supra, p. 595, the annotation under section Trover and conversion. — A trustee in bankruptcy may sue in trover for a conversion of goods occurring either before or after bankruptcy; and in the declaration he may join a count upon the bankrupt's title and a count upon the trustee's title, being vested by section 70a (6) with the bankrupt's right of action. Burns v. O'Gorman Co., (C. C. R. I. 1906) 150 Fed. 226, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.

Bill in equity. — A trustee in bankruptcy occupies a relation similar to that of a judgment creditor of the bankrupt, and may file a bill in equity to set aside a fraudulent conveyance of real estate by the bankrupt, although neither the trustee nor any creditor has reduced any claim against the bankrupt to judgment. Beasley v. Coggins, (1904) 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355, 48 Fla. 215, 37 So. 213.

Fraudulent transferee as party.—A fraudulent transferree, who has transferred to another fraudulent transferree all the property rights which she received under her transfer, is not a necessary party to the trustee's action. Skillen v. Endelman, (1902) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 766, 39 Misc. 261, 79 N. Y. S.

Necessity of showing insufficiency of assets. In actions under section 70e the pleading and proof should show that the property of the bankrupt is not sufficient to pay his creditors in full; but a defect in this respect may be amended. Prescott v. Galluccio. (N. D. N. Y. 1908) 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229.

f [Revestment of title on confirmation of composition.] Upon the confirmation of a composition offered by a bankrupt, the title to his property shall thereupon revest in him. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 566.]

Revesting of title. - On the confirmation of a composition the title to all the property passes from the trustee and revests in the bankrupt free from the claims of his creditors. In re Rider, (N. D. And see section 12e and the annotation thereunder, supra, p. 545.

Adverse claimant may assert rights as against bankrupt. — On the conformation of a composition the title to property in the custody of the court, and claimed adversely, is to be determined as between the bankrupt and the claimant; in such case the bankrupt does not stand in the shoes of his former creditors. In re J. C. Winship Co., (7th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 93, 56 C. C. A. 45, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

Sec. 71. [Bankruptcy Records.] — That the clerks of the several district courts of the United States shall prepare and keep in their respective offices complete and convenient indexes of all petitions and discharges in bankruptcy heretofore or hereafter filed in the said courts, and shall, when requested so to do, issue certificates of search certifying as to whether or not any such petitions or discharges have been filed; and said clerks shall be entitled to receive for such certificates the same fees as now allowed by law for certificates as to judgments in said courts: Provided, That said bankruptcy indexes and dockets shall at all times be open to inspection and examination by all persons or corporations without any fee or charge therefor. [(Inserted 1903) 32 Stat. L. 800.]

Cross-reference: As to Duty of clerks generally, see the several subdivisions of section 51, supra, p. 694.

Sec. 72. [Compensation of Officers Restricted.] — That neither the referee, receiver, marshal, nor trustee shall in any form or guise receive, nor shall the court allow him, any other or further compensation for his services than that expressly authorized and prescribed in this Act. [(Inserted 1903) 32 Stat. L. 800; (amended 1910) 36 Stat. L. 842.]

Compensation of trustees, receivers, and marshals, see the several subdivisions of section 48, supra, p. 689.

Bar to extra allowances. - Section 72 is an absolute bar to any extra allowance, however onerous or valuable the service rendered may have been. In re Coventry Evans Furniture Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 673, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623. See also In re Epstein, (W. D. Ark. 1901) 109 Fed. 878, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 191; In re Screws (S. D. Ga. 1906) 147 Fed. 989, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. And see the annotation under sections 40 and 48, supra, pp. 666, 689.

Thus it has been held that the court has no power to allow special compensation to a referee for services rendered on a reference to him of a contested application for discharge as authorized by general order in bankruptcy No. 12. In re Wilcox, (W. D. Mich. 1907) 156 Fed. 685, 19 Am. Bankı. Rep. 241.

Referee as special master. — It has been held that there is no authority for converting a referee in bankruptcy into a special master, nor for allowing him compensation as such. In re Sweeney, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 612, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 866. See also In re Wilcox, (W. D. Mich. 1907) 156 Fed. 685, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 241.

But in some districts it has been the practice to allow compensation for services, in the nature of master's services, outside of the duties of the referee. Fellows r. Freuden-thal, (C. C. #### THE TIME WHEN THIS ACT SHALL GO INTO EFFECT.

a [Force and effect.] This Act shall go into full force and effect upon its passage: [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 566.]

Provided, however, That no petition for voluntary bankruptcy shall be filed within one month of the passage thereof, and no petition for involuntary bankrupter shall be filed within four months of the passage thereof. [(1898) 50 Stat. L. 566.

Time of taking effect. - The Bankruptcy Act took effect, as to involuntary proceedings, from the date of its approval, July 1, 1898. Blake r. Francis-Valentine Co., (N. D. Cal. 1898) 89 Fed. 691, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; In re Bruss-Ritter Co., (E. D. Wis. 1898) 90 Fed. 651, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58.

From the date of the taking effect of the Bankruptcy Act, though by its terms no proceedings thereunder for involuntary bankruptcy could be commenced for four months thereafter, the relations of debtor and creditor and those between creditors were governed by its provisions; and an act of bankruptcy committed by a debtor after that date entitles every ereditor to the rights given by the Act, and to invoke the aid of the court in preserving such rights until they are en-Blake v. Francis-Valentine Co., (N. D. Cal. 1898) 89 Fed. 691, 1 Am. Bankr. Rej. 372. And see to the same effect E. C. Westcott Co. v. Berry. (N. H. 1899) 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 264; Kosches v. Libowitz, (Tex. 1900) 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265 note, 56 S. W.

Not retroactive. - It is apparent that it was the intention of Congress that the law should not be retroactive, so that a person could be forced into the bankruptcy courts for any act done by him prior to July 1, It was only intended to act in the future, and to take cognizance of such acts of bankruptcy as were committed after its passage. Grunsfeld v. Brownell, (1904) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599, 12 N. M. 192, 76 Pac.

[The amendment of Feb. 5, 1903 provides:] That the provisions of this amendatory Act shall not apply to bankruptcy cases pending when this Act takes effect, but such cases shall be adjudicated and disposed of conformably to the provisions of the said Act of July first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight. [32 Stat. L: 801.]

Not retroactive. - The amendatory Act of Feb. 5, 1903, by its express terms does not apply to nor affect any proceeding instituted before it took effect, and in such proceedings all of the provisions of the original Act are to be enforced the same as though not amended. In re Docker-Foster Co., (E. D. Pa. 1903) 123 Fed. 190, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 584.

As to suit brought by trustee. - The provision contained in the Act of 1903, that it "shall not apply to bankruptcy cases pending when this Act takes effect, but such cases shall be adjudicated and disposed of conformably to the provisions" of the original Act, applies to the administration of bankruptcy cases proper, and not to a suit brought by a trustee. Such a suit is not a bankruptcy case within the meaning of the provision in the amended Act. The general rule is that the right to any particular remedy is not a vested right, and that a statute creating new remedies, or conferring jurisdiction upon courts which previously did not have it, is not confined to rights of action arising thereafter, but may be availed of to enforce any existing rights of action. Pond v. New York Nat. Exch. Bank, (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 124 Fed. 992, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 343.

[The amendment of June 25, 1910, provides:] That the provisions of this amendatory Act shall not apply to bankruptcy cases pending when this Act takes effect, but such cases shall be adjudicated and disposed of conformably to the provisions of said Act approved July first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, as amended by said Act approved February fifth, nineteen hundred and three, and as further amended by said Act approved June fifteenth, nineteen hundred and six. [36 Stat. L. 842.]

The bankruptcy law is paramount to all the state insolvent laws, and where the effect of enforcing the state law is to defeat the object of the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, that part of the state law must yield to the provisions of the latter. In sec. Interthe provisions of the latter. In re International Coal Min. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1906) 143 Fed. 665, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 309.

The Bankruptcy Act on its passage at once suspended and superseded all state insolvency laws, as to cases coming within its purview, whether the insolvent be a person, partnership, or corporation; and proceedings instituted thereafter under any such insolvency law by or against an insolvent subject to adjudication as a bankrupt, either voluntary or involuntary, are void. In re F. A. Hall Co., (D. C. Conn. 1903) 121 Fed. 992, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88.

Proceedings in state courts under state insolvent laws are, as against proceedings under the Bankruptcy Act, coram non judice. Such proceedings have no validity, no more than have proceedings in a state court when once a cause has been properly removed therefrom into a federal court. In re Standard Fuller's Earth Co., (S. D. Ala. 1911) 186

The postponement of the right to file petitions in involuntary cases until four months after the passage of the Bankruptcy Act does not authorize state courts, in the interval, to take jurisdiction of proceedings begun under state insolvency laws, being a mere regulation of procedure, and not a denial or impairment of the rights of suitors; and, therefore, a District Court of the United States, sitting in bankruptcy, has jurisdiction to entertain a petition in involuntary proceedings against a corporation amenable to the law, and to appoint a temporary receiver of its effects, notwithstanding the fact that proceedings had been begun against the same corporation in a state court, under a statute of the state, after the passage of the national bankruptcy law, but before the date when involuntary petitions under it could be filed. In re Bruss-Ritter Co., (E. D. Wis. 1898) 90 Fed. 651, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58.

Extent of suspension. - State insolvency laws are suspended by the Bankrupt Act only so far as the two are in conflict, and in so far as the bankruptcy law covers and supplies what is undertaken to be disposed of by the state law. Johnson v. Crawford, (M. D. Pa. 1907) 154 Fed. 761.

And in Singer v. National Bedstead Mfg. Co., (N. J. 1903) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 276, it was said, per Stevenson, V. C.: "It is perfectly plain that state systems of voluntary and involuntary bankruptcy may remain today in full operation upon large numbers of insolvent natural persons and corporations who cannot be brought within the operations of the national Bankrupt Act under any pos-sible state of facts. It is also, it seems to me, equally plain that a state system of involuntary insolvency also remains in full operation upon persons and corporations, who are, as possible bankrupts, within the operation of the national Bankruptcy Act, so far as the state system deals with cases of which the bankruptcy courts, under the federal Act, can obtain no jurisdiction. . . . The intention of the Act is to supply the law of certain cases, and to supply a special court to enforce that law. All other cases of bankruptcy or insolvency are left to be dealt with as the state legislature may see fit."

The bankruptcy law does not attempt to supervise insolvency proceedings under state laws, undertaken and carried out more than four months prior to the institution of bankruptcy proceedings; nor to inquire into the assignments and transfers of the hankrupt's property not made within such period. Dissolution or winding-up proceedings. The operation of the bankruptcy laws of the United States cannot be defeated by insolvent commercial corporations applying to be wound up under state statutes. In re Watts, (1903) 190 U. S. 1, 23 S. Ct. 718, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 933, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep.

The Bankruptcy Act so far controls the matter of the dissolution of an insolvent corporation as to prevent its legal extinction by superseding all state laws in conflict with its provisions to an extent necessary to enable the creditors of insolvent corporations to have the assets of their insolvent debtor administered in accordance with its terms. In re International Coal Min. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1906) 143 Fed. 665, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 309.

But it has been held that the creditors of a corporation may proceed with their ordinary remedies under state laws until bank-ruptcy proceedings have been instituted. State r. King County, (Wash. 1899) 2 Am.

Bankr. Rep. 92.

Assignments for the benefit of creditors. As assignments for the benefit of creditors are, under section 3a (4), in themselves, acts of bankruptcy on the part of the assignor, proceedings under such assignments are superseded by his bankruptcy. See section 3a (4), and the annotation thereunder, supra, p. 488.

But it has been held that state statutes which merely regulate the administration of the trust created by an assignment for the benefit of creditors are not suspended; and proceedings under such statutes, or under a common-law deed of assignment, are not void or voidable by reason of the existence merely of a bankruptcy law, or unless proceedings in bankruptcy are subsequently instituted against the assignor. Supplementary proceedings.—The action of a receiver under a statute, like that of New York. permitting the examination of judgment debtors supplementary to an execution, is a substitute for a receivership in a ereditor's bill (Olney v. Laws authorizing imprisonment for debt. A state law which authorizes the arrest and imprisonment of a judgment debtor, on a showing that he is about to remove or has concealed property with intent to defraud his creditors, is not an insolvency law of the state, although it provides that the debtor may be released on his giving a bond that he will apply within thirty days for the benefit of such law and comply with its requirements, but merely provides a remedy in aid of execution, and its operation is not suspended by the national Bankruptey Act. A single man committing the act with a married woman may be found guilty though the indiotment charges that he is a married man. U. S. v. Cook, (1909) 15 N. M. 124, 103 Pac. 305.

BRIBERY.

Vol. I, p. 712, sec. 1781.

Agreement to give and receive bribe. -- An agreement between a member of Congress and another, the one to receive a bribe for aiding to procure an office and the other to pay the same, constitutes a substantive offense under this section by each of the parties thereto, and cannot be made the basis of an indictment under R. S. sec. 5440, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 247, for a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States. U.S.

v. Dietrich, (1904) 126 Fed. 664.

"Member of Congress" defined.— A person elected to the office of senator of the United States is not, until he has been accepted by the Senate as a member and has assumed the duties of the office, a "member of Congress" within the meaning of this section, making it a criminal offense for a "member of Congress or any officer or agent of the government" to receive or agree to receive a bribe for procuring or aiding to procure for another any contract, office, or place from the government. U. S. v. Dietrich, (1904) 126 Fed. 676.

A clerk in one of the departments is subject to indictment under this section as an "officer and agent" or an "officer and clerk" of the United States. McGregor v. U. S., (C. Ó. A. 1904) 134 Fed. 187.

Yol. 1, p. 713, sec. 5451.

Elements of offense. -- The tendering by a person of his personal check, drawn on a bank and payable to an officer of the United States,

Indictment. - Two persons cannot be severally charged in the same indictment under this section and in a single count, the one with agreeing to receive a bribe as a member of Congress and the other with agreeing to give such bribe, which constitute distinct and separate offenses. U.S. v. Dietrich, (1904) 126 Fed. 664.

Limitation of prosecution. — In U. Driggs, (1903) 125 Fed. 520, it was held that delivery to a member of Congress of a nonnegotiable note made by a government contractor, promising to pay a certain sum as the proceeds of the contract were received, executed pursuant to an agreement to pay such member for his services in procuring the contract, did not constitute the giving or re-ceiving of "property" or a "valuable consideration," within the meaning of this statute, such note being made unlawful and invalid by the statute itself; and that indictments under the statute, based on payments subsequently made and received in accordance with the terms of the note, were not barred by limitation, where such payments were made within three years, although the note was delivered more than three years prior to the finding of the indictments.

to such officer, with intent thereby to affect his official action, does not constitute the crime of bribery, under this section, since a check made and delivered for such illegal purpose is void, and not within any of the classes of instruments enumerated in the statute.

U. S. v. Green, (1905) 136 Fed. 618.

Person acting in "official function."—A person employed by the United States as an assistant statistician in the department of agriculture, in performance of the duties with which he is charged by the rules of the department, acts for the United States in an "official function," within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Haas, (1908) 163 Fed.

"Lawful duty." - The words duty," as used in this section, are not limited to a duty imposed by law or statute, but include duty lawfully imposed in any manner. U. S. r. Haas, (1908) 163 Fed. 908; Haas v. Henkel, (1909) 166 Fed. 621, affirmed (1910) 216 U. S. 462, 30 S. Ct. 249, 54 U. S. (L. ed.)

Designation of offense. — The offense denounced by this section is properly described in a complaint as bribery of an officer of the United States, being so designated in the marginal note to the section, which was a part of the Revised Statutes when the same were enacted. U. S. v. Green, (1905) 136 Fed. 618, affirmed 199 U.S. 601, 26 S. Ct. 748, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 328.

Indictment. - An indictment which charged the defendant with bribing an officer, etc., by tendering to him "a certain obligation for the payment of money, to wit, the personal check of him, the said [defendant], drawn upon the Knickerbocker Trust Company of New York city, N. Y., in favor of the said [officer] for the sum of three hundred and twenty-five dollars, with intent," etc., but which did not set out the check, nor give its date or contents, nor allege that the trust company named was in existence or engaged in the banking business, was held to be insufficient to charge the offense stated, because it did not show the check to have been an obligation for the payment of money, nor so identify it as to protect the defendant in case of a subsequent indictment for the same offense. U. S. v. Green, (1905) 136 Fed. 618, apprened 199 U. S. 601, 26 S. Ct. 748, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 328.

Venue. - The crime of bribing a public officer, when begun by mailing a letter containing the money in one federal district, and completed by the receipt of the letter in another district, is triable in the latter district. Benson v. Henkel, (1905) 198 U. S. 1, 25 S. Ct. 569, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 919.

Evidence. — In a proceeding for the removal of a defendant to another federal district for trial on an indictment charging him with bribing an officer of the postal department to use his official position to promote the sale to the government of articles in which defendant was interested as agent, evidence that defendant and such officer were personally acquainted, that the sales were made by defendant, who in soliciting the same talked with such officer and his superiors who in fact made the purchases, and that after receiving his commissions on the sales he paid a similar amount to such officer without any explanation of the reason for such payments or evidence showing that they had any connection with the sales, was held to be insufficient, aside from the indictment itself, to show the commission of the crime charged, or to establish probable cause to believe the defendant guilty. U. S. v. Green, (1905) 136 Fed. 618, affirmed 199 U. S. 601, 26 S. Ct. 748. 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 328.

In Vernon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1906) 146 Fed. 121. in a prosecution for alleged bribery of a government officer in violation of this section, the evidence was held to be insufficient to warrant a finding that the defendant made any promise or offer, or gave any money or other valuable thing, to such officer in order to effect his official action.

Indian agent.—R. S. sec. 2058, 3 Fed. Stat. Annot. 349, provides that each Indian agent within his agency shall manage and superintend the intercourse with the Indians, and execute and perform all regulations and duties not inconsistent with the law that may be prescribed by the President, secretary of the interior, or commissioner or superintendent of Indian affairs. Act Feb. 28, 1891, 26 Stat. L. 795, ch. 383, sec. 3, 3 Fed. Stat. Annot. 500, provides that where purchased lands occupied by Indians are not needed for farming or agricultural purposes, or desired for individual allotments, they may be leased, by authority of the council, on such terms and conditions "as the agent in charge of the reservation may recommend," subject to the approval of the secretary of the interior. It was held that an Indian agent, in the execution and completion of leases of such land, was charged with such official trust that his receiving a bribe to influence his official action thereon rendered him subject to punishment under this section. Sharp v. U. S., (C.

C. A. 1905) 138 Fed. 878. Indictment. — Where an indictment against u United States Indian agent for bribery alleged that he, having charge of the execution and completion of certain leases for certain tracts of land in a specified Indian reservation, feloniously and corruptly accepted and received the sum of $1,500 from one A. for the purpose of influencing his action on the completion of such leases — the subject-matter of the leases being mere matter of inducement, and the gravamen of the offense the acceptance of and the asking of the bribe. the indictment was not defective for failure to describe the leases with sufficient certainty. Sharp v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 138 Fed. 878.

CENSUS.

Vol. I, p. 737, sec. 5.

Preference not absolute. - The preference given honorably discharged soldiers of the United States by this section in the matter of employment in the permanent census office is not absolute and regardless of qualifications. Such preference is to be given if the person is equally qualified; but the appointing power still retains and must exercise its discretion and judgment in determining the fitness for the required work of the persons to be selected and retained. To this end the director of the census may fix a reasonable standard of fitness, and guard it by reasonable regulations intended and calculated to secure an efficient permanent force. Such regulations may relate to age, experience, rating, proposed time of service, etc. The preference given by the statute is one with respect to the place sought or held; but if a person of the preferred class fails to secure the place he seeks, or to retain the one he has, there is no obligation on the appointing power to create a vacancy by dismissing an efficient employee to give him another chance. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 64.

The words "all employees of the census office," as used in this section, cannot be held to apply to special agents or other field employees who may be temporarily assigned to service in the census office. (1902) 24 Op.

Atty.-Gen. 78.

Vol. I, p. 742, sec. 8.

Special agents. - The director of the census is authorized, by this section, to employ special agents temporarily in the census office at Washington upon special work not clerical in its nature. (1902) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 78.

Oath of special agents. - The special agents of the census office appointed to collect the statistics referred to in sections 7, 8, and 9 of the Act of March 6, 1902, 32 Stat. L. 52, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 737, are required, under section 18 of the Act of March 3, 1899, 30 Stat. L. 1019, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 746, to take an oath or affirmation before entering upon the discharge of their duties. (1904) 25 Op. Atty. Gen. 228.

Vol. I, p. 747, sec. 21.

False returns after expiration of time allowed for making enumeration. - This Act authorized a supervisor, acting on advice that names had been erroneously omitted by an enumerator from his schedules, to return such schedules for correction after the expiration of the thirty days prescribed for making the enumeration; and, in making such corrections or any additions to his schedules after their return, the enumerator acted in his official capacity, and subject to the penalties prescribed by section 21 of the Act for making false returns. Ching v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1902) 118 Fed. 538.

1909 Supp., p. 716, sec. 7.

First proviso. - The residence and domicile restrictions contained in the first proviso of section 7 apply to all appointments to "positions in the government service" for which applicants are required by law, or by order of the President made pursuant thereto, to be examined before appointment. These restrictions are not confined to examinations for appointments in the departments at Washington. (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 546; (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 567.

The proviso deals only with applicants for examination for admission to the classified service, and does not relate to positions which are expressly excepted from the necessity of an examination as a condition to appointment. (1909) 27 Op. Atty. Gen. 567.

The words "for at least one year previous," as used in this proviso, mean for at least one year next preceding. (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 546.

A citizen and resident of West Virginia, who had been employed since 1903 as field assistant in the United States Geological Survey, we king in such capacity in various states of the Union, was held not to be disqualified by the provisions of this section for appointment to work as "classification assistant" to the land classification board of the Geological Survey, if, during all that period, his home was in West Virginia where his parents and other members of his family resided, which place he had always maintained as his home, to which he intended to return when the exigencies of public service would permit, and from which he never intended to remove. (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 564.

The temporary absence from the United States of an applicant for examination into the civil service of the United States, for two years, on account of illness in her family, was held not to affect such person's bona flde residence and domicile, in a particular state, if, as matter of fact, she went abroad with the intention of remaining temporarily and of returning to her state, and did not abandon such intention during her absence, but at all times meant to return, and finally did return to her home in that state. (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 566.

Questions of "actual bona fide residence" and of "domicile" are mixed questions of law and fact, to be determined in each instance by the civil service commission upon the facts presented. (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen.

The provision in this section with regard to an applicant's being "actually domiciled" in the state or territory where the examination is taken means that he must not only show that he resides in the state or territory where he applies for examination, but that for at least one year previous to his examination he has been actually domiciled there; that is, he shall, for that period, have had his permanent home within such state or territory, a home adopted at least one year previous to his examination, with the intention of making it his permanent abode, which intention shall not have been departed from during the period stated. A requirement that the applicant should have been bodily present within the state during the period of one year before the execution is not justified by the statute. There must, however, have been actual presence at some time within the state in order to establish a residence, which presence must have been accompanied by an intention to continue indefinitely to reside and have one's home at that place. (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 546.

The second and third provises, which relate to consumptive applicants and to the appointment of more than one member of a family, are not of general application and refer only to permanent and temporary employees of the census office. (1909) 27 Op. Atty-Gen. 546: (1909) 27 Op. Atty-Gen. 546:

Aty.-Gen. 546; (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 567.
The fourth provise, regarding the employment of temporary employees in the census office, seems to supersede paragraphs 1 and 2 of rule VII of the civil service rules, but it is undoubtedly governed by the preceding (third) provise, "that in no instance shall more than one person be appointed from the same family." (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 546.
"Appointed," in the third and fourth pro-

"Appointed," in the third and fourth provisos, embraces both employment after examination in conformity with the law of apportionment, and appointment for temporary employment without regard to apportionment. (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 546.

Exemptions. — Section 1754, Rev. Stat., I Fed. Stat. Annot. 828, and section 7 of the Civil Service Act of Jan. 16, 1883, 22 Stat. I. 403, I Fed. Stat. Annot. 814, do not exempt from examination into the civil service, nor do they interfere with the rule of apportionment established by section 2 of the latter Act and re-enacted in section 7 of the Census Service Act of 1909. (1909) 27 Op. Atty. Gen. 546.

CHINESE EXCLUSION.

Vol. Í, p. 755, sec. 1.

Error in date of Act. — The correct date of this Act is April 29, 1902, instead of April 22, 1902.

Only treaties with China referred to.— Only such obligations as arose out of the treaties with China were referred to by the language used in the Act of April 29, 1902:

(1904) 25 Op. Atty.-Gen. 187.

Affected only by existing treaties.—This Act must be construed with reference to treaty obligations existing between the United States and China at the time it was passed, and with reference to treaty obligations which may exist at a future time. So construed, only such laws as were in conflict with treaty obligations at the time of its passage were not re-enacted or extended. (1904) 25 Op. Atty.-Gen. 137.

Effect of this section.—Act of May 5, 1902, [probably Act of April 29, 1902], expressly continuing in force all laws prohibiting and regulating the coming into the country of Chinese persons, did not create a new law nor repeal any of the laws then in existence, but continued in force, without interruption, the Chinese Exclusion Act of May 6, 1882, 22 Stat. L. 58, ch. 126, as amended by Act July 5, 1884, 23 Stat. L. 117, ch. 220, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 774, and extended for ten years by Act of May 5, 1892, 27 Stat. L. 25, ch. 60, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 762. Sims v. U. S., (1903) 121 Fed. 515, 58 C. C. A. 92.

Vel. I, p. 756, sec. 2.

Construction of section. — This section does not repeal by implication the provisions of the various previous Acts in relation to the exclusion of Chinese, vesting in the collector of customs and his deputies the power to enforce the provisions of those laws, but is to be regarded as additional legislation on the subject and in harmony therewith. The agents to be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury are not to supersede the collectors in the performance of their duties regarding the admission of Chinese, but constitute an additional force to act in co-operation with them in securing an effective enforcement of the law. (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 561.

Departmental rules. — Rules of the Department of Commerce and Labor respecting the exclusion of Chinese persons have the force and effect of law when not inconsistent with it or with the Constitution or the treaty with China. Exp. Chow Chok, (1908) 161 Fed. 627, affirmed (C. C. A. 1908) 163 Fed. 1021.

Vol. I, p. 757, art. II.

Exception applies to condition on returning.— The exception in this article of the treaty that it "shall not apply to the return to the United States of any registered Chinese laborer who has a lawful wife, child, or parent in the United States, or property therein of the value of one thousand dollars, or debts of like amount due him and pending settlement," has reference to the condition of the laborer at the time of his return, and it is competent for the appropriate department of the government to adopt a regulation requiring an inquiry into the matter by the immigration officers on the laborer's return, notwithstanding his possession of a collect-ouriest country, as provided for by the treaty. In re Ong Lung, (1903) 125 Fed. 814.

immigration officers on the laborer's return, notwithstanding his possession of a collector's certificate, obtained when he left the country, as provided for by the treaty. In re Ong Lung, (1903) 125 Fed. 814.

Applicable only to Chinese laborers.—A Chinese person possessing a "certificate of residence" as a person other than a laborer, issued to him under the provisions of the Act of May 5, 1892, 27 Stat. L. 25, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 764, is not entitled thereby to the "return certificate" provided for in article II. of the treaty with China of Dec. 8, 1894, 28 Stat. L. 1210, as that article applies only to registered Chinese laborers. (1902) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 132.

Op. Atty.-Gen. 132.

Debts "pending settlement." — An open book account of over $1,000 of a registered Chinese laborer seeking to return to this country, with a Chinese debtor, the existence of which account has been established, is one "pending settlement" under article II. (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 637. See also under vol. 1, 770, see 6

vol. 1, p. 770, sec. 6.

Treasury deportation regulations.—Circular No. 52, Bureau of Immigration, Treasury Department. Issued May 10, 1902, providing that duly registered Chinese laborers seeking admission to the United States after temporary absence under article II. of the treaty of 1894 between the United States and China must prove that some one of the conditions mentioned in that article exists at the time of application for readmission, is warranted both by the treaty with China and by the existing laws of the United States. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 91.

Vol. I, p. 759, sec. 1.

"District." — Under Act Cong. May 28, 1896, ch. 252, secs. 7, 9, 29 Stat. L. 180, 181, the territory of Arizona, though divided for the administration of law and for the holding of District Courts with powers of the District and Circuit Courts of the United States into five judicial districts, with boundaries as established by the justices, is one "district within Act Cong. March 3, 1901, ch. 845, 31 Stat. L. 1093, authorizing the district attorney of the district in which any Chinese person may be arrested for being found unlawfully within the United States to designate the commissioner within such district before whom such person shall be taken for hearing, and the district attorney of the territory may designate a commissioner within the first judicial district of the territory as the commissioner before whom a Chinese person arrested in the second judicial district shall be taken for hearing. Lee Kim Fong v. U. S., (Aris. 1910) 108 Pac. 237.

Vol. I, p. 759, sec. 3.

Complaint by officer of another district.— The official titles used in this section in describing the persons entitled to make the complaint were made descriptio personæ, and hence, where a complaint was made by a Chinese inspector, it was immaterial that it was filed with a United States commissioner outside the inspector's official district. Toy Tong v. U. S., (1906) 146 Fed. 343, 76 C. C. A. 621.

Vol. I, p. 760, sec. 2. ["Laborer" defined.]

Laborers. — This section does not restrict the meaning of the word "laborers," as used in the prior Acts, so as to enlarge the privileged classes. U. S. v. Yee Gee You, (1907) 152 Fed. 157, 81 C. C. A. 409.

A Chinese person owning a $500 interest in a general merchandise store, but operating a fruit farm as a tenant and selling the fruit grown thereof by his own labor, was held to be a "laborer," and not entitled to enter or remain in the United States. Lew Quen Wo v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 184 Fed. 685.

[" Merchant" defined.]

Minor son of Chinese merchant.—The minor son of a Chinese merchant lawfully domiciled in the United States, who immigrated and entered the United States while a minor without trick, deception, or fraud, under a certificate issued by the registrargeneral at Hongkong and viséd by the acting United States consul-general at the same place, and who during the remainder of his minority labored and studied in the United States, was held to be entitled to remain after attaining his majority, though he had since worked as a laborer. U. S. v. Foo Duck, (C. C. A. 1909) 172 Fed. 856, affirming (1908) 163 Fed. 440.

But in U. S. v. Joe Dick, (1905) 134 Fed. 988, it was held that a Chinese minor lawfully entering the United States as the son of a Chinese merchant domiciled in this country lost such status on the return of his father to China to remain permanently, leaving the son, who was still a minor, in this country, and that his status thereafter was determined by his own occupation.

Adopted children of merchant.—A Chinese merchant domiciled in the United States has the right to bring into this country with his wife minor children legally adopted by him in China, where it is shown that the adoption was bona fide, and that the children have lived as members of his family and have been supported by him for several years. Ex p. Fong Yim, (1905) 134 Fed. 938.

Chinese who may and may not enter.—
To the same effect as the original note. U.
S. v. Crouch, (1911) 185 Fed. 907.

Chinese merchant. — Where a Chinese person arrested as unlawfully within the United States at the time of his arrest was working as a servant in a boarding house, and since coming to the United States had worked as a cook and deliveryman in a store in which he had no interest, it was held that he was not a "merchant" and, not having procured a certificate of residence as required by section 6, a deportation order issued against him was not error. Mar Sing v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 137 Fed. 875.

Partnership. — The names of any of the partners need not appear in the company name under which a Chinese grocery is actually conducted at a fixed place of business in order to constitute them "merchants" within the meaning of this section. Tom Hong t. U. S. (1904) 193 U. S. 517, 24 S. Ct. 517, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 772.

Evidence.—In proceedings for the deportation of a Chinese person the evidence was held to be insufficient to establish that he was a Chinese merchant when he came to the United States, and that he engaged in that line of business for some time thereafter. U. S. v. Ngum Lun May, (1907) 153 Fed. 209.

Salesman. — Under the treaty of Nov. 17, 1880, 22 Stat. L. 826, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 480, and the treaty of March 26, 1894, 28 Stat. L. 1210, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 484, providing that Chinese persons entitled to come into the United States when provided with the certificate prescribed by Act Cong. July 5, 1884, ch. 220, 23 Stat. L. 115, are Chinese subjects, being officials, teachers, students, merchants, or travelers for curiosity or pleasure, and under this section, defining the term "merchant," as used in the Exclusion Acts, a person described in his certificate as a "salesman" is not a merchant who is entitled to remain in the United States. U. S. v. Gin Hing, (1904) 8 Ariz. 416, 76 Pac. 639.

Bail pending appeal.—The provision in this section that an order of deportation of a Chinese person shall be executed by the United States marshal with all convenient dispatch, and pending the execution of such order such persons shall not be admitted to bail, does not prevent the district judge from granting bail in his discretion, pending appeal to him from an order of deportation of a commissioner; the commissioner's order not being necessarily final, though such discretion should be sparingly exercised, in view of the object of the Chinese Exclusion Law, which was to prevent competition of Chinese labor with American labor. In re Ah Tai, (1903) 125 Fed. 795; Chin Wah v. Colwell, (C. C. A. 1911) 187 Fed. 593, affirming (1910) 182 Fed. 256; U. S. v. Wong Lee Foo, (Ariz. 1910) 108 Pac. 488, followed in Jung Goon Jow v. U. Effect of Act of April 29, 1902. — No repeal of the provisions of this Act was effected by the Act of April 29, 1902, 32 Stat. L. 176, c41, sec. 1, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 755, continuing all laws then in force so far as not inconsistent with treaty obligations, on the theory that the former section was inconsistent with the treaty with China of Dec. 4, 1804, art. 4, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 757, giving the Chinese the rights of citizens of the most favored nation, since the treaty itself in art. 5, 1 Fed. Stat. Nature of proceeding. — A proceeding to expel or exclude aliens under the federal law is civil, and not criminal, in its nature. U. S. r. Lee Huen, (1902) 118 Fed. 442; U. S. v. Moy You, (1903) 126 Fed. 226.

Complaint.—No formal complaint or pleadings are required in the proceedings under this Act for the determination of the right of Chinese laborers to remain in the United States. Ah How v. U. S., (1904) 193 U. S. 65, 24 S. Ct. 357, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 619; In re Jem Yuen, (1910) 188 Fed. 351.

Where the complaint in deportation proceedings against a Chinese person duly alleged that he was a Chinese manual labore within the United States without a certificate of residence, it was not material to the right his attempting to enter a second time after being deported, he put forward the unfounded claim that he was entitled to enter as a merchant at B., did not constitute a waiver of his rights based on the facts that he had been a merchant at L. Ex p. Ow Guen, (1906) 148 Fed. 926.

Merchant afterwards becoming laborer. — See under this title, vol. 1, p. 774, sec. 1.

Deportation, how executed. — Under commerce and labor rule 9, providing that every Chinese person refused admission to the United States, being actually or constructively on the vessel or other conveyance by which he was brought to a port of entry, must be returned to the country from which he came, at the expense of the transportation agency owning such vessel or conveyance, it was held that where the petitioning Chinese persons were apprehended in an attempt unlawfully to enter the country over the Canadian boundary, and were ordered to be dealt with according to law, an inspector had no right to take them to Hoboken, to deport them direct to China, but should have returned them to Canada. Lui Lum v. U. S., (1909) 166 Fed. 106, 92 C. C. A. 90.

Review on appeal.—A person of Chinese descent, arrested for being unlawfully in the United States, has the burden of proof to establish his claim that he was born in this country; and a finding against such claim by the commissioner, affirmed by the District Court on additional testimony, will not be set aside by an appellate court, unless clearly against the weight of evidence. Yee King v. U. S., (1910) 179 Fed. 368, 102 C. C. A. 646; Kum Sue v. U. S., (1910) 179 Fed. 370, 102 C. C. A. 648.

of the government to deport him that he came into the United States at a time when it was impossible to obtain a certificate of residence. Lew Quen Wo v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 184 Fed. 685.

Deportation of slave girl.—The fact that the deportation of a Chinese slave girl illegally brought into this country for purposes of prostitution by her master, from whom she subsequently escaped, would result in remanding her to slavery and degradation, affords no ground upon which the courts can refuse to enforce the statute. U. S. v. Ah Sou, (C. C. A. 1905) 138 Fed. 775, reversing (1904) 132 Fed. 878.

Laundry proprietor. — In U. S. v. Kol Lee, (1904) 132 Fed. 136, it appeared that the defendant was a Chinese person of reputable character, who had resided in this country for nineteen years, and was the proprietor of two laundries, which he conducted. If he labored himself, it was only incidentally. He testified that he entered the country on proper papers, which he had lost, and that he applied to a lawyer to obtain a duplicate certificate, and did obtain a paper which he supposed to be one, and which he produced, but it was in fact worthless. It was held that the evidence was not sufficient to show that he was a laborer, and that his evident good faith, and the fact that he had remained in the country so long without being mo-lested, raised a presumption that he was entitled to remain.

"Unlawfully in the United States."—A

Chinese alien and subject of the Chinese empire, not of the exempt classes, who knowingly crosses the Canadian border into the United States, but not at or near any established port of entry, with the purpose of entering and remaining in the United States, who is apprehended after he has crossed the boundary, and taken before a commissioner of immigration at the nearest port of entry and given a hearing as an applicant for entry, and after such hearing is refused admission and ordered returned to Canada, but who cannot be returned because of the demand of the Canadian authorities for a head tax, which he refuses to pay, is found and is unlawfully in the United States, and subject to arrest and deportation under the Chinese U. S. v. Yuen Pak Sune, Exclusion Laws. (1910) 183 Fed. 260.

Conclusiveness of findings of immigration officers. — The decision of the proper custom or immigration officer adverse to the claim of a person of the Chinese race to nativity in the United States, and denying him entry, is conclusive in subsequent proceedings for his deportation for being unlawfully in this country. Validity of section. — This section. in so far as it places on a Chinese person without a certificate the burden of proof of his right to remain in the United States, is valid. Low Foon Yin v. U. S. Immigration Com'r,

(C. C. A. 1906) 145 Fed, 791. Evidence. — Immigration officers in deportation proceedings are not bound by the rules of criminal procedure or by the rules of evidence applied in court, nor is it enough for review of their decision on habeas corpus that there was no sworn testimony taken or no record of the testimony or of the decision. In re Jem Yuen, (1910) 188 Fed. 350.

Of citizenship. — Where, in a proceeding for the exclusion of certain Chinese aliens, the only evidence of citizenship offered was certain unsatisfactory testimony of one witness that he was an uncle of defendants, and that termination rejecting the evidence of citizenship in a proceeding for the deportation of a Chinese alien, on the ground that he did not believe the testimony that the defendant was only twenty-nine years of age, was affirmed by the district judge, and there was nothing in the record to show that the commissioner's conclusion as to defendant's age was incorrect, it was held that the ruling was correct. Ark Foo r. U. S., (1904) 128 Fed, 697, 63 C.

Bail pending appeal. - After a final order of deportation has been entered by a District Court or judge against a Chinese person, he is not entitled to be admitted to bail pending an appeal as a matter of right, but admission to ball rests in the discretion of the court, which should be carefully exercised with re-gard to the special circumstances of the case. Where it does not appear that defendant had any justification for entering the country, but that he entered and remained in plain violation and defiance of the law, bail will not be allowed. U.S. v. Fah Chung, (1904) 132 Fed. 109.

Effect of marriage to Chinese laborer. — Where a Chinese slave girl was brought to the United States, and her entry secured by fraud in violation of the exclusion laws, her subsequent marriage in this country to a Chinese inhabitant registered as a Chinese laborer, and not entitled to have a wife in this country, is not a defense to proceedings for her deportation; and especially where the marriage was at her solicitation, for her protection, and was not followed by cohabitation, nor apparently regarded by the parties as more than a formality. U. S. r. Ah Son, (C. C. A. 1905) 138 Fed. 775, reversing (1904) 132 Fed. 878.

In Wong Heung r. Elliott, (1910) 179 Fed. 110, 102 C. C. A. 408, the swidence was considered and held to sustain a finding that the marriage of a Chinese woman, after a judgment of deportation against her, and while at large on bail pending an appeal, to a native born citizen of the United States, was not in good faith, but a mere sham, pretense, and form, for the purpose of evading the

they were both born in San Francisco, and defendants refused to be sworn in their own hehalf, it was held that a finding against the alien's right to remain was not erroneous. U. S. v. May You, (1903) 126 Fed. 226.

A person of Chinese descent, claiming to have been born in the United States and never to have been out of this country, where he and other unimpeached witnesses testify to such fact without contradiction, and his good character and truthfulness are testified to by white persons of standing who have known him for years, cannot be ordered deported solely on testimony tending to show that he made false statements to an inspector, which is denied. U. S. v. Jhu Why, (1910) 175 Fed. 630. In Pang Sho Yin v. U. S., (1907) 154 Fed.

660, 83 C. C. A. 484, the evidence was considered and held to be sufficient to entitle a Chinese person, arrested for being unlawfully within the United States, to his discharge on the ground that he was by birth a citizen of the United States; there being direct testimony of apparently credible witnesses to such fact, and no evidence to the contrary, except a statement made by defendant to the inspectors who arrested him, which, although somewhat inconsistent with such claim, was not irreconcilable therewith.

In Chew Hing v. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 227, 66 C. C. A. 281, the judgment of a District Court affirming an order of a commissioner for the deportation of a Chinese person against his claim that he was born in the United States, which was supported by the testimony of himself and two other Chinese witnesses, but was contradicted by a prior admission of defendant, was held reversible for error.

In proceedings for the deportation of a Chinese person charged with being unlawfully in this country, which were resisted on the ground that defendant was a native-born citizen of the United States, where his testimony was consistent and explicit, giving his place of birth, residence at different times, place of attending school, and the occupation and places of business of his father and uncle, and was corroborated by the testimony of his uncle and cousin, and wholly uncontradicted, it was held that his deportation was not warranted by a finding that he had not established his right to remain in the United States "by affirmative proof to the satisfaction of the commissioner." Moy Suey v. U. S., (1906) 147 Fed. 697, 78 C. C. A. 85.

Of nationality. — An affidavit made by a United States Chinese inspector charging defendant with being a Chinese laborer unlawfully within the United States without a certificate of registration, on which a warrant was issued for defendant's arrest, was not evidence at the hearing to prove that defendant was a Chinese person. U. S. v. Louie Lee,

(1911) 184 Fed. 651.

In proceedings for the deportation of an alleged Chinese person, the fact that he was a native of China, coupled with his personal appearance, indicating by his dress, physiognomy, and queue that he was a Chinaman, was held to be sufficient to justify a finding to that effect in the absence of evidence to the contrary. Low Foon Yin r. U. S. Immigration Com'r, (C. C. A. 1906) 145 Fed. 791.

Sufficiency.—In the following cases it was Sufficiency.—In the following cases it was held that the evidence did not show that the defendant was entitled to remain in the United States. U. S. v. Sing Lee, (1903),125 Fed. 627; Ark Foo v. U. S., (1904) 128 Fed. 697, 63 C. C. A. 249; U. S. v. Wong Du Bow, (1904) 133 Fed. 326; Lee Joe Yen v. U. S., (1906) 148 Fed. 682, 78 C. C. A. 427, affirming (1905) 136 Fed. 701; U. S. v. Lam Jung Sing, (1907) 151 Fed. 715; Ho Ngen Jung v. U. S., (1907) 153 Fed. 232; Ex p. Lung Wing Wun, (1908) 161 Fed. 211; Eng Choy v. U. S., (C. A. 1910) 175 Fed. 566; U. S. v. Chu King Foon, (1910) 179 Fed. 995; U. S. v. Too Toy, (1911) 185 Fed. 838.

In the following cases the evidence was held to show that the defendant had a right to remain in the United States. U. S. v. Chu Hung, (1910) 179 Fed. 564; U. S. v. Wong Ock Hong, (1910) 179 Fed. 1004; U. S. v. Chin Len, (1911) 187 Fed. 544.

Certificate of identification.—On a trial of a Chinaman charged with being unlawfully in the United States, it was held to be proper to allow in evidence a certificate granted him on his return from China, where he had been temporarily, which stated that it was issued under section 6, Act of July 5, 1884, ch. 220, 23 Stat. L. 116, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 778, though it did not state that he was entitled by the above Act to come into the United States; he being a former resident merchant therein. U. S. v. Quong Chee, (Ariz.

1907) 89 Pac. 525.

Other evidence than certificate. — Where the right of a Chinese person to remain in the country is challenged after he has been landed as a merchant by the customs officers on his return from a visit to China, and he produces a certificate, which states that it was issued under section 6, Act of July 5, 1884, ch. 220, 23 Stat. L. 116, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 778, entitling defendant, a Chinese person other than a laborer, to come into the United States, which certificate is not controverted by the government, such certificate is not by law the only evidence admissible, and he may show by two white witnesses that he has been a merchant in the United States. U. S. v. Quong Chee, (Ariz. 1907) 89 Pac. 525.

Defendant remaining mute. — On proof that a defendant, arrested for deportation as a Chinese laborer unlawfully in the United States, is a Chinese person and a laborer, the burden rests on him to show his right to remain in the United States, and he gains no rights by standing mute, but, on the contrary, such conduct justifies his being held strictly to his technical rights. U. S. v. Chin Ken,

Long continued residence here. — In proceedings for the deportation of a Chinaman, it was held that the fact that he had been permitted to live in the United States for nineteen years without molestation was insufficient to raise a presumption that his arrival antedated the date on which the Exclusion Act went into effect, he never having registered as a laborer or merchant as required by law, U. S. r. Ah Chung, (C. C. A. 1904) 130 Fed. 885.

A passport issued to a Chinese person by the secretary of state is not evidence of the citizenship of such person in the United States. Edsell r. D. Charlie Mark, (C. C. A. 1910) 179 Fed. 292.

Presumptions. — In Chinese deportation proceedings there is a natural presumption that a person of Mongolian race coming to the United States from China is an alien, to overcome which, and secure recognition of rights, privileges, and immunities pertaining to United States citizenship, convincing evidence is essential. Ex p, Lung Wing Wun,

(1908) 161 Fed. 211.

Burden and measure of proof. - The provision of section 3, which places the burden on a Chinese person or person of Chinese descent arrested thereunder to "establish by affirmative proof, to the satisfaction of the justice, judge, or commissioner, his lawful right to remain in the United States," requires him to produce credible evidence sufficient to satisfy the judgment of a reasonable man, considering the same fairly and impartially. A commissioner may not, arbitrarily, capriciously, or against reasonable, unimpeached, and credible evidence, which is uncontradicted in its material points, and susceptible of but one fair construction, refuse to be satisfied; but, on the other hand, he is not bound to be satisfied by the testimony of a single witness as to facts which, if the testimony is true, must necessarily be known to other obtainable witnesses who are not produced. U.S. v. Lee Huen, (1902) 118 Fed.

This section applies to, and imposes the burden of proof on, a defendant who is of the Chinese race, although he claims to be a citizen of the United States by birth. U. S. v. Sing Lee, (1903) 125 Fed. 627; Lee Yuen Sue v. U. S., (1906) 146 Fed. 670, 77 C. C. A. 96; U. S. v. Hoy Way. (1907) 156 Fed. 247; U. S. v. Too Toy, (1911) 185 Fed. 838, refusing to follow Moy Suey v. U. S., (1906) 147 Fed. 697, 78 C. C. A. 85. Compare Gee Cue Beng v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 184 Fed. 383.

In a proceeding to deport a Chinaman as a Chinese laborer unlawfully in the United States, he has the burden of proving that he is a merchant, privileged to remain in the United States. U. S. v. Yee Gee You, (1907) 152 Fed. 157, 81 C. C. A. 409.

In Lee Yue v. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 45, 66 C. C. A. 178, and Tsoi Yii v. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 1022, 66 C. C. A. 681, the judgment of a District Court affirming an order of a commissioner directing the deportation of a Chinese person was held to be sustained by the evidence, under the rule established by the Exclusion Acts, which casts upon the defendant in such cases the burden of proving his right to remain in this country.

Examination of accused. — Where the evidence in Chinese deportation proceedings left the question as to defendant's alleged citizenship in doubt, it was held to be proper for the judge to cause defendant, accompanied by his counsel, to be brought before him, and to further examine defendant concerning the evidence. Lee Yuen Sue v. U. S., (1906) 146 Fed. 670, 77 C. C. A. 96.

The written statement by a United States commissioner that a Chinaman was brought before him charged with being unlawfully within the United States, and was adjudged to have the right to remain in the United States by reason of being a citizen thereof, is not evidence of such adjudication. Ah How v. U. S., (1904) 193 U. S. 65, 24 S. Ct. 357, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 619.

Credibility of Chinese witnesses. — The fact that accused was in the United States and engaged in business as a merchant at the time of the passage of this Act, providing for the registration of Chinese laborers, may be established by Chinese witnesses. U. S. v. Louie Juen, (1904) 128 Fed. 522.

Vol. I, p. 763, sec. 3.

But the commissioner in a Chinese deportation proceeding need not necessarily believe a Chinese witness, when he sees him and has opportunity to judge of his credibility. U. S. v. Chu King Foon, (1910) 179 Fed. 985. See also Wong Chun v. U. S., (1909) 170 Fed. 182, 95 C. C. A. 198.

The mere fact that a witness for the defendant in a proceeding for deportation is himself a Chinese person does not render him an interested witness, within the rule which permits interest to be considered as a discrediting circumstance. U. S. r. Lee Huen, (1902) 118 Fed. 442.

Failure of defendant to testify. — Proceedings for the exclusion or deportation of Chinese aliens under the Exclusion Act are not criminal in character, and if the defendant therein fail to give testimony in their own behalf to explain doubtful matters peculiarly within their own knowledge or to contradict testimony given against them, such fact may be considered, where the testimony is contradictory. U. S. v. Lee Huen, (1902) 118 Fed. 442.

Where a witness to the citizenship of an alleged Chinese alien was not impeached or discredited, but was clear and straightforward, and no criticism was made with regard to the same by the commissioner, and the alleged alien was not requested to be sworn in his own behalf, it was held that his failure to offer himself as a witness was not a sufficient reason for ordering him deported. Ark Foo v. U. S., (1904) 128 Fed. 698, 63 C. C. A. 249.

Where, in deportation proceedings under the Chinese Exclusion Act, a commissioner found that defendants had produced a witness who testified that defendants were born in the state of California, and that such witness was not contradicted, impeached, or discredited in any manner whatsoever, it was held to be error for the court to order their deportation solely on the ground that their right to remain in the United States was discredited by their refusal to take the stand and testify on the demand of the United States attorney. U. S. v. Leung Shue, (1903) 126 Fed. 423.

Identification. — Where, in deportation proceedings against a Chinese person, he presented a commissioner's judgment dismissing former similar proceedings on the ground that the person described therein was a citizen of the United States, claiming that such determination was res judicata, the burden was on him to establish that he was the identical person named and described in such judgment. Ex p. Long Lock, (1909) 173 Fed. 208.

Certificate of commissioner. — Ex p. Lung Foot, (1909) 174 Fed. 70.

Review. — A resident of the United States claiming to be a native-born citizen, although of the Chinese race, may not be deported or banished until the right of the government to deport or banish has been judicially determined in accordance with the usual and ordinary rules of evidence. Moy Suey v. U. S., (1906) 147 Fed. 697, 78 C. C. A. 85.

Review.—Orders for the deportation of Chinese laborers, made on the sole ground that they had failed to show that they were bona fide merchants within the meaning of the Chinese Exclusion Act at the time registration was required, will be reversed by the federal Supreme Court, where that court is satisfied from an examination of the record that the testimony did establish that fact. Tom Hong v. U. S., (1904) 193 U. S. 517, 24 S. Ct. 517, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 772.

In Ex p. Jong Jim Hong, (1907) 157 Fed. 447, it was held that whether a Chinese person, claiming the right to enter the United States on the ground that he is a citizen by birth, has such right, is a question of fact, on which the decision of the immigration officer, affirmed on appeal to the secretary of commerce and labor, if fairly made, is conclusive, and can only be reviewed by a court on a writ of habeas corpus for abuse of discretion.

Under this section the judgment of a District Court ordering deportation of a Chinese person will be affirmed on appeal, unless the case clearly shows that an incorrect conclusion has been reached. Mar Sing v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 137 Fed. 875.

Where an appeal was taken to the secretary of commerce and labor from a deportation order, the fact that a "memorandum for the acting secretary," signed by the commissioner-general, was added to the record before it was acted on, and contained remarks on the evidence and a recommendation that the decision be affirmed, was held to be immaterial, and not to indicate that the officer whose duty it was to determine the appeal did not do so himself. In re Jem Yuen, (1910) 188 Fed. 350.

Vol. I, p. 764, sec. 5.

Bail.—It has been held that the words "in the first instance," in this section, do not render the prohibition against bail any less applicable after the court has made its decision than before, and hence that where a Chinese person had been ordered deported and writ of habeas corpus dismissed, the alien was not entitled to bail pending appeal. In re Jem Yuen, (1910) 188 Fed. 350.

Vol. I, p. 764, sec. 6.

Constitutional rights. — The constitutional and statutory provisions guaranteeing trial by jury, prohibiting unlawful seizure and search, cruel and inhuman punishment, and the deprivation of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, and regulating the admission to bail in criminal cases, have no application to Chinese exclusion proceedings. In re Chin Wah, (1910) 182 Fed. 256.

Merchant afterwards becoming laborer.—Where at the time of the passage of this section providing for the registration of Chinese laborers, a Chinese person thereafter charged to be unlawfully in the United States was in the United States and engaged in business as a merchant, and was therefore not entitled to registration as a laborer under such Act, he was not subject to deportation, though he subsequently became a laborer. U. S. v. Louie Juen, (1904) 128 Fed. 522; U. S. v. Leo Won Tong, (1904) 132 Fed. 190; U. S. v. Seid Bow, (1905) 139 Fed. 56; U. S. v. Quong Chee, (Ariz. 1907) 89 Pac. 525.

In Ow Yang Dean v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1906) 145 Fed. 801, it appeared that defendant, in 1890, became a member of two Chinese mercantile firms in California, his name appearing on the partnership books as a partner, and so continued up to the time of the commencement of deportation proceedings. From 1890 to 1900 he engaged in no manual labor, but devoted his entire time to his mercantile interests, until he purchased an interest in a shrimp company in March, 1900, after which from March till August he devoted a portion of his time to keeping books for that concern, but did manual labor, such as picking ahrimps, and delivering them to customers.

The shrimp business was absorbed by another company in which he was interested until May, 1902, when he sold the interest in the purchasing company and returned to China, he having devoted his entire time after the sale and before his return to the mercantile business of the firms of which he was a member. It was held that by engaging in manual labor while in the shrimp business he did not lose his right to remain in the United States.

Right of unregistered laborer to become merchant. — This section did not prohibit an unregistered laborer from remaining in the United States until proceeded against, and hence, prior to the taking of such proceedings, he was entitled to become a merchant and to the immunities accorded to merchants. Exp. D. Ow Guen. (1906) 148 Fed. 926.

Ex p. Ow Guen, (1906) 148 Fed. 926.

Investigation. — Where, on the return of a Chinese person to the United States, his claim that he was a merchant at L. was not investigated by the immigration officers, but he was deported because of his former status as an unregistered laborer, such decision was not conclusive against his right again to enter the United States by virtue of his being a merchant in L., established by two credible witnesses other than Chinese, as provided by the Chinese Exclusion Act of May 5. 1892, ch. 60, sec. 6. Ex p. Ow Guen, (1906) 148 Fed. 926.

Effect of laborer's minority.—The fact that a Chinese laborer was a minor nineteen or twenty years old at the time of the passage of the registration acts did not exempt him from the duty of registering thereunder, U. S. v. Joe Dick, (1905) 134 Fed. 988.

Minor children of Chinese merchants. - The fact that a Chinese person, who, as shown by the uncontradicted evidence, entered the United States in 1898, when a minor fourteen or fifteen years old, his father being at the time a merchant engaged in business in San Francisco, did not have a certificate under this section, does not raise any presumption that his entry was unlawful, no such certificates being then required under the decisions of the Supreme Court to entitle the wives and children of Chinese merchants residing in this country to entry. U. S. v. Chin Sing, (1907) 158 Fed. 590.

Sickness as excuse. — A United States commissioner is not, as a matter of law, bound to be satisfied by the testimony of a Chinese laborer that he was disabled by sickness from obtaining the certificate of residence required by this section in order to entitle him to remain in the United States. Ah How v. U. S., (1904) 193 U. S. 65, 24 S. Ct. 357, 48 U. S.

(L. ed.) 619.

Marriage of Chinese woman to American citizen. — The provision in this section requiring all Chinese laborers then lawfully in the United States to procure certificates of residence within six months, under penalty of deportation, cannot be construed to autherize the deportation of a Chinese woman who lawfully entered the country before the cnactment of any exclusion laws, and remained, but who failed to obtain the required certificate, where she was thereafter, and prior to her arrest, lawfully married to a citizen of the United States. Assuming that she was subject to deportation previous to her marriage, she then, having lawfully entered the country, took the status of her husband as to the right of domicile in the United States, and, if deported under a strict construction of the Act, would have the right immediately to return and remain as the lawful wife of an American citizen. Tsoi Sim v. U. S., (1902) 116 Fed. 920, 54 C. C. A. 154.

Nature of proceedings. — A proceeding for the deportation of a Chinese laborer not having a certificate entitling him to residence required by this section is not a criminal proceeding, and hence it is competent for the government to swear such Chinese person as a witness against himself. Low Foon Yin v. U. S. Immigration Com'r, (C. C. A. 1906) 145 Fed. 791. See also In re Chin Wah, (1910) 182 Fed. 256.

Jurisdiction of United States commissioner. A United States commissioner has jurisdiction to hear and determine a charge against a Chinese person of being unlawfully within the country without a certificate of residence, though section 6 providing for the issuance of such certificates declares that no one obtaining a certificate within a specified time shall be adjudged unlawfully within the country, and shall be arrested and taken be-fore a United States "judge," etc. Low Foon Yin v. U. S. Immigration Com'r, (C. C. A. 1906) 145 Fed. 791.

Referred to commissioner as referee. — In deportation proceedings in which the defendant was arrested and brought before a United States district judge, it was held that the case could not be referred to a United States commissioner and judgment of deportation rendered upon the evidence in his report, the defendant being entitled to a judgment upon a hearing of the witnesses before the district judge personally. Jung Goon Jow r. U. S., (Ariz. 1910) 108 Pac. 490.

Proof of nationality. - Where a person named Louie Lee was arrested on complaint of a United States Chinese inspector in deportation proceedings, and on appearing in court was attired in the ordinary street apparel of an American gentleman, with his hair worn as an American and with nothing to indicate that he was a Chinese except his color and features, which were more or less common to all Mongolians, his name not being distinctively Chinese, it was held that his appearance was insufficient to establish that he was a Chinese person within the Exclusion Acts. U. S. v. Louie Lee, (1911) 184 Fed. 651.

Identification. — Where, in deportation proceedings against an alleged immoral alien Chinese woman, she was described in the complaint and warrant as "Sally Doe," and it appeared from her own testimony that she was a Chinese person without a certificate of residence required by law and was not entitled to be or remain in the United States, it was held that she was thereby specifically identified by her status, by the place where she was found, and by her own testimony, and hence it was not material that she was not identified as the person named in the complaint and warrant. Wong Chun r. U. S., (1909) 170 Fed. 182, 95 C. C. A. 198.

Evidence. - Under this section the only permissible evidence of a Chinese laborer's right to be in the United States is the certificate of residence mentioned in such legislation, or, in lieu thereof, testimony showing that by reason of accident, sickness, or other unavoidable cause he was unable to procure such certificate, and the testimony of at least one white person that he was a resident of the United States prior to the registration period. U. S. v. Yee Gee You, (1907) 152 Fed. 157, 81 C. C. A. 409.

Burden of proof. - The burden is on the United States, under this section, in proceedings to deport a Chinese person as unlawfully within the United States, to show by affirmative proof that defendant was a Chinese person. U. S. v. Louie Lee, (1911) 184 Fed. 651.

Evidence to excuse failure to obtain certificate. - In Yee Yuen r. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 222, 66 C. C. A. 276, the evidence was considered and held to be insufficient to establish clearly that a Chinese laborer who testified that he was a resident of the United States on May 5, 1892, and who failed to procure a certificate of residence, was unable to do so, "by reason of accident, sickness, or other unavoidable cause," as required by this section.

Sufficiency of findings. — Where a judgment for the deportation of a Chinese person recited that it appeared to the court that the accused was a Chinese laborer and a subject to the emperor of China; that he was not registered as required by this section, and that he did not belong to one of the classes of Chinese excepted by said Acts from such registration, and was unlawfully within the United States, it was held to be unobjectionable for failure to state sufficient facts to sustain it. Lee Won Jeong v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1906) 145 Fed. 512.

Collateral attack. - Where a Chinese person was duly registered under this section as a native-born citisen, such registration was not subject to collateral attack in a proceeding to enforce a judgment of deportation rendered against him before the registration law took effect. In re Tom Hon, (1906) 149 Fed.

Effect of discharge by commissioner. — A United States commissioner exercises special authority in Chinese cases, and where a Chinese person charged with being unlawfully in the United States has had a hearing regular in form before a commissioner, who had adjudged that such person is entitled to be and remain within the United States and has ordered his discharge, the decision is determinative of the issue, and such person cannot be again apprehended and proceeded against upon a complaint filed in the District Court of the same district upon substantially the same facts. U. S. r. Yeung Chu Keng, (1905) 140 Fed. 748.

Bail. — Where an alleged Chinese allen, domiciled in the United States, is arrested in deportation proceedings, he is not entitled to bail as of right, but only in the discretion of the court, to be exercised with reference to the facts of the particular case. In re Chin Wah, (1910) 182 Fed. 256, affirmed (C. C. A. 1911) 187 Fed. 592.

What constitutes "entry." - An "entry" or "entrance" of a Chinese person into the United States, within the Chinese Exclusion Acts, means more than the mere act of crossing the border, and consists in his going at large or becoming domiciled in the country. Ex p. Chow Chok, (1908) 161 Fed. 627, affirmed (C. C. A. 1908) 163 Fed. 1021.

Chinese seamen. - Under the regulations of the department of commerce and labor, authorizing Chinese seamen to enter the United States on shore leave, on giving bond to depart within thirty days, a Chinese seaman belongs to the excluded class, and may not enter the United States except by giving the required bond. U. S. r. Crouch, (1911) 185 Fed. 907. See also U. S. t. Ah Fook, (C. C. A. 1910) 183 Fed. 33.

Chinese person other than laborer previously domiciled in the United States. -

Neither the Chinese treaty of 1880, nor subsequent legislation relating to Chinese exclusion, has any relation to Chinese persons, not of the laboring class, who were at the time of the adoption of that treaty domiciled in the United States, and who have since continued to reside therein; and such a person who temporarily leaves the country, with the intention of returning, cannot be excluded on his return because he is not included in one of the classes expressly excepted from the operation of the Exclusion Acts, who alone are permitted to enter the United States by rules 1 and 2 of the regulations adopted by the department of commerce and labor, such rules being applicable only to persons seeking to enter for the first time. Debts "unascertained and unsettled." ---An open book account of over $1,000 of a registered Chinese laborer seeking to return to this country, with a Chinese debtor, the existence of which account has been established, is one "pending settlement" under article II. of the treaty with China of Dec. 8, 1894, 28 Stat. L. 1210, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 756, and is one "unascertained and unsettled" within the meaning of this section. (1903) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 637,

The landing of a crew, temporarily, for the purpose of transfer, would not violate the treaty with China and the laws of the United States in relation to the exclusion of Chinese. (1902) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 111; (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 553.

"Pending settlement."— The term "pending settlement" may mean more than "pending payment;" it may include ascertainment. The word "settlement" in legal use embraces both ideas - the idea of discharging an obligation by payment, and the idea of arriving at its amount by ascertainment and adjustment, (1903) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen, 637.

Vol. 1, p. 770, sec. 7. [Identification of Chinese permitted to leave and return.]

Effect of Act of April 29, 1902.—The reenactment of this section by Act of April 29, 1902, ch. 641, sec. 1, 32 Stat. L. 176, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 755, did not have the effect of re-enacting that part of the section which was inconsistent with the treaty with China of 1894. (1902) 24 Op. Atty. Gen. 544.

Right depends on facts existing at return.

The facts which entitle such Chinese la-

Surrender of certificate. — Where a Chinese laborer holding a United States labor certificate departed from the United States at a point other than the places of departure prescribed, without applying to the collector of customs for permission to leave, etc., and thereafter re-entered the United States at a nondesignated point, in the absence of evidence as to his intention in departing it was held that he had forfeited his right to remain in the United States, and was subject to deportation. U. S. v. Tuck Lee, (1903) 120 Fed. 989.

Vol. I, p. 772, sec. 9.

Seaman. — A Chinese seaman, a member of the crew of a vessel calling temporarily at the port of New York, is not a "laborer" or "other Chinese person" within this section. U. S. v. Jamieson, (1911) 185 Fed. 165.

Knowledge. — An indictment charging the master of a vessel with a violation of section 9 must aver that defendant "knowingly" permitted such Chinese person to be landed. U. S. v. Walker, (1907) 156 Fed. 987; U. S. v. Rout, (1909) 170 Fed. 201.

Intent. — An indictment charging the master of a vessel with bringing a Chinese laborer into the United States, failing to allege that his act was with the specific intent to leave such person in the United States contrary to law, was held to be insufficient. U. S. v. Jamieson, (1911) 185 Fed. 165.

Indictment. — An indictment under section 9 must negative the exceptions stated in section 10 of the Act. U.S. v. Wood, (1909) 168 Fed. 438.

An indictment charging the master of a vessel with having permitted a Chinese laborer to land in the United States from his vessel in violation of section 9 was held sufficiently to negative the exceptions contained in section 10 of the Act, where it averred that the said Chinese person was not landed by reason of "any necessity." U. S. v. Graham, (1908) 164 Fed. 654.

Evidence to show landing.—In a prosecution for attempting to land certain Chinese laborers not entitled to enter the United States, the evidence was held to show a landing, an attempt to land, or the permitting of the Chinese by the defendant, and to sustain a conviction. Natives of Hong Kong. — The fact that a Chinese person emigrates to the United States from Hong Kong, or even that he is a native of that colony, does not prevent his being subject to the provisions of this section. U. S. c. Foong King. (1904) 132 Fed. 107.

"Unlawfully in the United States."—In Ex p. Chou Chok, (1908) 161 Fed. 627, affirmed (C. C. A. 1908) 163 Fed. 1021, it was held that Chinese persons were not "found unlawfully in the United States," so as to entitle them to a hearing as to their right to remain, where, when they crossed the border into the United States at a point remote from the designated port of entry, they were within sight of inspectors, who, intending to prevent their unlawful entry, followed them closely until they had proceeded about one-fourth of a mile across the border, and until it was apparent that they intended to enter unlawfully, and, taking them into custody, conducted them immediately to the nearest port of entry for investigation of their right to enter; the term "found unlawfully in the United States" referring to those Chinese persons who have entered, gone at large, and mixed with and become a part of the population. Hence, such persons having been given opportunity to show their right to enter, and having remained mute, the inspector in charge had jurisdiction to exclude them.

Nature of proceedings. — A proceeding for the deportation of a Chinese person under the exclusion acts is civil, and not criminal, in its nature, and the constitutional provisions which safeguard the rights of persons accused of crime do not apply therein. Admissions or statements of a defendant, voluntarily made to the officers by whom he is arrested in answer to questions put by them either before or after his arrest, are admissible in evidence against him, and the government has the right to call and examine him as a witness. U. S. v. Hung Chang, (1904) 134 Fed. 19, 67 C. C. A. 93, reversing (1903) 126 Fed. 400.

As the proceedings brought under the Chinese Exclusion Act for the deportation of a Chinese person are civil, and not criminal, a defendant claiming to be a native of the United States may avail himself of the right given by R. S. sec. 863, 3 Fed. Stat. Annot. s, to take and use depositions de bene esse. In re Lam Jung Sing, (1907) 150 Fed. 608.
Jurisdiction of United States commissioners. — The powers and functions of United States commissioners in Chinese deportation proceedings are confined to the issuance of warrants for the apprehension of Chinese persons accused of being unlawfully within the United States, to the decision of questions whether such persons are unlawfully in the United States, and to making orders directing those not privileged to remain to be deported, and discharging from arrest those who prove a present right to remain in the United States; such decisions being subject to review on appeal to the District Court of the proper district. Ex p. Lung Wing Wun, (1908) 161 Fed. 211.

Issues and proof. — In a proceeding for the deportation of a person under this section, as affected by Act May 5, 1892, c. 60, sec. 3, 27 Stat. L. 25, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 763, two questions are put in issue by defendant's plea of not guilty: First, whether or not he is a Chinese person or person of Chinese descent; and, second, if so, whether he is entitled to be and remain in the United States — the burden of proof on the latter issue being on the defendant. Upon either issue proof to the satisfaction of the commissioner or the court is all that is required, and upon the issue as to race, the appearance of defendant, his color, manner of wearing his hair, his dress and language, may properly be taken into consideration by the commissioner or court; and inspectors and interpreters employed by the government in the enforcement of the exclusion laws, who state their ability from practical experience to identify persons of the Chinese race from such characteristics, are competent to testify upon such issue, although they may have no theoretical knowledge of the science of ethnology. U. S. v.

Hung Chang, (1904) 134 Fed. 19, 67 C. C. A. 93, reversing (1903) 126 Fed. 400.

No formal complaint or pleadings required.

U. S. v. Fah Chung, (1904) 132 Fed. 109. Compulsion to testify. - A Chinese person against whom deportation proceedings are pending may be called as a witness by the United States and compelled to answer questions relevant to the pending issue. Tom Wah v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 163 Fed. 1008, affirming (1908) 160 Fed. 207.

Trial by jury. - Congress not having authorized trial by jury in proceedings for the deportation of a Chinese person, provided for by this Act, the right to a jury trial does not exist. U. S. v. Ngum Lun May, (1907) 153 Fed. 209.

Collateral attack. — A decision of a United States commissioner confirming a Chinese person's asserted right to live in the United States and enjoy the privileges of a native-born citizen is not a final adjudication by a court of competent jurisdiction, free from collateral attack in a subsequent proceeding; such commissioners not being courts of the United States, ordained and established by Congress, in which the judicial power of the government can be vested. Ex p. Lung Wing Wun, (1908) 161 Fed. 211.

Motion to dismiss for lack of proof of citi-zenship. — Where the government rested in Chinese deportation proceedings without introducing any evidence that defendant was a Chinese person, whereupon defendant moved to dismiss the proceedings and for his discharge, it was held that he was entitled to have the motion determined on the record as it stood when the motion was made, and hence the government's application for permission then to introduce evidence to prove the fact was denied. U. S. v. Louie Lee, (1911) 184 Fed, 651.

Sufficiency of record. — The deportation of a Chinaman lawfully admitted to the United States upon a student's certificate, complying with the treaty with China of Dec. 8, 1894, 28 Stat. L. 1210, art. 3, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 757, cannot be ordered by a federal District Court upon the transcript of the proceedings before the commissioner, which presents merely such student's certificate and a statement that witnesses were examined, without any findings or the giving of any testimony, although additional separate findings of the commissioner were afterwards filed, where this was done without the order of the court, and there was no consent to a hearing upon such additional findings. Liu Hop Fong v. U. S., (1908) 209 U. S. 453, 28 S. Ct. 576, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 888.

Certification of judgment. — Failure of the commissioner in Chinese deportation proceedings to certify the judgment to the District Court on appeal is not a jurisdictional defect; the court being authorized to direct certification and require transmission of the judgment. U. S. v. Wong Ock Hong, (1910) 179 Fed. 1004.

Findings of fact. — On appeal in a habeas corpus case for the discharge of a Chinese person held for deportation, it was held that the findings of the lower court were not conclusive, and that all questions of fact on the evidence were open to consideration by the appellate court, but that such findings should not be set aside unless the evidence in the record was such as to convince the court that they were erroneous. Wong Heung r. Elliott, (C. C. A. 1910) 179 Fed. 110. See also Yee Yet v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 175 Fed.

Bail. — A Chinese person arrested in this country for deportation under the Exclusion Acts may be admitted to bail by a District Court or judge pending his hearing before the commissioner. In re Lum Poy, (1904) 128

Fed. 974.

Bail pending appeal.—A proceeding for the deportation of a Chinese alien under the Exclusion Acts is not criminal in its nature so as to entitle such alien to bail, as a person accused of crime, pending appeal from a commissioner's order of deportation. In re Ah Tai, (1903) 125 Fed. 795; U. S. v. Wong Lee Foo, (Ariz. 1910) 108 Pac. 488.

But the district judge to whom an appeal is taken from a commissioner's order directing deportation has inherent power to admit the alien to bail pending the appeal. In re

Ah Tai, (1903) 125 Fed. 795.

New trial. — In proceedings for the exclusion of an alleged Chinese alien, an application for a new trial after judgment of de-portation has been entered on trial before a United States commissioner should be addressed to the commissioner. U. S. v. Ng Young, (1903) 126 Fed. 425.

Where a Chinese alien was ordered deported after trial, at which he produced a witness who testified that defendant was born in the United States, and at the time of the trial he knew of another witness who would have testified to the same fact, it was held that the defendant was not entitled to a new trial to produce such witness. U.S. v. Ng Young, (1903) 126 Fed. 425.

Appeal of motion for new trial. - Where a motion for a new trial in Chinese deportation proceedings is denied by the commissioner before whom the proceedings were had an appeal may be taken to the United States District Court from the order denying the motion. U. S. v. Ng Young, (1903) 126 Fed.

Hearing de novo. - A hearing de novo before the district judge is contemplated by the provision of section 13, giving a Chinese person convicted before a United States commissioner of being unlawfully within the United States the right to appeal to the judge of the federal District Court for the district. Liu Hop Fong v. U. S., (1908) 209 U. S. 453, 28 S. Ct. 576, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 888; U. S. r. Wong Ock Hong, (1910) 179 Fed. 1004; U. S.

v. Louie Lee, (1911) 184 Fed. 651.

Appeal and review. — A Chinese person, ordered deported by a commissioner, may appeal to the district judge as a matter of right under the statute, and, in the absence of a rule of court requiring it, an order of the judge allowing the appeal is unnecessary; the service of notice of appeal on the commissioner and the district attorney, and the fil-ing of such notice with the clerk, being sufficient. An order of the judge, however, is necessary to stay the execution of the commissioner's order pending the appeal. U. S. v. Loy Too, (1906) 147 Fed. 750, affirmed (C. C. A. 1907) 152 Fed. 1022.

Under section 6 of the Act March 3, 1891, creating the Circuit Courts of Appeals (26 Stat. L. 828, ch. 517, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 409), which gives such courts the power to review by appeal or writ of error final decisions in the District Court, an appeal lies to such court from a judgment of a District Court rendered on an appeal from an order of a commissioner for the deportation of a Chinese person arrested under section 13, which authorizes an appeal from a conviction before a commissioner to "the judge of the District Court for the district." Tsoi Yii v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 129 Fed. 585, affirmed (1904) 133 Fed. 1022, 66 C. C. A. 681. See also Gee Cue Beng v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 184 Fed. 383.

An appeal is the proper proceeding for review by the Circuit Court of Appeals of a judgment of a District Court rendered on appeal from an order of a commissioner for the deportation of a Chinese person arrested under section 13. U. S. v. Hung Chang, (1904) 134 Fed. 19, 67 C. C. A. 93, reversing (1903) 126 Fed. 400; Leo Lung On v. U. S., (1908) 159 Fed. 125, 86 C. C. A. 513.

The appeal to "the judge of the District Court for the district," authorized by this section, where a Chinese person has been convicted before a United States commissioner of being unlawfully in the United States, is. in effect, an appeal to the District Court, and not to the district judge as an individual; and the commissioner's transcript and the papers pertaining to the cause may therefore be filed in that court, and the final order of the judge be entered as the final order of the court. In re U. S., (1904) 194 U. S. 194, 24 S. Ct. 629, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 931.

The right of appeal is not given to the government, but only to the defendant upon conviction. U. S. v. Mar Ying Yuen, (1903)

123 Fed. 159.

It is the settled general rule that the finding of a commissioner who sees and heart Chinese witnesses sworn in behalf of Chinese persons of the prohibited class seeking entry to the United States, and who reaches the deliberate conclusion that they are not entitled to credit, will not be reversed by an appellate court. Hong Yon r. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 164 Fed. 330.

Time for appeal. — Unless the appeal is taken within the ten days limited in this section the court acquires no jurisdiction to hear and determine the cause. U. S. r. Yuen

Yee Sum, (1907) 153 Fed. 494.
Notice of appeal. — Where a notice of appeal in Chinese deportation proceedings, though entitled in the District Court, was nevertheless left with the commissioner and transmitted with the papers in the case, the fact that the notice was entitled in the District Court, and not before the commissioner, was not a jurisdictional defect. U. S. r. Wong Ock Hong, (1910) 179 Fed. 1004.

Effect of appeal. - An appeal from an order of deportation suspends execution until after determination of the appeal, U. S. a.

Merchant afterwards becoming laborer.—A Chinaman who has lawfully entered the United States as a merchant, and has lawfully practiced his calling here for some time thereafter, but who is not a merchant at the time of his arrest, is not subject to deportation under existing statutes. Effect of subsequent statutes. — On May 5, 1892, before this Act had expired, the laws relating to the exclusion of Chinese were renacted for a further period of ten years. R. S. sec. 13 (Act Feb. 25, 1871, ch. 71, 16 Stat. L. 432, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 136) declares that the repeal of any statute shall not release or extinguish any penalty incurred thereunder, unless the repealing Act shall expressly so provide, but such statute shall be treated as remaining in force to sustain any action or prosecution for the enforcement of such penalty. It has been held that where an offense against the Exclusion Act was alleged to have been committed on Feb. 15, 1902, an indictment therefor not brought until after the expiration of the time limited by the Act of May 5, 1892, 27 Stat. L. 25, ch. 60, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 767, was not demurrable, since the Exclusion Act was continued in force as to such offense by section 13. Sims v. U. S., (1903) 121 Fed. 515, 58 C. C. A. 92.

Requisites of certificate.—The provisions of this section requiring Chinese persons to progure certificates stating certain facts to entitle them to come to the United States must be strictly complied with in order that the certificate may be of value to the person holding the same in establishing his right to enter or remain within the United States. U. S. v. Gin Hing, (1904) 8 Ariz. 416, 76 Pac. 430

A merchant's certificate issued to a Chinese person under this section, but which does not conform to the requirements of said section by stating the estimated value of his business carried on in China, nor fully establish his status as a merchant, does not entitle him to enter the United States, nor to remain after his entry has been permitted. Cheung Pang r. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 392, 66 C. C. A. 454.

Merchant becoming laborer on arrival. — A Chinese person who entered the United States upon a certificate granted by the Chinese authorities in accordance with the provisions of this section, showing him to belong to one of the classes entitled to enter under the Act, is subject to deportation under the subsequent Exclusion Acts, where it is shown that from the time of his entry several years before his arrest, he has been a manual laborer. Chain Chio Fong v. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 154, 66 C. C. A. 220.

Merchant afterwards becoming laborer. — See Cheung Him Nin v. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 391, 66 C. C. A. 453.

Seamen. — The provision in this section for the exclusion of Chinese laborers "about to come to the United States," means to "come with the intention of remaining at least for some period of time," and therefore did not include a seaman landing at a port in the United States for temporary purposes while his vessel was in port. U. S. v. Jamieson, (1911) 185 Fed. 165.

Vol. I, p. 782, sec. 10.

The word "vessel," as used in this section, is broad enough to include the vessel's tackle, apparel, furniture, and appurtenances. The Frolic. (1906) 148 Fed. 921.

A chronometer supplied on account of the owners of a schooner as a necessary part of her equipment for a special service, although not in general a necessary part of her equipment, is to be regarded as appurtenant to the ship, and as included in the term "ship" or "vessel." The Frolic, (1906) 148 Fed, 921.

Leased property. — A chronometer, which is one of the appurtenances of a vessel seized under this section, is not exempt from forfeiture because of the fact that it is not the property of the owners of the vessel, but was a leased to them by the owner to be used as a necessary part of the vessel's equipment. The Frolic. (1906) 148 Fed. 921.

Vessel purchased on conditional sale. — An agreement by the owner to sell a schooner, to be paid for in instalments, under which he put the purchaser in possession and appointed him master, with the right to use the vessel and receive her earnings, although retaining title until full payment of the purchase price, was held to be sufficient to authorize the purchaser to appoint another master and to render her subject to condemnation and tale, under section 10, for the knowing and wilful violation of the provisions of such Ast by the new master so appointed. The Frolie, (1908) 148 Fed. 918.

Vol. I, p. 782, sec. 11.

"Knowingly." — The word "knowingly," as used in this section, refers to knowledge of the fact of landing and not knowledge that the Chinese landed were not legally entitled to enter the United States. Sims v. U. S., (1903) 121 Fed. 515, 58 C. C. A. 92.

Indictment. — Under this section prohibiting any person from aiding or abetting the landing of any Chinese person brought into the United States from any vessel, an indictment charging defendants with "aiding and abetting," and immediately thereafter charging them with "landing" Chinese, was not objectionable for repugnancy, since, as defendants were liable as principals for aiding and abetting the commission of the offense, the further charge of "landing the Chinese" was surplusage, and not repugnant to the other charge. Sims r. U. S., (1903) 121 Fed. 515, 58 C. C. A. 92.

An indictment charging that defendants did unlawfully and knowingly land, and aid and abet in landing, in the United States, from a certain foreign steamship specified, then lying at the port of T., three certain male Chinese laborers; named, each of whom was not lawfully entitled to enter the United States, who had previously been brought on such steamship from the empire of China, was not demurrable for failure to set out the facts constituting the alleged unlawful landing. Sims v. U. S., (1903) 121 Fed. 515, 58 C. C. A. 92.

An indictment charging "John Doe, a Chinese person whose true name is to the grand jurors aforesaid unknown," with the offense of aiding the illegal landing of a Chinese person in the United States, showed on its fact that the name "John Doe" was fictitious only, and that the grand jurors were unable to identify the person whom they were indicting, and was therefore void for insufficiency of description. U. S. v. Doe, (1904) 127 Fed. 982.

Deportation decree as evidence.—A deportation decree rendered by the United States commissioner in proceedings instituted before him to determine the status of a Chinese person alleged to have been illegally brought into the United States is relevant and competent evidence of the status of such person, and is sufficient to justify a grand jury is finding an indictment against defendant for wilfully bringing such person into the United States in violation of this Act. U. S. v. Hills, (1903) 124 Fed. 831.

Vol. I, p. 782, sec. 12.

Jurisdiction. — Since no formal complaint or pleadings are required in Chinese deportation proceedings, it has been held that where certain Chinese persons proceeded against were before the commissioner and before the District Court on appeal, objections to the validity of the process of arrest were not available to oust the court of jurisdiction. Toy Tong v. U. S., (1906) 146 Fed. 343, 76 C. C. A. 621

Trial by jury. — Proceedings for the deportation of Chinese persons are not "causes," within R. S. sec. 566, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 236, declaring that the trial of issues of fact is the United States District Courts in all causes except cases in equity and cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, etc., shall be by jury. Toy Tong v. U. S., (1906) 146 Fed. 343, 76 C. C. A. 621.

Review. — Proceedings to enforce the Chinese Exclusion Acts, being administrative rather than judicial, the decision of a Chinese inspector refusing permission to a Chinese person to land is not reviewable by the courts. Toy Tong v. U. S., (1906) 146 Fed. 343, 76 C. C. A. 621.

Construction of statute. — The purpose and effect of Act April 29, 1902, ch. 641, 32 Stat. L. 176, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 755, as amended by this section, was to continue all such laws in force after the expiration of the then existing treaty with China of Dec. 8, 1894, including sections 5-11, 13, and 14 of Act Sept. 13, 1888, ch. 1015, 25 Stat. L. 477, 479, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 770-774, which are therein expressly enumerated. Hong Wing v. U. S., (1906) 142 Fed. 128, 73 C. C. A. 346.

Conflict between immigration and naturalisation laws. - This section is not intended to annul or override the immigration laws, so as to authorize the admission into this country of the wife of a naturalized alien not otherwise entitled to enter. Thus it has been held that the clause "who might herself be lawfully naturalized," as used in this section, limits the section to a woman lawfully within the country, her own capacity, independent of her marital status, being essential to attainment of citizenship, so that where the wife of a naturalized alien was not entitled to enter the country under the immigration regulations because afflicted with a contagious disease, she would not become a citizen entitled to enter by the naturalization of her husband. So it has been held that an alien female who lawfully enters this country for a lawful purpose and marries an American citizen becomes herself an American citizen and is not subject to deportation. Sprung v. Morton, (1909) 182 Fed. 330. See also Hopkins v. Fachant, (C. C. A. 1904) 130 Fed. 839.

CIVIL RIGHTS.

Vol. I, p. 791, sec. 1977.

Applicability to individuals. — Congress was not empowered by U. S. Const., 13th Amendment, to make it an offense against the United States, cognizable in the federal courts, for private individuals to compel negro citizens, by intimidation and force, to desist from performing their contracts of employment, but the remedy must be sought through state action and in state tribunals, subject to the supervision of the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error in proper cases. Hodges v. U. S., (1906) 203

U. S. 1, 27 S. Ct. 6, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 65.

State taxation laws.—This section does not affect the validity of a state statute requiring insurance companies, except county mutuals, not organized for pecuniary profit, and certain others, to pay a tax of one per cent. of their gross receipts after deducting amounts for losses, etc. Iowa Mutual Tornado Ins. Assoc. v. Gilbertson, (1906) 129 Ia. 658, 106 N. W. 153.

Vol. I, p. 792, sec. 1978.

Constitutionality.—Congress has the power, under the 13th Constitutional Amendment, to protect citizens of the United States in the enjoyment of those rights which are fundamental and belong to every citizen, if the deprivation of such rights is solely because of race or color, and this section is within that power. U. S. v. Morris, (1903) 125 Fed. 322.

Vol. I, p. 795, sec. 1979.

Jurisdiction. — The scope of the equitable jurisdiction of the federal courts was not extended by this section beyond what was an appropriate subject-matter for equitable relief according to existing standards. Giles v. Harris, (1903) 189 U. S. 475, 23 S. Ct. 640, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 909. See also Moyer v. Peabody, (1909) 212 U. S. 78, 29 S. Ct. 235, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 410.

An action against election officers to recover damages for the wrongful rejection of the plaintiff's vote for a member of Congress is one arising under the Constitution of the United States, and is within the jurisdiction of a federal court, where the damages are laid at more than $2,000. Brickhouse v.

Brooks, (1908) 165 Fed. 534.

Where, in a suit by a private person against state judges of general jurisdiction, the statement of plaintiff's claim did not show diverse citizenship, or that the action involved a federal question, a mere allegation that defendants were liable under this section was held to be insufficient to establish federal jurisdiction, in the absence of an allegation of facts showing a substantial dispute as to the effect or construction of the Constitution, or of some law of the United States on the determination of which the recovery depended. U. S. v. Bell, (C. C. A. 1905) 135 Fed. 336.

Disfranchisement. — Where the registers of Disfranchisement. — Where the registers of election of the city of Annapolis refused to register the plaintiffs, who were negroes, and who were otherwise qualified voters, because they did not fulfil the qualifications of voters prescribed by Acts Md. 1908, ch. 525, which Act was unconstitutional in so far as it effected negro disfranchisement, it was held that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover damages against defendants under this section; nor were complainants required to allege that defendants in refusing to register plaintiffs acted wilfully or maliciously. Anderson v. Myers, (1910) 182 Fed. 223.

Amount in controversy. — In an action under this section to recover damages for depriving plaintiff of rights secured to him by the Constitution and laws of the United States under color of a state statute or law, the plaintiff is not required to allege that the defendants acted maliciously, and a failure to do so does not authorize the court to determine as matter of law that only nominal damages are recoverable, and that therefore the action is not within the jurisdiction of a federal court. Brickhouse t. Brooks, (1908) 165 Fed. 534.

Rights protected.—The rights, privileges, and immunities referred to in this section are those secured by the Constitution and the laws of the United States, and do not include the right of an individual to life, liberty, or property, which are primary rights within the protection of the state of which the individual is an inhabitant. Brawner r. Irvin, (1909) 169 Fed. 964. See also Wadleigh r.

Newhall, (1905) 136 Fed. 941.

Right to custody of children. — The California statute (Code Civ. Pro. Cal., sec. 1747), which authorizes proceedings for the appointment of guardians for the persons and estates of minor children having no guardians by will or deed is a lawful exercise of the state's power; and proceedings based thereon, by which parents are deprived of the custody of their children, do not give them a right of action against the persons instituting the proceedings, under this section, for depriving them of rights, privileges, or immunities secured to them by the Constitution or laws of the United States. Wadleigh v. Newhall, (1905) 136 Fed. 941.

Persons protected. — Persons of African descent have the same rights as, but no greater than, other citizens in the state where they make their home; the rights and privileges protected from infringement by this section and the infringement of which creates a cause of action for damages, being common to all citizens. Brawner v. Irvin, (1909) 169 Fed. 964.

Vol. I, p. 799, sec. 1986.

Commissioner's fees. — A commissioner of a federal Circuit Court is not entitled to compensation for services rendered in connection with complaints in civil-right cases in which there has been no arrest and examination, since the fee of ten dollars allowed him by this section "for his services in each case, inclusive of all services incident to the arrest and examination," when earned, covers all services, and, unless earned, he gets no other fee. Allen v. U. S., (1907) 204 U. S. 581, 27 S. Ct. 324, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 634.

Vol. i, p. 801, sec. 1990.

Constitutionality. — This section is a valid exercise of power granted to Congress by Const. U. S., Amend. 13, forbidding slavery or involuntary servitude except as punishment for crime, and declaring that Congress shall have power to enforce this by legislation. U. S. v. McClellan, (1904) 127 Fed. 971.

Peonage defined. — Peonage is a term descriptive of a condition which has existed in Spanish America, and especially in Mexico. The essence of the thing is compulsory service in payment of a debt. A peon is one who is compelled to work for his creditor until his debt is paid. Bailey v. Alabama, (1911) 219 U. S. 219, 31 S. Ct. 146, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 191; U. S. v. McClellan, (1904) 127 Fed. 971; Peonage Cases, (1905) 138 Fed. 707; U. S. v. Clement, (1909) 171 Fed. 974.

Elements of offense.—The fact that persons were induced to work for another in payment of debts through fear of prosecution if they refused does not render the master guilty of peonage, unless such fear was caused by threats of prosecution made by him at the time. U. S. v. Clement, (1909) 171 Fed. 974.

Imprisonment for violation of contract to labor or to lease lands. - An Alabama statute (Act March 1, 1901, Acts 1900-1901, p. 1208, sec. 1) makes it a penal offense where any person who has contracted in writing to labor for or serve another for any given time, or who has by written contract leased or rented land from another for any specified time, or who has contracted in writing with the party furnishing lands, or the lands and teams to cultivate it, either to furnish the labor or labor and teams to cultivate the lands, shall afterwards, without the consent of the other party and without sufficient excuse, to be adjudged by the court, "leave such other party or abandon said contract, or leave or abandon the leased premises or land, and take employment of a similar nature from another person without first giving him notice of the prior contract." Another statute subjects the new employer to heavy penalties if he employs such person, with knowledge of the prior contract, with-out the consent of the former employer. It was held that this Act was void as in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment, prohibiting involuntary servitude except as a punishment for crime, and that its enforcement established a system of peonage within the meaning of R. S. sec. 1990, enacted to carry such amendment into effect. Peonage Cases, (1903) 123 Fed. 671.

The South Carolina statute (Crim. Code, sec. 357), declaring a laborer under contract to labor on farm lands, who shall receive advances and thereafter wilfully and without just cause fail to perform the reasonable service required by the contract, guilty of a misdemeanor, is a violation of Const. U. S., Amend. 13, prohibiting slavery or involuntary servitude except as a punishment for crime, and of this section, enacted pursuant thereto, abolishing peonage. Ex p. Hollman, (1907) 79 S. C. 9, 60 S. E. 19.

But in Young v. State, (1908) 4 Ga. App. 827, 62 S. E. 558, it was held that a state statute which makes criminal the procurement of money upon a fraudulent contract to perform service, and the fraudulent abandonment of the contract after having so procured the money, is not a violation of the federal statutes prohibiting involuntary service or labor.

Breach of labor contract as prima facie evidence of fraud. — So far as the refusal without just cause to perform the labor called for in a written contract of employment under which the employee has obtained money which was not refunded, or property which was not paid for, is made prima facie evidence of an intent to defraud by a state statute, and therefore punishable as a criminal offense, such legislation offends against the prohibition of the Thirteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution against involuntary servitude except as punishment for crime, and against the provisions forbidding peonage, found in this section, enacted to secure the enforcement of such amendment — especially where, under the local practice, the accused may not, for the purpose of rebutting the statutory presumption, testify as to his uncommunicated motives, purposes, or intentions. Bailey v. Alabama, (1911) 219 U. S. 219, 31 S. Ct. 145, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 191.

Jurisdiction. — A federal court may entertain a prosecution for violation of this section denouncing peonage, though prosecution of the same acts under the name of kidnapping and false imprisonment might be had in the state courts. U. S. v. McClellan, (1904) 127 Fed. 971.

Intimidation. — Inducing a person to labor in payment of debts by threats of prosecution may constitute intimidation and amount to peonage, if by reason of the different character of the parties such threats overcame the will of the servant and the service is involuntary. U. S. v. Clement, (1909) 171 Fed. 974.

Vol. I, p. 802, sec. 1022.

Crimes punishable by fine or imprisonment not in state prison or penitentiary. — Offenses against the United States punishable by a fine or by imprisonment not in a state prison or penitentiary are not infamous, within the meaning of the Fifth Constitutional Amendment, and any such offense may be prosecuted by information. U. S. v. Camden Iron Works, (1907) 150 Fed. 214, reversed on other grounds (C. C. A. 1908) 158 Fed. 561.

Violation of pure food law. — In U. S. v. J. Lindsay Wells Co., (1910) 186 Fed. 248, it was held in a prosecution for violation of the Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, ch. 3915, sec. 2, 34 Stat. L. 768, 1909 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot. 137, that as the imprisonment for violation of the Act could not be more than one year, and therefore could not be in the penitentiary, the crime was not infamous and the prosecution could be begun by information of the district attorney.

Vol. I, p. 802, sec. 5508.

Constitutionality. - Congress was not empowered by U. S. Const., 13th Amendment, to make it an offense against the United States, cognizable in the federal courts, for private individuals to compel negro citizens, by intimidation and force, to desist from performing their contracts of employment, but the remedy must be sought through state action and in state tribunals, subject to the supervision of the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error in proper cases. Hodges v. U. S., (1906) 203 U. S. 1, 27 S. Ct. 6, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 65.

Persons protected. - This section was not intended for the sole protection of the civil rights of citizens of African descent, depending entirely on the Federal Constitution and laws passed in accordance therewith, but protects all citizens in the civil rights guaranteed and secured to them by the Constitution and laws of the United States. Felix v. U.

S., (C. C. A. 1911) 186 Fed. 685.

Conspiracy to impose involuntary servitude. - If two or more persons conspire to falsely accuse another of crime and carry him before a magistrate in order that he may be convicted and put to hard labor, having at the time the purpose or design to hire such person or to enable some other person to hire him, they are guilty under this section, if such accused person is a citizen of the United States, of a conspiracy to deprive him of the free exercise or enjoyment of a right or privilege secured to him by the Constitution of the United States. Peonage Cases, (1903) 123 Fed. 671; Smith v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 157 Fed. 721.

Conspiracy to prevent negroes from leasing land. - A conspiracy between two or more persons to prevent negro citizens from exercising the right to lease and cultivate land, because they are negroes, is a conspiracy to deprive them of a right secured to them by the Constitution and laws of the United States, within the meaning of this section.

U. S. v. Morris, (1903) 125 Fed. 322.
Right to organize. — The right of a citizen to organize miners, artisans, laborers, or persons in any pursuit, as well as the right of individuals in such callings to unite for their own improvement or advancement, or for any other lawful purpose, is a fundamental right of a citizen in all free governments; but it is not a right, privilege, or immunity granted or secured to citizens of the United States, by its Constitution or laws, and is left solely to the protection of the states. Moore, (1904) 129 Fed. 630. U. S. v.

Right to vote for member of House of Representatives. - The right or privilege to vote at an election for a member of the House of Representatives of the United States is a right or privilege secured by the Constitution of the United States, and such right is therefore within the meaning of section 5508. Felix v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 186 Fed. 685.

Right to vote at state election. - This section is not appropriate legislation for the enforcement of the Fifteenth Constitutional Amendment, both because it relates to the acts of individuals, and not of a state, and because it is broader in its terms than the legislation authorized by the amendment; and it will not sustain an indictment for conspiring to prevent a citizen from voting at a purely state or municipal election on account of his race or color, whether the defendants are charged as individuals, or as officers of the state. Karem v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1903) 121 Fed. 250.

Right to personal liberty. - Where an indictment charged that defendants conspired to injure, oppress, threaten, and intimidate B., a citizen of the United States, in the free exercise of his privilege of contracting and being contracted with, his right of personal security and personal liberty, and the overt act charged was the seizing of B., the placing of handcuffs on him, and compelling him, by force and against his will, to enter into a pretended contract to work for a long period of time for the defendant, it was held that the indictment did not state an offense within the jurisdiction of the federal courts, under section 5508, the citizen's right to personal liberty and security being within the primary jurisdiction of the state. U. S. v. Eberhart,

Right to trial by due process of law. — In Ex p. Riggins. (1904) 134 Fed. 404, the Circuit Court ruled that certain counts of the indictment were good, under the Thirteenth Amendment. It also held that two other counts based upon the Fourteenth Amendment were good, as the Fourteenth Amendment secured to a prisoner in custody of the sheriff, on accusation of crime against the state, the right, privilege, or immunity to have the benefit of a jury trial by the operation of the state's established course of judicial procedure, and that private individuals who lynched such a prisoner, to prevent his enjoying the benefit of such a trial, deprived him, in the constitutional sense, of a right secured to him under the Fourteenth Amendment, and could properly be indicted under this section and section 5509 Rev. Stat., 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 864. The defendant Powell, who obtained a severance and demurred to the indictment, was a codefendant with Riggins, who appealed to the Supreme Court, (1905) 199 U. S. 547, 26 S. Ct. 147, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 303, from a decision of the Circuit Court refusing to discharge him upon habeas corpus. The Supreme Court, holding that habeas corpus was not the proper mode of testing such questions, quashed the writ. Riggins's appeal was argued and submitted at the same term as the Hodges Case, (1906) 203 U. S. 1, 27 S. Ct. 6, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 65, which involved like questions under the Thirteenth Amendment. After the Supreme Court thus disposed of the Riggins appeal, it decided the Hodges case, holding that similar rights to those claimed, under the Thirteenth Amendment, were not secured by the Constitution or laws, and made use of expressions in the latter opinion which, in the view the Circuit Court took of them, under the circumstances stated, made it doubtful whether the Supreme Court did not intend to hold that the United States had no power, under any circumstances, to deal with lawless private individuals for violation of rights secured under the Fourteenth Amendment. The government insisted that the expression in the Hodges opinion as to the Fourteenth Amendment "went beyond the case" and should not "control the judgment" as to the rights and immunities here claimed under the Fourteenth Amendment. The Circuit Court, while satisfied as to the soundness of the Riggins case as regards the counts based on the Fourteenth Amendment, was nevertheless of the opinion that proper judicial subordination required the Circuit Court, under the circumstances stated, not to run counter to the last utterances of the Supreme Court as to the Fourteenth Amendment, though they "went beyond the case," and that the only court which could properly determine what was intended by these expressions is the Supreme Court itself, and accordingly held, sustaining the demurrers to the indictment, that no right, privilege, or immunity, under the Fourteenth Amendment, in respect of due process at any stage of the duty of the state in affording it, is secured under that amendment, unless there is actual denial of the right by the state or its officers; and that private individuals who take a prisoner from the custody of the state's officers and murder him, to prevent his enjoying the benefits of a trial by the operation of the state's established course of judicial procedure, do not deprive him of the enjoyment, in the constitutional sense, of any right secured to him by the Constitution or laws, and were not therefore indictable under sections 5508 and 5509 of the Revised Statutes. U. S. v. Powell. (1907) 151 Fed. 648, affirmed (1909) 212 U. S. 564, 29 S. Ct. 690, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 653, on the authority of Hodges v. U. S., (1906) 203 U. S. 1, 27 S. Ct. 6, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 65.

Sufficiency of evidence.—On the trial of defendants charged with conspiracy to deprive a person named of his rights under the Constitution and laws of the United States by subjecting him to involuntary servitude, there was evidence that one of the defendants went to Memphis, Tenn., and there hired fifteen or more negroes to go with him to his place in Missouri to work in a mill, promising liberal wages. On their arrival in the night, they were met at the station by another of the defendants with hacks and taken to a farm twelve miles distant, where they were searched for weapons, and then placed in a cabin under the guard of others of the defendants armed with repeating rifles and revolvers. They were kept under such guards night and day and worked on the farm in clearing and ditching, were subjected to brutal punishments, and few, if any, received the promised wages. Some who succeeded in escaping were brought back by some of the defendants armed with guns. Each of the defendants convicted participated in some way in such transactions, either as owner of the farm, overseer, or guard. It was held that such evidence was sufficient to warrant the submission of the case to the jury, and to support a finding of conspiracy as charged. Smith & U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 157 Fed. 721.

Smith v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 157 Fed. 721.

Indictment. — An indictment under this section which charges that defendants conspired to injure, etc., certain named persons, male citizens over twenty-one years of age. "in the free exercise and enjoyment of a right and privilege secured to them," was held to be bad as indefinite, in that it failed to state what particular right and privilege was meant, though it continued with a recital that defendants were officers of an election precinct, and conspired together "for the purposes aforesaid," and "to carry out and effect the object of the same" failed to open the polls promptly, and by a tardy discharge of their duties and frequent sheences prevented the persons named from voting. McKenna v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 127 Fed. 88.

In an indictment under this section for conspiracy to deprive a citizen of a right secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States, it is not necessary to aver any overt act, and any averment in such an indictment of acts done must necessarily be referred to the charge of conspiracy as describing or particularizing such charge. Smith v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 157 Fed. 721.

An indictment which charges the accused in the language of the statute with having conspired to injure, oppress, threaten, and intimidate a citizen named in the free exercise of a right secured to him by the Constitution and laws of the United States, and which by way of further particularizing averred that such right was the right to the free exercise and enjoyment of freedom from involuntary servitude and slavery, and that the con-spiracy was to be effected by arresting, imprisoning, guarding, and compelling him by threats and intimidation to work and labor against his will for the defendants, was held to sufficiently describe the offense, without excluding the defendants from the operation of the exception in the Thirteenth Constitutional Amendment by an averment that such person was not held in servitude as a punishment for crime. Smith v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 157 Fed. 721.

Effect of acquittal in state court.—An acquittal of murder after a regular trial in a state court having full jurisdiction in the premises is a bar to so much of an indictment for conspiring criminally in violation of sections 5508, 5509, as seeks, by charging defendants with the commission of such murder, to enforce the provision of section 5509, that if, in carrying out such conspiracy, an offense against the state has been committed, the punishment provided for by the state for such offense shall be imposed. U. S. v. Mason (1909) 213 U. S. 115, 29 S. Ct. 480, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 725.

Positions included. — The protection of the President's order of July 27, 1897, against removals from the civil service except upon written charges, with opportunity for defense, extends to an employee in the office of the United States surveyor-general for the state of Idaho, certified by the secretary of the interior as within the terms of this Act, and the executive order of May 6, 1896, made in pursuance thereof, extending the departmental service classified under that Act so as to include all executive officers and employees outside of the District of Columbia, whether compensated by a fixed salary or otherwise, who are serving in a clerical capacity, or whose duties are in whole or in part of a clerical nature. (1907) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 363.

Deputy collectors of internal revenue would seem to be officers of the United States, at least in the sense that they are subject to classification under the civil service law; but if not officers, they are employees of the United States; and, considered as either, the President has the right to include them in the competitive classified service. # Vol. I, p. 815, sec. 9.

Eligibility. — In (1907) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 301, it was held that an applicant for a position in the competitive classified service who resided with her father, a clerk in the post-office department, and who had two brothers also in the classified service who maintained separate homes apart from their father, was entitled to appointment if otherwise qualified under the civil service law.

Certification. - The Civil Service Commission is authorized and required to withhold from certification the name of any person where two or more members of the same family are already in the public service under the Civil Service Act. (1907) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 260.

The question whether there are already two or more members of the same family.—To the same effect as the original note, see (1997) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 260.

Solicitation by federal officers. - The sending of a circular letter by a political committee to federal officers and employees, soliciting financial aid in congressional or state elections, upon or attached to which appear the names of federal officers or employees, is a violation of this section. (1902) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 33.

Form of words used. - The statute unquestionably condemns all such circulars notwithstanding the particular form of words adopted in order to show a request rather than a demand and to give the responses a quasi-voluntary character. (1902) 24 Op. Attv.-Gen.

Vol. I, p. 816, sec. 12.

Solicitation by letter received in public office. - Solicitation by a letter intended to be received and read by a post-office employee in the post-office building, is embraced by the provision of this section, that no person shall, in any room or building occupied in the dis-charge of official duties by any officer or employee of the United States mentioned in such Act, solicit, "in any manner whatever," or receive, any contribution of money or any other thing of value for any political purpose whatever. U. S. v. Thayer, (1908) 209 U. S. 39, 28 S. Ct. 426, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 673, reversing (1907) 154 Fed. 508.

The personal delivery to a postmaster in his office of a sealed letter containing a request for a contribution for a political campaign constitutes a criminal offense, under this section. U.S. v. Smith, (1908) 163 Fed.

Vol. I, p. 822, sec. 4.

The purpose of this section is to prevent the expenditure of public money in the employment of subordinate persons at the seat of government out of appropriations made for general purposes, so as to insure the efficient control by the Congress not only over the amounts of money expended, but also over the number and character of subordinate officers and employees in the service of the United States employed at the seat of government. It in no wise limits the discretion of the heads of the several departments as to the character of the work which shall be required of their several employees, but is intended to prevent the employment of subordinate officers or employees at the seat of government without specific appropriations for their payment. (1908) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 522.

Promotions. - See under p. 813, sec. 6.

Vol. I, p. 828, sec. 1754.

Preference where reductions are made. -Ex-soldiers or sailors, or the widows and orphans of deceased soldiers and sailors, are not entitled, under the provisions of this section or section 3 of the Act of Aug. 15, 1876, 19 Stat. L. 169, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 823, or section 7 of the Civil Service Act of Jan. 16. 1883, 22 Stat. L. 406, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 814, to preference over other persons, when re-ductions in salary and rank are to be made, even though their qualifications are equal. (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 490.

CLAIMS.

Vol. II, p. 7, sec. 3477.

Assignments before allowance. - So far as the contract for the prosecution of a claim against the United States makes the payment of the compensation for services rendered thereunder a lien upon the claim and upon any draft, money, or evidence of indebtedness which may be issued thereon, it is repugnant to this section. Nutt v. Knut. (1906) 200 U. S. 13, 26 S. Ct. 216, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 348.

An assignment of shipbuilding contracts with the federal government, with power to collect the payments to become due thereunder, being valid between the parties, was not made invalid by the statute, where the government voluntarily deposited the money in court to be disposed of by the parties upon completion of the contracts. Hawes v. Wm. R. Trigg Co., (1909) 110 Va. 165, 65 S. E.

Assignment by public contractor. — In Henningsen v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1906) 143 Fed. 811, affirmed in (1908) 208 U. S. 404, 28 S. Ct. 389, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 547, it was held that an assignment by a public contractor of a claim against the United States for money accruing on a building contract was void, both as against the United States, the contractor's surety, the laborers, and materialmen.

Assignment by bankrupt. — An assignment of a claim against the United States for money due under a contract is void to transfer the claim, as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the assignor, unless executed with the formalities required by this section, and unless the claim has been previously allowed and a warrant issued for its payment, which is essential to its assignability under said section. Guarantee Title, etc., Co. v. Huntingdon First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 1911) 185 Fed. 373.

Assignments as collateral security for a loan of unallowed claims against the United States on account of contracts for furnishing materials to the various departments of the government, being in direct opposition to this section, can confer no interest in the assignees as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the assignors. National Bank of Commerce v. Downie, (1910) 218 U. S. 345, 31 S. Ct. 89, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1065.

In In re Ghazal, (C. C. A. 1909) 174 Fed.

809, it was held that a bankrupt could not have assigned an expectancy of reward for information concerning smugglers prior to the allowance of the reward by the secretary of the treasury, which did not occur until after the bankruptcy adjudication, and that the reward subsequently awarded passed to the bankrupt, and not to his trustee for the benefit of creditors.

Effect of assignment as between parties.— The illegality, under this section, of a clause in a contract for the prosecution of a claim against the United States, making the payment of compensation for the services rendered thereunder a lien upon the claim and upon any draft, money, or evidence of indebteuness that may be issued thereon, does not invalidate so much of the contract as provides for the payment for such services of a sum equal to one-third of the amount allowed on the claim. Nutt r. Knut, (1906) 200 U. S. 13, 26 S. Ct. 216, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 348.

Vol. II, p. 18. [Act of March 3, 1875.]

Construction of Act. — "The Act does not create a lien in favor of the government. It does not purport to do so. It merely prescribes the procedure for enforcing a set-off. It imposes upon the secretary of the treasury the duty of deducting from the claim of a creditor of the government any counterclaim of the government, and if the creditor will not consent to such set-off, then the secretary is required to cause legal proceedings to be commenced, to the end that the counterclaim may be put into judgment and judicially enforced. The Act is evidently intended for the security and protection of the government, but it forms no part of the contract between the government and the sureties on a bond given to the government. It is a well-settled rule of law, founded on principles of public policy, that the government does not agree with its contractors or their sureties that its public officers will perform their duties." U. S. r. Ennis, (1904) 132 Fed. 133, citing Hart r. U. S., (1877) 95 U. S. 316, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 479.

Liability of sureties.—The failure of the treasury department to withhold any part of a payment due to a government contractor on account of a claim of the United States against him for a prior breach of the contract, as authorized and required by this Act does not release the sureties on the contractor's bond from liability for such claim. U. S. v. Ennis, (1904) 132 Fed. 133.

Vol. II, p. 26. [Act of March 3, 1885.]

Right of government to reclaim after payment.—Where the claim of an army officer for the loss of private property in the service, filed under this Act, was audited, allowed, and paid in the usual manner it was held that the government could not reclaim the money without showing that it was obtained by fraud or paid under a mistake of fact. U. S. v. Olmsted, (C. C. A. 1902) 118 Fed. 433.

Vol. II, p. 29, sec. 3490.

Remedy cumulative.—The right of the United States to see for recovery of money obtained from it by means of a fraudulent claim is one existing at common law, and the remedy by penal suit given by this section is cumulative, and not exclusive. Pooler v. U. S., (1904) 127 Fed. 519, 62 C. C. A. 317.

Vol. II, p. 31, sec. 5438.

What constitutes false presentation of claims.—Under Act July 1, 1890, 26 Stat. L. 209, which authorizes any officer authorized to administer oaths for general purposes in the state, city, or county where he resides to administer oaths to all affidavits and declarations to be made or used in any pension or bounty case, a notary public having authority to administer oaths under the laws of the state may take affidavits to be used in support of an application for the entry of a soldier's additional homestead, and the presentation of false proofs and affidavits, purporting to have been sworn to before a notary in support of such an application, if done wilfully and fraudulently, constitutes the offense of presenting false evidence in support of a claim against the United States, within this section. U. S. v. Lair. (1902) 118 Fed. 98.

U. S. v. Lair, (1902) 118 Fed. 98.

False claim by Indian agents. — Under the statutory provisions and the rules and regulations of the Indian department, which require all accounts and vouchers for claims and disbursements connected with Indian affairs to be transmitted to the commissioner of Indian affairs for administrative examination, approval, and allowance, or correction or rejection, and to be by him passed to the proper accounting officer of the treasury department for settlement, such commissioner is an officer required to pass upon, and, if found correct, to approve and allow the accounts and vouchers of Indian agents, who have authority to make purchases and disbursements, and the transmission to the commissioner by such an agent of a false and fraudulent voucher for disbursements claimed to have been made, and for which he claims credit in his quarterly account, knowing such voucher to be false, constitutes the presenting of a false claim against the United States, which is made a criminal offense by this section. Bridgeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 140 Fed. 577.

Making and using false pension voucher. — While R. S. sec. 4746, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 665, 30 Stat. L. 718, expressly covers the offense of making, or aiding or assisting to make, any false voucher concerning a claim for pension, it does not cover the offense of using such a voucher, which comes within the terms of section 5438, and where, as is permissible, an indictment charges defendant with having made and used such a false voucher, it is sustainable under the latter section, and, upon a general verdict of guilty, which is presumed to find true everything alleged, the punishment prescribed by the latter section may be imposed. Pooler v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 127 Fed. 509.

Indictment.—An indictment, under this section, for presenting a false claim against the United States, which charges that defendant, as Indian agent, transmitted to the commissioner of Indian affairs, with his accounts, a false voucher purporting to be a receipt for money paid out by him, knowing that the same was false and fictitious, in that he had not paid such money, sufficiently alleges wherein the claim was false to apprise the defendant of what he is required to meet. Bridgeman r. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 140 Fed. 577

In an indictment, under this section, for making and presenting to an officer for approval a false, fictitious, and fraudulent claim against the United States, which sets out the claim, showing it to be an itemized account, averments that certain sums charged therein "should have been" smaller sums stated, sufficiently shows wherein the claim is false and fraudulent. U. S. s. Franklin, (1909) 174 Fed. 161.

Duplicity. — An indictment under this section is not bad for duplicity because it charges in the same count both the making and the presenting of a false claim against the United States; the gist of the offense being the obtaining, or attempting to obtain, money from the United States by means of a fraudulent claim, and the acts charged being but different steps in the commission of such offense, although either alone is made punishable. Bridgeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 140 Fed. 577; U. S. v. Franklin, (1909) 174 Fed. 161.

Officer to whom claim presented.—An indictment under this section which charges that the defendant, for the purpose of obtaining the approval of a certain claim against the United States, did use a certain false voucher, described, which contained false and fictitious statements, well knowing the same to be false and fictitious, charges every element of the offense as defined in the statute, and need not allege to whom the voucher was presented, nor the manner of its use. Bridgeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 140 Fed. 577

An indictment, under this section, for making and presenting to an officer for approval a false, fictitious, and fraudulent claim against the war department of the United States for supplies furnished the cadet mess at West Point, which described such officer as a brigadier-general in the army and superintendent of the Military Academy at West Point, and alleged that he was an officer authorized to approve such claim, was held, on demurrer, sufficiently to show such authority. U. S. v. Franklin, (1909) 174 Fed. 161.

Pluce of orime. — An indictment for making a false voucher for the purpose of obtaining payment of a false and fraudulent claim against the United States sufficiently alleged the place of the crime, where it charged that it was committed at a certain Indian agency named, which was alleged to have been within the state and district where the indictment was found. Bridgeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 140 Fed. 577.

Allegation of falsity of claim.—A count in an indictment under this section, charging the use of a false voucher for the purpose of obtaining the approval of a claim against the United States, is not bad because it does not aver in express words that the claim itself was false and fraudulent, where it shows that the voucher is the same described in a preceding count as constituting the claim, it being there alleged to have been false and fraudulent to defendant's knowledge. Bridgeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 140 Fed. 577.

Intent.—An indictment which charges a wilful attempt by defendant to obtain money from the United States by presenting a false, fletitious, and fraudulent claim, the false, fletitious, and fraudulent character of which was known to him. necessarily imports an intent to defraud the government, and such intent need not be specifically alleged. Bridgeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 140 Fed.

Variance.— An allegation in an indictment for making and presenting a false claim against the United States of the date when the same was made and presented is not an essential part of the description of the offense, and the fact that the paper introduced in support of the charge bears a different date does not constitute a fatal variance. Bridgeman r. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 140 Fed. 577.

Evidence. - On the trial of a defendant charged with having, as Indian agent, made and presented a false claim and voucher against the United States, knowing the same to be false and fictitious, testimony that it was a custom or practice of other Indian agents to sign and forward their accounts and vouchers as the same were prepared by the clerks, without reading them, was held to be irrelevant, and properly excluded. Bridgeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 140 Fed. 577.

Other offenses. - Since in a prosecution for knowingly purchasing clothing from cer-tain marines in the government service, in alleged violation of this section, the government is required to prove guilty knowledge, evidence of the commission of other similar offenses by the accused than those charged in the indictment is admissible. Lobosco v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 183 Fed. 742.

Purchase or pledge of military clothing and equipment. — Under the provision in this section making it an offense for any one knowingly to purchase or receive in pledge from

146 Fed. 202; U. S. v. Smith, (1907) 156 Fed. 859; Lobosco v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 183 Fed. 742. See also Ontai v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 188 Fed. 311, decided under section 35 of the Penal Code (Act of March 4, 1909, ch. 321, 35 Stat. L. 1095). Contra, U. S. v. Michael, (1907) 153 Fed. 609. "Knowingly." — In that provision of R.S. haveney.—In that provision of R. s. sec. 5438, which makes it a criminal offense if any one "knowingly" purchases or receives in pledge from any soldier clothes or other public property, such soldier not having the lawful right to pledge or sell the same, the word "knowingly" applies only to the question whether a person purchasing or receiving such property in pledge knew, or should have a soldier or sailor any arms, equipment, ammunition, clothing, stores, or other public property, it is not material that the clothing purchased by accused was furnished to them under their clothing allowance. U. S. v. Hart, known from facts which put him on inquiry, that the person offering the same was a soldier. U. S. v. Koplik, (1907) 155 Fed. 919; Lobosco v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 183 Fed. 742.

Where the claim has never been allowed. -Smythe r. U. S., (1903) 188 U. S. 156, 23 S. Ct. 279, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 425, affirming (C. C. A. 1901) 107 Fed. 376, cited in the second paragraph of the original note.

Presentation and disallowance. - Since a set-off is a creation of statute, and does not exist at common law, if it is available at all in an action brought by the United States it must appear that the claim has been presented to an accounting officer of the treasury and disallowed, as required by this section, or that it is within one of the exceptions specified in such section. U. S. v. Cantrall. (1910) 176 Fed. 949.

Vol. II, p. 45, sec. 3466.

Jurisdiction of state courts. - The New York Banking Law (Consol. Laws 1909, ch. 2), sec. 19, declares that dividends to be paid by the superintendent of banks out of the assets of institutions in his charge for administration shall be paid to such persons and in such amounts and upon such notice as may be directed by the Supreme Court in the judicial district in which the principal office of such corporation or individual banker is located. It has been held that where a New York trust company, prior to failure, had been appointed a depositary for bankruptcy funds, whether deposits made by trustees in bankruptcy were entitled to preference under R. S. sec. 3466, giving preference to debts due the United States, was solely within the jurisdiction of the state Supreme Court, and could not be determined on a motion in bankruptcy for orders requiring the superintendent of banks to pay out such deposits. In re Bologh, (1911) 185 Fed. 825.

Bond for performance of contract and payment of debts by contractor. - In an action brought upon a bond given under the Act of Congress of Aug. 13, 1894, ch. 280, sec. 1, 28 Stat. L. 278, 6 Fed. Stat. Annot. 125, against the principal and surety therein named, de-murrer was filed to the declaration because it was not averred therein that the claim of the United States thereunder, if any, had been paid. It was held that such averment was unnecessary, because the United States is not a preferred creditor under such a bond. U. S. v. Perth Amboy Shipbuilding, etc., Co., (1905) 137 Fed. 688.

Claims for trespassing on government land. Under R. S. secs. 3466 and 3467, the claim of the United States against an insolvent, based on the insolvent trespassing on govern-ment land and cutting and removing the timber thereon, is prior to other claims against the insolvent. U. S. v. Flint Lumber Co., (1908) 87 Ark. 80, 112 S. W. 217.

Bankruptcy Act. - The provisions of the Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, sec. 64, 30 Stat. L. 563, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 682, with respect to the payment of taxes and the debts which shall have priority in the distribution of a bankrupt's estate, do not lessen or affect the rights of the United States under this section, nor the right of a surety in a bond given by the bankrupt to the United States who pays the money due on such bond to be subrogated to a "like priority" under the provisions of section 3468. Title Guaranty, etc., Co. v. Guarantee Title, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1909) 174 Fed. 385. See also In re Stoever, (1904) 127 Fed. 394. Under this section see also Smythe c. U.

Rights of sureties paying claim. — Where the liability of the estate of a deceased surety on the bond of a collector of internal revenue was established in a suit in the federal courts, whereupon the decedent's cosureties paid the entire claim without rendition of judgment against the estate, it was held that they were thereby subrogated to the rights of the United States against the estate, and their assignee was entitled to recover contribution therefrom. Pond v. Dougherty, (1907) 6 Cal. App. 686, 92 Pac. 1035.

Right of priority in fund paid in by surety.

— Sections 3466-3468 do not give the United States such right of priority in a fund paid into court by the surety on the bond of a contractor for government work in discharge of the obligation of the bond, which under the statute and its terms secures the claims of other creditors of the insolvent contractor as well as that of the United States, and in the absence of statutory provision such right of priority does not exist. U. S. v. Heaton, (C. C. A. 1904) 128 Fed. 414.

Limitation applicable to time of filing motion. — A limitation applicable to the time for filing the motion, and not to the time for making the decision thereon, is made by the provision of this section that the Court of Claims, "within two years next after the final disposition" of a claim, may, on motion on behalf of the United States, grant a new trial. Interest on Indian claims. - In U. S. v. Cherokee Nation, (1906) 202 U. S. 101, 26 S. Ct. 589, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 948, it was held that interest included in the account of the sums due the Indians under treaty stipulation, transmitted by the Secretary of the Interior to the Cherokee Nation pursuant to the agreement for the cession to the United States of the Cherokee Outlet, made between the United States and the Cherokee Nation on Dec. 19, 1891, and ratified by Congress in the Act of March 3, 1893, was properly allowed by the Court of Claims, notwithstanding the provision of section 1091, forbidding the allowance of interest on "any claim up to the time of the rendition of judgment thereon by the Court of Claims, unless upon a contract expressly stipulating for the payment of interest," where the question of interest was a subject of difference while the negotiations were being carried on, the determination of which was provided for in the agreement itself.

Condemnation proceedings.—A proceeding by the United States for the condemnation of land for public use, and for the assessment and payment of damages therefor, is not a proceeding to collect an account or claim against the United States, but an adversary proceeding instituted by the United States against landowners for the taking thereof. U. S. v. Sargent, (C. C. A. 1908) 162 Fed. 81. Interest was allowed in U. S. v. Sargent, (C. C. A. 1908) 162 Fed. 81.

Claims founded on tort. — This section does not authorize a recovery of damages for a consequential injury to property not amounting to a taking and for which recovery could be had only in an action of tort. Coleman v. U. S., (1910) 181 Fed. 599.

A claim against the United States for compensation on account of the unlawful and unnecessary destruction of property during the war, under the order of the general commanding, is one "sounding in tort" within the meaning of this Act. Juragua Iron Co. E. U. S., (1909) 212 U. S. 302, 29 S. Ct. 385, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 522.

In Hijo v. U. S., (1904) 194 U. S. 315, 24 S. Ct. 727, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 994, it was held that the United States was not suable under this Act on a claim for the value of the use by the army of a Spanish merchant vessel captured during the war with Spain, since the action was one sounding in tort, and was not converted into one of implied contract because the claim was in form for the use of the vessel after actual hostilities were suspended by the protocol of Aug. 12, 1898, especially in view of the provision of the treaty of peace for the mutual relinquishment of all claims for national or individual indemnity that might have arisen since the beginning of the Cuban insurrection, and prior to the exchange of ratification of such treaty.

Claims founded on contract. — In Harley v. U. S., (1905) 198 U. S. 234, 25 S. Ct. 634, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1030, affirming (1903) 39 Ct. Cl. 105, the use by the United States of a device patented by a government employee with the understanding on his part, not shared by the government officials, that compensation would be made, was held not to give a contract right to such compensation on which a claim could be founded within the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims, especially where demand was first made by the petition in that court, after a delay of fourteen years.

Implied contract. — The United States does not, by undertaking to carry a passenger in an elevator in one of its public buildings, impliedly contract that its employees in charge of it will exercise due care, so as to confer jurisdiction on a federal court, under this Act, of an action to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by reason of the negligence of such employees, on the theory that such action is upon a "contract, express or implied, with the government of the United States," within the meaning of that Act; but the case is one "sounding in tort," which by that Act is excluded from judicial cognizance. Bigby v. U. S., (1903) 188 U. S. 400, 23 S. Ct. 468, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 519.

Tobacco tax rebate claim.—In U. S. c. Hyams, (C. C. Set-offs, etc. — In Allen v. U. S., (1907) 204 U. S. 584, 27 S. Ct. 324, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 636, it was held that a set-off in favor of the United States against the demand of a commissioner of a federal Circuit Court for five cents more per folio for drawing complaints in civil rights cases than the amount he had been paid as in full for such services, could be allowed by the Court of Claims, under section 1, to the extent of fees improperly and unlawfully paid him in the settlement of his former account, which was approved by the Circuit Court "subject to ravision by the accounting officers of the United States treasury," even though some of such illegal payments were made later than the fling of the claim.

The limitation provision.—This Act did not supersede R. S. sees. 3226, 3227, 3 Fed. Stat. Annot. 391, 392, specifically authorizing

Vol. II, p. 82, sec. 2, first clause.

Effect of Circuit Court of Appeals Act.— The limitation with reference to the amount in dispute, prescribed by this section for ap-from year to year appropriated as full compensation for the rent of quarters secured for the Civil Service Commission by the secretary of the interior, in the discharge of his duty under the Act of Jan. 16, 1883, 22 Stat. L. 403, 405, ch. 27, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 812, cannot maintain suit against the government under this Act to recover the difference between such sums and the fair rental value of the building, including the basement, which was used without consent, on the theory that the claim is founded either upon a contract, express or implied, or upon the constitutional obligation to make just compensa-tion for private property taken for public use, in view of R. S. secs. 3679, 3732; providgovernment shall expend in any one fiscal year any sum in excess of appropriations made by Congress for that fiscal year, or involve the government in any contract for the future payment of money in excess of such appropriations," and that "no contract or purchase on behalf of the United States shall be made unless the same is authorized by law, or is under an appropriation adequate to its fulfilment," and of the Acts of Congress of June 22, 1874, 18 Stat. L. 133, 144. ch. 388, and March 3, 1877, 19 Stat. L. 363, 370. ch. 106, prohibiting contracts for the rental of property for government purposes until an appropriation therefor shall have been made in terms by Congress. Hooe v. U. S., (1910) 218 U. suits for the recovery of internal taxes paid, and claimed to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, within two years after an appeal has been taken and determined by the department; and such suits are governed by the limitation contained in those sections, which is made one of the conditions of the right of action thereby given. Christic-St. Commission Co. v. U. S., (1903) 126 Fed. 991.

The limitation contained in this clause in the case of a suit by a marshal to recover fees or disbursements, begins to run as to each item from the time the service was rendered or the disbursement made, and not from the expiration of the plaintiff's term of office. Salvage claim against the United States. — A federal District Court has jurisdiction under the provisions of this Act of a petition which is, in effect, a libel in personam for the salvage of duties collected and paid over to the federal government on a cargo of sugar afterwards saved from loss by fire while on board a lighter, in the harbor of New York, and in the possession and control of the customs officers, since the claim may properly be said to be one for unliquidated damages in a case "not sounding in tort," in respect of which the party would be entitled to redress in a court of admiralty if the United States were suable. U. S. v. Cornell Steamboat Co., (1906) 202 U. S. 184, 26 S. Ct. 648, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 987.

Suit to reimburse marshal for payments to court bailiffs. — The second clause of section 2, as amended in 1898, which withholds from the jurisdiction conferred on the Circuit and District Courts by said section suits brought against the United States to recover "fees, salary, or compensation for official services of officers of the United States," does not apply to a suit to recover disbursements made by a marshal in paying for the services of court bailiffs. U. S. v. Swift, (C. C. A. 1905) 139 Fed. 225.

Vol. II, p. 85, sec. 7.

Nature of opinion. — The opinion mentioned in this section is not the usual opinion of the trial judge, but constitutes a part of the record to enable the public and the appellate court to find on the record a formal statement of the Circuit Court's findings both on questions of law and fact and the reasons for such findings. U.S. v. Swift, (C. C. A. 1905) 139 Fed. 225; Hyams v. U.S., (1905) 139 Fed. 997, affirmed (C. C. A. 1906) 146 Fed. 15.

Review.—The findings of fact mentioned in this section have the weight of the verdict of a jury, and cannot ordinarily be revised by the appellate court. It has been held that where the record contains all the testimony upon which the judge's findings of fact are based, the appellate court may examine if there is competent evidence to support the findings, and, if there be no evidence, may disregard the findings and reverse the judgment. U. S. v. Clark, (1877) 96 U. S. 37, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 696; Conners v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 141 Fed. 16, 19. See Collier v. U. S., (1899) 173 U. S. 79, 81, 19 S. Ct. 330, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 621.

Sufficiency of finding.—Where the trial judge, in a suit to recover a tobacco tax rebate, filed two papers, one entitled a decree for the petitioner, and the other the opinion of the court, which the statute makes in effect a part of the record, the two setting out sufficient findings of fact to sustain the court's conclusions, it was held that such papers were sufficiently formal to constitute a compliance with the section. U. S. v. Hyams, (C. C. A. 1906) 146 Fed. 15.

Identification of distributees.—In Buchanan v. Patterson, (1903) 190 U. S. 360, 23 S. Ct. 764, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1096, it was held that Congress by making an appropriation in the Act of March 3, 1899, in accordance with the report of the Court of Claims on certain French spoliation claims, to an administratrix "representing" a designated firm, and a similar appropriation to the same person as administratrix of the estate of a person designated as "the surviving partner" of such firm, cannot be deemed thereby to have determined that the next of kin of such surviving partner should share in the distribution, where such administratrix represented in the Court of Claims all the interested parties, and that court mistakenly supposed such surviving partner to have been a member of the firm at the time of the illegal seizures of its property, but must be regarded as having intended such appropriation for the next of kin of those composing the firm at the time of the seizures, without attempting to identify the particular persons belonging to that class.

Vol. II, p. 96, sec. 3.

Amendment of petition. — In U. S. v. Martinez, (1904) 195 U. S. 469, 25 S. Ct. 80, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 282, it was held that a petition in an action under the Indian Depredation Act of March 3. 1891, in which the wrong was alleged to have been committed by a particular Indian tribe, could not be amended after the three years' limitation prescribed by that Act had expired, by stating another and different tribe as the wrongdoer, since it was manifestly intended by the statute, taken as a whole, that the tribe by which the depredation was committed should be joined in the petition where it can be identified, though the Act does not in terms provide for service of process upon such tribe.

COINAGE, MINTS, AND ASSAY OFFICES.

Vol. II, p. 116, sec. 3506.

Cashier not an officer.—Though under R. S. sec. 3496, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 113, the cashier of the mint is not an officer thereof, and by this section the superintendent of the mint is declared to be the keeper of all bullion or coin therein, except while it is legally in the hands of other officers, yet under R. S. sec. 3501, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 114, providing that each officer of the mint shall give bond for faithful and diligent performance of the duties of his office, and that similar bonds may be required of the assistants and clerks, which shall not relieve the officers from liability for acts and omissions of their subordinates or employees, the cashier of the mint may be required to give a bond for the faithful performance of any duty intrusted to him; and a bond taken of him, describing him as cashier of the mint, conditioned that he will perform, execute, and discharge all the duties of his position according to the laws and the regulations of the department, will be assumed to have been taken under section 3501, though the bond recites, and the complaint alleges, that the cashier was an officer of the mint; such allegation and recital being treated as surplusage, as may be done. U. S. v. Cole, (1904) 130 Fed. 620.

Vol. II, p. 149, sec. 3.

The words "device, print, or impression, or any other thing whatsoever," as used in this section, must be read in connection with and construed as being of the same general nature as their companion words "business or professional card, notice, placard, token," and not to cover counterfeit molds and counterfeit coins. Kaye v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 177 Fed. 147.

COLLISIONS.

Vol. II, p. 153, sec. 1. [Regulations for preventing collisions at sea.]

English precedents. — It is essential to the effectiveness of the international navigation rules that there should be close conformity between the admiralty courts of England at the United States in the interpretation of such rules, and for that reason, as well as because of the eminent ability of the judges composing them, the admiralty decisions of the higher English courts are given high consideration as precedents by the admiralty courts of the United States. The Gov. Ames, (C. C. A. 1910) 187 Fed. 40.

War vessels in time of war. — Where Congress by a special Act has authorized a suit against the United States in a court of admiralty to determine its liability for a collision at sea between a vessel of the navy in time of war and a merchant vessel, such liability must be determined by the admiralty law, and such war vessel cannot be relieved from fault for a violation of the statutory rules of navigation in failing to sound fog signals while navigating in a dense fog at night, on the ground that the omission was by order of her commander, made in the exercise of his discretion, nor in masking her lights in obedience to orders of the commander of the squadron; there being at the time no statutory authority for such order. Watts v. U. S., (1903) 123 Fed. 105.

Vol. II, p. 153. [Rules concerning lights, and so forth.]

Exhibiting wrong light.—In The Furnessia, (1905) 137 Fed. 955, a schooner was held not to be in fault because the mate, in the extremity of the collision, set out a false and misleading light, it being doubtful whether it contributed in any way to the collision, which was fully accounted for by the plain faults of the steamship.

Evidence as to lights. — Direct and positive evidence from a brig that her lights were properly lighted and set forty-five minutes before the collision was sufficient to establish lish the fact that they were burning at the time of collision, when corroborated by the log of the steamer, kept by the acting master, stating that the brig's lights were reported and were seen by him immediately before the collision, as against the testimony of persons from the steamer that they were not burning when they went on board the brig after the collision, which was of such force as to throw her substantially on her beam ends. Pennell

v. U. S., (1906) 162 Fed. 64.

The failure of those in charge of one of two vessels to see or observe the lights of the other prior to collision does not disprove their existence, and cannot be accepted to out-weigh the positive testimony of the officers and crew of such other vessel that the lights were properly set, and were seen to be burning up to within five minutes before the collision. The Richmond, (1902) 114 Fed. 208.

The testimony of men engaged in navigating a schooner, which was sunk by collision with a tug at night, that the schooner's side lights were burning, is not weakened by the fact that they also testify that they looked at the lights after the tug was seen approaching, such act being a natural one with careful navigators; and their positive testimony to the fact will outweigh the negative testimony of those navigating the tug that they did not see the schooner's lights, especially where their position on the tug was not a favorable one for the purpose. Brigham v. Luckenbach, (1905) 140 Fed. 322.

Where it is shown that a vessel was equipped with lamps of an approved style, bought from a reputable dealer, the court will be slow to find that they were inefficient, or that those navigating the vessel failed to light and keep them burning on a dark and stormy night, when the vessel was sailing in a locality where there was a probability of encountering other vessels. The Richmond, (1902) 114 Fed. 208.

Vol. II, p. 155, art. 5.

Obstruction of lights. — In The Iberia, (1902) 117 Fed. 718, affirmed (C. C. A. 1903) 123 Fed. 865, a collision at sea, in the night, between a steamer and sailing vessel, meeting, was held to have been due to the fault of the latter in failing to keep her side lights unobstructed as required by statute; the evidence showing that to the extent at least of one point on either side of directly ahead such lights were obscured by the foresail, which fact prevented the steamer from making out her character or course, and brought about the collision without the steamer's fault.

Vol. II, p. 156, art. 7, cl. third.

Violation of rule. — In The Our Friend, (1905) 142 Fed. 274, a cathoat was held to be in fault for failure to carry a light as required by this rule.

Vol. II, p. 158, art. 10.

Necessity for lookout with flare-up light. -If an overtaken vessel elects to use a flare-up light, instead of a set screened light, it is her duty at least to maintain an efficient lookout astern, and to display the flare-up light as soon as an overtaking vessel can be seen. The Bernicia, (1903) 122 Fed. 886.

Vessels crossing.—A schooner cannot be charged with fault because she did not show a flare-up light to a steamer approaching from forward of her beam, but such action would, on the contrary, have been a fault.

Brigham v. Luckenbach, (1905) 140 Fed. 322. Sufficiency of light. — In The John Bossert, (1906) 148 Fed. 903, affirmed (C. C. A. 1909) 168 Fed. 1021, it appeared that the schooners Charles A. Witler and John Bossert, each laden with lumber, were sailing northward off Cape Hatteras when the Witler, which had passed the Bossert during the day and was leading, lay to on the port tack at about eight in the evening. Shortly thereafter she was struck by the Bossert, which approached on the same tack at a speed of about four knots. For fifteen or twenty minutes prior to the collision the Witler had exhibited at her stern a white light consisting of a globe lantern, unscreened, but such light was not seen by the lookout of the Bossert until too late to avoid the collision. It was held that such light was a sufficient compliance with this article.

In The Kaiserin Maria Theresa, (1906) 149 Fed. 97, 78 C. C. A. 681, reversing (1903) 125 Fed. 145, a schooner was held to be in fault for a collision with an overtaking steamship at night because of her failure to exhibit a white light or flare-up astern, on evidence which showed that while she had a torch, it was not in condition for use for lack of oil, so that when its use was attempted it quickly blew out.

Vol. II, p. 158, art. 11.

Sufficiency of evidence to show anchor light in place. - Evidence that a light was hung in the rigging of an anchored schooner at dark, and that it was burning twenty or thirty minutes before she was struck and sunk by a passing steamer at about eleven o'clock, was not sufficient to establish that it was burning at the time of the collision, against the positive testimony of the lookout and two officers of the steamer, who were at the wheel and in good position to see, all of whom testified that there was no light on the schooner and she was not seen until they were within two hundred feet. The John H. Starin, (1903) 122 Fed. 236, 58 C. C. A. 600, reversing (1902) 113 Fed. 419.

In The Maggie Ellen, (1903) 120 Fed. 662. 57 C. C. A. 124, affirming (1902) 115 Fed. 442. the evidence was held to show that the collision was due to a failure to maintain a proper anchor light.

Use of globe light.—In The Martha E. Wallace. (1906) 148 Fed. 94, it appeared that instead of the flare-up light prescribed in the rule an ordinary globe lamp was used. It was held that as the use of any light was not mandatory, and as the use of the globe light did no apparent harm, the vessel would not be held in fault for using it.

"Under way." — A sailing vessel lying to in a fog, but having some of her sails up, is "under way," and is governed by this clause, and where the wind is on her starboard bow she is on the starboard tack, and the proper fog signal is one blast. Burrows v. Gower, (1902) 119 Fed. 616.

Improper sounding of signals. — Where it was shown that the fog signals were sounded only once in two minutes, instead of once a minute as the rule requires, it was held that a presumption of fault arose which could only be overcome by proof that the fault did not contribute to the collision. What constitutes moderate speed. — Moderate speed is such speed as would enable a vessel to stop in time to avoid a collision after an approaching vessel came in sight, provided such approaching vessel were itself going at the moderate speed required by law. The Belgian King, (1903) 125 Fed. 869, 60 C. C. A. 451, affirmed (1902) 113 Fed. 525; La. Bourgogne, (C. C. A. 1905) 139 Fed. 433, affirmed (1908) 210 U. S. 95, 28 S. Ct. 664, 52 U. S. A steamship navigating in a fog at such rate of speed that when another vessel, which was practically motionless, came into view, the steamship was unable to stop in time to avoid collision, was in fault for excessive speed. The Kentucky. (1906) 148 Fed 500.

speed. The Kentucky, (1906) 148 Fed. 500.

A speed of three to three and one-half miles an hour on the part of a brig has been held not excessive. Pennell v. U. S., (1908) 162 Fed. 64.

A speed of from four to six knots on the part of a tug with tows navigating at sea at night in a fog is not ordinarily negligent. The Patience, (1908) 167 Fed. 855.

Excessive speed.—A steamer at sea, proceeding at night in a dense fog, in frequented waters, at a speed of ten or eleven knots as hour, is not going "at a moderate speed, having careful regard to the existing circumstances and conditions," as required by this article. Palmer v. Merchants', etc., Transp. Co., (1907) 154 Fed. 683.

Co., (1907) 154 Fed. 683.

In The Chelsea, (1905) 135 Fed. 616, a steamer was held at fault for a collision with a schooner in Long Island Sound in a fogbecause of her excessive speed of ten knots, and her change of course after the schooner was seen on nearly a meeting course. The schooner was held not chargeable with contributory fault, although her speed was about thick where she was, and that she was net thick where she was, and that she was reducing sail as she entered the dense fog.

A war vessel having a full speed of about eighteen knots, which was proceeding at night in a dense fog at a regular cruising speed of six knots across the track of outgoing and incoming steamers, such speed being too great to enable her to come to a standatill by reversing before she should collide with a resel which she could see through the fog, was not going at a moderate speed as required by this article, and was in fault for a resulting collision with a crossing steamer. Watts v. U. S., (1903) 123 Fed. 105.

In the following cases the speed in a fog was held to be excessive under the particular facts of each case: The El Monte, (1902) 114 Fed. 796 (six or seven knots); Consolidation Coal Co. v. The Admiral Schley, (1902) 115 Fed. 378, affirmed (C. C. A. 1904) 131 Fed. 433 (eight knots); The Frank S. Hall, (1902) 116 Fed. 559 (ten or eleven knots); The Eagle Point, (C. C. A. 1903) 120 Fed. 449 (nine knots); In re Clyde Steamship Co., (1904) 134 Fed. 95, affirmed (C. C. A. 1906) 146 Fed. 724, which was affirmed in (1907) 207 U. S. 398, 28 S. Ct. 133, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 264 (six knots); The Chelsea, (1905) 135 Fed. 616 (ten knots); The Furnessia, (1905) 137 Fed. 955 (six knots); La Bourgogne, (C. C. A. 1905) 139 Fed. 433 reversing (1902) 117 Fed. 261, affirmed (1908) 210 U. S. 95, 28 S. Ct. 664, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 973 (ten knots); The Sif, (1907) 157 Fed. 454 (five or six knots); Pennell v. U. S., (1908) 162 Fed. 64 (seven knots).

Rule absolute. - A speed of eight miles an hour by a steamship proceeding in the night and in a dense fog, 150 miles east of Sandy Hook, in the customary track of transatlantic steamers, is not a moderate speed, nor can such speed be justified on the expressed opinion of her officers that she could not be properly controlled at a lower rate of speed. The requirement of the rule is absolute, and liability for a collision caused or contributed to by its violation cannot be avoided because a vessel is so constructed or is running so light that she cannot be navigated at such a slow speed as will comply with such requirement. The Eagle Point, (1903) 120 Fed. 449, 56 C. C. A. 599, reversing (1902) 114 Fed. 971, cited in the original note.

Speed of both vessels excessive.—A steam-ship was held to be in fault for a collision with another in a fog, notwithstanding the clear fault of the latter in running at an excessive speed, where she was likewise maintaining an excessive speed, and also violated this article by failing to stop her engines on hearing the fog signals of the other vessel apparently forward of her beam. In re Clyde Steamship Co., (1904) 134 Fed. 95, affirmed (C. C. A. 1906) 146 Fed. 724, which was affirmed in (1907) 207 U. S. 398, 28 S. Ct. 133, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 264.

In a suit for collision between two ocean steamships in a dense fog, while on crossing courses, it appeared that after entering the fog both continued at more than half speed, in violation of the first provision of this article, and that, after hearing each other's fog signals, both proceeded without stopping for some time, in violation of the second clause of the article; the vessels when they saw each other being within five hundred feet,

Vol. II, p. 161, art. 17, cl. (a).

Rule applied. — In The Richard F. C. Hartley, (1903) 124 Fed. 708, it appeared that a collision occurred in the night between the and unable to check their momentum in time to avoid collision. Both were held to be in fault, and the damages were divided. The El Monte; (1902) 114 Fed. 796.

Tows meeting in fog.—A collision between the tows of two tugs bound in opposite directions in Long Island Sound in a dense fog was held due to the fault of the two tugs in not stopping when fog signals were heard ahead from vessels they were unable to see. The John A. Hughes, (1907) 156 Fed. 879.

Sufficiency of precautions. — In Dunton r. Allan Line Steamship Co., (1902) 115 Fed. 250, it appeared that a collision occurred at sea, during a thick fog, between a schooner and a steamship, which met on nearly parallel courses. Each heard the fog signal of the other, and the steamer at once slowed down to a moderate speed and proceeded with caution, while the schooner, which was sailing closehauled on the port tack at a speed of about two knots, kept her course and speed; the wind being very light. Both vessels were properly manned and equipped, and had proper lookouts. After they sighted each other, when they were about one hundred yards apart, the steamer did all that was possible to prevent collision. It was held that neither vessel was chargeable with any fault, and that the collision must be attributed to unavoidable accident.

Duty to stop.—In Palmer v. Merchants', etc., Transp. Co., (1907) 154 Fed. 683, it was held that when the master of a steamer at sea at night in a dense fog heard a single blast of the fog horn of another vessel nearly ahead and apparently only a short distance away, he was not justified in assuming that he could locate the precise position of such vessel, and that he was overtaking her; but it was his duty to at once reverse and go full speed astern until the steamer was stopped and the location and course of the other vessel was definitely ascertained. See also Hunter v. The Tellus, (1902) 113 Fed. 525. affirmed (C. C. A. 1903) 125 Fed. 869; The El Monte. (1902) 114 Fed. 796.

Monte, (1902) 114 Fed. 796.

Navigation of fairway in fog.—When dense fog obscures a waterway through which there is a well-defined track for moving vessels, prudence requires vessels then moving therein to continue with extreme caution, availing of such sights and sounds as they can make out till they reach some anchorage to which they can withdraw from the regular track, leaving the thoroughfare unobstructed by their presence. bark Chase and the schooner Hartley, on crossing courses. Each vessel saw the other's lights when a mile or more distant. The Right of closehauled vessel. — A vessel sailing closehauled is justified in maintaining her course as against an approaching vessel sailing free, in the absence of some clear indication that the latter will fail in her duty to keep out of the way. The Pierre Corneille. (1904) 133 Fed. 604.

two sailing vessels approaching each other from opposite directions in the night was sailing free on the starboard tack, while the other was closehauled on the port tack. So long as such courses were maintained, there was no danger of collision, but when a short distance apart the vessel running free twice changed her course, the last time taking a course in which she was closehauled on the starboard tack, and making a collision inevitable if both maintained their courses. It was held that in such situation the other vessel, which had previously been privileged and required to maintain her course, became the burdened vessel, and was not in fault for changing her course, although a collision resulted by reason of both changing at the same time; and that the one making the first changes, bringing about the dangerous situation without necessity, was solely in fault. The Mary Buhne, (1902) 118 Fed. 1000, 55 C.

Unwarranted change of course. - One of Chase was sailing closehauled, while the Hartley was running free and was therefore bound by the rules to keep out of the way and to avoid crossing ahead of the Chase; there being no circumstances to prevent. The evidence indicated, however, that she attempted to cross shead, and thus brought about the collision. The Chase kept her course and speed, as required by the rules, until a collision became imminent, when she changed her course in an attempt to prevent the collision. It was held that the Hartley was solely in fault.

In The Metamora, (C. C. A. 1906) 144 Fed. 936, two schooners were held to be in fault for a collision when meeting at night in the open ocean. The one, which was light and sailing free, for not making sufficient allowance for the yawing of the other, which was closehauled in a strong wind and heavy sea; and the other for probably allowing herself to fall off owing to the fact that her master was performing the duties of both wheelsman and lookout.

Crossing courses in fog. — Where two ferryboats approaching each other attempted to cross courses in a dense fog, when neither could see the other in time to avoid a collision, they were both at fault - the one for attempting the manœuvre, and the other in assenting to it and putting her wheel hard astarboard, causing her to swing one point nearer to the other boat, though she immediately stopped and reversed her engines. Rule applied. - A tug with three barges in tow on a long hawser, the last being six hundred fathoms behind, was held solely in fault for a collision, in the night, in Delaware bay, between the last tow and a meeting schooner, which was at the time tacking and on a crossing course, on the ground that, although the schooner's lights were seen half an hour before, when she was approaching on the other tack, no proper lookout was kept for her return, and no measures taken to avoid collision when she was seen again. The Prudence, (1904) 134 Fed. 358.

In The Delmar, (1903) 125 Fed. 130, it appeared that a collision occurred at night in Chesapeake bay between a schooner coming into Hampton Roads, and a barge 342 feet long, loaded with freight cars, which was passing out in tow of a tug on a hawser 300 feet long. There was a strong wind, and the vessels were admittedly on parallel courses until shortly before the collision, the tug passing to windward of the schooner. Each vessel claimed that she made no change in her course, and the testimony from each supported her contention. There was plenty of sea room, and the tug could have given the schooner a wider berth than she admittedly did. It was held that, under the evidence. she must be charged with the sole fault for the collision.

Change of course by sailing vessel. — In The Stamford, (1906) 148 Fed. 509, affirmed (C. C. A. 1907) 153 Fed. 1022, the testimony of disinterested witnesses was held to sustain the contention of a tug that a collision between her tow and a meeting schooner in Long Island Sound was brought about solely by a change of course on the part of the schooner, after she had passed the tug at a safe distance, and not to the failure of the tug to allow sufficient margin for passing.

Special circumstances. - In The Transfer No. 10, (C. C. A. 1906) 144 Fed. 676, it appeared that the tug McCaldin, with a schooner in tow on a hawser, was proceeding eastward in East river between North Brother Island and the north shore, when her tow came into collision with a car float on the side of the tug Transfer No. 10. The tide was flood running eastward at four miles an hour or more, and the McCaldin was making twelve miles an hour by the land. She had followed the Transfer, and the latter had rounded to for the purpose of making her landing against the tide at the Oak Point docks, toward which she was proceeding when the collision occurred. The McCaldin was within sight of her for a considerable distance, but kept her speed and passed between the Transfer and the docks. It was held that the Transfer was in fault, because the approach of the McCaldin and her tow at such high rate of speed created special circumstances, and required her, under this article, to take action to avert the collision, which she could have done by

Duty to stop and reverse. — In The Diana, (1910) 181 Fed. 263, a collision at sea at night between a steamer and a bark meeting on slightly converging courses was held due solely to the fault of the steamer in changing her course when she was apparently upon and crossing the course of the bark, whose lights were both seen, under the erroneous holding herself against the tide until the tug and tow had passed.

Presumptions — Under the navigation rules requiring a steam vessel to keep out of the way of a sailing vessel when there is risk of collision, and requiring the latter to keep her course and speed, where it appears that she did so a presumption arises that the fault for a collision was that of the steam vessel, and such presumption must be acted upon unless the accident is shown to have been inevitable, or that it was the result of neglect or omission on the part of those navigating the other vessel. (1902) 114 Fed. 208. The Richmond,

While there is a presumption that the privileged one of two meeting vessels, which came into collision, obeyed the law and kept her course, yet, when such presumption is overthrown, and her fault is clearly estab-lished, and is in itself sufficient to account for the collision, she can only avoid full liability by proving the fault of the other vessel beyond reasonable doubt. Violation of rule. — A collision off the New Jersey coast at night in a dense fog between a steamship south bound and a meeting bark was held due solely to the fault of the steamship; the evidence showing that she was going at an excessive speed, not less than eight knots an hour, and that on hearing the foghorn of the bark on her starboard bow, instead of stopping and navigating with caution, as required by International Rules, art. 16, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 160, her master, misunderstanding the number of blasts, ported the helm and proceeded without reduction of speed across the course of the bark, which was sailing free at a speed of about four knots and giving three blasts of her foghorn, properly indicating her course, which was not changed. The Seneca, (1908) 159 Fed. 578, affirmed (C. C. A. 1969) 170 Fed. 937. See also The Transfer No. 10, (C. C. A. 1906) 144 Fed. 676; The Charles C. Lister, (1909) 174 Fed. 288.

Tow overtaking schooner. — Under this article it was held that where a tug with a tow saw a schooner a quarter of a mile ahead, on nearly the same course, and overtook and passed her, but the tow, which was on a 200-fathom line, did not see the schooner until within 200 feet, and struck her directly astern, negligence must be inferred on the part of both tug and tow, unless there was evidence to warrant a finding that the schooner in some way brought about the collision. The Nathan Hale, (1902) 113 Fed. 865, 51 C. C. A. 489.

Steamer overtaking tow. — A collision which occurred at night in a fog between the last of three tows and an overtaking steamer which ran into the towline after passing to tow was held due solely to the fault of the steamer either in failing to keen the tow or in failing to keep away, it appearing that the tows all carried proper lights and that the steamer's lights were seen from the second and third tows before the collision. The Patience, (1908) 167 Fed. 855.

Overtaking vessel. — In a suit for collision on a clear day, between two sailing vessels on course's varying not more than one point, the evidence was considered, and was held to show that libelants' was the overtaking vessel, and in fault for the collision in failing to change her course and keep out of the way. Errors in extremis. — Where the master of a vessel, who is a navigator of experience and good judgment, is confronted with a sudden peril, caused by the action of another vessel, so that he is justified in believing that collision is inevitable, and he exercises his best judgment in the emergency, his action, even though unwise, cannot be imputed to his vessel as a fault. To enable a vessel to avail itself of the plea of mistake in extremis it must appear that the situation was induced by the fault of the other party. Southern R. Co. v. U. S., (1910) 45 Ct. Cl. 322.

Inevitable accident cannot be maintained as a defense unless it be shown that the master acted seasonably, that he did everything which an experienced mariner could do, and that the collision ensued in spite of ordinary caution and his exertions. Southern R. Co. v. U. S., (1910) 45 Ct. Cl. 322.

A collision at sea on a foggy night between a schooner and a steamship on crossing courses was brought about primarily by the fault of the steamer in maintaining an excessive speed in the fog, and not keeping an efficient lookout, in consequence of which she was close upon the schooner before she saw her or heard her fog signals. Just prior to the collision, the mate of the schooner took the light from the binnacle and placed it on top of the house, where it was mistaken by the steamer for the stern light of an overtaken vessel, in consequence of which the steamer ported when she should have staboarded, and thus made collision certain. It was held that such act of the mate did not render the schooner liable as for a contributory fault, because it was done in extremia, when the steamer was bearing down directly upon the schooner at high speed, apparently without seeing her. The Furnessia, (1907) 154 Fed. 348, 83 C. C. A. 126, affirmed (1905) 137 Fed. 955.

In The Queen Elizabeth, (C. C. A. 1903) 122 Fed. 406, a ship was held not chargeable with contributory fault for a collision with a crossing schooner in the night because of her change of course, although she was the privileged vessel, where such change was not made until immediately before the collision, when the vessels were within a few hundred feet of each other, and which it became apparent that the schooner was attempting to cross ahead, in violation of the rules.

Steamer and pilot boat.—A steamer and a pilot boat which have agreed to come to a standstill, so that the pilot's boat yawl may bring a pilot to the steamer, are not navigating on independent courses, and the statute creates no presumption that one is the privileged and one is the burdened vessel, and defines no course of navigation to be followed by either. It is a case of special circumstances in which the vessels are co-operating in an agreed manœuvre, and each is bound to act prudently toward the agreed end. The Montercy, (C. C. A. 1908) 161 Fed. 25, reversing (1907) 153 Fed. 935,

Vol. II, p. 163, art. 29.

Failure to maintain lookout. — In the following cases the vessels were held to be in fault for failure to maintain a sufficient lookout, or for having no lookout at all. The Helen G. Moseley, (1902) 117 Fed. 760; The Commerce, (1903) 123 Fed. 178; The Prudence, (1903) 124 Fed. 939, affirmed (1904) 134 Fed. 358, 67 C. C. A. 340; The Helen G. Moseley, (1904) 128 Fed. 402, 63 C. C. A. 144, affirmed (1902) 117 Fed. 760; The Furnessia, (1905) 137 Fed. 955; Brigham v. Luckenbach, (1905) 140 Fed. 322; The Charles A. Campbell, (1905) 142 Fed. 996; The Nottingham, (C. C. A. 1906) 143 Fed. 942; The John Bossert, (1906) 148 Fed. 903, affirmed (C. C. A. 1909) 168 Fed. 1021; The Charles C. Lister, (1909) 174 Fed. 288.

Position of lookout. — It is the duty of a tug, navigating in the nighttime in a place frequented by all kinds of vessels, to have the highest degree of vigilance and care on the part of her lookout, who should be stationed in the very best place possible for seeing and hearing, where he cannot be interfered with by conversation, and sufficiently near the stem to enable him to see objects lying low in the water; and the absence of a lookout so stationed, and exercising such vigilance and care, is prima facie evidence that the tug was in fault for a collision with a sailing vessel, which should have been seen in time to have been avoided. Brigham v. Luckenbach, (1905) 140 Fed. 322.

Where a large ocean-going steamship, with decks considerably above the water, was navigating Chesapeake bay in the night in foggy weather, a lookout stationed in the crow's nest, sixty feet above the deck, and one hundred feet from the stem, was not properly located to see and hear objects in front of the vessel, and especially small vessels of the character that usually navigate the bay, frequently loaded down to their water mark; and the ship was in fault for a collision with a schooner, whose fog signal, regularly sounded, was not heard by the lookout until immediately before collision. The Vedamore, (C. C. A. 1905) 137 Fed. 844, affirmed (1904) 131 Fed. 154.

Position of lookout not contributing to accident.—The fact that the lookout was on the bridge instead of on the forward deck was held not to render a vessel in fault where it appeared that the lookout saw the only light that could have been seen from any position. The Iberia, (1902) 117 Fed. 718, affirmed (C. C. A. 1903) 123 Fed. 865.

Insufficient lookout.—Where the only two neither one nor both constituted a proper lookout, and she was in fault for a collision with another schooner having the right of way, and which should have been seen from a quarter to a half mile distant, but was not seen until immediately before the collision. The Fannie Hayden, (1905) 137 Fed. 280.

Lookout with other duty. — The fact that a lookout on a sailing vessel also has the duty of blowing the foghorn does not render him an improper lookout. Pennell v. U. S., (1908) 162 Fed. 64.

Absence of lookout not contributory.—
The absence of a lookout on a vessel, although a fault, is immaterial in fixing liability for a collision, where it clearly appears that the other vessel was seen in ample time, so that with proper navigation on the part of both vessels a collision would not have occurred. The Georg Dumois, (1907) 153 Fed. 833, 83 C. C. A. 15. See also The Seneca, (1908) 159 Fed. 578.

In a collision between a sailing vessel and a steamer, it appeared that neither vessel had a proper lookout, and it was held that such fault on the part of the schooner did not contribute to the collision, because it would have been her duty to keep her course under the circumstances if she had heard the signals, but that the steamer must be held solely liable as the burdened vessel, and because she might by the exercise of due care have avoided the collision. The Gadsby, (1902) 120 Fed. 851.

Lockouts during fog.—A war vessel, proceeding at sea, in the night and in a dense fog, at a speed of six knots, showing no lights and sounding no fog signals, was required to exercise the utmost vigilance, and to maintain lookouts as far forward and as near the water as possible, as well as at a height above the water and aloft; and she was in fault where she had only the lookouts usually maintained in clear weather, being one at each end of the bridge and two further aft—those on the bridge being ninety-four feet from the stem and thirty-seven feet above the water. Watts v. U. S., (1903) 123 Fed.

Care required in manœuvring tow.— The navigation of a tug with tows at sea involves such danger of collision that the utmost care is required on the part of those in charge, and unusual manœuvres which increase the danger are not justified unless in case of necessity, and then extraordinary precaution should be taken. Consolidation Coal Co. v. The Admiral Schley, (1902) 115 Fed. 378, affirmed (C. C, A. 1904) 131 Fed. 433.

Vol. II, p. 168, rule 3, cl. (c).

Absence of light not contributory. — The fact that a steamer's port light was out was held not to render it in fault for the collision where it appeared that this could not have contributed to the collision, which was caused by the fault of the other vessel after the proper signals had been given and the vessels could be seen by each other. The Livingstone, (1902) 113 Fed. 879, 51 C. C. A. 560.

Vol. II, p. 169, rule 9.

Improper position of light.—In Graves v. Lake Michigan Car Ferry Transp. Co., (C. C. A. 1910) 183 Fed. 378, a vessel at anchor was held to be guilty of contributory fault for failure to have her stern light set fiften feet lower than the forward light as required by the second part of the rule.

Vol. II, p. 170, rule 12.

Failure to show torch not contributory.— The failure of a schooner navigating on the Great Lakes to show a torch to a steamer approaching in the nighttime, as required by this rule, is not a fault contributing to a collision with the steamer, where she was seen by the steamer and signaled when a mile ditant, and thereafter kept her course, and the omission did not in any way tend to misless or confuse the steamer. The J. C. Ames, (1903) 121 Fed. 918.

Vol. II, p. 170, rule 14, cl. (a).

Cannot substitute passing signals.— This rule is imperative, and a vessel is not relieved from the requirement by the fact that she is giving passing signals. Hawgood Transit Ca τ. Mesaba Steamship Co., (1909) 166 Fel. 697, 92 C. C. A. 369.

Vol. II, p. 171, rule 15.

Construction of rule. — The rule does not require a vessel to stop in a fog nor to slow down to bare steerageway while progress appears safe, but requires running at moderate speed, commensurate with dangers which are either known or must be anticipated; she having the right to proceed in expectation of compliance on the part of others with the law in respect of fog signals. Erie, etc., Transp. Co. v. Chicago, (C. C. A. 1910) 178 Fed. 42.

Rule applied. - A steamer approaching the port of Chicago at night in a fog, at half speed, which was at the rate of four and one half miles an hour, and which, on the undiputed testimony, enabled her to clear another vessel or an obstruction on a warning received at a distance of twice her length, was held not in fault because of excessive speed for a collision with a waterworks crib from which no bell was sounded as she had a right to expect, and which was insufficiently lighted. Erie, etc., Transp. Co. v. Chicago, (C. C. A. 1910) 178 Fed. 42.

Vol. II, p. 171, rule 17.

Construction of rule.—This rule has reference to the position of the two vessels when they will be meeting and about to pass each other, and not to their position when signals are given, if at that time they are on a temporary course from which they will depart before they will nearly approach each other. The William Chisholm, (1907) 153 Fed. 704,

82 C. C. A. 562.

Violation of rule. — In The William Chisholm, (1907) 153 Fed. 704, 82 C. C. A. 562, it appeared that a collision occurred at night in Lake St. Clair, a short distance below the lower end of the cut, between the steamships Oceanica, going up, and the Chisholm, coming down. The vessels were on the usual courses, which would bring them head on when they approached each other, and the night was calm and clear. There was evidence tending to show that signals for passing port to port in accordance with the rules were exchanged, although that was in dispute; but it was shown without contradiction that when the vessels were some 1,500 feet apart and head on the Oceanica gave a signal of two blasts, which was assented to, and that the Chisholm then put her helm hard astarboard and swung to port. It was also satisfactorily shown that the Oceanica did not starboard her wheel, but either stopped and backed, or kept to the right, and that the collision occurred some distance to the essiward of her original course. It was held that she was clearly chargeable with fault adequate to account for the collision, and that under the rule, which in such case raises a presumption in favor of the other ressel which can be rebutted only by clear proof of contributory fault, the Chisholm could not be held in fault.

Negligent change of course. - In In In Rend, (1903) 126 Fed. 564, it appeared that the steamer Thomas Wilson, leaving Duluth. and the steamer George G. Hadley, coming in. were approaching each other in the daytime. port to port, on nearly parallel but slightly diverging courses, sufficiently far apart to involve no danger of collision if maintained When 1,500 feet apart, the master of the Hadley, having received instructions from tug to proceed to a different port, ordered the helm hard astarboard. The master of the Wilson, observing the change of course. and supposing the Hadley to be sheering at once put his helm aport, and afterwards hard aport, maintaining his speed until his vessel was struck on the port side by the Hadley and sunk. Each vessel was going at a speed of about eleven or twelve miles, and no signal was given by either until they were within nine hundred feet and approaching each other, when the Hadley gave a signal of two whistles, which was not answered, and she then reversed, but made no change in course. It was held that the Hadley was solely in fault; that, in view of the original courses, no signal was required from the Wilson by the rules; that she was prudently navigated, and was not in fault for failing to answer the Hadley's signal, because she could not then have avoided collision, and also because she acted in extremis.

Deviation of tow from course. - Where it is shown clearly that the navigation of one of the vessels in a collision was proper, and that the collision was due to the deviation of the other, which was in tow, from the course of the towing steamer, the burden rests upon such tow to make such explanation as will free her from liability. Davidson v. American Steel Barge Co., (1903) 120 Fed. 250, 56

C. C. A. 86.

Both vessels in fault.—In The Mary C. Elphicke v. Pittsburgh Steamship Co., (C. C. 1903) 123 Fed. 405, it appeared that the Elphicke, a large lake steamer, heavily laden, when passing down the St. Clair river, exchanged signals to pass port to port with the Poe, then about a mile below, coming up with tows. Shortly after, the Elphicke passed a bend in the river, which required a change to starboard of about six points, but she failed to port her helm soon enough or sufficiently, and her momentum and the current carried her too far to the eastward, and into the course of the Poe, and a collision resulted. The Poe, although initiating the signal, did not change her course, but kept it until the collision, even after she saw that the Elphicke was out of her proper position, although she had time and ample room to have gone to starboard sufficiently to have prevented the collision. It was held that both vessels were Steamer meeting tow.—In The Yuma, (1902) 117 Fed. 894, the evidence was considered and was held to show that a steamer passing up the St. Clair river and a schooner coming down in tow were both in fault for a collision in which the schooner was sunk the steamer for sheering to starboard, toward the course of the schooner, after passing the ship having the schooner in tow, and in fail-

Failure of one to change - duty of other. - The failure of one vessel to change will not excuse the other for a failure to make a sufficient change in her own course to avoid danger of collision when it can safely be done, and she will be held equally in fault for a collision which she might thus have pre-

Courses not actually crossing. - The fact that each of two vessels approaching on converging courses knows the destination of the ing to take timely action to keep at a greater distance after the exchange of passing signals, which she might safely have done; and the schooner for the same reason, it appearing that she did not promptly change her course, as did the ship having her in tow, which was exonerated from fault.

Violation of passing agreement. — Bar Point Light, which marks the mouth of Detroit river, is upon a crib in Lake Erie, some distance south of the mouth of the river, and northward from it on the Canadian side of the river at a distance of 2,800 feet is a gas buoy. The water in the lake between the light and the buoy is of sufficient depth for navigation, and it is the custom and usage for vessels either bound in or out of the river to pass between them. It was held that an agreement to pass port to port made between a vessel passing out of the river when a half mile north of the light, and a vessel coming in which was a half mile to the east of the light, both being headed toward the light, must be construed with reference to such custom, and required each vessel to keep to the starboard side of the channel between the light and the buoy, and that the incoming vessel was in fault for a collision which oc-curred four hundred feet to the northeast of the light for being on the wrong side of such channel. The locality being known as one which, in following the usual custom, required each vessel to turn before their courses would cross, the rule respecting crossing courses had no application, nor was it a violation of the passing agreement for the outgoing vessel to make the turn to port so as to pass to the north and east of the light. Violation of agreement not to be anticipated. - One of two vessels which have made a passing agreement is not bound to anticipate that the other will not act lawfully and comply with her agreement, and so long as there is apparently reasonable opportunity for her to do so it is not a fault to act on the assumption that she will. Duty of overtaking vessel. — The duty rests upon an overtaking vessel to keep out of the way of the vessel ahead, and she is only entitled to pass at a time and place where it is suitable and safe, taking all factors into account, including the danger of suction. The J. G. Gilchrist, (1909) 173 Fed. 666.

Effect of suction. — In The J. G. Gilchrist, (C. C. A. 1910) 183 Fed. 105, affirming (1909) 173 Fed. 666, it appeared that when the steamer Simla, bound down the St. Clair river, was being passed on her star-board side by the overtaking steamer Gilchrist, in accordance with a signal agreement, at a distance of one hundred feet or more and a moderate speed, the Simla sheered and struck the Gilchrist, and then took a violent sheer to port, coming into collision with the steamer Smith, which was passing up on a course six hundred or eight hundred feet distance. It was held, on the evidence that the Gilchrist was passing in a proper manner and in a proper place, and that the fault for the collision was wholly that of the Simla, which, although navigating a crowded river, had only the mate on deck, who failed to keep her on her course and allowed her to approach until she came within reach of the suction of the Gilchrist.

Where two steamers were proceeding down a river on a clear day in a broad channel from two hundred to four hundred feet apart, running abreast of each other, and the suction created thereby caused one of the steamers to sheer beyond control and come into collision with a barge, and the evidence showed that the colliding steamer was the overtaking vessel, and as such was illegally running abreast of the other steamer, she was thereby wholly at fault, and liable for the damages sustained. The Falcon, (1902) 116 Fed. 753.

In The Atlantis, (C. C. A. 1903) 119 Fed. 568, it appeared that the Owen, a large and heavily laden steamer, passing up the Detroit river, overtook and attempted to pass the Atlantis, a much smaller vessel, and while so passing, the Atlantis sheered and came into collision with the Owen. It did not appear that the sheer was due to any action of her helm, but rather that it was the effect of suction caused by the Owen, and that the helm was not changed until the effect of the suction was felt, when it was used in an effort to overcome it. It was held that, it being the duty of the Owen, as the overtaking vessel, to keep out of the way and to pass at a safe distance, taking into account the danger from suction, the Atlantis was not in fault for not changing her course to give more room, even if it could safely have been done, which was a matter in dispute, nor because of any unskilful manœuvres attempted in contract the fault was solely that of the Owen in coming too close to the Atlantis without necessity.

In The Fontana, (C. C. A. 1903) 119 Fed. 853, it appeared that the Interocean, an overtaking steamer, attempted to pass another steamer having a barge in tow going up the St. Clair river, but the towing vessel re-fused to assent to her signals, and she desisted, but kept alongside of the barge for some time, but at a safe distance, at no time less than one hundred feet, until the towing steamer was passing a meeting vessel, also with a tow, when the Interocean swung in toward the barge, and within from thirty to sixty feet, and almost immediately the stern of the barge swung to port, and she sheered to starboard, striking and sinking the passing tow, which was on a course one hundred and fifty feet distant. Up to that time the barge was following her steamer closely, and was under a starboard wheel, to counteract the effect of the current, which was put hard astarboard as soon as the sheer was felt. No fault in the management of the barge was shown. It was held that, while she had the burden to clear herself from fault in the deviation from her course, she did so when she showed that she was following her steamer, and was in the exercise of due care, and that she used all reasonable means to break the sheer; that under the facts shown the sheer must be attributed to the suction caused by the Interocean, and she must be held solely in fault in failing to keep at a safe distance, taking into account the danger from suction. as was her duty as an overtaking vessel.

Burden of proof. — Where, as an overtaking vessel was passing a much smaller vessel in St. Clair river, the latter suddenly sheered from her course, resulting in her collision with the overtaking vessel, and also with a third vessel passing on an opposite course, the overtaking vessel has the burden of proving that she did not cause such sheer, taking into account the speed and distance at which she passed and the effect of her suction. The J. G. Gilehrist. (1909) 173 Fed. 666.

Mutual fault.—In Wineman v. Drake, (1907) 154 Fed. 933, 83 C. C. A. 505, the steamer City of Berlin, with a barge in tow on a line, both ore laden, bound down the Detroit river at night, as she made the turn of two points from the course leading from the Lake St. Clair channel into the Windmill Point ranges, met and passed the Venus bound up, with the barge Tyrone in tow. Be-hind the Tyrone and overtaking her was the steamer Chili. Signals for passing port to port were exchanged between the Berlin and both the Venus and Chili, but when the bow of the Berlin, which had made the turn and straightened on her course, was about op-posite the port quarter of the Tyrone and about one hundred and fifty feet away, she came into collision with the Chili, which struck her port bow, inflicting injuries from which she afterwards sank. Under rule 24 the Berlin had the right of way. It was held on the evidence that the Chili came out from behind the Tyrone, heading toward the course of the Berlin as the latter was approaching, and was in fault for the collision; that the Berlin was also in fault under the circumstances for not allowing more room for pass-

Dangers from suction. — In Kelley Island Lime, etc., Co. v. Cleveland, (1906) 144 Fed. 207, it appeared that the Ohio, a flat-bottomed steam scow, when a short distance from the open draw of a bridge on the Cuyahoga river was overtaken and passed by the large tug Lutz without any signal or agreement, the stern of the Lutz passing her bow at about the time it entered the draw, where the channel was but sixty feet wide, the effect being to create a current or suction which caused the Ohio to sheer, striking some submerged timbers around the bridge pier, by which she was so injured that she sank. It was held that the injury was due to the fault of the Lutz in passing in violation of rule 25 and the inspectors' rules made thereunder, into the raft with such force as to break the boom sticks and scatter the logs. It was held that the steamer was in fault for not being under better control, which was required in view of the manifest danger of collision; that the navigators of the raft were also in fault, it appearing that the forward tug was not making proper effort to keep the head of the raft off from the shore. ing, having five hundred feet of open water on her starboard side.

Rule applied.—In Mitchell Transp. Co. v. Green, (C. C. A. 1903) 120 Fed. 49, it appeared that the steamer Susan E. Peck met the steamer Folsom, with the barges Mitchell and Nelson in tow, when passing up through the "Lime Kiln Crossing" in the Detroit river, an artificial channel 440 feet wide. After safely passing the Folsom and Mitchell port to port, as agreed by signal, the Peck came into collision with the Nelson, which was sunk. It was held, on conflicting testimony, that the Folsom and her tows were at all times to the westward of the middle of the channel, and that the collision was due solely to the fault of the Peck, which, after passing the Mitchell on a port helm, starboarded to such an effect that, being 240 feet long, she swung so far across the channel that her bow was caught by the cross-current, and she was unable to correct herself before striking the Nelson. Mutual fault. — In Duluth Steamship Co. v. Pittsburg Steamship Co., (1910) 180 Fed. 656, 103 C. C. A. 622, it appeared that a collision occurred at night on Lake Superior between the steamer Sylvania, going down, and the steamer Bessemer, going up. The vessels saw each other when three-fourths of a mile apart, each having the other about one-half point on her starboard bow and showing her green light. At that time they exchanged a passing signal of one whistle, but the Sylvania proceeded on her course or under a starboard wheel and continued to show her green light to the Bessemer until just before collision, and too late to avoid it, while the Bessimer proceeded under a port wheel. It was held that the Sylvania was in fault for navigating contrary to the agreement; that the Bessemer was also in fault for not stopping and giving alarm signals when it became apparent that the Sylvania was so navigating, and that it involved at least danger of collision.

Vol. II, p. 173, rule 27.

All navigation rules construed together.—All navigation rules pertinent to a given situation are to be construed together, and while each of two approaching vessels has the right to expect the other to navigate in accordance with the rules, or a passing agreement, when it becomes evident that either is not doing so, it is the duty of the other to navigate accordingly and take such measures as may seem necessary to avoid a collision. U. S. v. Erie R. Co., (1909) 172 Fed. 50, 96 C. C. A. 538.

Lookouts. — In The J. G. Gilchrist, (1909) 173 Fed. 666, it was held to be negligence for the master of a steamer to navigate her down the St. Clair river without a lookout, and with no officer in charge of her navigation, except a mate, who was also acting as wheelman.

In the following cases a vessel was held to be in fault for failure to maintain a sufficient lookout: The Sitka, (1904) 132 Fed. 861; Graves v. Lake Michigan Car Ferry Transp. Co., (C. C. A. 1910) 183 Fed. 378.

If the absence of a lookout did not contribute to the collision the vessel will not be held in fault because it failed to maintain a lookout. The Livingstone, (C. C. A. 1902) 113 Fed. 879.

Lookout must not be navigator. — The doctrine is well settled that the lookout required by the rules must be not only competent, but charged with no other duty while so serving, and that the officer navigating the steamer cannot at the same time serve as lookout. The J. C. Ames, (1903) 121 Fed. 918.

Risk of collision — Duty to stop and reverse. — It is the duty of a vessel to slacken speed, or stop, or reverse if necessary when approaching another so as to invoke risk of collision, but there is no risk of collision within the meaning of the rule so long as the two vessels, by complying with their passing agreement, can certainly pass in safety, and each vessel may be navigated upon this supposition until the intervention of something which should operate as notice to an officer of skill and prudence of the presence of danger. A steam vessel lying with her nose against the bank of a stream, and holding her position against the current by the movement of her wheel, is a vessel "under way" within the navigation rules, and not entitled to the rights of an anchored vessel. Position of lights. — A tug navigating with tows in the night in a harbor did not comply with this article where, although having two towing lights, they were suspended from either end of a horizontal cross-piece on the flagstaff, about a yard in length, and such Violation of rule by becalmed schooner.— In The Baltimore, (1907) 155 Fed. 405, 84 C. C. A. 84, a schooner was held in fault for a collision with a steamer in Chesapeake bay in the night, on the ground that, while becalmed, she had been drifted around by the tide so that the steamer was an overtaking vessel, and could not see her side lights, and she failed to exhibit any white light or flare-up astern, as required by the rules, although the steamer was seen approaching for a considerable time before the collision.

Vol. II, p. 176, art. 11.

Rule must be strictly followed. — This rule is of great importance and must be strictly observed, and, if violated, a loss caused by a collision resulting must be borne by the vessel so violating it. Thus in The Santiago, (1908) 160 Fed. 742, a collision between a pilot boat and a barge 271 feet long anchored on the anchorage ground inside the Delaware breakwater on a dark night was held due solely to the fault of the barge, whose stern anchor light had been blown out five minutes before, and had been taken by the anchor watch into the pilot house to be relighted, and not restored, the evidence also being conflicting as to whether her forward light was burning.

In Muller v. New York, etc., R. Co., (1906) 144 Fed. 241, a small launch, which had become disabled in the night and anchored in the channel in East river, near Hell Gate, was

The testimony of witnesses on a steamer that they heard only a single fog signal from a schooner in a fog, with which the steamer shortly after came in collision, indicating that the schooner was on the starboard tack, when she was in fact on the port tack and approaching the course of the steamer, is not sufficient to establish such a fact as against the testimony of persons on the schooner, one of whom was disinterested, reenforced by that of two other disinterested witnesses who were in the immediate vicinity, that the schooner gave the proper signal of two blasts. (1909) 170 Fed. 101.

Size of bell—New York harbor.—There is no statute or harbor regulation fixing the size of the fog bell to be used on scows permanently anchored in New York harbor, but the sufficiency of such bell is to be determined by the rule that reasonable care must be exercised in its selection, having reference to the locality and dangers to be encountered and the vessels to be warned. A bell seven inches in diameter and height, to be rung by hand, was held insufficient on a scow stationed 859 feet off the piers in East river, in the track of steam vessels of all kinds. The Amex No. 5, (1902) 117 Fed. 754.

Evidence as to fog.—In Baltimore Steam Packet Co. r. Coastwise Transp. Co., (1905) 139 Fed. 777, the conflicting evidence was considered and held to establish by a preponderance that there was a thick fog at the time of a collision in the early morning between a steamer and a schooner lying at anchor in Hampton Roads, which made it the duty of the schooner, under this subdivision, to sound fog signals, and to render her solely in fault for the collision because of her violation of sich rule.

Density of fog. — The rule should be enforced when the fog is sufficient to prevent moving vessels from discovering a ship at anchor in sufficient time to make usual manœuvres to avoid her. The Mary Weaver. (1903) 124 Fed. 977, affirmed (C. C. A. 1904) 130 Fed. 333.

Vol. II, p. 178, art. 16.

Moderate speed. — The moderate speed required of a vessel in a fog by this article is such speed as under existing conditions will enable her to stop before coming into collision with another vessel after the latter can be seen, assuming that the other vessel also observes the rule. The No. 4, (C. C. A. 1908) 161 Fed. 847; The Kennebec, (1908) 167 Fed. 847; The Bailey Gatzert, (1909) 170 Fed. 101, affirmed (1910) 179 Fed. 44, 102 C. In The McCaldin Brothers, (1902) 117 Fed. 779, it appeared that the tug Stone, with three scows, was passing out from North river to the dumping grounds, when she was compelled, by a dense fog, to seek refuge, and made the scows fast to the breakwater on the Brooklyn shore. While there, the tug Mc Caldin Brothers, also seeking a place of safety, and making her way along the breakwater. came into collision with and injured one of the scows. She was going at such speed that she was unable to stop after coming near enough to see the dock. She was blowing fog signals as she approached, but the Stone, which lay alongside but a little back of the scow, made no response, and took no steps to make known her presence or that of her tow. The place was one where it was customary for vessels to find refuge in such weather. It was held that both tugs were in fault — the Stone for failing to ring her bell or otherwise answer the fog signals of the McCaldin Brothers, which she must have known was approaching, and the latter for excessive speed under the circumstances.

A vessel maintaining a speed of eighteen knots per hour was held to be solely in fault for a collision, although the navigation of the other vessel was in some respects subject to The Commonwealth, (1910) 174 criticism.

Fed. 694.

In the following cases vessels have been found guilty of fault in navigating at an excessive speed in a fog: The Glenogle, (1903) 122 Fed. 503 (seven to nine knots); The Kaga Maru, (1903) 123 Fed. 139; The Bellingham, (1905) 138 Fed. 619 (ten miles); The Benjamin Franklin, (C. C. A. 1906) 145 Fed. 13; The City of Lowell, (1907) 152 Fed. 593, 81 C. C. A. 583, reversing (1905) 139 Fed. 901; The No. 4, (C. C. A. 1908) 161 Fed. 847 (eight knots); The Somerville, (1908) 162 Fed. 681, 89 C. C. A. 473 (five miles in New York harbor); The Matanzas, (1908) 166 Fed. 985 (five or six knots in New York harbor); The Cascades, (1910) 178 Fed. 726; The Kronprinz Wilhelm, (C. C. A. 1911) 186 Fed. 324 (six knots in New York harbor.

Rule mandatory. — This rule is mandatory, and its violation creates a very strong presumption of fault, and casts upon the offender the burden of showing by clear testimony that his error did not contribute to an ensuing collision. The Georgic, (1910) 180 Fed. 863.

Rule is applicable to regular passenger steamers.— The law makes no exception in favor of passenger steamers running regularly on schedule time on an established route, and, for injuries resulting from excessive speed in violation of the rules prescribed to insure safety to vessels and passengers, they must render compensation to the injured. The Bellingham, (1905) 138 Fed. 619. Entering fog bank.—The rule applies to steamers entering a fog bank as well as to those in the fog. The Charlotte, (1903) 124 Fed. 989, affirmed (1904) 128 Fed. 38, 62 C. C. A. 546.

Vessel moored at dock. — A tug with a car float on her side was held solely in fault for a collision between the float and a tug moored at a dock in a dense fog for navigating in the fog at such speed that she could not stop in time to avoid collision after the moored vessel could be seen. The P. R. R. No. 5, (C. C. A. 1910) 181 Fed. 833.

Prior speed immaterial. — Where a steam. ship for some fifteen minutes prior to col-lision with a meeting vessel in a fog had been going at slow and dead slow speed, and was barely moving at the time of collision, her prior speed is immaterial. The Georgic, (1910) 180 Fed. 863.

Mutual fault. - In The Georgic, (1910) 180 Fed. 863, a collision in the main ship chan-nel to New York bay in a fog, between the meeting steamships Georgic and Finance, in which the latter was sunk, was held due to the fault of both vessels, each of which heard the fog signals of the other forward of her beam in a position not ascertained, but did not stop as required by this article, but continued ahead until the signals had been repeated three or more times, each time closer, when both were going at moderate speed and a compliance with the rule would have avoided the collision.

Navigation in fog. — It is unlawful in the navigation of a steam vessel to assume that an approaching steamer, which cannot be seen because of prevailing fog, is on any particular course, and to continue onward without reducing speed after the failure of the approaching vessel to respond to a passing signal. The Celtic Monarch, (1910) 175 Fed. 1006.

Vol. II, p. 178, art. 18, rule I.

Mutual fault. — A collision in New York harbor, about halfway between the Battery and Governor's Island, in the early morning, between a steamship passing out of the East river to sea and a tug with a car float on each side, was held due to the fault of both vessels, on a finding that they were on crossing courses, with the red light of the tug showing on the starboard hand of the steamship, which made the starboard hand rule applicable, whereas at the instance of the steamship a two-blast signal was made and agreed to. The steamship was held in fault for not navigating in accordance with such agreement, and the tug for assenting thereto, and both for not sooner stopping when it became apparent that there was a misunderstanding. The Transfer No. 9, (C. C. A. 1909) 170 Fed. 944, affirming (1906) 148 Fed. 456.

A steamship and a tug were both held in fault for a collision between the ship and barges in tow of the tug, which occurred on the Delaware river in the night, on the ground that, although the two vessels saw each other when a mile apart, each held its course and approached head on until they were so close together that the danger of collision between them was imminent, and a confusion of signals resulted, which brought about the collision. The John I. Brady, (C. C. A. 1904) 131 Fed. 235, affirming (1902) 115 Fed. 204.

Crossing signals. — In The Islander, (1907) 152 Fed. 385, 81 C. C. A. 511, a collision in North river between Twenty-third street, New York, and the bay, between a ferryboat going up and a steam lighter descending, which were approaching each other nearly head on, each being a little to the port side of the other, was held, on conflicting evidence, to have been due solely to the fault of the lighter in crossing the signal of the ferryboat to pass port to port, and attempting to pass to starboard of the ferryboat in violation of rules 1 and 3 of article 18 of the inland navigation rules.

In The San Rafael, (1905) 141 Fed. 270, 72 C. C. A. 388, reversing (1904) 134 Fed. 749, two meeting ferry steamers were both held in fault for a collision in the bay of San Francisco; one on the ground that she gave a passing signal which required the vessels to cross each other's course in a fog so dense that they could not see each other, and the other for assenting to such signal and at-tempting to carry it into effect.

A collision between the steamship Dolphin, which was passing up East river, within 250 or 300 feet of the Brooklyn docks, and the ferryboat New York, crossing to Brooklyn, but at the time headed nearly downstream, was held to be due to the fault of both vessels; the Dolphin being in fault for being so near the shore in violation of the harbor rules, which required her to keep as nearly as possible in the middle of the river, and for not stopping and reversing after her third signal of a single whistle was crossed, the New York then being on her port bow, and only about six hundred feet distant, instead of which she assented to such signal and turned to port; the New York being in fault for not having a proper lookout, for failing to hear or answer the first two signals from the Dolphin, and for then crossing the signal, and further confusing the signals by following with a single whistle when the vessels were near together. Brooklyn Ferry Co. v. U. S., (1903) 122 Fed. 696.

Unencumbered vessel approaching tow. -An unencumbered vessel approaching a tug with tow should keep out of the way. The Jamestown, (1902) 114 Fed. 593.

While it is the duty of a steamer having sull control of her own movements to keep out of the way of a tug encumbered with tows, wne is not bound to anticipate negligent mameuvres on the part of the tug or a violation or the rules of navigation. The Alabama, (C. C. A. 1903) 126 Fed. 332, modifying (1902) 114 Fed. 214.

Fairure to carry out passing agreement. In the following cases vessels were held to be in fautt for failure to carry out a passing agreement: The Dauntless, (1902) 116 Fed. 543; The Electra, (1905) 139 Fed. 858; The Lowell M. Palmer, (C. C. A. 1905) 142 Fed. 937; The Werdenfels, (1907) 150 Fed. 400; The Sinalos, (1909) 173 Fed. 687; The Wm. H. Taylor, (1910) 174 Fed. 727, affirmed (C. C. A. 1911) 186 Fed. 155; The Edna V. Crew,

(1910) 182 Fed. 890.

Steamer at rest - tug passing. - In The John F. Gaynor. (1902) 115 Fed. 382, it appeared that an incoming steamship in charge of a licensed pilor stopped off the quarantine station in the Delaware river in the usual place, which was near the western side of the channel, to undergo the customary medical inspection. She did not anchor, and it was not customary to do so. While so lying, with the quarantine flag up, and while the exami-nation was being made, a tug came down the river with two heavily laden scows without rudders in tow on a line some 1,400 to 1,600 feet long. Each vessel saw the other when a mile distant, and the tug understood the position of the steamship and the purpose for which she had stopped. The tug was properly on the westerly side of the channel, but there was ample room for her to pass to the eastward of the steamship, so as to avoid any danger of collision. She passed so close, however, that both of the scows sheered, and struck the steamship, which had not moved. and injured her. It was held that the tug was solely in fault for the collision in failing to keep at a safe distance in passing.

Conditions justifying passing starboard to starboard. — The passing of two tugs with large tows on hawsers starboard to starboard when meeting in the Hudson river below Poughkeepsie bridge, was held not to be a violation of this rule, it being shown that such had been the custom since the bridge was built, and was necessary to enable the up-bound tow to properly approach the bridge to pass through the centre span safely. The Cornell, (1905) 134 Fed. 694.

A tug proceeding up Puget sound with a large ship in tow on a line six hundred feet long, having on her starboard, and within a mile, a shore toward which the tide was setting, and along which there were shoals, was not guilty of a violation of the navigation rules in signaling her intention of passing a meeting steamer starboard to starboard where the shore on that side was four or five miles distant, and where the signal was given and assented to when the approaching steamer was a mile distant, coming nearly head on. In such case there was no danger of collision if both vessels promptly complied with the signals agreed on, and the course of the tug was justified by the greater safety to her tow. and did not cast upon her the burden of proof to avoid liability for a following collision be-tween the steamer and the tow. The Lakme, (1902) 118 Fed. 972, 55 C. C. A. 466.

Violating passing agreement not to be anticipated. — The Lowell M. Palmer, (C. C. A.

Rule applied. — In the following cases the vessels were held to be in fault for violation of this rule: The Peconic, (1903) 124 Fed. 848; The Edgar F. Luckenbach, (1903) 124 Fed. 947; The Richmond, (1903) 124 Fed. 993; The Trader, (1904) 129 Fed. 462; The Three Brothers, (1905) 136 Fed. 479; The C. R. Vessel turning point—time for passing signal.—Where one of the approaching vessels is coming around a bend a signal should not be given by the other vessel until the course of the approaching vessel has been ascertained. The Trader, (1904) 129 Fed. 462.

Vol. II. p. 179. rule III.

Changing signal.—In The Valley Forge, (1903) 124 Fed. 192, 59 C. C. A. 608, affirmed (1901) 107 Fed. 999, the evidence was held to sustain a finding of the trial court that a tug which was passing up the Dela-ware river in the evening, with three tows abreast, was solely in fault for a collision with a steamship passing down, on the ground that after an exchange of proper signals for passing to the starboard she suddenly changed her signal and course, and attempted to pass on the starboard side of the steamship, when the vessels were so near together that the latter could not avoid the collision, although she did all that was possible to that end by at once giving alarm signals and reversing.

Confusion of signals.—Where both vessels are in fault in confusing signals both are liable for half of the costs and damages. In re Brooklyn Ferry Co., (1902) 115 Fed. 564, affirmed (1903) 121 Fed. 741, 58 C. C. A. 23.

Steam vessels meeting in fog.—In The Celtic Monarch, (1910) 175 Fed. 1006, a tag with a tow and a meeting steamer were both held in fault for a collision between them in a dense fog, for failing to reduce speed and sound alarm signals when they were aware that they were approaching each other, but neither could make out the other or her course because of the fog.

Rule applied. — In the following cases vessels were held to be in fault for violation of sels were held to be in fault for violation of the rule: The Joseph M. Clark, (1902) 119 Fed. 459; The Straits of Dover, (1903) 120 Fed. 900, 58 C. C. ## Vol. II. p. 179, rule VIII.

Violation of rule. - In The North Star, (1904) 132 Fed. 145, it appeared that the steamship North Star, 320 feet long, with 46 feet beam and of 3,159 gross tons, overtook and tried to pass the steam yacht Nourmahal, 247 feet long, 30 feet beam, and 768 tonnage, in Swash channel, in rather shallow water. She was going with the tide, and at a speed of about seventeen miles through the water. She came up without any signal of her intention to pass as required by this rule, and within about 100 feet to the starboard of the yacht. When partly past, the yacht left her course, and although her helm was put to starboard, and then hard astarboard, her stem came into collision with the port side of the steamship. It was held that the collision must be attributed to the suction of the larger vessel, and that she was solely in fault, for violation of the rules.

For other cases in which vessels were held to be in fault for violating this rule see Gring v. Boyer, (1907) 157 Fed. 220, 84 C. C. A. 668, reversing (1904) 130 Fed. 989; The M. E. Luckenbach, (1908) 163 Fed. 755.

Rule not designed for narrow waters only.

This rule is not designed for narrow waters only, but is applicable to any waters where an attempt to pass would involve danger of collision. The M. E. Luckenbach, (1908) 163 Fed. 755.

Vol. II, p. 179, rule IX.

Violation of rule not proximate cause of collision. — Where two tugs with tows established a passing agreement in a fog in viola-tion of rule 9 and would have passed in safety but for the fact that the helmsman on one of the barges turned the wheel in the wrong direction, causing it to break away and collide with a barge of the passing tow, it was held that the violation of rule 9 was not the proximate cause of the collision and that the tugs were not in fault. The John A. Hughes, (C. C. A. 1911) 184 Fed. 308, reversing (1907) 156 Fed. 879.

Vol. II, p. 180, art. 19.

Rule applied.—A tug on the way from a pier in North river to New Jersey in the evening, with four coal barges in tow on one side and two on the other, was held to be in fault for a collision between another tug on a crossing course and the starboard barge, on the ground that, having the other tug on her right hand, it was her duty to keep out of the way, whereas she allowed herself to drift with the tide across the other's course.

Neither the failure of the other tug to see the lights of the tow, nor of the barge to carry proper lights, was a fault contributing to the collision, since it was the duty of such other tug to keep her course and speed, which she did until in extremis. The Virginia Jackson, (1904) 130 Fed. 221.

In The Scandinavia, (C. C. A. 1907) 158 Fed. 96, it appeared that the steam vessel New Brunswick left a slip in Jersey City in the evening, and proceeded up the river about 500 feet from the New Jersey shore, the river being there 4,000 feet wide. Two minutes later the ferryboat Scandinavia left her slip on the New York side about opposite that of the New Brunswick, and proceeded up and diagonally across the river toward the Hoboken ferry, and when near such ferry the vessels came into collision. It was held that the Scandinavia, starting so near the time of the New Brunswick, and being the faster, was not an overtaking vessel, but that the starboard hand rule governing crossing vessels applied, and required the New Brunswick to keep out of the way and avoid passing ahead of the Scandinavia, and that her failure to observe such rule on proper signal from the Scandinavia rendered her in fault for the collision.

In The Transfer No. 15, (C. C. A. 1906) 145 Fed. 503, a tug was held to be solely in fault for a collision between her tow, a car float on her starboard side, and a steamship, where the two approached each other on crossing courses, and the tug, having the steamship on her starboard hand, persisted in crossing ahead without having obtained the consent of the other vessel.

In Foster v. Merchants', etc., Transp. Co., (1905) 134 Fed. 964, it appeared that a tug picked up two barges which had gone adrift in Norfolk harbor in the night, and while taking them back to the docks, having one on each side, one of them came into collision with a ferryboat making its regular trip on a crossing course. The tug had the ferryboat on her starboard hand, and was therefore bound to keep out of the way, but did not change her course or speed, nor did she maintain a lookout or carry proper towing lights, and her side lights were obstructed by the barges, which did not carry side lights, and probably none at all. It was held that such violation of the rules and negligent navigation by the tug, and the absence of the lights required by the inspector's rules from the barges, placed them in fault for the collision. and rendered them solely liable for the damage, in the absence of clear proof of contribu-

Where a steam tug and a steam canal boat approached each other, and the canal boat showed her red light to the tug, which showed her green light to the canal boat, but the tug did nothing to avoid collision, expecting that the canal boat would starboard and pass between the tug and another tug coming down the river, and a collision was caused apparently by the two tugs starboarding their helms and working about 500 feet off in the river, which was not justified by any signals, the canal boat having signaled that she intended to cross the bows of the tugs, as it was her duty to do, it being the duty of the tug to give way in compliance with the star-board hand rule, it was held that the tug was liable for the collision. Albatross, (1910) 184 Fed. 363. Necessity for answering signals for different course. - In The Montauk, (1910) 180 Fed. 697, 103 C. C. A. 663, it appeared that the ferryboat Montauk, on her way across the East river to her Brooklyn slip, came into collision with Transfer Tug 18, which was coming up with a car float on each side. The Montauk three times blew signals of two whistles, which were not answered. The tug kept her course until immediately before collision, when she changed slightly to port, and Before colthe Montauk kept her course. lision both vessels reversed full speed astern. It was held that the Montauk was clearly in fault for violation of inspectors' rule 2, which required her, having the tug on her starboard side, to keep out of the way, and for persisting in crossing the bows of the tug without agreement and when manifestly dangerous; that the tug was not in fault, in-land rules (Act June 7, 1897, c. 4, art. 21, 30 Stat. 101, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 180) requiring her to keep her course and speed, and neither such rules nor the inspectors' rules requiring her to answer the Montauk's signals if she did not assent thereto.

Change by agreement — failure to comply.

— A collision in lower New York bay at the lower junction of the swash channel with the main channel, between a steamship and a barge in tow, both passing out, was held to be due solely to the fault of the steamship, in that, after assenting by signal to the passing of the tug and tow across her bows, the wheelsman, instead of starboarding the helm as directed by the pilot, ported it, turning the vessel toward the tow and making it impossible for her to recover and pass under its stern. The Albatross, (1910) 184 Fed. 363.

Where a ferryboat, which had stopped and

Where a ferryboat, which had stopped and reversed when her second signal of one whistle to a tug on her starboard hand, on a crossing course, was unanswered, afterward received an assenting and then a cross signal from the tug, and assented to the latter, but continued to go backward under reversed engines while the tug was attempting to pass astern of her in accordance with the agreement, she was in fault for the resulting collision, although her navigation up to that time had been careful and the initial fault was that of the tug in confusing the signals. In re Brooklyn Ferry Co., (1903) 121 Fed. 741, 58 C. C. A. 23, affirming (1902) 115 Fed. 564.

Rule superseded by agreement. — In The Edwin J. Berwind, (C. C. A. 1906) 144 Fed. 664, a tug passing up North river in the day-time near the New York piers was held solely in fault for a collision with a ferryboat crossing from Hoboken to her New York slip, on evidence that the rule which made the ferryboat the burdened vessel had been superseded by an agreement by signal, initiated by the tug, by which she was to pass under the ferryboat's stern, and which justified the latter in keeping her course and speed.
When rule not applicable. — The starboard hand rule does not apply to a vessel, although having another on her starboard side, where the latter has no definite course.

boat No. 6, (1906) 148 Fed. 1007.

Both vessels in fault.—In The Reliable, (1909) 167 Fed. 571, it appeared that a collision occurred in the North river, near the ends of the New Jersey piers, between the tug Reliable, going up with a tow, and a tow on the side of the tug Gladwish, which had just come out of a slip and had given a signal of two whistles, indicating a desire to cross ahead. Instead of going straight ahead, however, she turned up the river, and the Reliable. turning toward the shore at the same time to pass under her stern, ran into her tow. The Reliable had also given a signal of one whistle, but did not insist on her right to cross ahead, as she should have done. It was held that both tugs were in fault and equally liable for the injury to the tow.

Narrow and winding channels. - The starboard hand rule for vessels on crossing courses has its usual application upon the open sea or upon a comparatively broad expanse of water, where each vessel is free to manœuvre, and ordinarily cannot be applied to vessels in a narrow and winding channel. The Captain Bennett, (1909) 171 Fed. 199. Duty of privileged vessel.—The privileged one of two crossing steam vessels has a right to rely on the performance by the other of her duty to keep out of the way so long as it is possible for her to do so, at least in the absence of some distinct indication that she is about to fail in such duty; and, so long as such right continues, it is the duty of the privileged vessel to maintain her course and speed, unless in extremis. The Chicago, (1903) 125 Fed. 712, 60 C. C. A. 480, reversed (1900) 102 Fed. 991.

Duty of privileged vessel when changing course. - In Shortland Bros. Co. v. New York, (1903) 129 Fed. 973, affirming (C. C. A. (1904) 130 Fed. 1021, it appeared that as the tug Watt was coming up East river on a flood tide a short distance from the end of the piers on her starboard hand, the Boody came out of her slip, but, instead of keeping her course and speed and crossing ahead of the Watt in accordance with the ordinary rule, she signaled her intention of passing on the Watt's starboard side, but came out at such fast speed that, before she could execute the manœuvre, she was in the course of the tug, and a collision resulted. It was held that if she undertook to change the ordinary course which she was expected to take, it was her duty to navigate cautiously, and that she was solely in fault for the collision.

Vol. II, p. 180, art. 20.

Effect of sudden change of course by sailing vessel. - In The Pilot Boy, (C. C. A. 1902) 115 Fed. 873, it appeared that a collision occurred in the night between a steamer and schooner, which met in the narrow channel of a river. The steamer had no lookout, except the pilot, who was acting as helmsman, and was a competent and experienced navigater in those waters. He saw the lights of the schooner when a mile or more distant, and from that time kept close watch of her. According to his testimony, which was corroborated, without conflict, by a number of other persons on the steamer, some of whom were disinterested, when he approached nearer he gave a signal of one whistle, slowed down, and took the starboard side of the channel; the schooner then showing her red light. The signal was afterwards repeated. On coming near the schooner, her red light disappeared, on which he at once reversed. Shortly after, the schooner's green light was shown, and the collision followed almost immediately. This testimony was not effectively contradicted by the witnesses for the schooner. It was held that, upon such facts, the steamer was not chargeable with fault, but that the collision must be attributed to a change of course by the schooner.

Negligence of sailing vessel.— In The W.
S. Tompkins, (1902) 116 Fed. 59, it appeared that a steam ferryboat, crossing East river, stopped and headed up stream to allow the passage of three schooners which were coming down the river nearly abreast. When about 150 feet distant the outer one of the schooners sheered, and came into collision with the steamer. After the sheer the steamer backed, but was unable to avoid the collision. It was held upon the evidence that the fault was solely that of the schooner, which had been left ample room to pass, but which sheered through negligent navigation, and when so close that the steamer could not have prevented the collision.

Tow and sailing vessel crossing. - In The Anna W., (1910) 181 Fed. 604, a collision between a schooner passing up the main ship channel into lower New York bay, at night, before the wind, but against an ebb tide, at a speed of not more than one and one-half knots, and the tow of a meeting tug on a hawser 1,200 feet long, was held to have been due solely to the fault of the tug in failing to keep further toward the west side of the channel in view of her duty as the burden vessel to keep out of the way and because of the length of her hawser, which by the set of the tide would cause her tow to sag to the eastward of her own course.

In The John Fleming, (1905) 136 Fed. 486, a tug returning from the dumping grounds with two scows in tow on a line, the whole 1,400 feet in length, was held solely in fault for a collision in New York bay between the rear scow and a schooner beating her way in. for failure to exercise the care required, because of the length of the tow, to keep out of the schooner's way; the schooner having properly held her course until danger of collision became imminent.

Sailing vessel becalmed. - A transfer tug, with a car float on each side, which was lying with her engines still off Ward's Island, to permit a schooner coming through Hell Gate to pass, was held in fault for a collision between such schooner and one of the floats, where, although she was rightfully on that side of the channel, and stopped in due time, the schooner was becalmed and helpless, owing to the dying out of the wind, and drifted for a considerable time before striking the float, giving the tug, which saw her condition, time to have moved out of her way.

The Transfer No. 11, (1904) 130 Fed. 1019.

Sailing vessel at anchor.—Where a collision occurs between a bark lying at anchor and a steamship, it will be presumed that the collision resulted from the fault of the steamship, and such presumption of innocence in favor of the bark can only be overcome by a clear proof of a contributory fault. Banan, (1902) 116 Fed. 900.

Burden of proof. — In case of a collision between a steamer and a schooner, the steamer is presumptively in fault, it being her duty, under the rules, to keep out of the way; and the burden rests upon her, in order to avoid liability, to show that she took the proper precautions, and that they would have proved effective if the schooner had not changed her course. The Pilot Boy, (C. C. A. 1902) 115 Fed. 873.

Rule applied. - In The Anson M. Bangs, (C. C. A. 1904) 129 Fed. 103, a tug was held solely in fault for a collision with a schooner on a crossing course for persisting in her course, on the theory that the schooner would not run out her tack which she was privileged to do, with the duty resting on the tug to keep out of her way.

In The Alene, (1902) 116 Fed. 57, it appeared that the captain of a steamship ordered her helm hard astarboard for the purpose of passing under the stern of a schooner, which was then, as he testified, three and one-half points on his port bow, and about 3,000 feet distant, on a course crossing that of the steamship at an oblique angle. steamer then proceeded on a course which would have taken her under the stern of the schooner if the starboard helm had been continued, but for some reason unexplained, apparently through the fault of the helmsman the course to port was not continued, and when near the schooner the steamship bore directly down on her, sinking her, and drowning a number of her crew. It was held that the steamship was solely in fault, the schooner having no time after the danger became apparent to take any effective measures to avoid the collision.

Vol. II, p. 180, art. 21.

Change of course by privileged vessel. - In The Susquehanna, (1905) 134 Fed. 641, it appeared that the steamship Nacoochee and the ferryboats Princeton and Susquehanna were all passing down the North river in the daytime, on intersecting courses, the Nacoo-chee in the centre and the Susquehanna on the west, thus being the privileged vessel. By agreement, understood by all, the Princeton crossed ahead of the Nacoochee; but, hav-ing no agreement with the Susquehanna, ported to pass under her stern, when the latter swung to port to pass under the stern of the Nacoochee, in accordance with an agree-ment between them not known to the Princeton. This movement was not made until the Princeton was within 400 or 500 feet, and to avoid collision she went astern, and was struck by the Nacoochee. It was held that the Susquehanna was in fault for changing her course in violation of the starboard hand rule without agreement with or notice to the Princeton, and that such fault was the proximate cause of the collision, the Princeton having no other course open to her after the movement was made than to back as she did; that the Princeton was not in fault, such as to relieve the Susquehanna from full liability, her fault, if any, in failing to avoid the Nacoochee having been committed when in extremis, through the prior fault of the Susquehanna.

A collision occurred in New York bay between the steamship Buena Ventura, coming up the channel from the sea, and a barge on the side of the tug Mercedes, which was on a crossing course, going toward the Brooklyn shore. It was held under the evidence that the tug gave timely and proper signal of her intention to cross under the stern of the steamship, as required by articles 19 and 22 of the inland rules, and followed the same by reducing speed, and changing her course to starboard for that purpose; that the steamship, after answering the signal, instead of keeping her course and speed, as required by article 21, changed her course, or sheered to port, striking and sinking the barge, and that she was solely in fault for the collision. The Buena Ventura, (1902) 117 Fed. 988.

A steamship navigating San Francisco bay on a bright moonlight night, after exchanging crossing signals of one whistle with a tug with a tow approaching her course ahead from her port side, being the privileged vessel under article 19 of the Inland Navigation Rules, was required by article 21 to keep her course and speed, and where she continued porting her helm, and although her master was watching the tug and knew that it did not port in compliance with the signal, and was uncertain as to its intended course, failed to slow down and signal such fact as required by rule 3 of the Pilot Rules, she was chargeable with contributory fault for a collision with the tow, although the initial fault was that of the tug. The Robert Dollar, (C. C. A. 1907) 160 Fed. 876.

In The Steinway, (1905) 135 Fed. 344, 68 C. C. A. 14, affirming (1904) 130 Fed. 397, a steamboat proceeding through Hell Gate toward New York was held to have been solely in fault for a collision with a ferryboat which had just left her slip at Astoria, on the ground that she was proceeding too close inshore as she rounded Hallett's Point, and also for not keeping her course under the starboard hand rule, although the ferryboat gave the proper signal, and her course indicated that she intended to pass under the steamer's stern, as required by the rule.

In The N. & W. 2, (1903) 122 Fed. 171, it appeared that a tug was coming down East river light, with a strong ebb tide, at a high speed, probably exceeding twelve miles an hour over the land, as the ferryboat Vermont was starting across from Brooklyn. Vermont signaled her intention of crossing ahead as the tug was some distance up the river, but, receiving no answer, she stopped, the tug being the privileged vessel. The tug was on a course which would have taken her from 100 to 200 feet to the westward of the Vermont, but, after overtaking and passing two other vessels, she changed her course several points to port, and almost at once came into collision with the Vermont. was held that the tug was in fault for the collision because of her change of course; that the Vermont was not chargeable with contributory fault either because her lookout was not properly attending to his duties or because she did not stop sooner or reverse, since she stopped well off the tug's course, which was all that could be required of her.

Contributory fault of privileged vessel must be clearly shown. - A collision occurred at

Vol. II, p. 180, art. 22.

Rule applied. - In The Marie Palmer, (1907) 155 Fed. 894, a tug with a schooner in tow on a hawser was held, on the evidence, solely in fault for a collision between her tow and a meeting schooner in Delaware bay at night, on the ground that she held her course directly toward the meeting schooner, until they were so close that there was danger of night, on the Hudson river, about two hundred feet off the New York piers, between the steamship Augusta, passing up from the sea, and the ferryboat Chicago, crossing from Jer-sey City. The Chicago was clearly and grossly in fault, for failing to see the Augusta until the latter was within five hundred feet of the point of collision, and for then attempting to cross ahead in violation of the rules, when she might have kept out of the way by starboarding and reversing. It was held that under the settled rule that in such cases contributory fault on the part of the privileged vessel must be clearly shown, the Augusta could not be held in fault for going at a speed of eight miles an hour, which she kept until within five hundred feet of the point of collision, when she stopped her engines, it being her duty, as the privileged vessel, to maintain her speed; nor for not reversing until immediately before collision, which, if an error, was one in extremis; nor because of her nearness to the piers, which did not prevent the Chicago from keeping out of the way, nor in any way contribute to the collision. The Chicago, (C. C. A. 1903) 125 Fed. 712.

Tug stopping to let out hawsers. — In The Mary E. Morse, (1908) 179 Fed. 945, it appeared that a tug with a number of tows on hawsers, the total length of the tow being over 2,000 feet, which, while passing down Hampton Roads in the daytime and while an overtaking schooner was approaching the rear barge of the tow on an oblique course, slowed down to half her speed and signaled the tows to let out their hawsers to double their former length, was solely in fault for a collision between the schooner and barge, where the schooner was carefully and properly navigated, and would have passed under the stern of the barge if the latter had maintained her speed, as required by article 21.

Failure of burdened vessel to answer signals. - The privileged one of two crossing steam vessels has a right to rely on the performance by the other of her duty to keep out of the way so long as it is possible for her to do so, and such privileged vessel is not in fault for a collision caused by a failure in such duty, merely because she kept her course and speed notwithstanding the failure of the burdened vessel to answer her signals. The Deveaux Powell, (1908) 165 Fed. 634, 92 C. C. A. 54, reversing (1903) 120 Fed. 522. Different agreement by signal. — A vessel which assents by signal that another shall cross her bows cannot urge the attempted manœuvre as a fault, though it results in a collision. The Arthur M. Palmer, (1902) 115 collision, and then attempted to cross the schooner's bows with her tow.

Fed. 417.

Vol. II. p. 180, art. 23.

Duty imperative. - It is the duty of the navigator of a steamer approaching a sailing vessel on a crossing course, under articles 20-23, to act in time to avoid risk of collision, and he has no right to keep his course and speed on the assumption, or in the expectation, that the sailing vessel will change her tack; and the presence of a passing steamer, instead of furnishing an excuse for violating the rules, renders their observance and the exercise of precautionary care all the more necessary. Donald v. Guy, (1905) 135 Fed. 429.

For other cases applying this rule, see The Ocean, (1902) 115 Fed. 229; The Straits of Dover, (1903) 120 Fed. 900, 58 C. C. A. 86; The Pocomoke, (1906) 150 Fed. 193.

Vol. II, p. 180, art. 24.

Construction of rule. — This rule requires the overtaking vessel in a stream to give the one ahead such wide berth as to avoid any contingency that might arise from the effect or condition of the currents. The Ruth, (1910) 178 Fed. 749.

Overtaking vessel. - A schooner, which ran into the hawser of a tow in Chesapeake bay at night and cut three barges adrift, was sel, bound to keep out of the way and in fault, and liable for the salvage awards and costs paid by the owners of the barges to a rescuing tug. The Charles C. Lister, (C. C. A. 1910) 182 Fed. 988.

"Finally past and clear." — Where a schooner, which had left Norfolk and was beating down the channel against a head wind, when she was overtaken and passed by a tug and tows which left Norfolk later, was on the starboard tack, moving toward Old Point Comfort and away from the tug and tows, the latter were "finally past and clear," within the meaning of article 24; and when the schooner came about on the port tack, heading toward the tug and tows, and being more than two points abaft their beam, an entirely new risk of collision arose, as to which she was the overtaking vessel, and bound under such rule to keep out of the way, while the tug and tows were required by article 21 to keep their course and speed. The Mary E. Morse, (1908) 179 Fed. 945.

Danger from suction.—In The Lehigh,

(1910) 180 Fed. 906, it appeared that as the steamship Denver was passing through the main ship channel from New York bay to the sea at a speed of twelve and one-half knots or more she slowly overtook the tug Lehigh, which was on an almost parallel course and 150 feet on her port side. The tug slowed down intending to pass to the westward under the stern of the Denver, when she took a sudden sheer to starboard and struck the steamship about forty feet from the stern. The wheelsman of the tug testified that the wheel was not ported. It was held, on the evidence, that the collision was caused by the suction of the Denver, and that she was in fault for not appreciating the danger and taking precautions to obviate it by reducing speed or keeping at a greater distance; and that the tug was also in fault for reducing speed which rendered her more subject to the force.

While passing up the Delaware river in the daytime, the steamship Sif overtook and attempted to pass the steamship Murcia on the latter's port side. After she had passed about half her length, the Murcia began to swing towards her, and, although the engine was stopped and then reversed, and the helm ported, continued to swing until with a sud-den plunge her bow struck the Sif about one hundred feet forward of her stern. course of the Murcia was not changed until after she commenced to swing. It was held that she was not in fault, and that the fault was solely that of the Sif in passing so close that her suction caused the collision; the evidence tending to show that when the vessels began to converge the distance between them was not more than one hundred feet. The Sif, (1910) 181 Fed. 412.

Burden of proof. - The burden is on the overtaking vessel to show not only the prudence of her own conduct, but the negligence of the other vessel. The M. E. Luckenbach, (1908) 163 Fed. 755; The Sif, (1910) 181

Fed. 412.

Change of course by overtaken vessel in violation of agreement. — In The Wyoming, (1905) 145 Fed. 735, affirmed (C. C. A. 1907) 151 Fed. 1023, it appeared that a collision occurred in the East river between a ferryboat which was proceeding down the river on her trip from Brooklyn to her slip below on the Manhattan side and an overtaking tug which was passing down the river. It was agreed by signal that the tug should pass to the right, and when she was abreast of the ferryboat one of the vessels sheered and the collision occurred. It was held on con-flicting evidence that the place of collision was only a short distance above the ferryboat's slip, and that the collision occurred by reason of her changing her course in order to make her slip in violation of the passing agreement.

Fault as cause of collision. — A collision between two steamers passing down the Willamette river from Portland, which occurred when the overtaking vessel was attempting to pass the one ahead, was held to have been due solely to the fault of the overtaking vessel under the rules which required her to keep out of the way of the other and placed on her the burden of proof, it being shown by the evidence that, although there was ample room to pass, she crowded against the overtaken vessel, and then throwing over her wheel turned the overtaken vessel completely around, breaking her shaft and doing her serious injury. The Charles R. Spencer,

Wilful obstruction of following vessel. -Where the forward of two vessels pursuing the same course, and therefore having the right of way, is wilfully thrown in the way of the other, she cannot recover for a collision ensuing, although the rear vessel be not without fault. Gaffner v. Pigott, (C. C. A. 1902) 116 Fed. 486.

Duty to give warning signals. - It is the duty of an overtaking vessel to see to it that she does not come so near the overtaken vessel as to cause danger of collision; and, if she does come within the line of danger, it is her duty to warn the other vessel by signals, whether she intends to pass or not. Thus in The Fleetwing, (1902) 114 Fed. 409, it was held that a steamship which overtook, ran down, and sank a small tug in the Schuylkill river in the daytime, and without giving any signal of her approach, was in fault, and was liable for the damages, in the absence of evidence clearly showing that the collision was caused by some fault of the tug. Overtaken vessel going astern.—A steam vessel coming up with another from a direction more than two points abaft her beam does not cease to be an overtaking vessel, required by article 24 to keep out of the way, because of the fact that the overtaken vessel is at the time going astern. The Sicilian Prince, (1904) 128 Fed. 133.

Overtaken vessel drifting backward in rapids. - In The Ruth, (1910) 178 Fed. 749, affirmed (C. C. A. 1911) 186 Fed. 87, it appeared that the steamer Ruth was following the steamer Oregona up the Willamette river, and was close behind when the Oregona reached the Clackamas Rapids. The latter was unable to ascend the rapids by her own power, and, after going as near the head as possible, sent men ashore to make fast a steel line for the purpose of pulling her up the remaining distance by means of a capstan. She was unable to hold her position and began to drift down with the current, dragging the line, which libelant, one of her crew, was directed to pull in and coil on the deck. As soon as she commenced to drift, she gave danger signals to the Ruth, which had entered the rapids, pushed against the bank, and was holding herself there by her wheel. The Ruth paid no attention to the signals, and her wheel picked up the line as the Oregona drifted by, and it caught libelant, severing both his feet. It was held that the Ruth was in fault and liable for the injury in failing as an overtaking vessel to drop down and keep out of the way when signaled; there being evident danger of some accident if she did not.

Vol. II, p. 180, art. 25.

Tug overtaking tow. - In The Captain Sam, (1902) 115 Fed. 1000, it appeared that the tug Captain Sam, on a clear morning, took a large and heavily laden barge from her slip in Mobile, and started up the river against a strong wind and current. At the time she took the barge out, the tug Hero was further down stream, also coming up the river. Both tugs proceeded up stream, the Hero for some time gaining, until she had passed the barge, when she, in some manner, was struck by the barge and injured. The weight of evidence showed that the barge was following directly in the course of her tug on a line which had been run out to a length of about 250 feet, and that, after passing, the Hero went on a course diagonally crossing that of the tug and tow, although there was plenty of room in the channel to keep away. The Hero had no lookout, and did not see the barge until immediately be-fore the collision. It was held that the Captain Sam was not in fault, but that the collision resulted from the fault of the Hero, whose duty it was to see and watch the tug and tow, and to keep out of their way.

Presumption that overtaking vessel in

Vol. II, p. 180, art. 25.

Rule not inflexible. — This is not an inflexible rule, but is only to be followed "when safe and practicable;" and, where it is manifest that an adherence to it will produce disaster, it is not only the right, but the duty, of the navigator to disregard it. The Three Brothers, (1909) 170 Fed. 48, 95 C. C. A.

322, reversing (1908) 162 Fed. 388.

Exception to rule.—In The New Hampshire, (C. C. A. 1905) 136 Fed. 769, it was held that a tug with two long car floats in tow alongside was not in fault for being on the east side of the channel in East river in passing up to make a landing on the Brooklyn side, where such position was necessary and customary to enable her to round to and land safely in the then state of the tide.

Violation of rule when application practicable. - A tug with a tow of fifteen boats, coming down the Hudson river, was held in fault for a collision which occurred opposite Yonkers and near the docks on the east side of the river in the evening between one of her tows and a tug passing up, for being on the wrong side of the channel, in violation of article 25, it being shown by her own evidence that the evening was only slightly hazy, which made it safe and practicable for her to keep to the west side of mid-channel. and also that she was proceeding on a course angling across the river, so that her tow occupied a considerable part of the channel and unduly interfered with navigation of ascending vessels. The Benjamin Franklin, (C. C. A. 1906) 145 Fed. 13, affirmed (1903) 127 Fed. 457.

Collision due to other vessel's fault. — The fact alone that one of two vessels at the time of a collision was on the wrong side of a channel in violation of the narrow channel rule, will not constitute a contributory fault where the collision occurred in the daytime on a clear day through the direct fault in navigation of the other vessel with nothing to obstruct her actions. The La Bretagne, (1910) 179 Fed. 286, 102 C. C. A. 651, reversing (1906) 148 Fed. 477.

Effect of custom.—The violation of this rule cannot be justified upon the ground that it is customary for vessels to violate them under certain tidal conditions. The Transfer No. 10, (1904) 137 Fed. 666.

Effect of state statute. - The state statute requiring vessels navigating the East river to keep near the middle of the river is not changed or superseded by this rule. The Hartford, (1903) 125 Fed. 559; The Spartan Prince, (1903) 126 Fed. 885.

Negligent navigation by fog. - A tug entering a harbor in the evening, with four barges in tow, took the left-hand side of the channel, and when opposite a pier detached the first barge, and allowed it to proceed by its momentum toward the shore, across the course of an outgoing steamer, with which it came into collision. The tug gave no signal prior to casting off the barge, but at about that time crossed the signal of one whistle from the approaching steamer. It was held that in attempting such manœuvre without a clear understanding with other vessels she was negligent and in fault for the collision. The Alabama, (C. C. A. 1903) 126 Fed. 332, modifying (1902) 114 Fed. 214.

Tug with tow navigating channel. - While a tug with a tow has the right of way over an unencumbered vessel, it has no right unduly or unnecessarily to obstruct the pathway of other vessels, and in navigating a channel known to be constantly used by other vessels it is its duty to take all proper and reasonable measures to have its tow under control, and to lessen the danger of collisions. The Jamestown, (1902) 114 Fed. 593.

The Hudson river, in the vicinity of Yonkers, where it has a single deep and straight channel for a number of miles, is a "narrow channel" within the meaning of article 25. The Benjamin Franklin, (C. C. A. 1906) 145

Fed. 13, affirming (1903) 127 Fed. 457.

North river—above Twenty-third street.

"Narrow channels," within the meaning of article 25 of the inland navigation rules, are bodies of water navigated up and down in opposite directions, and do not include harbor waters, with piers on each side, where the necessities of commerce require navigation in every conceivable direction. Tested by such rule, the Hudson river above Twenty-third street, New York, and within the city limits, is not a narrow channel. The No. 4, (C. C. A. 1908) 161 Fed. 847.

North river - below Twenty-third street. -So much of the North river as extends from Twenty-third street, New York, to the upper bay, along the shores of which on both sides there is a continuous succession of wharves and piers, and which is one of the most crowded parts of the port of New York, cannot be considered a narrow channel, within the meaning of article 25. The Islander, (1907) 152 Fed. 385, 81 C. C. A. 511. See also The Scandanavia, (1907) 158 Fed. 96, 85 C. C. A. 564.

Harlem river. — The narrow channel rule is generally applicable to the Harlem river; but when there is an ebb tide setting strongly against the Bronx shore at the bend below Kingsbridge, which makes it dangerous for a hawser tow going up to pass the bridge on that side, it is justifiable for such a tow, as is customary, to keep to the left-hand side of the river. Nor is a tug required to employ a belper, or divide her tow in order to avoid doing so, which would obstruct and delay navigation and increase the danger of accidents. The Three Brothers, (1909) 170 Fed. 48, 95 C. C. A. 322, reversing (1908) 162 Fed. 388.

East river. - The narrow channel rule of article 25 does not apply to that part of East river between the Battery and Blackwell's island, which is governed by the local rule requiring vessels to keep in the centre of the channel. The Bay State, (1907) 153 Fed. 973.

Around the Battery. — The narrow channel rule is not strictly applicable to the passage around the Battery from the East to the North river, but still should be respected by boats passing around the Battery, especially from the North river, when they would otherwise interfere with vessels coming down the East river rightfully on the west side of the channel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Magee,

(1910) 180 Fed. 277.

Upper New York bay. - While the narrow channel rule does not apply to upper New York bay, considered as a single body of water, it does apply to each of the well-recognized deep water channels which run in a generally parallel direction through the bay, Bretagne, (1910) 179 Fed. 286, 102 C. C. A. 651, reversing (1906) 148 Fed. 477, wherein the court, after citing other cases dealing with the waters of other parts of New York harbor, said: "Examination of these opinions will show that while helding that the ions will show that while holding that the rule does not apply to the waters of the upper bay or of the lower, considered each as a single body of water, it does apply to the well-recognized channels which are familiar to navigators in those bays. To the Swash, the Main Ship, the East, the Bay Ridge, and the Red Hook Channels we have already indicated that the rule applies. see no reason for differentiating the main ship channel which runs from the mouths of the two rivers, between Governor's island on the east and Ellis and Liberty islands on the west, across the upper bay to the Narrows. It is a well-known channel, charted and buoyed, and a steam vessel navigating it should follow the rule which requires her 'when it is safe and practicable' to keep to that side of the fairway or mid-channel which lies on her starboard side. The circumstance that there is a great deal of cross travel in the upper bay itself does not seem a sufficient reason for abrogating the wholesome rule that vessels moving up or down some designated channel therein shall keep to the starboard side of it. Rule 25 is not to be construed as prohibiting vessels from crossing such channel at any convenient angle whenever the exigencies of their own navigation make it necessary or desirable for them to proceed from one to the other side of such channel; but when no such exigency exists they should keep to the proper side of the channel." To the same effect see The Bee, (C. C. A. 1905) 138 Fed. 303, affirming (1903) 127 Fed. 453.

In The Alfred W. Booth, (1903) 127 Fed. 453, affirmed (C. C. A. 1905) 138 Fed. 303, it was held that article 25 applied to navigation in the upper bay of New York, between Bay Ridge and Tompkinsville, where, owing to the anchorage grounds on either side, the fairway or channel between, safely navigable for tugs with tows, is only about half a mile wide; and that a tug with tows passing down on the left-hand side, when it was safe and practicable to keep to the other side, was in fault for a collision between one of her tows and that of an incoming tug, although her navigation was in other respects without fault.

Lower New York bay. — In The Sea King, (1902) 114 Fed. 535, 52 C. C. A. 349, it appeared that the tug Sea King was coming up the lower New York bay, having two barges in tow tandem, in all about twelve hundred feet long, when the second barge came in collision with the steamship Buffalo, outward bound, and was sunk. The collision occurred from 250 to 300 feet to the westward of the centre of the channel. After signals for passing port and port were exchanged between the Buffalo and the Sea King, the latter ported her helm two points, and continued on such course until she had passed, and then at once resumed her former course. It was held that the Sea King was in fault for failing to take proper measures to counteract the effect of the flood tide, which drifted her and her tow into the westward side of the channel, contrary to rule 25, and also in resuming her course before her tow had passed the Buffalo.

The Columbia river, in the vicinity of Westport light, is a narrow channel within this rule. U. S. v. Portland, (1908) 161 Fed. 193. Likewise that part of it near Rainier, Ore., is within the rule. The Cascades, (1910) 178 Fed. 726.

Applicable to channel 600 feet wide. — The Acilia, (1903) 120 Fed. 455, 56 C. C. A. 605, affirming (1901) 108 Fed. 975, cited in the

Rule applied. — In The Dauntless, (1903)
121 Fed. 420, modified on other grounds in (C. C. A. 1904) 129 Fed. 716, it appeared that a steamer passing down a river met two steam launches made fast together. The steamer gave a signal of two whistles, and, receiving no answer, starboarded her helm, and turned toward the left-hand side of the channel, a collision occurring shortly afterward, in which both launches were sunk and the persons on board drowned. It was held that the steamer was in fault for failing to have a lookout, and for violation of article 25 of the inland navigation rules.

In The Transfer No. 14, (C. C. A. 1903) 127 Fed. 305, reversing (1902) 118 Fed. 81, a tug, with a car float on each side, passing up East river in the channel between New York and Blackwell's island, in the early morning, was held to have been in fault for a collision with a barge coming down in tow on a hawser, which occurred on the New York side of the channel, on the ground that she was on the wrong side of the channel, and was negligent in failing to give proper attention to the lights and signals of the approaching vessels, or promptly and decisively to change her course to starboard as soon as they were seen coming nearly head on.

In The Mahanoy, (1903) 126 Fed. 587, it appeared that a collision occurred in New York bay in the evening between the tug Lewis Pulver, which was going up the channel at a speed of ten miles, and the Mahanoy, which was going down, on the westerly side of the channel, at a speed of twelve miles. The Pulver was going up the easterly side, but in passing another vessel got a heading to the westward, and at the time of collision was near the east side of the anchorage grounds. She gave a signal of two whistles, and continued her course and speed. The signal was not heard by the Mahanoy, which had no lookout, and which gave a signal of one whistle and ported. This signal was crossed by the Pulver, and both vessels continued their courses and speed until immediately before collision, when the Mahanoy reversed. It was held that both tugs were in fault; the Pulver primarily for being on the wrong side of the channel, and the Mahanoy for not having a lookout and not hearing the first signal, and both for proceeding at full speed after the cross-signals.

In The Transfer No. 10, (1905) 138 Fed. 221, a transfer tug with two car floats in tow alongside was held to have been solely in fault for a collision between one of such floats and a meeting schooner in tow on a hawser, which took place in East river between the Bronx shore and North Brother Island, on the ground that the tug was unnecessarily on the wrong side of the channel, and, although agreeing by signal to pass port to port, did not give the other tug and her tow sufficient room.

In The Jamestown, (1902) 114 Fed. 593, it appeared that a large steel barge, laden with freight cars, while passing up the Elizabeth river to Norfolk at about five o'clock in the evening in tow of an ocean tug, came into collision with the steamship Jamestown, which was passing down. The barge was on a hawser of 70 to 100 fathoms, the tide was flood, and a gale from the northwest made it difficult to control the tow, so that the two vessels occupied the greater part of the chan-nel. This fact was known, or should have been, to the Jamestown, which saw the tug and tow when two and one-half miles away, but kept its speed of fourteen or fifteen miles an hour until opposite the tug, when its effort to avoid a collision by stopping and reversing came too late. It was held that both the steamship and the tug and tow were in fault, the former for approaching at too high a speed and failing to stop before there was danger of collision, and the latter because it was negligence, under the circumstances, to enter the channel, at a time of day when outgoing steamers were known to be coming down, without shortening the hawser, or taking other measures to bring the barge under closer control, she having been to the east of the centre of the channel at the time of collision.

In The H. A. Baxter, (1909) 182 Fed. 930, collision at night in Providence river, Rhode Island, between a barge in tow of the tug Baxter passing up the river, and the meeting steamship Powhatan, was held to have been due primarily to the fault of the Baxter in keeping to the westward or port side of the channel in violation of article 25 of the inland rules, even after the agreement between the vessels to pass port and port.

In Rich v. Hamburg-American Packet Co., (1902) 117 Fed. 751, it appeared that a steamship passing down the Delaware river after daylight in the morning struck and sunk an anchored barge, laden with coal. The defenses that the barge was anchored in the channel and that there was a fog were not sustained by the proof; it being shown that the barge was within the regular anchorage grounds, and well outside the chan-nel, and that it was sufficiently clear to permit objects to be seen at a distance of a mile. It was held that the steamship was in fault, both for being outside the channel, and for failing to maintain an efficient lookout.

Rule applicable to fishing boats with motor power. - Article 26 of the inland navigation rules applies to a fishing boat having motor power, and a schooner is liable for the death of a person caused by her negligently running down a motor boat while at anchor and fishing in a place which left ample fairway. The Marshall O. Wells, (C. C. A. 1910) 178 Fed. 918, affirming (1909) 172 Fed. 984.

Holding course when danger imminent. -The tug Senff, with a car float in tow on her side, was passing down about the middle of the East river with an ebb tide at a speed of about nine miles an hour, when the Gladiator, also with a float, came out from her slip on the Manhattan side intending to go up the river. Passing signals of two whistles were exchanged, but the Gladiator failed to swing to port and continued across the river, until a collision occurred between her tow and the Senff. The Senff changed her course toward the Brooklyn shore, but kept her speed. It was held that she was chargeable with contributory fault in not stopping and backing; it having been evident for some time before the collision that for some reason the Gladiator was not conforming to her agreement. The Gladiator, (C. C. A. 1906) 144 Fed. 681.

In The Gladys, (C. C. A. 1906) 144 Fed. 653, reversing (1905) 135 Fed. 601, it appeared that a tug with three barges in tow, the whole extending to 4,000 feet in length. and a schooner approached each other at night on converging courses, and a collision oc-curred between the schooner and the second barge. The night was clear and calm, with the moon shining brightly, and the schooner, Burden of proof. - Under this rule it was held that a schooner which ran down a fishing boat, either anchored or fishing with trawls, in order to avoid the liability, had the burden of showing that she was without fault. The Marshall O. Wells, (1909) 172 Fed. 984, affirmed (1910) 178 Fed. 918, 102 C. C. A. 296.

which was making about five miles an hour. saw the tow for an hour and a half before the collision, and the tug crossed her course ahead at a distance of at least 800 feet, but she held her course until the first tow had passed her 500 feet before making any change. It was held that while she was the privileged vessel, and the initial fault was that of the tug, it became evident, at least when the tug crossed her course, that a collision was inevitable unless she took action to prevent it, and that she was chargeable with contributory fault for not taking such action promptly.

A sainly vessel was held in fault because the master, though warned by his lookout the master, a fough warned by his lookout that a steamer as coming directly toward him, gave her no idention although he might readily have avoided the collision by changing his course after he saw the negligent navigation of the otherwessel. The Massasagua, (1903) 124 Fed. In Chadwick r. Wiley (1904) 131 Fed. 1003. a schooner was held not to be charge able with contributory faur for a collision able with contributory fau for a collision with a steamer, brought able by the gross fault of the latter in changin her course so as to cross the schooner's be when they were approaching nearly hea on, on the ground that she should have luffed, where there was very little time for such manœuvre after the steamer was seen to change her course, and no certainty that it would then have avoided the collision.

Insistence on right of way. — It is not considered to be the law that vessels can persist in insisting upon their own right of way until a collision happens, when the circumstances and situation show plainly that the resulting positions of the vessels will make the actual rule to be applied a matter of doubt. Where, under these conditions, vessels have entire freedom of motion, and an accident results, which without any danger or inconvenience could have been avoided, each vessel failing to take precautions should be held to its share of responsibility in the matter. Steamtug No. 15, (1907) 157 Fed. 142. See also The Sinaloa, (1909) 173 Fed. 687.

A perverse adherence to the navigation rules is not justifiable, where it is manifest that such course is certain to result in danger of collision. The Mauch Chunk, (1907) 154 Fed. 182, 83 C. C. A. 276, affirmed (1905) 139 Fed. 747. See also The John H. Starin, (1906) 145 Fed. 723, affirmed (C. C. A. 1908) 162 Fed. 146; The Taurus, (1907) 156 Fed. 838.

Necessity for violation of rules must be great. — Obedience to the rules of navigation is not a fault, even if a different course would have prevented a collision, and the necessity must be clear and the emergency sudden and alarming before an act of disobedience can be excused. The Lauretta Speddin, (C. C. A. 1910) 184 Fed. 283.

Special circumstances. — In the C. R. Hoyt, (1905) 136 Fed. 671, it appeared that the tug Hoyt, passing up East river on the Brooklyn side in the daytime, exchanged crossing signals with the ferryboat Fulton, crossing from New York; the Hoyt, as the privileged vessel, being required to keep her course and speed, and the Fulton to cross under her stern. The Fulton, however, held her course, and came so close to the Hoyt that the latter, to avoid collision, when under the Fulton's bows starboarded her helm, throwing her head nearly across the river. During such time the tug No. 9 was coming down the river, and had given three signals to the Hoyt for passing port and port, none of which were answered. After the Hoyt had passed the Fulton, both she and the No. 9 gave alarm signals, ported, and reversed, but were then so near together that a collision occurred. It was held that the danger of the Hoyt from the Fulton, which was within full view of the pilot of the No. 9, was a "special circumstance" within the meaning of the rules.

In The Horatio Hall, (1904) 127 Fed. 620,

In The Horatio Hall, (1904) 127 Fed. 620, it appeared that a steamer passing down East river overtook and passed another steamer in tow, and while manœuvring to effect a landing at a pier swung around and came into collision with one of the towing tugs. It was held that the rule requiring a vessel having another on her starboard hand to keep out of the way did not apply to the tow, but that the case was one of special circumstances,

311

ngili 'g b falling within article 27 of the rules for harbors and inland waters.

In Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Magee, (1910) 180 Fed. 277, it appeared that the ferryboat Long Branch was passing around the Battery from the North river and stopped to permit a lighter to pass on her starboard side. At the time the tug Powhatan, with a tow on her side, was coming down East river to pass around the Battery, being outside of three other tugs with tows which were as close to the New York piers as they could safely go. While so stopped, the ferryboat gave the Powhatan a signal of one whistle, which was answered, and she then started ahead; but, in-stead of keeping across toward the Brooklyn side so as to pass under the bows of all the tugs, she attempted to go to port to pass between the Powhatan and a tow which was in mid-river and came into collision with the Powhatan, which had stopped when the danger became apparent. It was held that neither the narrow channel rule nor the starboard hand rule for crossing vessels fully governed the situation, but that the ferryboat was solely in fault for not keeping to starboard, which it appeared she could have done, while the tug did not have room to go further to starboard.

In The Ocean, (1902) 115 Fed. 229, it appeared that a tug, with two scows in tow, was passing down East river on a course somewhat toward the Brooklyn shore, when she met the steamship Ocean coming up on a crossing course, so that the crossing involved danger of collision. The tug having the Ocean on her starboard side, it became her duty, under articles 19, 22, and 23 of the naviga-tion rules, to keep out of the way, to avoid crossing ahead, and to slacken her speed or stop and reverse. The Ocean gave a signal of one whistle, which the tug answered by a cross signal, and starboarded in an attempt to cross ahead. At a second cross signal the Ocean stopped and reversed, but too late to avoid collision with one of the scows. It was held that the tug was primarily in fault for violation of the rules, but that the Ocean was also in fault because, under the special circumstances of the case, it was made her duty, by articles 27 and 29, to stop and reverse at once, on receiving the first cross signal.

Errors in extremis.—A vessel cannot be held for errors of judgment of her navigating officers while acting in extremis. The Pocomoke, (1906) 150 Fed. 193; The Pacific, (C. C. A. 1907) 154 Fed. 943; The Luzerne, (C. C. A. 1907) 157 Fed. 391; The Monterey, (1909) 171 Fed. 442; The Commonwealth, (1910) 174 Fed. 694; The Oregon, (1910) 180 Fed. 299; The Montauk, (1910) 180 Fed. 697, 103 C. C. A. 663; The Fred Richards, (C. C. A. 1910) 180 Fed. 707.

In The Everett, (1910) 182 Fed. 702, a schooner was held not in fault because the master, when the steamer was in full view bearing down on him, gave several blasts on a horn to attract her attention, instead of a single blast to indicate that he was on the starboard tack.

An error in extremis cannot be urged in exculpation of a vessel whose prior negligence has brought about the situation in which a mistake of judgment is excusable. The Protector, (C. C. A. 1902) 113 Fed. 868.

The excuse that mistakes were made while acting in extremis will not be accepted where it is shown that the vessel was without a lookout and was not shown that she would have found herself in extremis if she had maintained a proper lookout. The James A. Lawrence, (1902) 117 Fed. 228, 54 C. C. A. 260, affirming (1899) 97 Fed. 351.

Vol. II, p. 181, art. 28.

Effect of pilot rules.— The provision of this rule that "when vessels are in sight of one another a steam vessel under way whose engines are going at full speed astern shall indicate that fact by three short blasts on the whistle," is to be construed as it reads, as applying in all cases when vessels are in sight of one another, and is not limited by rule 6 of the pilot rules, adopted by the supervising inspectors, that whistle signals shall be given and answered by vessels "passing or meeting at a distance within half a mile of each other." The Aurelia, (1910) 183 Fed. 341.

329, 55 C. C. A. 345.

Rule applied. — A steamship which, having met and passed a tug with a barge in tow, in the Elizabeth river, at a distance of 300 feet, immediately stopped and reversed, throwing her stem around across the course of the barge, resulting in a collision, was held solely in fault therefor, not only because the evidence failed to sustain her contention that the movement was justified by a sheering of the barge toward her, rendering it necessary, but he barge toward her, rendering it necessary, but he salso because she failed to give notice by signal, as required by article 18, rule 3 (2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 179), and this section, of the inland navigation rules. The Georgetown, (1905) 135 Fed. 854.

In The Aurelia, (1910) 183 Fed. 341. it appeared that a collision occurred in San Francisco bay about 2,000 feet off the San Francisco piers, in the daytime, between the steamships Aurelia and Umatilla. The Umatilla had just backed from her pier to go out, and when 1,000 feet from the end of the pier gave a passing signal of two whistles to the Aurelia, which was in sight inward bound for Oakland. The signal was answered, but the Umatilla continued to back for two or three minutes at full speed without giving any signal of such fact. She was in full sight of the Aurelia, however, which did not materially change her course until the vessels were too near together to avoid collision. It was held that both vessels were in fault; the Umatilla for failing to give the signal required by the rules to indicate that her engine was going full speed astern, and the Aurelia for not keeping a proper lookout, which would have enabled her to avoid the collision notwithstanding the fault of the Umatilla. For other cases applying this rule, see The Joseph M. Clark, (1902) 119 Fed. 459; The Straits of Dover, (1903) 120 Fed. 900, 58 C. C. A. 86.

Vol. II, p. 181, art. 29.

Special circumstances. - A collision took place at night on the East river, near the New York side, between a ferryboat passing down and one of three barges in tow alongside of a tug passing up. The tug was at the time rounding to under a port helm to make a landing of one of her barges. The vessels were in sight of each other's lights when a mile apart, but neither saw the other until they were within two hundred feet. It was held that the overtaking rule did not apply, the tug having at the time no definite course, but that the case was one of special circumstances under article 29 of the inland rules requiring each vessel to watch and be guided by the movements of the other, and that both were in fault for not observing such rule and keeping a vigilant lookout. The John Englis, (1910) 176 Fed. 723, 100 C. C. A. 579.

Duty to have lookout.—It is the duty of a steamer to have a trustworthy lookout, properly stationed, other than the officer of the deck or the helmsman; and the absence of such lookout in case of collision is prima facie evidence that the collision was caused by the steamer's fault, and casts upon her the burden of showing that the presence of the lookout could not have avoided the collision. The Pilot Boy, (C. C. A. 1902) 115 Fed. 873.

A steam vessel which did not have a proper lookout, as required by the rules, cannot be exonerated by the court from fault for a collision, unless it appears that she could not possibly have avoided the accident, even if the lookout had been in his place. The Arthur M. Palmer, (1902) 115 Fed. 417.

M. Palmer, (1902) 115 Fed. 417.

In The Dorchester, (1908) 163 Fed. 779, affirmed (C. C. A. 1908) 167 Fed. 124, it appeared that a collision occurred a short distance within the mouth of the Elizabeth river on a clear and calm night, between a steamship coming out from Norfolk and a small schooner passing in, the schooner being sunk and her cargo lost. The schooner was sailing with all sails set in a light wind and kept with all sails set in a light wind and kept her course and speed. She carried proper lights, which were seen by passengers on the steamship when nearly a mile away, but were not seen by the master or lookout until too close to avoid the collision. It was held that the steamship was solely in fault in failing to maintain a proper lookout.

to maintain a proper lookout.

The failure of a steam yacht navigating New York harbor at a speed of sixteen miles an hour to maintain a lookout was a fault and a contributing cause of a collision between the yacht and a submerged scow in tow, where a vigilant lookout might have seen the scow or noted her position from the hawser with which she was being towed. The H. S. Beard, (1904) 134 Fed. 648.

Where a ferryboat navigating the river between Portsmouth and Norfolk, Va., on a dark night, had no lookout, and the master and the man at the wheel, who were the only persons on deck, failed to see the towing lights of a tug with a tow on each side until within a distance of fifty feet, such ferryboat was held to be chargeable with contributory fault for a collision between her and one of the tows, although the tug was primarily in fault. The City of Portsmouth, (C. C. A. 1906) 143 Fed 856

1906) 143 Fed. 856.

In The Wilkesbarre, (1907) 151 Fed. 501, affirmed (C. C. A. 1908) 157 Fed. 1006, it appeared that a tug with a tow, and having no lookout, was approaching a pier, near which she intended to leave her tow, and the master, who was at the wheel, changed her course toward the pier in order to make a turn. Immediately after he suddenly fell in a faint, and the tug, being without guidance, ran into a steamer which was lying at the pier. It was held that while the collision was the result of inevitable accident so far as related to the master, it was proximately due to the failure to keep the lookout required by law, since, if a competent one had been properly stationed and attentive to his duties, he would have noticed the trouble and prevented the collision, either by changing the tug's course or having the engineer stop or reverse.

A tug leaving her slip on the Manhattan side of East river, with a car float on her side, intending to turn up the river, which movement was delayed by the necessity of clearing a ferryboat coming down, which she did not see in time to remain at her slip, was held in fault for a collision between her tow and another tug, also coming down on the Brooklyn side, on the ground that she should have kept a more efficient lookout, her view up the river beng obscured by her tow, which would have enabled her sooner to see the ferryboat, and that after passing the same and agreeing with the other tug to pass starboard and starboard, she failed to promptly reverse or change her course up the river. The Gladiator, (1904) 132 Fed. 876.

Absence of lookout not affecting situation.—The absence of a lookout stationed where he should be on a vessel will not render such vessel in fault for a collision, where she was navigated exactly as she should have been had there been a lookout reporting the situation. The absence of a lookout on a tug while entering a slip was held not a fault contributing to her injury by striking a hawser stretched across the slip by another vessel, and which, owing to the darkness, could not have been seen by the lookout if he had been in his proper place. Erie R. Co. v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., (1903) 121 Fed. 440.

Sufficiency of lookout.— Where the attention of a lookout on a vessel is properly.

Sufficiency of lookout. — Where the attention of a lookout on a vessel is necessarily absorbed in a special direction, it is the duty of the vessel to detail another man for the general duty. New York, etc., Steamship Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., (1906) 143 Fed. 991.

Station of lookout. — While no specific location on a vessel is prescribed for the lookout, he is required by good navigation to be placed at the point best suited for the purpose alike of hearing and observing the approach of objects likely to be brought into collision with the vessel; having regard to the circumstances of the case and condition of the weather. The Vedamore, (C. C. A. 1905) 137 Fed. 844, affirming (1904) 131 Fed. 154.

Elevated positions on a steamer, such as the hurricane deck, are not as favorable situations for the lookout as those on the forward deck near the stem. The Pilot Boy, (C. C. A. 1902) 115 Fed. 873. Where a large ocean-going steamship, with nest, sixty feet above the deck, and one hundred feet from the stem, was not properly located to see and hear objects in front of the vessel, and especially small vessels of the character that usually navigate the bay, frequently loaded down to their water mark; and the ship was in fault for a collision with a schooner, whose fog signal, regularly sounded, was not heard by the lookout until inmediately before collision. The Vedamore, (C. C. A. 1905) 137 Fed. 844, affirming (1904) 131 Fed. 154.

Where a collision occurred between a car float on the side of a tug and a steamship, which was being docked and was at the time stationary, the defense of inevitable accident was not made out by the tug by evidence that she and her tow were forced against the steamship by a large body of floating ice, which was not seen until within fifty feet, and when too late to avoid it, where it appeared that there was no lookout on the tug, and that the pilot's view was obstructed by the cars on the float; that the attention of the lookout stationed on the float was directed entirely to the piers, and that a lookout properly stationed and attentive to his duties would have seen the ice in time to have avoided it. New York, etc., Steamship Co. r. New York, etc., R. Co., (1906) 143 Fed. 991.

A ferryboat, navigating Boston harbor on a clear night, but when the water was dark, with the only lookout in the pilot house, was held to have contributed to a collision with a mud scow, low in the water and adrift. Eastern Dredging Co. v. Winnisimmet Co., (1908) 162 Fed. 860, 89 C. C. A. 550.

Lookout on vessel landing at dock. - It is the imperative duty of a steamship, when making a landing at a dock in a river where other vessels are constantly passing, to maintain an efficient lookout, and the absence of such lookout cannot be excused on the ground that all the crew were otherwise engaged. The Northland, (1903) 125 Fed. 58.

Stern lookout when backing. - The Deutschland, a large steamship 687 feet long, after having been passed by the health officer at the quarantine station, Staten Island, where she had been at anchor, headed downstream on account of the flood tide, under-took to swing around with her head to the eastward, and in doing so backed, and her propeller hood came into collision with the Snow, a small schooner which had also just been released from quarantine, and had started northward at a distance of some 130 feet astern of the steamship before the latter backed. She made an effort to get out of the way, but could not do so in time. Deutschland had no lookout astern, and, according to the weight of the evidence, gave no backing signal. It was held that for such reasons she was solely in fault for the collision. The Deutschland, (1904) 129 Fed. 964, affirmed (C. C. A. 1905) 137 Fed. 1018. In The Northland, (1903) 125 Fed. 58, it appeared that a large lake steamship was making her berth in Buffalo river where it was about 250 feet wide. A steam canal boat, with two other boats in tow on a line, passing down the river, meeting a tug when about opposite, after giving the proper signals, went to starboard and passed within a few feet of the steamship, which was apparently stationary at her berth. The steamship had no lookout, and no watch astern, and paid no attention to the passing vessels or their signals. When one of the tows was opposite the stern of the steamship, the latter started one of her propellers at high speed, creating a suction which drew the canal boat from her course and caused a collision, resulting in the sinking of the canal boat soon after, from injury inflicted by the ship's propeller. Had a proper watch been maintained, and attention giving to the passing tows, the injury might readily have been avoided. It was held that the ship was in fault, and that the canal boat was not in fault or negligent, having the right to assume that the ship would perform her duty and avoid subjecting the passing boats to danger of collision by operating her propeller.

Vol. II, p. 181, art. 30,

Proper person for lookout. - When acting as the officer of the deck, and having charge of the navigation, the master of a steamer is not a proper lookout. The Pilot Boy, (C. C. A. 1902) 115 Fed. 873.

Lookout unable to speak English. - In The Fred Richards, (C. C. A. 1910) 180 Fed. 707, it was held that the fact that the lookout on a yacht was a Central American Indian, incapable of speaking English, did not impair his efficiency as a lookout, nor in itself constitute a contributing fault on the part of the yacht for a collision brought about by improper navigation by the other vessel.

Duty toward sailing vessels. — The duty of a steamship to see that her lookout maintains constant observation and the utmost diligence is especially imperative in favor of a sailing vessel, which under the rules has the right of way. The Dorchester, (1908) 163 Fed. 779, affirmed (C. C. A. 1908) 167 Fed. 124.

Duty of vessel moored at end of wharf in navigable stream. - Rule 29 applies to a vessel lying moored at the end of a wharf, in a dark night, in the navigable part of a narrow stream, constantly traversed by different kinds of craft, and having neither lights nor a lookout, there being special circumstances in such case which require her, in the exercise of common prudence, to carry a light, whether or not it is expressly required by the rules; and she cannot recover for an injury by collision with a passing vessel in tow, which could have been avoided had she been properly lighted. Inspectors' rules. — Inspectors right to make rules which would deprive a vessel of a right given her by the statutory navigation rules. The Transfer No. 15, (C. C. A. 1906) 145 Fed. 503; The John H. Starin, (C. C. A. 1908) 162 Fed. 146, affirming (1906) 145 Fed. 723; The Aurelia, (1910) 183 Fed. 341.

In The Pawnee, (1909) 168 Fed. 371, it appeared that a tug bound from Jersey City to Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn, was struck on her port side by a steamer bound to sea from her pier on the Manhattan side of the East river. The vessels were on crossing courses, the tug being the privileged and the steamer the burdened vessel. The steamer sought to excuse herself because she had a right to expect that the tug would turn into the East river, and because she was entitled, under inspectors' rule 9, to adopt a two-whistle course and pass ahead. Both contentions were rejected, because the rule was invalid as being repugnant to the starboard hand

Effect of failing to post rules. - The failure to post rules as required by this act does not render the owner of the boat privy to the collision and deprive him of the right to a limitation of liability on account thereof, where the collision did not result from the want of knowledge of the rules by the pilot, but from his failure to observe rules of which he had knowledge. In re Rapid Transit Ferry Co., (1903) 124 Fed. 786. Lights on scows.—Under rule 11 of the supervising inspectors of steam vessels. adopted pursuant to section 2 of the inland rules, the lights thereby required to be carried by a scow in tow are not solely to prevent collision with herself, but also to assist in indicating to approaching vessels the number and length of the tow and positions of the vessels; and she may be charged with contributory fault for a collision with another vessel of the tow because of her failure to comply with such rules. Object of this statute. — This legislation was for the purpose of delimiting the inland waters of the United States, in order to inform navigators where the inland rules of navigation, as distinguished from the inter-

"Mercantile marine." — It has been held that the term "mercantile marine," as used in this section, means the merchant service or business of commerce at sea, and that the section does not apply to steam vessels engaged in towing on the inland waters of the United States. Liability of tug for lights on tow. - Where the navigation of a fleet consisting of a tug and two barges in tow, one alongside having her own master and crew and the other on a line, is in charge of a pilot employed by the owners of the barges, who is on the first barge and directs all movements, the tug is not responsible for the position of the fleet in the channel, nor for the failure of the barges to carry proper lights, and cannot be held liable for a collision between the leading barge and a meeting steamer, resulting from a violation of the rules in either of such respects. The Ardanrose, (1902) 115 Fed. 1010.

Vol. II, p. 195, rule twenty-one.

Moderate speed. — "Moderate speed," required of a steam vessel in a fog, is purely a relative term; and what constitutes such speed in a given case is to be determined with reference to the time, place, and circumstances, rather than from the actual speed. Quinette v. Bisso, (1905) 136 Fed. 825, 69 C. C. A. 503.

Excessive speed. - Where a tug was going up the Mississippi river in the early morning at a time and place where people were likely to be crossing the river in small boats, and in a fog so dense along the water as to render it impossible to see such boats more than a few feet, a speed of seven and a half to nine miles an hour was immoderate, and gave a right of action against the owners under the Louisiana statute, to recover for the death of a person who was run down by the tug while crossing in a skiff. Care required with respect to small craft. -The right of a steamer to maintain her course or speed, even against small craft like a skiff or yawl, is relative, and not absolute. She has no right to maintain a speed which is dangerous to a smaller craft which can be seen ahead, and, where she is navigating in a fog so dense that such craft cannot be seen at any considerable distance, and in a locality where numbers of them are likely to be encountered, she is required to exercise extraordinary care and watchfulness, and is not justified in relying solely on fog signals as a warning to other vessels. Presumption. — A presumption of fault arises where there is an unexplained failure to stand by. The Williamsport, (1909) 167 Fed. 184; The Kennebec, (1908) 167 Fed. 847; The Lizzie Crawford, (1909) 170 Fed. 837; The Fred Richards, (C. C. A. 1910) 190 Fed. 707.

But this presumption is not conclusive; it may be rebutted by sufficient proof to the contrary, although it shifts the burden to the offender, and in a doubtful case is sufficient to determine the controversy. The Williamsport, (1909) 167 Fed. 184; The Kennebec, (1908) 167 Fed. 847.

When rule not applicable. — The failure of the captain of one of two vessels, both of which were seriously injured in a collision, to stand by after the other had been beached, or to take off her passengers, was not a violation of this section, which rendered his vessel liable for the collision, where it was calm and there was little danger to the passengers, and the extent of the injury to his own vessel was unknown, and where, after proceeding to port, only four miles distant, he at once gave notice and himself returned with a tug, and all the passengers and crew were safely taken off. The Trader, (1904) 129 Fed. 462.

In a suit to recover the value of the cargo of a barge, sunk in collision while in tow, against the vessel through whose fault the collision occurred, it is no defense to such vessel that the tug was negligent in permitting her tow to sink after the collision. The Dauntless, (1902) 116 Fed. 543.

COMMERCE AND LABOR.

Vol. X, p. 58, sec. 1.

The primary purpose of this Act was legislative, to enable Congress by information secured through the work of officers charged with the execution of this law to pass such remedial legislation as might be found necessary, and the act must be construed in view of such purpose. U.S. v. Armour (1906) 142 Fed. 808.

Right of congressional committee to ask for information. — The commissioner of corporations is not permitted by this section to disclose the data and information collected by him or his predecessors under that section, unless by the special direction of the President, and this notwithstanding the request is made by a subcommittee of the Senate. He should, however, immediately present such a request to the President, submit to him, if practicable, all the documents containing relevant information upon the subject referred to, and obtain his instructions as to what part, if any, of such data is suitable for publication by direction of the committee preferring the request. (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 150.

[Investigations.]

Immunity. - This section requires the commissioner of corporations to investigate all corporations and combinations engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, except common carriers, and provides that "all the requirements, obligations, liabilities, and immunities imposed or conferred by said 'Act to regulate commerce' and by 'An Act in relation to testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission' . . . shall also apply to all persons who may be subpænaed to testify as witnesses or to produce documentary evidence in pursuance of the authority conferred by this section." That Act (Act Feb. 11, 1893, ch. 83, 27 Stat. L. 443, 3 Fed. Stat. Annot. 885, which is supplementary to the Inter-state Commerce Act, provides that "no person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter or thing concerning which he may testify or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, before said commission or in obedience of its subpœna . . . or in any such case or proceeding." The Act Feb. 25, 1903, ch. 755, 32 Stat. L. 904, 10 Fed. Stat. Annot. 173, making provision for the enforcement of the interstate commerce and anti-trust laws, contains a similar immunity provision relating to persons giving testimony or producing evidence in any proceeding, suit, or prosecution under said acts. By a resolution of the House of Representatives of March 7, 1904, the commissioner of corporations was directed to investigate the so-called "Beef Trust," and while proceeding thereunder certain persons by his request, but without being subpænaed or sworn, furnished testimony and documentary evidence on which he based his report. It was held that the immunity provisions of the statute set out and applicable to such investigation, to be valid, must be construed as being as broad as the privilege given by the Fifth Constitutional Amendment, and that the persons so furnishing evidence could not be prosecuted for violation of the anti-trust law on account of the transactions, matters, or things to which such evidence related. U. S. v. Armour, (1906) 142 Fed. 808.

In U. S. v. Swift, (1911) 186 Fed. 1002, it appeared that the defendants were indicted in 1905 for conspiracy to monopolize interstate commerce in fresh meats, in violation of the Sherman Anti-trust Act (Act July 2, 1890, ch. 647, sec. 1, 26 Stat. L. 209, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 336), but an acquittal was directed, on the ground of immunity from prosecution because of testimony given and evidence furnished by them before the commissioner of corporations in relation to the transactions which formed the basis for the indictments. It was held that such immunity did not extend to a subsequent prosecution for continuing the same conspiracy thereafter; nor did it obliterate the facts testified to, which, if legally competent and relevant, might be shown in the subsequent prosecution.

This section contemplates that the commissioner of corporations shall proceed by private hearings and that a person who appears before him on his demand or by his request, and gives testimony or produces documents, although not sworn, is entitled to the same privileges and immunities as though his attendance were compelled by subpœna and his testimony given under oath. U. S. v. Armour, (1906) 142 Fed. 809.

Corporations. — The immunity granted by this section and the acts therein referred to does not extend to corporations. U. S. v. Armour, (1906) 142 Fed. 808.

CONSPIRACY.

Vol. II, p. 247, sec. 5440.

Construction. — This section must be strictly construed. U. S. v. Robbins, (1907) 157 Fed. 999.

The offense defined by this section is an infamous crime. — To the same effect as the original note, see U. S. v. Wells, (1908) 163 Fed. 313.

Continuing offense. - The offense defined by this section is a continuing one so long as it is in process of execution, as manifested by overt acts in pursuance thereof. U. S. v. Brace, (1907) 149 Fed. 874.

Venue. — Persons accused of conspiring to violate a law in a particular place may be tried there if they participate in overt acts there, though the unlawful agreement was made elsewhere, since participation may be proved by evidence of their conduct elsewhere. U. S. v. Campbell, (1910) 179 Fed. 762

Where a conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands was originally formed in one federal district but was carried out by means of false and fraudulent entries of such lands in another district, made with the knowledge and consent of all the conspirators, it was held that each of such overt acts constituted a renewal of the conspiracy in the latter district, and that the offense might be prosecuted in either district. Arnold v. Weil. (1907) 157 Fed. 429.

Where conspirators had been doing business together in the judicial district in which they were tried, prior to and at the time of the crime, and there was no evidence that they had been together outside of the district. it was held that the jury was justified in finding the conspiracy to have been in that district. Marrash v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1909) 168 Fed. 225.

Limitation. - While under this section the gravamen of the offense is the conspiracy, there also must be an overt act to make the offense complete, and so the period of limitation within which it may be prosecuted must be computed from the date of the overt act rather than the formation of the conspiracy. And where during the existence of the conspiracy there are successive overt acts, the period of limitation must be computed from the date of the last of them of which there is appropriate allegation and proof. U.S. v. Francis, (1906) 144 Fed. 520, modified (C. C. A. 1907) 152 Fed. 155; U. S. v. Bradford, (1905) 148 Fed. 413, affirmed (C. C. A. 1907) 152 Fed. 616; U. S. v. Brace, (1907) 149 Fed. 874; Jones v. U. S., (1908) 162 Fed. 417, 89 C. C. A. 303; U. S. v. Raley, (1909) 173 Fed. 159; U. S. v. Breese, (1909) 173 Fed. 402; Lonabaugh v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 179 Fed. 476; Jones v. U. S., (1910) 179 Fed. 584, 103 C. C. A. 142. See also U. S. v. Black, (1908) 160 Fed. 431, 87 C. C. A. 383. Compare U. S. v. Biggs, (1907) 147 Fed. 264, affirmed (1909) 211 U. S. 507, 29 S. Ct. 181, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 305.

A prosecution may be instituted within three years after the commission of any overt act, although more than that length of time may have elapsed since the conspiracy was first formed or the first of such acts was committed thereunder. U.S. v. Bradford, (1905) 148 Fed. 413, affirmed (C. C. A. 1907)

152 Fed. 616.

A conspiracy to restrain or monopolize trade, in violation of the Sherman Act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. L. 209, ch. 647, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 336), by obtaining control of a competitor through a pledge of the majority of its stock to secure a loan to a stockholder, and then voting to suspend business until further order of the board of directors, continues, so far as the statute of limitations is concerned, as long as any further action is taken in furtherance of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Kissel, (1910) 218 U. S. 601, 31 S. Ct. 124, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1168.

Where a conspiracy has been formed and an overt act has been done in execution of it more than three years before the filing of an indictment, a prosecution for that conspiracy and overt act is barred by the statute of limitations. When in such a case subsequent overt acts are committed under the old conspiracy within the three years, the existence of the conspiracy and the conscious participation of the defendant therein within the three years are indispensable to the maintenance of a prosecution for the conspiracy. But if these facts are established by competent evidence such a prosecution may be sustained. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 154 Fed. 577.

Conspirator withdrawing. -- As to a con-spirator withdrawing from the scheme, the statute runs from time of his withdrawal.

U. S. v. Raley, (1909) 173 Fed. 159.
Limitation of Bankruptcy Act. — The limitation of one year imposed by Bankruptcy Act July 1, 1898, ch. 541, sec. 29d, 30 Stat. L. 554, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 606, for the finding of an indictment for a violation of such section, does not apply to an indictment under this section for a conspiracy to commit an offense thereunder. U. S. v. Comstock, (1908) 162 Fed. 416.

Commencement of period. — Where an alleged conspiracy to defraud the United States out of public lands was formed in September, 1902, and the necessary affidavits to consummate the fraud were filed on the 7th and 8th of October, 1902, the filing of such affidavits constituted an overt act which started limitations against a prosecution for conspiracy, which was barred on Oct. 8, 1905, under Rev. Stat., sec. 1044, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 358. limiting prosecutions for federal offenses to three years after the offense shall have been committed: Ex p. Black, (1906) 147 Fed. 832.

Conspiracy generally. — A conspiracy consists of a combination between two or more persons to do a criminal or an unlawful act, or a lawful act by criminal or unlawful means, including, as an essential element, a corrupt motive. U. S. v. Moore, (1909) 173

Fed. 122.

This section applies with equal force to rights of the United States created subsequent to its passage, as well as those previously existing. Curley v. U. S., (1904) 130 Fed. I, 64 C. C. A. 369, affirming (1903) 122 Fed. 738.

Knowledge by an alleged co-conspirator that the other defendants were attempting to defraud is not sufficient to involve him in the conspiracy; nor is mere suspicion that he was a party to the conspiracy. Marrash v. U. S.,

(C. C. A. 1909) 168 Fed. 225.

Under this section it is sufficient that it be the conspirator's purpose to commit a wilful fraud on the law, or some statutory requirement pertinent to be observed, in view of the present controlling conditions; and it is not necessary that there should be a conspiracy to do an act that is an offense or crime by some statute of the general government, or to deprive the United States of its property or some property right. U. S. r. Raley, (1909) 173 Fed. 159.

To the same effect as the fourth paragraph of the original note, see U. S. v. Black, (1908)

160 Fed. 431, 87 C. C. A. 383.

Elements of offense. - The elements of a criminal conspiracy under this section are: (1) An object to be accomplished, which must be either the commission of an offense against the United States or to defraud the United States; (2) a plan or scheme embodying means to accomplish the object; (3) an agreement or understanding between two or more persons whereby they become definitely com-mitted to co-operate for the accomplishment of the object by the means embodied in the scheme, or by any effectual means; and (4) an overt act by one or more of the conspirators to effect the object of the conspiracy.

U. S. v. Munday, (1911) 186 Fed. 375.

Conspiracy to commit offense against the United States. — The phrase "offenses against the United States," as used in this section, has the same meaning as the words "offenses against the laws of the United States" in the original Act of March 2, 1867, 14 Stat. L. 484, ch. 169, the change being merely one of phraseology made by the re-vision commission, and such section de-nounces conspiracies to commit offenses created by any of the statutes of the United States. Thomas v. U. S., (1907) 156 Fed. 897, 84 C. C. A. 477.

This section must be construed as standing alone, and covers all conspiracies to commit an act which is made a criminal offense by the laws of the United States; and the fact that the overt act charged to have been committed may constitute a substantive offense on the part of one or more of the accused under the statute which they conspired to violate does not relieve them from liability to prosecution for the conspiracy, at least where such offense is also a misdemeanor. U. S. v. Thomas, (1906) 145 Fed. 74.

Conspiring to commit an offense against the United States - To violate Interstate Commerce Act. - A conspiracy to induce the giving or receiving of rebates in violation of the Elkins Act (Act Feb. 19, 1903, ch. 708, 32 Stat. L. 847, 10 Fed. Stat. Annot. 170) is punishable under this section, where the persons charged are not limited to the giver and receiver of the rebate alone. Thomas v. U. S., (1907) 156 Fed. 897, 84 C. C. A. 477.

Under the Elkins Act, supra, abolishing imprisonment as a punishment for offenses committed against the acts regulating interstate commerce, an indictment alleging that the agents of a shipper and the agents of a railroad company engaged in interstate com-merce stipulated to give and receive rebates on the transportation of sugar from New York to Detroit, and thereafter gave and received such rebates in pursuance of such fraudulent conspiracy, merely alleged a violation of the Interstate Commerce Act as amended by the Elkins Act, and was thereto commit an offense against the United States. U. S. v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (1906) 146 Fed. 298, affirmed (1909) 212 U. S. 481, 500, 29 S. Ct. 304, 309, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 613, 624.

The Hepburn Act (Act of June 29, 1906, ch. 3591, sec. 1, 34 Stat. L. 584, 1909 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot. 255), which makes it a criminal offense for a common carrier to issue any interstate free transportation, except to certain classes of persons, and for any person not belonging to one of such classes to use such free transportation, does not subject to punishment the officer or agent who issues such transportation, nor a person to whom it is issued, unless he uses the same; and hence an indictment will lie, under Rev. Stat., sec. 5440, for conspiracy to commit an offense under said act, against an agent of a railroad company and others, to whom by agreement he issues interstate free passes on behalf of said company, and who pursuant to such agreement sell the same for use by others not within the excepted classes. U. S. v. Clark, (1908) 164 Fed. 75.

To violate immigration law. - Assisting the importation of alien contract laborers is an "offense against the United States," within the meaning of Rev. Stat., sec. 5440, since Congress, in making it a misdemeanor, by the Act of Feb. 20, 1907, 34 Stat. L. 898, ch. 1134, sec. 4, 1909 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot. 164, to assist the immigration of such persons, has made such action a crime, indictable as such, although, by section 5 of that Act, it has provided a remedy in the nature of a civil action for the recovery of a penalty for a violation of the Act. U.S. v. Stevenson, (1909) 215 U. S. 200, 30 S. Ct. 37, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 157; U. S. v. Tsokas, (1908) 163 Fed. 129.

To violate bankruptcy law. - An indictment will lie under this section for conspiracy to conceal from the trustee of one of the defendants in bankruptcy, property belonging to his estate in bankruptcy, in violation of Bankr. Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, sec. 29b, 30 Stat. L. 554, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 605, which makes it a criminal offense for any person "while a bankrupt" to conceal property of his estate from his trustee; and such indictment is not demurrable because the date of the conspiracy and concealment is laid prior to the bankruptcy proceedings where it is charged as a part of the conspiracy that a plan was formed to bring about such proceedings pursuant to which the property was removed and concealed, purposely omitted from the bankrupt's schedules, and kept concealed from the trustee after his appointment. U. S. v. Cohn, (1906) 142 Fed. 983, affirmed (1907) 157 Fed. 651, 85 C. C. A. 113. But an indictment against a bankrupt and others, charging a conspiracy to conceal property of the bankrupt from his trustee in violation of the Bankruptcy Act does not charge an offense under Rev. Stat., sec. 5440, where it shows that the conspiracy was formed and the property removed and concealed by defendants prior to the bankruptcy, but does not aver that it was in contemplation of bankruptcy, or that any overt act was committed after the bankruptcy, although it charges a further conspiracy thereafter to continue the concealment. U. S. v. Grodson, (1908) 164 Fed. 157.

A conspiracy by bankrupts to conceal their property from their trustee formed within thirty days of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and followed by actual conceal-ment of the property, is an offense which continues to the date of the refusal to turn over the property to the trustee on his elec-tion, and an indictment for conspiracy under this section properly charges the commission of the offense as of such date. U.S. v. Stern,

(1911) 186 Fed. 854.

An indictment will not lie under this section for a conspiracy to effect the conceal-ment by a bankrupt of property from his trustee, in violation of Bankr. Act 1898, sec. 29b, ch. 541, 30 Stat. L. 554, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 605, where the trustee himself is charged as one of the conspirators, and the averments of the indictment show that there was, in fact, no concealment of property from him, and no purpose that there should be such concealment. Johnson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 158 Fed. 69.

A bankrupt corporation may commit the criminal offense of knowingly or fraudulently concealing its property from its trustee, and individuals who conspire to cause a corporation to commit such offense are indictable for the conspiracy under section 5440, and it is immaterial that the corporation is not or cannot be indicted as one of the conspirators. Cohen v. U. S., (1907) 157 Fed. 651, 85 C. C. A. 113. See also U. S. v. Young, etc., Co., (1909) 170 Fed. 110.

To violate internal revenue law. --An indictment will lie, under this section, for conspiracy to remove distilled spirits on which the tax had not been paid, in violation of Rev. Stat. sec. 3296, 3 Fed. Stat. Annot. 671, although it is charged that the purpose of the conspiracy was accomplished. Scott v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 165 Fed. 172.

To violate National Banking Act. — A conspiracy to violate Rev. Stat. sec. 5209, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 145, by causing false entries to be made in the books of a national bank by an officer or agent thereof for the purpose of defrauding the bank or others, or deceiving an agent appointed to examine the affairs of the bank, is one to commit "an offense against the United States," within the meaning of section 5440. Scott v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 130 Fed. 429.

A conspiracy to violate the "bucket shop" law (Act March 1, 1909, ch. 233, 35 Stat. L. 670) of the District of Columbia is an offense against the United States, within section 5440. U. S. v. Campbell, (1910) 179 Fed.

To suborn perjury. - A conspiracy by two or more persons to procure the commission of perjury, which embraces an unsuccessful attempt, is punishable under the criminal laws of the United States, even though it be conceded that an attempt by one person to suborn another to commit perjury may not be so punishable, since under section 5440 it is clearly criminal for two or more persons to conspire to commit any offense against the United States, provided only that one or more of the parties to the conspiracy do not act towards effecting the object of the conspiracy. Williamson v. U. S., (1908) 207 U. S. 426, 28 S. Ct. 163, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 278.

The precise persons to be suborned, or the time and place of such suborning, need not be agreed upon in the minds of the conspirators, in order to constitute the crime of conspiracy to suborn perjury. Williamson v. U. S., (1998) 207 U. S. 425, 28 S. Ct. 163, 52

U. S. (L. ed.) 278.

To obstruct the administration of justice. A conspiracy to corruptly obstruct and impede the due administration of justice in a court of the United States in a civil action between private parties, in violation of Rev. Stat. sec. 5399, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 388, is a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States within the meaning of section 5440. Wilder v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1906) 143 Fed. 433.

Misconduct in office. - Assuming that the common law as it existed in Maryland when the District of Columbia was ceded exists in the district, and that it makes misconduct in office a criminal offense, it is not an offense against the United States as a distinct sovereign in such sense that an indictment will lie under section 5440 for conspiracy to commit such offense in the district, especially against a person who is not a resident thereof. U.S. v. Haas, (1906) 167 Fed. 211.

Merger. — A conspiracy to commit an of-fense against the United States, made in itself a criminal offense by Rev. Stat. sec. 5440, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 247, is not merged in the completed offense, where the two offenses are of the same grade and the punishment is substantially the same. U. S. c. Scott, (1905) 139 Fed. 697, affirmed (C. C. A. 1908) 165 Fed. 172.

Defenses. - An agent of a railroad company, having authority to issue passes, indicted with others for a conspiracy to issue interstate free passes, to be, and which were, used in violation of the Hepburn Act (Act of June 29, 1906, ch. 3951, sec. 1, 34 Stat. L. 584, Fed. Stat. Supp. 255), cannot defend on the ground that his principal had no knowledge of the fact, and therefore committed mo offense under the Act. U.S. v. Clark, (1908) 164 Fed. 75.

It is not a defense to a prosecution for conspiracy between officers of a national bank to embezzle, abstract, or wilfully misappropriate its funds by means of excessive loans or overdrafts for their benefit, that the comptroller of the currency did not do all he might have done to compel a correction of such irregularities. U. S. v. Breese, (1909) 173

Fed. 402.
It is no defense to an indictment under section 5440, for conspiracy by defendants, who were importers, and an officer of the customs revenue service, to defraud the United States by effecting the entry of goods by payment of less than the legal duty, by means of false invoices to be approved by such officer, that if the practice prescribed by the statute had been followed the object of the alleged conspiracy could not have been accomplished, because such officer was not authorized to pass on the correctness of the invoices, where the indictment avers that he was charged with such duty by the practice prevailing at the port, and that defendants, by taking advantage of such practice, in fact accomplished the purpose of the conspiracy. In such case it is immaterial whether the practice was legal or illegal. U. S. v. Rosenthal, (1903) 126 Fed. 766.

Conspiracy to defraud - Construction -This section should be construed as declaring not only against conspiracies to commit of fenses, but also to conspiracies to defraud the United States, and to punish such conspiracies when supplemented by an overt act, though the wrong has not become effectual in its purpose. Curley r. U. S., (1904) 130 Fed. 1, 64 C. C. A. 369, affirming (1903) 122

Fed. 738.

Intent. — Instructions with respect to the intent necessary to be found to warrant a conviction of defendants on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the United States, which charged, in effect, that if defendants intended the consequences which naturally and in fact resulted from their acts, and such result was to defraud the government, they could not be acquitted because they may not have thought the government would be defrauded, were held to be correct. McGregor r. U. S., (1904) 134 Fed. 187, 69 C. C. A. 477.

Where an indictment charged that defendants conspired to defraud the United States by unlawfully and fraudulently procuring the issuance of, and converting to their own use, certain land scrip, and that to effect the objects of their conspiracy they "unlawfully, knowingly, falsely, and fraudulently" applied for and procured the appointment of a pretended administrator of the succession of a person to whom a private land claim had been confirmed, on whose application the scrip was issued, it was held not to be necessary that the government should prove that defendants had actual knowledge of the true facts in relation to the succession, or that the allegations made in their petition for the appointment of the administrator were false; but that it was sufficient if defendants had no knowledge of their truth, or reason to be-lieve them to be true, and they were in fact false, and that this was true although the indictment averred actual knowledge, such an averment being surplusage, and one which need not be proved. U. S. v. Bradford, need not be proved. (1905) 148 Fed. 413.

Elements of offense. — To constitute the offense of conspiring "to defraud the United States" under this section it is not essential that the conspiracy should have been to commit an act in violation of a criminal statute. U. S. v. Stone, (1905) 135 Fed. 392.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States by the execution of straw bail, it was not necessary that the government should prove that the accused did not appear on the day required, since the government was defrauded when the accused were released on the strength of a recognizance, apparently good, but worthless in fact. Radford v. U. S., (1904) 129 Fed. 49, 63 C. C. A. 491.

Not limited to property rights.—The term "defraud," as used in this section, should not be construed as limited to frauds respecting property rights, but includes the deprivation of any right by deception or artifice; the act being intended to secure the wholesome administration of the laws and affairs of the United States in the interests of the government. Curley v. U. S., (1904) 130 Fed. 1, 64 C. C. A. 369; McGregor v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 134 Fed. 187; U. S. v. Stone, (1905) 135 Fed. 392; U. S. v. Bradford, (1905) 148 Fed. 413, affirmed (C. C. A. 1907) 152 Fed. 616; Haas v. Henkel, (1909) 166 Fed. 621, affirmed (1910) 216 U. S. 462, 30 S. Ct. 249, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 569; U. S. v. Moore, (1909) 173 Fed. 122.

Thus an indictment is good thereunder which avers facts sufficiently showing that defendants conspired to deceive inspectors of the United States in the exercise of their official functions by fraudulently inducing them to approve life preservers which did not in fact comply with the requirements of the federal law, and that they committed overt acts pursuant to such conspiracy. U. S. v. Stone, (1905) 135 Fed. 392.

To corruptly administer the laws.—A conspiracy to defraud the United States by corruptly administering an Act of Congress, contrary to the true intent and policy thereof, constitutes an indictable offense under this section. U. S. v. Moore, (1909) 173 Fed. 122.

Furnishing advance information of government reports.—An agreement between a clerk in the department of agriculture and others pursuant to which such clerk furnished to the others advance information of the contents of a report to be afterward made public by the department regarding the condition of the cotton crop, based on which information the outsiders speculated in the market for the benefit of all parties to the agreement, does not constitute a conspiracy to defraud the United States within the meaning of section 5440. U. S. v. Haas, (1906) 167 Fed. 211. Compare U. S. v. Haas, (1908) 163 Fed. 908. Obtaining advance information of govern-

Obtaining advance information of government reports.— A conspiracy to obtain advance information of government agricultural reports and statistics before official publication does not constitute a "conspiracy to defraud" the United States. Haas v. Henkel, (1909) 166 Fed. 621, affirmed (1910) 216 U. S. 462, 30 S. Ct. 249, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 569.

To publish incorrect government reports.—A conspiracy to cause the publication of incorrect monthly agricultural reports concerning the cotton crop of the current year constituted a "conspiracy to defraud" the United States, prohibited by this section. Haas v. Henkel, (1909) 166 Fed. 621, affirmed (1910) 216 U. S. 462, 30 S. Ct. 249, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 569.

False information about national banks.—An indictment alleging the conspiracy to defraud the United States in the exercise of its governmental and fiscal functions, by deliberately giving false information regarding the financial condition of a national bank, the fraud resulting in lessening the power of the federal government by failure to maintain in efficient condition one portion of the national fiscal system, stated an offense against the United States; it being possible to have a conspiracy to defraud by merely deceiving a governmental officer, though neither the government nor the officer was deprived thereby of money or money value. U. S. v. Morse, (1908) 161 Fed. 429.

Impersonation of another on civil service examination.—In Curley v. U. S., (1904) 130 Fed. 1, 64 C. C. A. 369, it appeared that the defendant H., desiring to procure appointment as a letter carrier, a position in the classified civil service of the United States, unlawfully agreed with defendant C. that the latter should falsely impersonate H. at a civil service examination, and do all acts required by the examiners, and sign H.'s name to the examination papers to be delivered to C. for examination while he should impersonate H.; C., in pursuance of such conspiracy, gained entrance to the examination, and falsely signed H.'s name to a declaration sheet which was required to be in the handwriting and on the honor of the applicant. It was held that such facts constituted a conspiracy to defraud the United States, pro-hibited by section 5440.

To defraud individuals. - A conspiracy to defraud an individual, even though the mails be made use of for the purpose, does not fall within the terms of section 5440. What is there provided for is a conspiracy of two or more either to commit an offense against the United States or to defraud it. Clark, (1903) 121 Fed. 190.

To violate postal laws. - A scheme whereby the publishers of a newspaper attempted to procure the special rate to publishers of one cent a pound, instead of the transient rate of four cents a pound, by deceiving the post-office employees as to the circulation of the paper, was held not to constitute a conspiracy to defraud the United States where the paper was entitled under the law to the one cent a pound rate for its entire issue. U. S. v. Atlanta Journal Co., (1911) 185 Fed. 656.

Where one was tried for conspiring to use the mails to carry out a scheme to defraud, it was held to be sufficient for the government to show that written or printed matter about the scheme charged was mailed to one of the three persons named in the indictment as the persons defendant planned to defraud, and that copies of the same printed matter were sent through the mails to a mailing list throughout the United States. U. S. v. Marrin, (1908) 159 Fed. 767, affirmed (1909) 167 Fed. 951, 93 C. C. A. 351.

Where the accused and others conspired to further a scheme to defraud through the post office department, it was held that each overt act of mailing a letter pursuant to such scheme or withdrawing a letter from the post office warranted a charge of conspiracy to commit such offense, so that an indictment therefor would not shield from a subsequent indictment for another conspiracy of the same person to commit another and additional offense, though of the same kind. Francis v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 152 Fed. 155.

To violate homestead land laws. - A conspiracy to defraud the United States of the possession of public lands by means of fraudulent homestead entries is within this section, although there is no purpose to carry the preliminary entries to final entry and patent. Stearns v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 152 Fed.

In Jones v. U. S., (1908) 162 Fed. 417, 89 C. C. A. 303, it was held that to obtain land of the government open to entry under its homestead laws by means of false proof in respect to the entryman's residence or improvements thereon, or for the use or benefit or another, is not only a fraud in fact, but a fraud on the homestead law, a conspiracy to commit which constitutes a violation of section 5440.

To violate coal-land laws. - A conspiracy to obtain title to coal lands of the United States, in clear violation of the prohibition of the coal-land laws against making more than one entry, is embraced by the provision of this section making criminal conspiracies "to defraud the United States in any manner or for any purpose." U. S. v. Keitel, (1908) 211 U. S. 370, 29 S. Ct. 123, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 280.

In U. S. v. Robbins, (1907) 157 Fed. 999, it appeared that the defendant entered into a conspiracy to defraud the United States of title to and the possession of large tracts of coal land by procuring others to enter the land in separate parcels as cash purchasers; defendants furnishing the money, and the entrymen holding the land in secret trust for entrymen holding the land in secret trust for defendants. It was held that the gist of the conspiracy being the intent to give such entries a false appearance for the purpose of misleading the United States, it consti-tuted a conspiracy to defraud the United States, prohibited by this section, though de-fendants did not stand in such a position fendants did not stand in such a position to the government as to require a disclosure of the true facts.

In Pereles v. Weil, (1907) 157 Fed. 419, it was held that an indictment which charges defendants with conspiracy to defraud the United States, by obtaining for a certain corporation coal lands of the United States, in excess of the quantity which it could lawfully acquire under the coal-land purchase laws, by means of entries to be made by certain of the defendants as individuals thereby securing patents to themselves, paying for the lands with money furnished by the corporation, and thereupon conveying such lands to the corporation, and which charges as overt acts the making of applications for such entries, the acquiring of patents, and the making of such conveyances, does not state an offense under this section, where it does not aver that such defendants were employed or procured by the corporation to make applications for the entries in its behalf, that there there was any fraudulent intention in fact in making the entries, or that the patents issued thereon were void; there being nothing in the statute to prevent the corporation from lawfully acquiring by purchase any quantity of coal lands, the title to which or the preference right to purchase which had been lawfully acquired by others.

To violate school land laws. - In Hyde r. Shine, (1905) 199 U.S. 62, 25 S. Ct. 760, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 90, affirming (1904) 132 Fed. 545, it was held that a conspiracy to obtain school lands from the states of California and Oregon in the names of fictitious or disqualified persons by the use of forged affidavits, assignments, and other documents, and to relinquish them to the United States under the Act of June 4, 1897, ch. 2, sec. 1, 30 Stat. L. 36, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 314, in exchange for other public lands, cannot escape condemnation under this section forbidding conspiracies to defraud the United States, on the theory that the United States, having received the school lands in lieu of other lands patented, has not been defraudedeven assuming that the United States stands in the position of a bona fide purchaser in respect to the school lands. Compare In re

Benson, (1904) 131 Fed. 968.

To violate Timber and Stone Act. - A conspiracy to induce entrymen who have made application under the Timber and Stone Act of June 3, 1878, as amended by the Act of Aug. 4, 1892, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 300, to agree to convey after patent, is not one to defraud the United States "in any manner or for any purpose," within the meaning of section 5440, since the former statute not only does not expressly prohibit an entryman from making such an agreement, but impliedly sanctions it. U. S. v. Biggs, (1909) 211 U. S. 507, 29 S. Ct. 181, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 305; U. S. v. Sullenberger, (1909) 211 U. S. 522, 29 S. Ct. 186, 53 U. S. (L. ed.)

To constitute a violation of this section by conspiring to defraud the government of public lands subject to entry under Timber and Stone Act, it is not essential that a patent for the lands be issued and delivered; a violation of the section not depending upon the success of the conspiracy, and becoming com-plete when the final step has been taken by the conspirators in inducing fraudulent entries and the issuance of certificates of purchase. U. S. v. Black, (1908) 160 Fed. 431, 87 C. C. A. 383.

Completion of offense. - Where a conspiracy is formed to defraud the United States in any manner, in violation of this section, the offense is complete when the conspiracy is formed, and the conspirators are subject to prosecution whenever one or more of them has done any act in the furtherance of the unlawful scheme devised and agreed on; it being, therefore, sufficient that the conspiracy, when formed, was attended with corrupt motives and was for a corrupt purpose.

U. S. v. Moore, (1909) 173 Fed. 122.

Joinder of offenses. — In McGregor v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 134 Fed. 187, it was held that charges against the same defendants for conspiracy to defraud the United States, based on this section, and for receiving money from their alleged co-conspirator for aiding to procure a contract from the government, and for services rendered in relation to the same, based on sections 1781, 1782 (1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 712, 6 Fed. Stat: Annot. 606), defendants being clerks in a department, and such charges all relating to the same transaction, might properly be joined in different counts in the same indictment under Rev. Stat. sec. 1024, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 337.

Evidence — Generally. — Upon the trial of a charge of conspiracy, where the prosecution depends upon inferences to be drawn from facts to prove the conspiracy, great latitude of proof must be allowed, and the jury should have before them, and are entitled to consider, every fact which has a bearing upon and a tendency to prove the ultimate fact in issue. U. S. v. Greene, (1906) 146 Fed. 803, affirmed (C. C. A. 1907) 154 Fed. 401.

Rules of evidence. - The same rules of law and evidence govern the trial and decision of the issue whether or not a defendant jointly with others consented or agreed to the existence of a former conspiracy within the three years, and the subsequent execution of it, which control the issue whether or not the conspiracy was originally formed, where that is the crucial issue. Ware v. U. S., (1907) 154 Fed. 577, 84 C. C. A. 503.

Competency. — In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands by fraudulently acquiring state lands, and having them included within a national forest reservation, thus acquiring the right to select in exchange public lands of the United States of greater value, where one of the defendants was at the time of the transactions commissioner of the General Land Office, evidence that the reservation was established on his recommendation, that news of the fact was given out in advance of the official announcement, and that his resignation was afterward requested by his superiors because of his conduct in relation to forest reservations, was held to be competent on the trial of a codefendant. Jones v. U. S., (1910) 179 Fed. 584, 103 C. C. A. 142.

Sufficiency. - Evidence that employees of the owner of a distillery joined and participated with him in removing from such distillery to a place other than a bonded warehouse spirits on which the internal revenue tax had not been paid, in violation of Rev. Stat. sec. 3296, 3 Fed. Stat. Annot. 671, under circumstances from which they must have known the illegal nature of the transactions, was held to be sufficient to sustain an indictment, under this section, of both employer and employees, for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States. U. S. v. Scott, (1905) 139 Fed. 697, affirmed (C. C. A. 1908) 165 Fed. 172.

A charge of conspiracy for the concealment of property by a bankrupt, in violation of Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, ch. 541, sec. 29b (h., 30 Stat. L. 554, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 605, may be supported by evidence that the property was sold under a chattel mortgage given by the bankrupt prior to the bankruptcy, where it is shown that such mortgage and sale were merely colorable, and that the property, in fact, remained that of the bank-rupt. Cohen v. U. S., (1907) 157 Fed. 651, 85

C. C. A. 113.

Sufficiency. - A charge under Rev. Stat., sec. 5440, of conspiracy between officers of a national bank to embezzle, abstract, or wilfully misapply its funds in violation of section 5209, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 145, was held to be supported by evidence that, acting together with a common understanding, defendants largely overdrew their respective accounts with the bank, to such an extent that they were wholly unable to meet the same, as they must have known, and that, to cover up such overdrafts, by a common understanding they placed worthless notes in the bank with the intent and result of injuring and defrauding the bank and impairing its capital. U. S. v. Breese, (1909) 173 Fed. 402.

For other cases on sufficiency of evidence to prove conspiracy, see Lehman v. U. S., (1903) 127 Fed. 41, 61 C. C. A. 577; Jones v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 179 Fed. 584.

Circumstantial evidence. — Conspiracy to defraud the United States under this section is not necessarily established by direct evidence. Circumstantial evidence may suffice. A formal agreement need not be proved. It is sufficient to show that the parties were acting together understandingly to accomplish the same unlawful purpose, even though individual conspirators may do acts in furtherance of the common unlawful design, apart from and unknown to others. Marrash v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1909) 168 Fed. 225. See also U. S. v. Breese, (1909) 173 Fed. 402.

Of acts and declarations. — To the same

Of acts and declarations.—To the same effect as the first paragraph of the original note, U. S. v. Francis, (1906) 144 Fed. 520, modified (C. C. A. 1907) 152 Fed. 155.

Declarations made by one conspirator while the conspiracy was in progress, and relating to its object, although not in furtherance thereof, are admissible as part of the res gestæ against each conspirator. Jones v. U. S., (1910) 179 Fed. 584, 103 C. C. A. 142.

On the trial of defendants charged with having conspired with a person named and with others to the grand jurors unknown to induce a partnership to accept rebates from railroad companies on shipments in violation of the interstate commerce law, where there was evidence tending to establish the con-spiracy, and that the arrangement for the illegal rebates was made between defendants and one member of such partnership, entries in a private memorandum book kept by such partner, showing sums received as "freight commissions" and distributed between the partners individually, which transactions did not appear on the books of the firm, were held to be admissible in evidence. Thomas r. U. S., (1907) 156 Fed. 897, 84 C. C. A. 477. But an overt act committed by one of the alleged coconspirators within the three years pursuant to a conspiracy between him and the defendant, formed and followed by an overt act more than three years prior to the filing of the indictment without the defendant's consent or agreement within the three years to the continued existence and execution of the conspiracy, was held to be in-competent to establish its existence and his participation therein within the three years. Ware v. U. S., (1907) 154 Fed. 577, 84 C. C. A. 503.

On the trial of an indictment for conspiracy, the admission in evidence of declarations made by one of the alleged conspirators before proof of the conspiracy was held to be a matter of order of proof within the discretion of the court, and not prejudicial where such proof was subsequently made by evidence other than the declarations. Cohen v. U. S., (1907) 157 Fed. 651, 85 C. C. A. 113.

On a trial for criminal conspiracy, in determining whether a conspiracy was formed and whether acts were done to effect the same, it was held that the acts and conduct of a defendant not on trial might be considered in connection with those of the defendant or defendants on trial. U. S. v. Breese, (1909) 173 Fed. 402.

On the prosecution of defendant for conspiring to defraud the United States of public lands by fraudulently acquiring state lands of little or no value, procuring their inclusion in a national forest reservation, and obtaining in lieu lands of greater value from the government in exchange therefor, evidence of such fraudulent acquiring of state lands within the boundaries of the reservation subsequently established, more than three years before the finding of the indictment, and the sale of which by the state had afterward been validated by an act of the legislature, was held to be admissible as tending to prove the intent and design of the conspiracy. Jones v. U. S., (1910) 179 Fed. 584, 103 C. C. A. 142.

Subsequent acts.—In a prosecution for conspiracy to defraud the United States by suborning certain named persons to commit perjury in making entries under Timber and Stone Act June 3, 1878, ch. 151, 20 Stat. I. 89, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 300, it was held that evidence of acts of the alleged perjurers committed long after they had sworn to and filed their statements, and that subsequent to such filling they had agreed with defendant D. for a money consideration to file a relinquishment of their application at such a time as he could manage to take it up with scrip, together with a relinquishment so filed, was inadmissible to show motive. Dwinnell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 186 Fed. 754.

Prior fraudulent intent of one occonspirator. — Facts which show that one of several alleged conspirators had conceived a fraudulent intent before he entered into the conspiracy do not constitute competent evidence that his alleged coconspirators, who had no knowledge of those facts, had such an intent before or at the time the conspiracy was formed. Miller v. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 337, 66 C. C. A. 399.

Intimacy between parties charged. — Previous intimacy between persons charged with conspiracy is competent and important proof, and proof of close intimacy is especially important if the duties of the parties respectively were intended to be in opposition, and should the occasion arise might forbid such intimacy, as where the conspiracy charged was to defraud the government in respect to contracts for public work, and the alleged conspirators were respectively contractors for such work and the government engineer officer in charge of the same. U. S. v. Greene, (1906) 146 Fed. 803, affirmed (C. C. A. 1907) 154 Fed. 401.

Written admissions. — On the trial of defendants charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States of certain lands, a special agent for the land department testified that he asked one of the defendants for a statement in respect to the transaction, and in reply received a letter from him stating: "I send herewith the statement of Mr. Williams, covering, as I believe, all the points you suggested," and inclosing an affidavit of said Williams to which were attached copies of contracts of different dates between the defendants relating to the acquisition of the lands in question. It was held that it was error to permit the prosecution to detach the copy of one of the contracts from the affidavit and to introduce the same, together with the letter in evidence, as a declaration or admission of defendant, and at the same time to exclude the affidavit and copies of the other contracts which formed an integral part of the statement. Perrin v. U. S., (1909) 169 Fed. 17, 94 C. C. A. 385.

Other offenses.—On the trial of a defendant for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands, evidence that he had previously been engaged in the illegal acquisition of public lands elsewhere by a different method was admissible as bearing upon the questions of intent, purpose, and design. Williamson v. U. S., (1908) 207 U. S. 425, 28 S. Ct. 163, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 278; Jones v. U. S., (1910) 179 Fed. 584, 103 C. C. A. 142.

Where an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States of government land by fraudulent homestead entries charged defendants with conspiracy to defraud the government of lands embraced in certain homestead claims filed by certain named persons, it was held that the government was properly permitted, for the purpose of proving defendants' intent and guilty knowledge, to show that various other persons had also filed on and made final proof on various other tracts of land under the homestead laws, in pursuance of an agreement with the defendants and for their benefit. Jones v. U. S., (1908) 162 Fed. 417, 89 C. C. A. 303. See also Olson v. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 849, 67 C. C. A. 21.

Letters between coconspirators.—On the trial of a defendant, under this section, for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, a letter passing between others of the alleged conspirators was held to be competent against the defendant as tending to prove the conspiracy, in the absence of specific objection to the part of it referring to defendant. Stirlen v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 183 Fed. 302.

Motive or intent. — Evidence as to how the entrymen of timber and stone lands understood their arrangement with one of the defendants charged with a conspiracy to suborn perjury, and of their purpose in applying for the land, was held to be admissible where no formal contracts were executed between the alleged conspirators and the proposed entrymen, the alleged understandings being of an ambiguous nature, and proof of the conspiracy depending upon a variety of circumstances tending to show motive or intent. Williamson v. U. S., (1908) 207 U. S. 425, 28 S. Ct. 163, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 278.

Proof of conspiracy barred by statute of limitations. — Proof of the formation by the defendant and others, more than three years before the indictment, of such a conspiracy as that charged in the indictment and of an overt act thereunder prior to the three years, is insufficient to sustain the charge of a conspiracy within the three years. But in connection with evidence aliunde of the existence of the conspiracy and of the defendant's conscious participation in it within the three years, it is competent evidence for the consideration of the jury in determining the issue presented by the indictment. Ware v. U. S., (1907) 154 Fed. 577, 84 C. C. A. 503.

To prove criminal intent. — Where, in a prosecution against officers of a national bank and alleged aiders and abetters for misapplying the bank's funds, it was claimed that such application was made partly through overdrafts by defendant K. for the benefit of a hosiery company, and that defendant K. had conspired with certain of the officers of the bank to defraud it of its funds, evidence that many other customers of the bank had made overdrafts on it, the details of which were exhibited on certain pages of the bank's individual ledger offered in evidence, was held to be admissible as bearing on defendant's criminal intent. Prettyman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 180 Fed. 30.

Of probable cause.—On an application to remove persons to another federal district where they were charged with violating section 5440 by conspiring to defraud the United States of public lands, certified copies of general land office records showing that all the entries of public lands mentioned in the indictment were perfected and issued therefor prior to all the alleged overt acts under the alleged conspiracy, and more than three years before the indictment was filed were admissible on the question of probable cause of the charge. U. S. v. Black, (1908) 160 Fed. 431, 87 C. C. A. 383.

Unlawful use of mails.— In a trial for conspiring to use the mails in carrying out a scheme to defraud, the cashbook, checks, and entries of cash in defendant's deposit book in a trust company, made during the continuance of the scheme, were held to be properly admitted to show the conspiracy. U. S. v. Marrin, (1908) 159 Fed. 767, affirmed (C. C. A. 1909) 167 Fed. 951.

So all mail connected with the scheme, shown to have passed through the post office to any person, whether named in the indictment or not, was held to be evidence upon the question of the existence of the scheme. U.

S. v. Marrin, supra.

Burden of proof. — Where an indictment for conspiracy wilfully to misapply the funds of a national bank charged that the conspiracy had been formed between certain officers of the bank and defendant K., to wilfully misapply the funds of the bank to the use of a hosiery company, and that such conspiracy was accomplished by an act of defendant K. in drawing and accepting a draft in behalf of the hosiery company, and in depositing the draft in the bank, and obtaining credit therefor in the hosiery company's account, to effect the object of the conspiracy, it was held that the burden was on the government to prove that the conspiracy as alleged was entered into, that defendant K. was a party to it, and that the acts referred to were done by him to effect the object of the conspiracy in order to sustain a conviction. Prettyman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 180 Fed. 30.

Questions for jury.—The questions whether a conspiracy existed, as charged in an indictment, and whether an act was done by one or more of the defendants to effect the object of the conspiracy, are questions of fact for the jury. Marrash v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1909)

168 Fed. 225.

Overt acts. - While no overt act was required to constitute a conspiracy at common law, a conspiracy to defraud the United States, denounced by this section, is not effected until an overt act is committed by one or more of the conspirators. Jones v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 162 Fed. 417.

It is not enough under this section that the conspiracy be directed to the attainment of some unlawful object, or to the attainment of some lawful object by unlawful means; it must be directed to the attainment of one of the objects specified. Nor is it enough that the overt act be directed to the attainment of another object; it must be directed to the attainment of the object which brings the conspiracy within the class made criminal; and when that object is attained "the object of the conspiracy," in the sense of the statute, is effected, and there cannot be a further Lonabaugh v. U. S., (C. C. A. evert act. 1910) 179 Fed. 476.

Where the overt act alleged as a part of a conspiracy to defraud the United States took place after the conspiracy had been consummated, it was held to be ineffective as an overt act to constitute such offense.  $E \omega p$ . Black, (1906) 147 Fed. 832; U. S. v. Ehrgott,

Whether an act charged in an indictment for conspiracy as an overt act to effect the object of such conspiracy was such overt act may be determined by the court, where it is clear from the face of the indictment that it could not by any possibility have tended to effect the object of the conspiracy. U. S. v. Biggs, (1907) 157 Fed. 264, affirmed (1909) 211 U. S. 507, 29 S. Ct. 181, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 305.

In an indictment under this section for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by bringing Chinamen into the country from Mexico in violation of the statute, by means of a certain vessel, it was held that the provisioning of such vessel for the outward voyage and the sailing of such vessel from an American port to Mexico for the purpose of accomplishing the purpose of the conspiracy might be averred as overt acts. Daly v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1909) 170 Fed. 321

Where defendants conspired to obtain reservation lands by procuring false applications to purchase, it was held that defendant's act in procuring some person to make an application to purchase, and a false oath accompanying it, would constitute a sufficient overt act.

U.S. v. Raley, (1909) 173 Fed. 159.

Where a conspiracy contemplated fraudulent entries on definite tracts of public land under the Stone and Timber Act, and in order to accomplish the same the co-operation of sixteen persons to act as entrymen was re-· quired, and one of the conspirators obtained such persons, an alleged overt act charged to consist of the payment of $200 to defendant, who was one of the sixteen, in order to induce him to make a fraudulent entry and transfer of the lands to the conspirators, was an act which pertained to the conspiracy itself, and was therefore insufficient. Ex p. Black, (1906) 147 Fed. 832.

Indictment — Generally. — An indictment under this section for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands is not one charging a conspiracy to do an act not unlawful in itself, because there is no separate statute making it a crime to defraud the United States so that it is necessary to set out criminal or unlawful means to charge an offense, but the statute itself makes a conspiracy to defraud the United States a distinct crime, and no further offense need be averred or proved. Mays v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 179 Fed. 610.

An indictment for a conspiracy to defraud the United States, which charges a corrupt agreement by which an officer of the United States is, in substance, to have a secret interest in a public contract as to the fulfilling of which by the contractor that officer is to be the judge, is sufficient without averring that the interest was given him or the money paid to him to influence his official conduct upon the very contract in question, or alleging which of the various ways of defrauding the government was in the minds of the conspirators, or that they all were. Crawford v. U. S., (1909) 212 U. S. 183, 29 S. Ct. 260, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 465.

An indictment under this section for conspiracy to defraud the United States, which avers that defendant and an officer of the United States "unlawfully did conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together knowingly to defraud the said United States in the manner following, that is to say," followed by an averment that defendant promised and agreed with said officer to pay him a commission on the price of each and every one of certain articles which should be purchased by the United States by procurement of such officer, fairly imports an assent or agreement on the part of the officer, and is sufficient in such respect to charge conspiracy, although the officer's assent is not directly U. S. v. Green, (1905) 136 Fed. averred. 618.

Construction. - While a charge of conspiracy to defraud the United States, which wholly omits some essential element of the offense, cannot be aided by the statement of acts done to effect its object, this does not prevent reference to such statement for the purpose of ascertaining the sense in which terms are used in charging the conspiracy. Stearns v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 152 Fed.

Limitations. — Where an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States in violation of this section alleged the formation of the conspiracy on Sept. 1; 1901, and that on April 10, 1905, within the period of limitation, defendants, in furtherance of the conspiracy and to carry out and effect its object, performed certain overt acts specified. each being alleged to have taken place within three years prior to the indictment, the indictment sufficiently charged that the original conspiracy was continuously in existence, and was not defective as indicating that the overt acts only, and not the conspiracy, had been committed within three years, though it did not in terms allege a new or renewed conspiracy. U. S. v. Barber, (1907) 157 Fed.

Averment of date. - An indictment under this section need not aver with exact accuracy the date of the formation or beginning of the conspiracy, nor, if the date is alleged, need it be proved as laid, but it is sufficient if the conspiracy is proved to have existed prior to the commission of the overt act charged, and that it continued to exist at that time. Bradford v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 152 Fed. 617.

Intent. — An indictment charging a defendant with a conspiracy to "commit an offense against the United States" must state an agreement to do acts which, if done, would constitute a specific offense; and where an intent is an essential part of such offense, as defined by the statute, such intent must be averred. U. S. v. Green, (1905) 136 Fed. 618, affirmed 199 U. S. 601, 26 S. Ct. 748, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 328. Compare U. S. v. Stone, (1905) 135 Fed. 392.

Failure to negative exception in statute. -An indictment based on this section, charging a conspiracy to defraud the United States by causing the violation of another statute subsequently enacted, need not negative an exception found in the later statute, which, being entirely separable from the section upon which the indictment is founded, is a matter of defense. U.S. v. Stone, (1905) 135 Fed.

Defrauding persons unknown. — It is not a valid objection to an indictment which charges the accused with conspiring to devise a scheme to defraud persons unknown to the grand jury, that it shows on its face that the defendants were also guilty of the offense — with which they are not charged in the indictment—of conspiring to defraud persons known to the grand jury. Miller v. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 337, 66 C. C. A. 399.

Overt act. - An overt act must be alleged in an indictment for conspiracy as an essential element of that offense. Ew p. Black, (1906) 147 Fed. 832. Compare U. S. v. Burkett, (1907) 150 Fed. 208.

An indictment, under this section, against two defendants, charging them with a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by making certain false entries in the books of a national bank, of which one of the defendants was an officer, in violation of Rev. Stat. sec. 5209, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 145, was not bad because, in stating the details of the overt act committed by defendants, it was averred that the entries which were made in the books of the bank were made by the hand of the defendant who was not an officer thereof; it being averred that both defendants were present and participated in the carrying out of the plan formed between them to make such entries. Scott v. U. S., (1904) 130 Fed. 429, 64 C. C. A. 631.

An indictment under this section, which charges that defendants knowingly, unlawfully, wickedly, and corruptly conspired to defraud the United States out of its title to certain public lands by means of false, fraudulent, and fictitious entries of the same under the land laws, and that in pursuance of, and to effect the object of, such conspiracy, certain acts set forth were com-mitted by one or more of the defendants, was held not insufficient because it did not expressly aver that such acts were done with knowledge of the fraudulent and illegal char-acter of the entries. The essence of the offense is the conspiracy, and while an overt act is an essential element under the statute, the use of the word "knowingly" in charging the conspiracy must fairly be held to apply to and characterize the acts specifically charged to have been done in furtherance of such conspiracy, and for the purpose of carrying it into effect. U. S. v. Mitchell, (1905) 141 Fed. 666.

While the conspiracy denounced by this section is not punishable until the commission of some overt act in pursuance thereof, the offense consists of the conspiracy alone, so that the validity of an indictment under such section must be tested by averments concerning the conspiracy unaided by those in respect to the overt acts committed thereunder. Dwinnell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 186 Fed. 754.

Objections to indictment - how taken. -The objection that an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States of certain public lands does not make it altogether clear to what lands the conspiracy related cannot be taken by a motion in arrest of judgment. Stearns v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 152 Fed. 900.

Joinder of causes. — Under R. S. sec. 1024, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 337, counts for using the mails to defraud, in violation of section 5480, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 973, and for conspiracy to commit such offense, under section 5440, where based upon the same transaction, may be joined in one indictment. U. S. v. Clark,

(1903) 125 Fed. 92.

Motive. — Where it is alleged that certain persons confederated to do a lawful act by criminal means, the indictment must charge that the means employed were attended by a corrupt motive. U.S. v. Moore, (1909) 173 Fed. 122.

An indictment for conspiracy, alleging that defendants conspired to procure the maladministration of an Act of Congress appropriating money for the survey of public lands in a specified order, by procuring the use of such funds for the survey of lands which were nonagricultural and the subject of fictitious entries, sufficiently charged the conspirators' corrupt purpose, and was therefore not objectionable for failure to allege that defendants had guilty knowledge of the falsity of the entries. U. S. v. Moore, (1909) 173 Fed. 122.

Certainty. - An indictment under this section making it an offense to conspire either to commit any offense against the United States or to defraud the United States, must charge the act constituting the offense with reasonable certainty, and not by mere inference. U. S. v. Atlanta Journal Co., (1911) 185 Fed. 656.

An indictment charging that the defendants conspired together to defraud the government of the title to a portion of the public domain, to wit, etc., and in pursuance of the conspiracy performed the overt acts of obtaining and using before the register and receiver of the local land office false and bogus affidavits represented by defendants to be genuine in making proof of a timber culture entry theretofore regularly made on the land by H., since deceased, under an agreement with his widow that they were to succeed by conveyance from her to all the rights of the government secured by virtue of a patent issued by the government based on such proofs, was not defective for uncertainty. U. S. v. Burkett, (1907) 150 Fed. 208.

Particularity. — In an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States, it is sufficient that the means be set out with such particularity as will put defendant on notice of what he is to meet at the trial. U. S. v.

Raley, (1909) 173 Fed. 159.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by a false invoice is not vitiated by the particularity with which the overt act is set forth, if the conspiracy of itself be sufficient. U. S. v. Stamatopoulos, (1908) 164 Fed. 524.

Where an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States alleged that defendant conspired to obtain Umatilla reservation lands by procuring persons to make false affidavits for the purchase of the lands on defendant's account, and by procuring persons to make contracts prior to such purchase whereby the title was to inure to defendant's benefit, and by procuring them to make false proofs of residence and cultivation of the lands, all of which acts were forbidden and unlawful, it sufficiently charged the means by which the conspiracy was to be effectuated. U. S. v. Raley, (1909) 173 Fed. 159.

Where an indictment charged a conspiracy to induce a shipper to receive rebates from railroad companies in violation of the federal statute, it was not essential to aver the names of such railroad companies which were not known to the grand jury. Thomas v. U. S., (1907) 156 Fed. 897, 84 C. C. A. 477.

In an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by making a false oath or affidavit in connection with the purchase of reservation lands, it was held not to be necessary to set out the details of the administration of the oath, by whom administered, or that the person officiating was an officer duly qualified to do so. U.S. v. Raley, (1909) 173 Fed. 159.

Variance. — Where an indictment charged a conspiracy to defraud the United States of moneys thereafter to become due from a certain mercantile firm as customs duties, prothat the merchandise in question was consigned to a firm of custom brokers, who paid the duties thereon, was not a variance; the goods being owned by the mercantile firm, and so consigned only for convenience of entry. Grunberg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1906) 145 Fed. 81.

Under an indictment against a number of defendants for conspiracy to defraud the government out of certain public lands, charged to have been illegally entered for the benefit of the defendants, it is not a fatal variance that the proof shows that some of them only shared in the benefit; the offense being complete if the conspiracy is established and an overt act committed in pursuance thereof. Olson v. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 849, 67 C. C. A. 21.

While in an indictment under this section for a conspiracy to make use of the mails pursuant to a scheme to defraud, a fraudulent purpose must be averred and proved, and where a purpose to defraud two jointly is charged it must be proved as laid, yet where the sending of individual letters to parties named is charged in the indictment in different counts, an averment in general terms of an intent to defraud these parties does not necessarily import that the conspiracy contemplated a joint defrauding of the whole number named; the parties not being in business together or jointly interested in the property which it was the aim of the conspiracy to secure. Marrin v. U. S., (1909) 167 Fed. 951, 93 C. C. A. 351.

There was not a fatal variance between indictment and proof in a prosecution for conspiracy under this section, because the indictment charged that the defendants conspired with each other and with others to the grand jurors unknown, while the evidence showed that the name of another conspirator was in fact known, where the indictment fully sets out his connection with the conspiracy, and designated him by name, so as to clearly advise the defendants of the charge against them. Jones v. U. S., (1910) 179 Fed. 584, 103 C. C. A. 142.

Curing defect. — Where an indictment for Curing defect.—Where an indictment for conspiracy to knowingly and wilfully obstruct the passage of the mails, in violation of this section and section 3995, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 911, was defective for failure to charge that defendants conspired to "knowingly and wilfully" obstruct the mails, the defect was not cured by the allegation that they did "knowingly, unlawfully, and feloniously combine, conspire," etc., to obstruct the mails, or that the part of the indictment charging the overt act alleged that such act was "knowingly and wilfully" committed. Conrad v. U. S., (1904) 127 Fed. 798, 62 C. C. A. 478.

Specific means agreed upon. — To the same effect as the first part of the original note. Perrin v. U. S., (1909) 169 Fed. 17, 94 C. C. A. 385. See Stearns v. U. S., (C. C. A.

1907) 152 Fed. 900.

To violate customs laws.—An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by means of a false invoice, is sufficient which sets forth such a conspiracy, notwithstanding that it does not set forth the consummation of the fraud nor include an allegation that the fraud could have been accomplished, if not detected. U. S. v. Stamatopoulos, (1908) 164 Fed. 524.

To violate postal laws. — Under Act Cong. March 3, 1879, ch. 180, secs. 10, 11, 14, 20 Stat. L. 359, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 829. defining second-class mail matter, and fixing the rate of postage on publications of the second class, when sent from the office of publication, including sample copies, or when sent from a news agency to actual subscribers thereto, at two cents per pound or fraction thereof, provided that nothing in the statute shall be construed so as to admit to the second-class rate regular publications designed primarily for advertising purposes, for free circulation, or for circulation at nominal rates. Act Cong. March 3, 1885, ch. 342, 23 Stat. L. 387, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 854, changing the rate to one cent per pound, and Act Cong. June 9, 1884, ch. 73, 23 Stat. L. 40, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 856, fixing the rate on periodicals of the second class when sent by others than the publishers or news agents at one cent for each four ounces or fractional part thereof, an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by securing for papers sent out in addition to the regular circulation the one cent a pound instead of the one cent for four ounces rate is insufficient, where it does not allege that the papers were designed primarily for advertising pur-poses or for free circulation or for circula-tion at nominal rates. U. S. v. Atlanta Journal Co., (1911) 185 Fed. 656.

An indictment under this section for conspiracy to commit an offense under R. S. sec. 5480, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 973, by devising a scheme to defraud intended to be carried out by the use of the mails, must charge a conspiracy to commit acts which, if committed, would constitute an offense under the latter section; but it need not charge separately that defendants specifically conspired to commit each element of the offense. Mc-Conkey v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1909) 171 Fed.

An indictment which charges the accused with conspiring to devise a scheme to de-fraud persons unknown to the grand jury is not vulnerable because the names of these persons are not stated in the indictment, if it contains a true averment that these persons are not known to the grand jury. Miller v. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 337, 66 C. C. A. 399.

Facts which clearly show a conspiracy to devise a scheme or artifice to defraud, an intention to defraud, an intention to use the post-office establishment as a part of the scheme for the purpose of executing it, the use of that establishment for that purpose, and the scheme or artifice itself, are essential to a valid indictment under this section 5440, to commit the offense described by section 5480, R. S., 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 973, and ust be alleged in the pleading. Miller v. U. S., (1904) 133 Fed. 337, 66 C. C. A. 399.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud by the use of the mails, in violation of R. S.

sec. 5480, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 973, as amended, was not bad for repugnancy because it charged in the same count that defendant conspired to defraud "by dealing and pretending to deal" in what is commonly called "green articles" and "spurious treasury notes." Lehman v. U. S., (1903) 127 Fed. 41, 61 C. C. A. 577.

To obstruct the mail. — In Conrad v. U. S.,

(C. C. A. 1904) 127 Fed. 798, it appeared that section 3995, R. S., 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 911, declares that, if any person shall "knowingly and wilfully" obstruct or retard the passage of the mails, he shall for every such offense be punished, etc. It was held that an indictment for conspiracy to commit the offense described in section 3995, which failed to allege that defendants conspired to "knowingly and wilfully" obstruct or retard the passage of the mails, in the manner set out, was fatally defective.

To violate public land laws. - Averments in an indictment for conspiracy that defendants conspired to fraudulently obtain the issuance by the United States of land scrip in satisfaction of a confirmed private land claim, which scrip when issued could be located on public lands of the United States, and that such conspiracy was carried out by fraudulently procuring the appointment of an administrator of the succession of the true claimant, on whose application the scrip was issued, and by whom it was sold, and the proceeds converted by defendants to their own use, were held to be sufficient to sustain the charge that the conspiracy was one to de-fraud the United States. U. S. v. Bradford, (1905) 148 Fed. 413, affirmed (C. C. A.

1907) 152 Fed. 616.

In U. S. t. Brace, (1907) 149 Fed. 874, it was held that an indictment alleging that defendants during all the times between May 25, 1902, and the commission of the last overt act therein set forth continued to conspire together to defraud the United States of the title to its public lands in the manner and by the means agreed on between them on May 25, 1902, was not equivalent to a charge that defendants subsequent to that date entered into a new conspiracy to accomplish their unlawful design, but was merely an allegation that the conspiracy formed on that day was never abandoned, but was in continuous operation thereafter until the date of the last overt act charged. Where the facts alleged in an indictment for conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by subornation of perjury in proceedings to acquire public lands, neces-sarily import wilfulness on the part of the persons giving such testimony, the failure of the indictment to use the word itself is not fatal. Van Gesner v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 153 Fed. 46.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States of public lands by fraudu-lently obtaining the title to worthless state lands, securing the establishment of a forest reserve including such lands and then exchanging the same for public lands of the United States under the law authorizing such exchange, is not bad because it does not describe the state lands to be so acquired, further than to state the counties in which they are situated, where they had not been obtained and no further description was possible. Mays v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 179 Fed. 610. See also U. S. v. Raley, (1909) 173 Fed. 159.

To violate homestead land lane. - An indictment charged that the defendants, with others, conspired to obtain from the government certain specified tracts of land open to homestead entry by procuring certain named persons to enter the same by means of false proof in respect to their residence on and improvement of the land, and with respect to the intent with which and the purpose for which the entries were made, and in pursuance of such conspiracy and to effect the object thereof defendants caused and procured C. to make the homestead proof in respect to the land entered by him and the final affidavit required by homestead claimants, including a statement that his family consisted of himself and wife, and that they had resided continuously on the land since first establishing residence thereon, which proof was subscribed by C. and certified by defendant W., and that each of the defendants knew that the proof was false, etc. It was held that the indictment was sufficient. Jones v. U. S., (1908) 162 Fed. 417, 89 C. C. A. 303.

An indictment under this section which charges a conspiracy to defraud the United States of certain of its lands by means of false, forged, and fraudulent entries thereof under the homestead law, and avers that such lands were "in the district of lands subject to entry under the homestead laws of the United States" at a certain land office, and also in stating the acts done pursuant to such conspiracy charges the filing of applications for homestead entry of certain described "public lands of the United States subject to homestead entry," is not fatally defective because in charging the conspiracy it does not expressly aver that the lands of which it was the purpose to defraud the United States were public lands subject to homestead entry. Stearns v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 152 Fed. 900.

In an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States by means of a false and fraudulent entry of public lands under the homestead law, the word "entry" may proposely be used and construed as applying to any or all of the steps necessary to acquire title under such law. Bradford v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 152 Fed. 617.

To violate school land law.—An indictment under this section, charging a conspiracy to defraud the United States by fraudulently obtaining title to and possession of certain described lands, then public lands of the United States, is not insufficient because it further charges that the purpose of the conspiracy was to be accomplished through the state by securing the selection of the lands by the state in lieu of school lands included in a government forest reservation and their fraudulent transfer from the state to defendants, nor because the state was entitled to select such lands under the law. Perrin v. U. S., (1909) 169 Fed. 17, 94 C. C. A. 385.

To violate coal land laws.— An indictment under this section for conspiracy to defraud the United States charges an offense where it avers the purpose of the conspiracy to be to acquire coal lands of the United States by means of false, fictitious, and fraudulent entries and applications, and to induce and hire others to make like entries, at the cost and for the benefit of defendants to whom such entrymen were to convey the lands so entered, and where it fully sets out such means and overt acts committed for the purpose of effecting the object of such conspiracy. Arnold v. Weil, (1907) 157 Fed. 429. See also Pereles v. Weil, (1907) 157 Fed. 419.

Pereles v. Weil, (1907) 157 Fed. 419.

An indictment averring that defendants conspired to defraud the United States of coal lands in Alaska by inducing persons to locate and acquire title to claims thereon under the statute, to be later transferred to a corporation, so as to enable it to thereby acquire a greater quantity of coal land than allowed by law, and that defendants, pursuant to such conspiracy, aided such claimants in making proof and payment for their lands was held to be insufficient to charge the crime of conspiracy to defraud the United States under this section where it did not show that the claimants were dummies, but averred that they were qualified to make the entries and did not charge that they did not fully comply with the law to entitle them to make proof and obtain patents. U. S. v. Munday. (1911) 186 Fed. 375.

But an indictment charging a conspiracy by defendants to defraud the United States by obtaining title to upwards of 5,000 ares of coal lands in Alaska of the value of $2,000,000 by means of thirty-nine false, fraudulent, and fictitious entries made by as many different persons, ostensibly for their own benefit, but in fact for the benefit of the defendants, whereby the defendants would be enabled to receive and enjoy the benefit of a greater number of coal entries and locations and a greater quantity of coal lands than was permissible under the law, was held to charge a crime. U. S. v. Doughten, (1911) 186 Fed. 226.

To violate Timber and Stone Act. — In Dwinnell v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 186 Fed. 754, it appeared that an indictment charged that defendants wilfully, etc., conspired at a particular time and place within the district to suborn certain named persons at a stated time, before one alleged to be the duly appointed, qualified, and acting register of the land office at R., by applying pursuant to Timber and Stone Act, June 3, 1878, ch. 151, 20 Stat. L. 89, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 300, for certain of the public lands of the United States by swearing to and filing with such land officer a statement required by the Act and regulations of the land department alleging that the applicant did not apply to purchase for speculation but in good faith and to appropriate to his own exclusive use and benefit, etc.; whereas in truth the statement was wilfully false and intended to be so by each of them, in that it was intended that each should have a distinct agreement with the defendants that the land should be for defendants' benefit. was held that the indictment was not fatally defective for failure to show that the precise piece or pieces of land to be acquired had been agreed on by the alleged conspirators at the time the conspiracy was formed or for failure to allege the persons to be suborned or the particular time and place of such subornation, but that the indictment suffciently stated the offense of conspiracy to defraud the United States denounced by R. S.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States, which charged that defendants secretly inserted a piece of iron weighing half a pound in the centre of each of a large number of cork blocks made by them, intending that such blocks should be used in making life preservers for the equipment of steamers navigating the ocean and lakes, bays, and sounds of the United States, was held to sufficiently show that life preservers so made would not fulfil the law and regulations of the United States, which require that every such life preserver shall be made of good, sound cork blocks, and shall contain at least six pounds of good cork, which shall have a buoyancy of at least four pounds to each pound of cork. U. S. v. Stone, (1905) 135 Fed. 392.

To suborn perjury. — The object of the conspiracy is sufficiently charged in an indictment for conspiracy to suborn perjury, where its allegations plainly import that the unlawful agreement contemplates a future solicitation of unnamed individuals to enter public lands under the Timber and Stone Act, who in so doing will necessarily knowingly state and subscribe under oath, before a named person, stated to be a United States commissioner of the district of Oregon, material false statements as to their purpose in respect to entering the land, known to be such by the conspirators. Williamson v. U. S., (1908) 207 U. S. 425, 28 S. Ct. 163, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 278.

To obstruct the administration of justice.—An indictment under this section for conspiring to commit an offense against the United States by obstructing the due administration of justice in a court of the United States, in violation of R. S. sec. 5399, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 388, was held to be good. Wilder v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1906) 143 Fed.

To corruptly administer the laws. — An indictment charging that defendants did conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together to defraud the United States, by corruptly and for their own gains administering and procuring the administration of an Act of Congress, appropriating money to survey public lands, in a manner contrary to the true intent and purpose thereof, and wasteful of the money so appropriated and apportioned, prejudicial to the welfare and interest of the United States and the public service thereof, did not charge a conspiracy to defraud the government of its money or property, but charged a conspiracy to defraud the United States by corruptly administering an Act of Congress. U. S. v. Moore, (1909) 173 Fed. 122.

Number of prosecutions.—There can be

Number of prosecutions.—There can be but one prosecution for conspiracy in violation of this section, regardless of the number of overt acts committed in pursuance thereof. U. S. v. Brace, (1907) 149 Fed. 875.

Plea of guilty by one conspirator in presence of jury. — The taking of a plea of guilty from one of a number of defendants jointly indicted for conspiracy, in open court, and in the presence of the jury panel, is a matter within the discretion of the trial court, and does not constitute error for which a judgment of conviction against the other defendants will be reversed. Grunberg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1906) 145 Fed. 81.

Punishment. — When statutes prescribe particular modes of punishment, a court cannot inflict another, and hence under this section authorizing imprisonment for conspiracy to commit a federal offense, imprisonment "at hard labor" is unauthorized. Ex p. Harlan, (1909) 180 Fed. 119, affirmed (1910) 218 U. S. 442, 31 S. Ct. 44, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1101.

A defendant may be prosecuted under this section for a conspiracy to violate a criminal or penal statute of the United States, notwithstanding the fact that the punishment prescribed for the offense created by such statute is less than that prescribed for conspiracy; the conspiracy in itself being a distinct and substantive offense. U. S. v. Stevenson, (1909) 215 U. S. 200, 30 S. Ct. 37, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 157; Thomas v. U. S., (1907) 156 Fed. 897, 84 C. C. A. 477.

In Ex p. Peeke, (1906) 144 Fed. 1016, affirmed (C. C. A. 1907) 153 Fed. 166, it appeared that the petitioner was found guilty on five counts of an indictment under this section, each charging a separate conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States, and was given a single sentence of confinement in a penitentiary for a term of five years. It was held that the judgment must be construed as a single sentence for five years, and not as one for cumulative sentences on the five counts, no one exceeding two years, and that as so construed it was void as to the excess above two years.

COPYRIGHT.

Vol. II, p. 256, sec. 4952.

Construction of statute. - The Copyright Act should be liberally construed, with a view to protect the just rights of authors and to encourage literature and art. Werckmeister v. American Lith. Co., (1905) 142 Fed. 827; Ford v. Charles E. Blaney Amusement Co., (1906) 148 Fed. 642.

Common law and statutory copyright. -The common law gives the author of a painting the exclusive right to reproduce the same so long as he does not make publication, but on publication such right is lost, and he can only acquire the right to further protection by a statutory copyright. Caliga v. Inter Ocean Newspaper Co., (C. C. A. 1907) 157
Fed. 186, aftirmed in (1909) 215 U. S. 182, 30 S. Ct. 38, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 150.

Effect on common-law rights. - Where one takes the benefit of the copyright law to protect his rights in literary property, he cannot rely upon his common-law right. Savage v.

Hoffmann, (1908) 159 Fed. 584.

Restrictions on sales by purchasers. — The sole right to vend a copyrighted book, secured by this section to the owner of the copyright, does not include the right to impose, by a notice printed on the same page with the notice of copyright, a limitation as to the notice of copyright, a minitation as to the price at which the book shall be sold at retail by future purchasers with whom there is no privity of contract. Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, (1908) 210 U. S. 339, 28 S. Ct. 722, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 1086, affirming (1906) 147 Fed. 15, 77 C. C. A. 607; Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Snellenburg, (1904) 131 Fed. 530; Mines v. Scribner, (1906) 147 Fed. 927.

Double copyrighting. - Only a single valid copyright can be obtained upon the same subject-matter; therefore an artist by depositing the name and description of a painting in the prescribed office does not acquire a copyright thereon, where he has previously deposited a photograph of the same painting under a different name and description for the purpose of obtaining a copyright, unless it is shown by proof that such prior deposit was inoperative. Caliga v. Inter Ocean Newspaper Co., (C. C. A. 1907) 157 Fed. 186, affirmed in (1909) 215 U. S. 182, 30 S. Ct. 38, 544 U. S. (L. ed.) 180.

54 U. S. (L. ed.) 150.

Subsequent editions of book - addition of new matter. — Under the copyright statutes as they stood prior to Act March 4, 1909, ch, 320, 35 Stat. L. 1075, 1909 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot. 81, as well as by the express provision of section 6 of such Act, the addition of new matter to a copyrighted book in a second or subsequent edition makes it a "new book," subject to copyright as an original work. West Pub. Co. v. Edward Thompson Co., (C. C. A. 1910) 176 Fed. 833, modifying (1909) 169 Fed. 833.

The copyrighting of the volumes of a particular edition of an author's works, which had been previously published some with and some without copyright, protects only what is original in the new edition, and does not enlarge the rights of the owner of the copyright as to any matter previously published. Kipling r. Putnam, (C. C. A. 1903) 120 Fed. 631.

Aggregation of prior publications. — The mere aggregation of weekly law reporters, which have been singly copyrighted, into volumes, does not constitute a new work requiring a new copyright. West Pub. Co. v. Edward Thompson Co., (C. C. A. 1910) 176 Fed. 833, modifying (1909) 169 Fed. 833.

Compilation and rearrangement of copyrighted matter. - The compilation and rearrangement and reclassification of syllabi in digests into new and larger digests constitute new works entitled to copyright, which need only notice of their own entry for copyright. West Pub. Co. v. Edward Thompson Co., (C. C. A. 1910) 176 Fed. 833, modifying (1909) 169 Fed. 833.

Right of dramatization. - Under this section providing that "authors or their assigns shall have the exclusive right to dramatize and translate any of their works for which copyright shall have been obtained under the laws of the United States," it is not necessary that an author should himself have taken out a copyright of his book in order to preserve the right of dramatizing it, but it is sufficient if a copyright has been secured by any one having the right to obtain it, and the author may reserve the right of dramatization while selling the right to publish the book to another, who, as proprietor, may copyright it in his own name. Ford v. Charles E. Blaney Amusement Co., (1906) 148 Fed. 642.

There may be several dramatizations of the same story, each capable of being copyrighted. Harper v. Kalem Co., (C. C. A. 1909) 169 Fed. 61, affirmed (1911) 222 U. S. 55, 32 S.

Ct. 20.

Who may copyright — Assigns.— An artist may, before publication of his painting, assign, independently of the ownership of the painting itself, the right or privilege of taking out the copyright. American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, (1907) 207 U. S. 284. 28 S. Ct. 72, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 208, affirming (1906) 146 Fed. 375, 76 C. C. A. 647.

Transfer of right.—In American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, (1907) 207 U. S. 284, 28 S. Ct. 72, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 208, affirming (1906) 146 Fed. 375, 76 C. C. A. 647, it was held that a complete transfer of the property right of copyright existing in an original painting, and not a mere license or personal privilege, must be deemed intended by an instrument executed by the artist, reciting that for a named consideration he transfers the copyright in his painting, where there is no evidence of any intention on his part to retain any further interest in this copyright, and he offers the painting for sale with the copyright reserved.

A sale by the author of a story to a magazine publishing company and delivery of the manuscript, and the acceptance of a sum of money "in full payment for story," without any further agreement, is in legal effect an absolute sale without reservation, carrying with it as an incident of ownership the exclusive right to dramatize the story when copyrighted under this section, which provides that "authors or their assigns shall have the exclusive right to dramatize and translate any of their works for which copyright shall have been obtained under the laws of the United States." Dam v. Kirk La Shelle Co., (C. C. A. 1910) 175 Fed. 902, affirming (1908) 166 Fed. 589.

In whose name copyright may be taken out. — See Harper v. Donohue, (1905) 144

Fed. 491.

What may be copyrighted .- A colored photograph or picture of natural scenery may be the subject of a copyright. Cleland v. Thayer, (C. C. A. 1903) 121 Fed. 71.

Moving picture film. — A series of separate pictures printed on a positive film from a number of negatives taken by a camera, and designed for use in a moving picture machine, and which taken together tell a connected story, constitute a photograph within the meaning of this section and may be the subject of a copyright, although in taking the negatives the camera was placed in different locations. American Mutoscope, etc., Co. v. Edison Mfg. Co., (1905) 137 Fed. 262; Harper v. Kalem Co., (C. C. A. 1909) 169 169 Fed. 61, affirmed (1911) 222 U. S. 55,

Photographs of soulpture. — A photograph of a copyrighted piece of sculpture is a "copy" thereof, within the meaning of this section, and, if made without authority from the proprietor of the copyright, is an infringement thereof. Bracken v. Rosenthal, (1907)

151 Fed. 136.

Cartoons. - Where certain cartoons were copyrighted, and later formed the basis of a farce comedy, the court refused to hold on demurrer that there was no dramatic right in such cartoons which could be made the subject of copyright. Empire City Amusement

Co. v. Wilton, (1903) 134 Fed. 133.

Painting.— In De Jonge v. Breaker, etc.,
Co., (1910) 182 Fed. 150, it appeared that the plaintiff was the owner of a small painting in water colors, described as "Holly, Mistletoe, and Spruce." It consisted of a representation of small branches or sprigs of the flowers of holly, mistletoe, and spruce arranged in the form of an open cluster, having substantially the outline of a square. The painting was artistic in thought and execution; the intention being to multiply the design for fancy paper to cover boxes and other articles for the holiday season. It was held that a reproduction would not be a "label," and though it might be a "print," and be properly regarded as designed to be used for an article of manufacture, it could with equal propriety be described as a pictorial illustration or work connected with the fine arts, and was, therefore, subject either to be copyrighted or to be patented, at the owner's election, under Rev. Stat., sec. 4929, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 600; but that the owner could not have both copyright and patent.

Pictorial illustrations are none the less within the protection of the copyright law because they are drawn from real life. Bleistein v. Donaldson Lithographing Co., (1903) 188 U. S. 239, 23 S. Ct. 298, 47 U. S. (L.

Chromolithographic advertisements of a circus, portraying a ballet, a number of per's sons performing on bicycles, and groups of men and women whitened to represent statues, were held to be proper subjects of copyright. under this section. Bleistein v. Donaldson Lithographing Co., (1903) 188 U. S. 239, 23 S. Ct. 298, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 460. What cannot be copyrighted — Title of book. — The copyright of a book does not prevent others from taking the same title for another book, though the copyright has not expired. Glaser v. St. Elmo Co., (1909) 175

Fed. 276.

Monogram. — In Royal Sales Co. v. Gaynor, (1908) 164 Fed. 207, it appeared that the defendant copyrighted a book describing a monogram used on a campaign badge, which was sold pinned to the book, and assigned the copyright, which was subsequently acquired by complainant. It was held that the copyright did not cover the monogram, which was not a subject of copyright.

Spectacular stage performance. — A stage performance consisting of the singing of wellknown songs by a woman dressed to personate other singers, prefaced by a short and commonplace dialogue having no reference to such performance, and with a kinetoscope exhibition during the intervals when the performer is changing costume, in which she is shown making such changes by means of moving pictures previously taken photographically on a film, is not a subject of copyright, the dialogue not being a dramatic composition, within the meaning of the statute, and neither the dialogue, performance, nor exhibition being such as to "promote the progress of science" or "useful arts," within the meaning of the constitutional provision conferring upon Congress power to enact copyright laws and by which such power is limited. Barnes v. Miner, (1903) 122 Fed.

Telegraphic ticker quotations. — The matter gathered and transmitted by a telegraph company, and printed on a tape by tickers in the office of its customers, consisting merely of a notation of current events, such as market quotations or the result of a race or game, and having only a transient value, due solely to its quick transmission and distribution, is not copyrightable as literary property, under the Constitution and statutes of the United States, but is essentially a commercial product. National Tel. News Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 119 Fed. 294.

Vol. II, p. 256, sec. 4952.

Plan of organizing an association. copyright of a pamphlet containing articles of association and by-laws of a mutual burial association was held not to protect the system, considered merely as a system, so as to confer on the person owning the copyright or his transferees the exclusive right to organize associations under the plan described. v. Johnson, (C. C. A. 1906) 146 Fed. 209. Extent of righta acquired by copyright of magazine. - The filing of the title of a magazine for copyright by the publisher and the insertion of the proper notice is sufficient to secure a copyright of a story published therein and protect the right to dramatize the same where the publisher is the owner of both the story and the dramatic rights. Dam c. Kirk La Shelle Co., (C. C. A. 1910) 175 Fed.

902, affirming (1908) 166 Fed. 589. Suit by assignee. — An assignee of the "exclusive right to dramatize" is a mere licensee and so cannot sue in his own name. Black v. Henry G. Allen Co., (1890) 42 Fed. 618, 621; Empire City Amusement Co. v. Wilton,

(1903) 134 Fed. 132.

Vol. II, p. 260, sec. 4953.

On the expiration of the copyright of a novel, any person may use the plot for a play, copy or publish it, or make any other use of it he sees fit. Glaser v. St. Elmo Co., (1909) 175 Fed. 276.

Abandonment. - In a suit for infringement of a copyright it appeared that the author had type set up, plates taken therefrom, and sheets to the amount of 2,000 impressions struck off, and some of these were bound, distributed, and sold. A judgment was rendered against him, execution issued, and the plates were levied on and sold to a third person. It was held that the author, as against a purchaser of the plates from the third person, had not abandoned his copyright of the book. Patterson v. J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., (1902) 119 Fed. 451.

Vol. II. p. 261. sec. 4955.

Grant of dramatic rights. - In Saake v. Lederer, (C. C. A. 1909) 174 Fed. 135, it was held that a contract by which a foreign author of a dramatic composition granted the stage rights in the United States to another, and agreed to copyright the play in this country, did not convey the author's right of copyright, and that an attempted copyright by the grantee in his own name was invalid and would not support an action by him for infringement.

Sale of different dramatizations. - The owner of a copyrighted story, having assigned or sold the right of performing a particular copyrighted drama therefrom, can lawfully give to another the sole right of performing a different dramatic composition of the story, without the first dramatic assignee having the right to make another dramatization. Harper v. Kalem Co., (C. C. A. 1909) 169 Fed. 61, affirmed (1911) 222 U.S. 55, 32 S. Ct. 20.

Vol. II, p. 261, sec. 4956.

Compliance with statute. — The law of copyright in the United States is entirely statutory, and all the conditions prescribed are essential and must be observed to give a valid copyright. Freeman v. Trade Register, (1909) 173 Fed. 419; Saake v. Lederer, (C. C. A. 1909) 174 Fed. 135.

Magazine article. — The proprietor of magazine, who is also the owner of an article published in it, secures a valid copyright of such article by duly copyrighting the number of the magazine in which it is printed. Ford v. Charles E. Blaney Amusement Co., (1906)

148 Fed. 642. Entry in author's name of prior publica-tion in copyrighted magazine. — Any copyright protection for a work secured by entering for copyright in the name of the publishers the issues of a magazine which contain instalments thereof, is lost by the subsequent publication of the work in book form with no other notice of copyright than that of an entry in the author's name. Mifflin v. R. H. White Co., (1903) 190 U. S. 260, 23 S. Ct. 769, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1040.

Dramatic compositions. - Dramatic compositions, being twice enumerated in the body of this section separately from books, and not being specified in the proviso, are not included therein, and such composition, although printed in book form, need not be printed from type set or plates made in the United States to be entitled to copyright. Hervieu v. J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., (1909) 169 Fed. 978.

Depositing title. — In Freeman v. Trade Register, (1909) 173 Fed. 419, it was held that the fact that the January number of a monthly periodical called the "Pacific Fisherman," which contained a review of the fishing industry for the preceding year, bore on the cover the words "Pacific Fisherman Annual." did not necessarily make such words the title of the publication within the meaning of the copyright law, and the depositing instead of the regular title of "Pacific Fisherman," cut from an inner page of the number, was a compliance with this section.

In Patterson v. J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., (1902) 119 Fed. 451, it appeared that the copy of the title of a book filed to obtain a copyright was "The Captain of the Rajah. By Howard Patterson. Illustrated by Warren Sheppard. A thrilling and realistic sea story from a noted sailor's pen, and lavishly illustrated by the pencil of America's greatest marine artist." The title of the book published was "The Captain of the Rajah. A Story of the Sea, by Howard Patterson. Illustrated by Warren Sheppard." It was held that the author did not lose his copyright by reason of publishing the book with the shorter title.

"Prints."—It has been held that pictures printed in successive colors from metal plates, from which part of the metal has been cut so as to leave portions thereof in relief, were en-titled to copyright as "prints," within the general enumeration of this section, and were not within the proviso because not printed from "drawings on stone." Hills v. Austrich, (1903) 120 Fed. 862; Hills v. Hoover, (1905)

136 Fed. 701.

Evidence. - In Patterson v. J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., (1902) 119 Fed. 451, the evidence in a suit for an infringement of a copyright was held to be sufficient to show that the author had mailed two copies of the book addressed to the Librarian of Congress, notwithstanding the register of copyrights certified that he could not find any copies on file.

Publication. — The deposit of two copies of a copyrighted song in the Library of Congress, when coupled with an unrestricted sale of a single copy, without any effort to push the work commercially, constitutes a sufficient publication to sustain the copyright. Stern v. Remick, (1910) 175 Fed. 282.

Entering an original painting with the copyright reserved at an exhibition of the Royal Academy, whose by-laws prohibit copying, is not such a publication as defeats the right to take out a copyright in such painting. American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, (1907) 207 U. S. 284, 28 S. Ct. 72, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 208, affirming (1906) 146 Fed. 375. 76 C. C. A. 647.

Abandonment of rights. - See Savage v.

Hoffmann, (1908) 159 Fed. 584. Importations.—The second paragraph of this section was not intended to do more than prohibit the producing abroad of copyrighted books designed for sale in the United States, and has no application to the reproduction in the United States of a book copyrighted in Great Britain which contained no notice of copyright in the United States of a similar book intended for publication in the United States. G. & C. Merriam Co. v. United Dictionary Co., (C. C. A. 1906) 146 Fed. 354, affirmed (1908) 208 U. S. 260, 28 S. Ct. 290, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 478. Compare Harper v. Donohue, (1905) 144 Fed. 491.

Vol. II, p. 266, sec. 4963.

Different books. - Where the title in the first three and last thirty-four pages of the copyrighted English edition of a dictionary was different from the copyrighted domestic edition, the publisher of the English edition was prohibited by this section from inserting therein a notice of the domestic copyright. G. & C. Merriam Co. v. United Dictionary Co., (C. C. A. 1906) 146 Fed. 354.

Affixing untruthful notice in foreign country. — The act of affixing in a foreign country to a publication a false statement that it was copyrighted under the laws of the United States is not within the provision of this section, imposing a penalty for untruthfully impressing notice of copyright upon an article which was the subject of copyright in the United States. McLoughlin v. Tuck, etc., Co., (1903) 191 U. S. 267, 24 S. Ct. 105, affirming (1902) 115 Fed. 85, 53 C. C. A. 508.

Vol. II, p. 267, sec. 4964.

Damages recoverable. - See under this title, vol. 2, p. 271, sec. 4970.

Vol. II, p. 268, sec. 4965.

Strict construction and proof are required in an action under this section to recover the penalty thereby authorized for infringement of a copyright. Caliga v. Inter Ocean Newspaper Co., (C. C. A. 1907) 157 Fed. 186, affirmed in (1909) 215 U. S. 182, 30 S. Ct. 38, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 150.

Exclusiveness of statutory remedy. - The remedies of forfeiture and penalty and of injunction, given by sections 4965 and 4970 to the owner of a copyrighted map in case of infringement, are exclusive, and preclude any resort to an action at law to recover the damages sustained by reason of the infringement. Globe Newspaper Co. v. Walker, (1908) 210 U. S. 356, 28 S. Ct. 726, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 1096, reversing (1905) 140 Fed. 305, 72 C.

C. A. 77; Ohman v. New York, (1909) 168 Fed. 953.

The words "found in his possession."-This section, as amended, was not changed by the proviso added by the amendment, that in case of infringement of copyright of a photograph the recovery shall not be less than $100 nor more than $5,000, so far as the rule set out in the second paragraph of the original note is concerned. Boston Traveler Co. v. Purdy, (C. C. A. 1905) 137 Fed. 717.

The infringing copies of a copyrighted painting need not be found in the infringer's possession in order to render him liable for the penalty of ten dollars imposed by this section, "for every copy of the same in his possession, or by him sold or exposed for sale." American Lith. Co. v. Werckmeister, (1911) 221 U. S. 603, 31 S. Ct. 676, 55 U. S.

Replevin. — In Hills v. Hoover, (1906) 142
Fed. 904, it was held that replevin could not be availed of to seize lithographs alleged to infringe the complainant's copyrights, to infringe the complainant had neither title nor right to possession, which were desired only for the purpose of a suit in assumpsit to recover penalties under this section, providing that in case of infringemen of a copyright, etc., the defendant shall forfeit one dollar for every sheet of the same found in his possession.

The common-law action of replevin, as it is practiced in Pennsylvania, is not an appropriate remedy by which to enforce the forfeiture provided by this section. Rinehart v. Smith, (1903) 121 Fed. 148; Gustin v. Record Pub. Co., (1904) 127 Fed. 603.

Seizure of infringing copies. — A Circuit

Seizure of infringing copies.—A Circuit Court has authority under R. S. sec. 716, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 498, to issue a writ for the seizure of infringing copies of a copyright publication alleged to be in the possession of the infringer as preliminary to an action under section 4965, to recover the penalty prescribed therein for each copy found in the possession of the defendant, such writ being one necessary for the exercise of the court's jurisdiction, since under the ruling of the Supreme Court such copies must be "found" before the cause of action to re-

Vol. II, p. 269, sec. 4966.

Mimicking song and actions of another actress. - In Bloom v. Nixon, (1903) 125 Fed. 977, it appeared that the plaintiffs were the owners and producers of a copyrighted song, which was rendered during the performance of an extravaganza by an actress who was required during the action to step to one of the boxes, single out a particular person, and sing the song to him alone, accompanied by certain gestures, postures, and other artistical effects; she being assisted in the chorus by a number of other actresses. It was held that an imitation of the actress while singing such song, by another actress, in which she, in good faith, attempted to mimic the postures and gestures of the original actress, etc., and used the chorus of the song only as a vehicle for the imitation, was not forbidden by this

Vol. II, p. 271, sec. 4970.

Use of part. — An infringement of a copyright may result in the wrongful use of a part as well as the whole of a copyrighted publication. G. & C. Merriam Co. v. United Dictionary Co. (C. C. A. 1906) 146 Fed. 354

Dictionary Co., (C. C. A. 1906) 146 Fed. 354.

Dramatization of novel.—A playwright who appropriates the theme or plot of another's story, protected by copyright, as the basis of a play, cannot escape a charge of infringement by adding to or slightly varying the incidents, or by adding to the number and changing the names of the characters. Dam cover the penalty accrues. Stern v. Remiek, (1908) 164 Fed. 781.

Successive suits. — A separate action to recover the penalty prescribed by this section for every infringing copy of a copyrighted painting found in the infringer's possession or sold by him cannot be maintained after judgment of forfeiture of the infringing copies provided for by this section has already been recovered, since the section coatemplates but a single action in the nature of replevin, in which may be had both a forfeiture and a recovery of penalties. Werekmeister v. American Tobacco Co., (1907) 207 U. S. 375, 28 S. Ct. 124, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 254, affirming (1906) 144 Fed. 1023, 74 C. C. A. 682.

In Hills & Co. v. Hoover, (1911) 220 U. S. 329, 31 S. Ct. 402, it was held that the institution by the owner of a copyright in certain engravings of an action of replevin not prosecuted to judgment, to enforce the forfeiture of the infringing copies, prescribed by this section, precludes him from subsequently bringing and maintaining an action of assumpsit to recover the penalty provided for by that section, measured by the number of copies found in the infringer's possession, even where the state practice affords no form of action in which the double remedy may be enforced, since, under the broad powers conferred by R. S. sec. 716, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 498, the federal court may so frame its process and writs as to give full relief in one action.

section prohibiting any person from publicly performing or representing any dramatic or musical composition for which a copyright had been obtained, without the consent of the proprietor.

The singing of a single verse and chorus of a copyrighted song, without musical accompaniment, in imitation of the voice, postures, and mannerisms of another, is not an "infringement," against which a temporary injunction will issue. Green v. Minzensheimer. (1909) 177 Fed. 286. But in Green v. Luby. (1909) 177 Fed. 287, it was held that where one sings an entire copyrighted song with musical accompaniment, she is guilty of infringement, though she purports merely to mimic another.

v. Kirk La Shelle Co., (C. C. A. 1910) 175 Fed. 902, affirming (1908) 166 Fed. 589.

Where a copyrighted play had been made, based on the plot and incidents of a novel the copyright of which had expired, it was held that another author, though entitled to use the plot and incidents of the novel for a different play, could not make use of the first play in constructing the second. Glaser r. St. Elmo Co., (1909) 175 Fed. 276. But where a copyrighted play was taken from a novel the copyright of which had expired, it was held that the owners of the play were not entitled to restrain the defendants from using the name of the novel for an entirely different play constructed on the plot and inci-dents of the novel, on the theory that the name was protected by the copyright of the Glaser v. St. Elmo Co., (1909) 175 play. G Fed. 276.

Pictures of dramatisation of novel. - Since pictures of the dramatization of a novel only represent the artist's idea of what the author has expressed in words, they do not, as a photograph, infringe the copyrighted book or drama. Harper v. Kalem Co., (C. C. A. 1909) 169 Fed. 61, affirmed (1911) 222 U. S. 55, 32 S. Ct. 20.

Use of directory. — The compiler and publisher of a directory, while he may not copy and reprint matter from a prior copyrighted directory as his own, may use the same for checking up his own canvass, independently made, and where discrepancies are found, after an honest and personal investigation of the same, may publish the result as so verified as his own. Hartford Printing Co. v. Hartford Directory, etc., Co., (1906) 146

Fed. 332. Contra, Sampson, etc., Co. r. SeaverRadford Co., (C. C. A. 1905) 140 Fed. 539.
Use of citations from law books.—Where the author of a law book collects all the citations available on his subject, including those found in a previous copyrighted work on the same subject, and after examining the reports of the cases cited, cites such authorities as he considers applicable in support of his own text—such text being original and in no part copied from the earlier worksuch use of the earlier work is a fair use and does not infringe its copyright. Edward Thompson Co. v. American Law Book Co., (C. C. A. 1903) 122 Fed. 922.

Use of law digest.—A writer of a law text-book may use a copyrighted digest of decisions, and may copy lists of cases therefrom to assist him in running down the cases, and such use is a fair one and within the purpose for which the digest is sold; but extensive copying or paraphrasing of the language of the syllabi in the digest is an unfair use and constitutes an infringement of the copyright. West Pub. Co. v. Edward Thompson Co., (C. C. A. 1910) 176 Fed. 833, modifying (1909)

169 Fed. 833.

Moving picture exhibition of copyrighted drama. — In Harper v. Kalem Co., (C. C. A. 1909) 169 Fed. 61, affirmed (1911) 222 U. S. 55, 32 S. Ct. 20, it was held that a series of films, constituting a picture of an artist's conception of the copyrighted story Ben Hur, when placed on an exhibiting machine which reproduced the action of the actors and animals, was a dramatization of the story, which, when sold and offered for sale by defendant for public exhibitions at which an entrance fee was charged, constituted a contributory infringement, subject to injunction.

Pirated matter.—In Edward Thompson
Co. v. American Law Book Co., (C. C. A.
1903) 122 Fed. 922, it was held that the complainant, the publisher of a law encyclopædia, which furnished the authors of its articles with paragraphs cut from copyrighted digests of other publishers, its authors using such paragraphs in the compilation of their articles, in some instances copying the language of such paragraphs without the consent of the owners of the copyrights, had no standing in a court of equity to charge another with infringement of its own copyright.

Lists of society people. - See Social Register Assoc. v. Murphy, (1904) 128 Fed. 116.

Perforated music rolls which, when used in connection with mechanical piano players, reproduce in sound copyrighted musical compositions, do not infringe the copyright in compositions, which, under R. sec. 4952, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 256, secures to the composer the sole liberty of printing and reprinting, publishing, completing, copying, executing, finishing, and vending the same. White-Smith Music Pub. Co. v. Apollo Co., (1908) 209 U. S. 1, 28 S. Ct. 319, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 655, affirming (1906) 147 Fed. 226, 77 C. C. A. 368.

Infringements of mercantile reports. - In Dun v. International Mercantile Agency, (1903) 127 Fed. 173, it was held that the defendant's use of plaintiff's credit book for the purpose of discovering names of individ-uals, firms, and corporations engaged in business, to be inserted in defendant's publication which it was preparing, was not such an unfair use of complainant's book as to entitle the complainant to an injunction pendente lite.

For other cases see Champney v. Haag, (1903) 121 Fed. 944; Barnes v. Miner, (1903) 122 Fed. 480; Eisfeldt v. Campbell, (1909) 171 Fed. 594. Right of purchaser of unbound sheets to bind and resell. - One who has purchased unbound copyrighted volumes from the owner of the copyright or his licensee has the right, so far as the copyright statute is concerned, to bind and resell the same. Kipling v. Putnam, (C. C. A. 1903) 120 Fed. 631.

Intent. - Where the defendant published a copyrighted song with knowledge of the copyright in fact, it was held that his intent was not material to his liability for infringement. Stern v. Remick, (1910) 175 Fed. 282.

Jurisdiction. - A suit, the primary and controlling purpose of which is to enforce a right secured by the copyright laws which is being infringed by the defendants, is a suit under those laws, and within the jurisdiction of the federal Circuit Courts, although it incidentally draws in question the validity, interpretation, and effect of a contract through which the complainant derives title. Wooster v. Crane, (C. C. A. 1906) 147 Fed.

District of suit. — The provision of section 1 of the federal Judiciary Act of March 3, 1887, 24 Stat. L. 552, ch. 373, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 265, that no suit shall be brought in any other district than that whereof the defendant is an inhabitant, does not apply to suits arising under the copyright laws, as to which section 11 of the Judiciary Act of September 24, 1789, 1 Stat. L. 78. ch. 20, is still in force, and such a suit may be brought in any district in which the defendant can be found and served with process. Lederer v. Ferris, (1906) 149 Fed. 250. See also Act of March 4, 1909, ch. 320, sec. 35, 1909 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot. 91.

Preliminary injunction. — On an application for an injunction pendente lite, the court should consider the effect on both parties of the granting or refusal of the order, and, where it appears that in either case great or irreparable injury will result to one or the other, the court will take the course which seems most conducive to justice to both parties. Sampson, etc., Co. v. Seaver-Radford Co., (1904) 129 Fed. 761.

A preliminary injunction restraining infringement of a copyright should not be granted, where on the showing made and the facts appearing the question of infringe-ment is in serious doubt. Savage v. Hoffmann, (1908) 159 Fed. 584; Nixon v. Doran, (1909) 168 Fed. 575; Benton v. Van Dyke, (1909) 170 Fed. 203. A preliminary injunction against the alleged infringement of a copyright, the effect of which will be to interfere with defendant's business, will not be granted where complainant's right is doubtful on the showing made; but the defendant may be required to give a bond for complainant's protection in case he is successful on a full hearing. Sampson, etc., Co. v. Seaver-Radford Co., (1904) 129 Fed. 761; De Jonge v. Breuker, etc., Co., (1906) 147 Fed. 763.

In Ricordi v. Hammerstein, (1907) 150 Fed. 450, a preliminary injunction to restrain the defendant from producing a copyrighted opera was denied, on evidence tending to show that defendant had orally been given or promised a license for the production at a stated royalty by complainant's authorized agent, and further evidence showing without contradiction that there had been negotiations for such license, and that both com-plainant and its agent had full knowledge that defendant was engaging singers and expending large sums of money in preparing for the production, and did not make any objection or suggest any obstacle to the granting of a license until a considerable time after defendant's public announcement of the production, although in the meantime, while defendant's preparations were going on, an exclusive license had been granted to another manager.

Where, in a suit to restrain the defendant from using complainant's credit publication, the complainant insisted that defendant had appropriated complainant's ratings as well as the names of persons appearing in com-plainant's book, but on such issue the affidavits were conflicting, it was held that an injunction pendente lite restraining defendant's use of complainant's book would be re-Dun v. International Mercantile fused.

Agency, (1903) 127 Fed. 173.

In American Mutoscope, etc., Co. v. Edison Mfg. Co., (1905) 137 Fed. 262, it was held that a preliminary injunction against the infringement of a copyrighted photograph would not be granted where the proofs left in death method defendent hed in fact it in doubt whether defendant had in fact used or sold any copies of complainant's photograph, or had merely borrowed complainant's idea, and made other similar, but not identical, photographs of its own, so that an injunction following the allegations of the bill would have no operative effect.

Under the rule that, to warrant the granting of a preliminary injunction, the facts must be clear, and the equities growing out of them in no doubt, it has been held that such an injunction would not be granted in favor of one or two rival publishers of information respecting real estate transfers in a city to restrain the sale of a publication by the other, on the ground that it contained pirated copyrighted matter, where the piracy was denied, as well as the right of complainant to copyright the matter, and a counter charge of piracy was also made in the same connection, and where, moreover, the alleged infringing publication was a year old. Sweet v. Bromley, (1907) 154 Fed. 754.

A preliminary injunction will not be granted to restrain infringement of the copyright of future numbers of a periodical publication which have not yet been published or copyrighted. Sweet v. Bromley, (1907) 154 Fed. 754.

For other cases see Hubges v. Belasco, (1904) 130 Fed. 388; Littleton v. Fischer, (1905) 137 Fed. 684.

Review.—The granting of a preliminary injunction in a suit for infringement of a copyright being within the discretion of the trial court, an order granting the same will not be set aside on appeal unless it is clearly shown that the court abused its discretion or was mistaken in its view of the situation. Werner Co. v. Encyclopædia Britannica Co., (C. C. A. 1905) 134 Fed. 831, affirming (1904) 130 Fed. 460.

Objections on appeal. — Where, on an application for a preliminary injunction in a suit for infringement of a copyright, the defendant did not object or introduce proof to show that the complainants' articles, alleged to have been infringed, were not derived from original sources, it was held that such objection could not be considered on appeal from an order granting such injunction. Werner Co. v. Encyclopædia Britannica Co., (C. C. A. 1905) 134 Fed. 831, affirming (1904) 130

Fed. 460.

Laches. - Where, in a suit for infringement of copyright, it appeared that the complainants and their predecessors in title had no knowledge of the alleged infringing articles until less than a year and a half before the suit was brought, and that the complainants prior to that time were not charged with notice thereof, and the infringing articles did not appear in defendant's publication at first, it was held that the complainants were not barred by laches. Werner Co. v. Encyclopædia Britannica Co., (C. C. A. 1905) 134 Fed. 831, affirming (1904) 130 Fed. 460.

Failure to institute suit for infringement until the defendants had been proceeding openly therewith for about a year was held not to constitute laches, barring a right to relief in equity, when during that time the complainant was actively engaged in the defense of a suit to cancel his title prosecuted by one of the defendants. Wooster v. Crane, (C. C. A. 1906) 147 Fed. 515.

The fact that a complainant, with knowledge that its copyrights were being infringed by the defendant, delayed bringing suit until defendants after sixteen years of labor and at large expense had practically completed the publication of its work, was held to constitute such laches as warranted the denial of an injunction or an accounting of profits; but it was also held that in such a suit, although equitable relief would be denied, the court had power to award the complainant damages as compensation for the violation of its rights. West Pub. Co. v. Edward Thompson Co., (C. C. A. 1910) 176 Fed. 833, modifying (1909) 169 Fed. 833.

Pleading. — There is such an analogy be-tween actions under the patent laws and actions under copyright laws that like rules of practice should be applied in both classes of cases. Scribner v. Straus, (1904) 130 Fed.

Bill or complaint. - In an action for infringement of a copyright, it is not sufficient to allege generally in the bill or complaint that all conditions and requisites required by the laws of the United States to obtain a copyright have been complied with, but the specific acts done and necessary to constitute such compliance with the law must be affirmatively alleged, and the complaint must also show that the person in whose name the copyright was obtained was the person who owned the right and was entitled to it. Ford v. Charles E. Blaney Amusement Co., (1906) 148 Fed. 642.

In Bracken v. Rosenthal, (1907) 151 Fed. 136, it was held that a bill for infringement of copyrights of different pieces of sculpture would not be held demurrable for multifariousness where the parties and the general method of alleged infringement were the same, and especially where it appeared from the bill that all of the acts of infringement were committed pursuant to a common purpose by the defendants.

Copyright notice in foreign publications. In Haggard v. Waverly Pub. Co., (1895) 144 Fed. 490, a bill for infringement of the copyright of a book was held good on demurrer, although it failed to allege that the copyright notice required by section 4962 had been printed in all editions of the book published in foreign countries; the question of the effect of such omission on the rights of complainant being reserved for determination after full hearing on the facts.

Demurter. — Where it was admitted that a bill to enjoin infringement of certain copyrights stated a cause of action arising from the alleged infringement of two dramatic compositions, and a demurrer failed to point out specifically what sentences or paragraphs of the bill were demurred to, it was held that it could not be sustained. Empire City Amusement Co. v. Wilton, (1903) 134 Fed.

In a suit for infringement of a copyright, where the bill makes profert of the copy-righted publication, it may be considered a part of the bill and examined on demurrer. American Mutoscope, etc., Co. v. Edison Mfg. Co., (1905) 137 Fed. 262.

Supplemental bill. - In a suit for infringement of copyrights of a number of books the complainant may properly be allowed by a supplemental bill to set up further infringe-ments of other books of the same series, occurring subsequent to the filing of the original bill, the parties being the same, and the subject-matter of the same general character, which may appropriately be determined in yers' Co-operative Pub. Co., (1905) 139 Fed. 701.

Where a bill for infringement of copyright sufficiently alleged title in the complainant to the cause of action by assignment, a supplemental bill otherwise good was held not to be invalid because it alleged a further assignment in the nature of a confirmation or ratification of the complainant's title. Banks Law Pub. Co. v. Lawyers Co-operative Pub. Co., (1905) 139 Fed. 701.

Joinder of actions. - Where it was convenient for the court that two causes of action for infringement of copyright, one with reference to certain cartoons and the other with reference to a play based thereon, should be joined in the same bill, it was held to be within the discretion of the court to permit such joinder. Empire City Amusement Co. v. Wilton, (1903) 134 Fed. 132.

Evidence — Similarity of mistakes. — Where the defendant published a digest of Evidence — Similarity the laws of Pennsylvania for the years 1895-1903, inclusive, in one volume, edited and compiled by the same person who compiled the complainant's copyrighted digest of the laws of Pennsylvania, with supplements for the years 1895-1897, and it appeared that the compiler made eleven errors, consisting of incorrect citations in complainant's work, which appeared verbatim in defendant's compilation, it was held that such errors justified an inference of infringement of complainant's copyright entitling complainant to a preliminary injunction; the only explanation offered therefor being that the similarity of mistake was accidental. George T. Bisel Co. v. Welsh, (1904) 131 Fed. 564.

Where, on a comparison of a copyrighted directory and an alleged infringing publication, it appeared that a large proportion of the errors in the former were also found in the latter, it was held that such evidence was sufficient to refute the testimony of defendant's witnesses that the accuracy of all items in its directory was personally verified, and to show that direct copying had been done. Hartford Printing Co. v. Hartford Directory, etc., Co., (1906) 146 Fed. 332.

Motion for preliminary injunction. — On a motion to temporarily enjoin a vaudeville performer from singing a song from an opera which complainant claimed the exclusive right to produce, it was held that the court might consider the fact that the songs and pianoforte score of the opera had been published, as showing an abandonment of the words of the songs, though there was no proof that the publication was authorized by the composer and the authors of the opera, as would be necessary on final hearing. Savage v. Hoffmann, (1908) 159 Fed. 584.

In a suit for infringement of a copyright for a directory, proof that defendant had in its office three pages concededly taken from complainant's book, cut, pasted, and edited, apparently for the purpose of being used as copy for defendant's book, was held to be sufficient to entitle complainant to a preliminary injunction, unless a denial of the intention to use such pages as copy is supported by a clear showing of the methods used by defendant, and the source from which its copy was obtained. Chicago Directory Co. t. U. S. Directory Co., (1902) 122 Fed. 189.

A showing that a dozen erroneous names and addresses appearing in the complainant's book have been duplicated in defendant's is sufficient to entitle the complainant to a preliminary injunction, and to affect defendant's whole book, in the absence of a clear showing to overcome such prima facie case. Trow Directory Printing, etc., Co. v. U. S. Directory Co., (1903) 122 Fed. 191.

Residence or citizenship of author. — In a suit for infringement of a copyright, on the issue of whether the author was a citizen or resident of the United States at the time he applied for the copyright, the certificate from the librarian described him as of New York, and the author testified that he was at the time of the trial a resident of New York, and that he had mailed the two copies in New York to the Librarian of Congress more than ten years before. It was held that this was sufficient proof of the author's residence, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary. Patterson v. J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co., (1902) 119 Fed. 451.

For other cases dealing with evidence, see Suderman v. Saake, (1909) 166 Fed. 815; Record, etc., Co. v. Bromley, (1909) 175 Fed.

Burden of proof.—In a suit for infringement of a copyright, the librarian's certificate does not per se establish the copyright; but the burden rests on the plaintiff to show compliance with the statutory requirements as conditions precedent. Saake v. Lederer, (C. C. A. 1909) 174 Fed. 135; Bosselman v. Richardson, (C. C. A. 1909) 174 Fed. 622.

Scope of injunction.—An injunction against an infringing publication will be extended to all portions in which infringing and non-infringing matter has been so blended that its separation is impracticable, but not to such distinct parts as do not infringe, and defendant may properly be given leave to apply for its modification when he shall have expunged all infringing matter. Edison v. Lubin, (1903) 122 Fed. 240, 58 C. C. A. 604, reversing 119 Fed. 993; Social Register Assoc. v. Murphy, (1904) 128 Fed. 116; Sampson, etc., Co. v. Seaver-Radford Co., (C. C. A. 1905) 140 Fed. 539; Park, etc., Co. v. Kellerstrass, (1910) 181 Fed. 431.

It seems that an injunction simply in terms restraining the defendants from making any unlawful use of the complainants' publication would be open to the objection that it was argumentative and not specific; the defendants being entitled to be informed with reasonable certainty of what they are forbidden to do. Sweet v. Bromley, (1907) 154 Fed. 754.

Defenses. — That a complainant is a member of an illegal combination, in violation of the anti-trust laws, state or federal, is no defense to a suit for infringement of a copyright. Scribner v. Straus, (1904) 130 Fed. 389.

It is no defense to a suit to enjoin infringement of a copyright of a musical composition that defendant did not knowingly copy complainant's composition, but without knowledge of it independently produced substantially the same thing. Hein v. Harris, (C. C. A. 1910) 183 Fed. 107, affirming 175 Fed. 875.

Suit by equitable owner for infringement.—The owner of the equitable title to a copyright may in equity in his own name sue for infringement, where the holder of the legal title is one of the infringers and occupies a position hostile to him. Wooster v. Crane, (C. C. A. 1906) 147 Fed. 515.

Damages recoverable. — In a suit in equity for infringement of copyright there can be no recovery in the way of damages beyond the gains and profits which the defendant is shown to have realized from the infringement. Social Register Assoc. v. Murphy, (1904) 129 Fed. 148.

Where the infringing parts of a book are intermingled with other parts about which there is no evidence, and the defendant makes no effort to separate them, it must account for all profits made on the entire sales, which is the only effective relief that can be granted when complainant's book has been superseded by a later publication. Hartford Printing Co. v. Hartford Directory, etc., Co., (1906) 146 Fed. 332.

On an accounting by a defendant for profits realized from the sale of a directory which infringed the complainant's copyright, it was held that the amounts received from advertisers were to be included in the gross receipts, to be accounted for, less the necessary cost of producing and disposing of the copies sold. Hartford Printing Co. v. Hartford Directory, etc., Co., (1906) 148 Fed. 470.

In computing the profits realized by an infringer of a copyright for which he is ac-

In computing the profits realized by an infringer of a copyright for which he is accountable to the owner, where a greater number of copies of the infringing publication were printed than were sold, it was held that he was entitled to have deducted from the gross receipts all of such items of cost as would have been the same had no more copies been printed than were sold, such as providing the copy and composition. Hartford Printing Co. v. Hartford Directory, etc., Co., (1906) 148 Fed. 470.

Co., (1906) 148 Fed. 470.

The owner of the copyright of a story which has been infringed by another by appropriating the story as the basis of a play is entitled to recover as damages all of the profits made by the infringer from the production of such play. Dam v. Kirk La Shelle Co., (C. C. A. 1910) 175 Fed. 902, affirming (1908) 166 Fed. 589.

costs. — Where, in a suit for infringement of copyright, it appeared that the complainants had lost their right to protection either by insufficient notices or by republication of the matter under notices of copyright by others, but that the infringement was established, it was held that the defendant would not be allowed costs, but that each party would be required to pay one-half the costs. Record, etc., Co. v. Bromley, (1909) 175 Fed. 156.

Exclusiveness of remedies. — See under this title, vol. 2, p. 268, sec. 4965.

Permanent injunction refused. — Where the complainant sued for infringement of an alleged copyright on a publication of information concerning transfers of New York city real estate, it was held that three instances of copying with reference to three different descriptions were insufficient to justify an injunction against defendants' work, but that the complainant would be left to its remedy at law. Record, etc., Co. v. Bromley, (1909) 175 Fed. 156.

In Dun v. Lumbermen's Credit Assoc., (1908) 209 U. S. 20, 28 S. Ct. 335, 14 Ann. (1906) 1208 C. S. 20, 28 S. Ct. 335, 14 Ann. Cas. 501, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 663, affirming (1906) 144 Fed. 83, 75 C. C. A. 241, it was held that injunctive relief would not be granted to the proprietor of a mercantile agency publishing at intervals a copyrighted book giving information as to the business, capital, and credit rating of merchants, manufacturers, and traders, because of the improper use of such work with respect to a few names by a corporation publishing a similar book limited to those engaged in lumber and kindred trades, where the latter book contained about 60,000 names, twenty-five per cent. more than the former, and the subjects of information given by it concerning the persons named were six times as many as were given by the other work.

Vol. II, p. 272, sec. 1.

"Title page." — In Freeman v. Trade Register, (1909) 173 Fed. 419, it was held that a preliminary page in a periodical which followed advertisements and preceded general reading matter, containing in display type the name of the publication and also the volume, number, and date of the issue, and a copy of which was deposited as the title to obtain copyright protection, must be considered the "title page" within the meaning of this Act, rather than a subsequent page containing the title in smaller type but without volume, number, or date, and that the printing of such notice on the latter page only was not such a compliance with the express requirement of the statute as would sustain an action for infringement.

Subsequent editions of book.—There can be but one copyright for the same book for the first term of twenty-eight years, and notice of only a single entry for copyright is necessary therein. If there is a subsequent edition of the book, the notice of copyright in it must be either of the date of the original or of the date of the subsequent entry, depending upon whether or not such changes or additions have been made as to constitute the later edition a new book. West Pub. Co. v. Edward Thompson Co., (C. C. A. 1910) 176 Fed. 833, modifying (1909) 169 Fed.

Republication of copyrighted matter. — In Record, etc., Co. v. Bromley, (1909) 175 Fed. 156, it appeared that the plaintiff published weekly numbers of a real estate record relating to transfers of real estate in New York city, called the "Record and Guide," which numbers the complainant attempted to copyright under the name "Real Estate Record and Builders' Guide Company" under which the publisher, S., was doing business. Thereafter the same information published in the weekly numbers, combined and rearranged, but in other respects unchanged, was published in quarterly numbers during the year 1905, and the weeklies and quarterlies consolidated into an annual volume containing the same information under the same arrangement, and this copyrighted by the Real Estate Record Association, claimed to be another name under which S. was doing business. It was held that the copyright on the weekly numbers was forfeited, since it could be protected only by repeating the original notice whenever the copyrighted matter was afterwards published, under this section, providing that no person shall maintain an action for the infringement of a copyright, unless he shall give notice thereof by inserting the copyright notice in the several copies of every edition published.

Waiver of copyright.—In G. & C. Merriam Co. v. United Dictionary Co., (C. C. A. 1906) 146 Fed. 354, affirmed (1908) 208 U. S. 260, 28 S. Ct. 290, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 478, it appeared that the plaintiff simultaneously published and copyrighted a dictionary in Great Britain and the United States, neither being intended to compete with the other; the English book containing no reference to the American copyright, but fully complying with the copyright laws of Great Britain, as did also the American book with the copyright laws of the United States. It was held that complajnant's failure to insert a notice of the American copyright in the English work did not constitute a waiver of its American copyright:

Inadvertent omission of notice by licensee.

The owner of a copyrighted literary production does not lose the exclusive property therein given by the copyright because a licensee authorized to publish the article on the express condition that he print therewith the usual copyright notice inadvertently omits to do so, and any one who copies and republishes the article so published, though without actual knowledge of the copyright, to so at his peril. American Press Assoc. v. Daily Story Pub. Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 120 Fed. 766.

Requirements as to notice. — "In determining whether a notice of copyright is misleading, we are not bound to look beyond the face of the notice and inquire whether, under the facts of the particular case, it is reasonable to suppose an intelligent person could actually have been misled. With the utmost desire to give a construction to the statute most liberal to the author, we find it impossible to say that the entry of a book under one title by the publishers can validate the entry of another book of a different title by another person." Per Brown, J., in Mifflin c. R. H. White Co., (1903) 190 U. S. 260, 23 S. Ct. 769, 771, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1040.

Inscribing the copyright notice upon the published copies without placing such inscription upon the original painting satisfies the requirement of this section. American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, (1907) 207 U. S. 284, 28 S. Ct. 72, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 208, affirming (1906) 146 Fed. 375, 76 C. C. A. 647.

Where a copyrighted picture was intended to be reproduced and used as a design for fancy paper to cover boxes and other articles for the holiday season, and twelve complete copies were lithographed and printed on one sheet, the picture having been so printed that each copy would join harmoniously with its neighbors and the repeated design would produce a pleasing decorative effect, it was held that each one of the reproductions should have been accompanied by a copyright notice in order to protect the design; and that a single notice on each sheet, to serve as a notice to the manufacturer of the boxes, was insufficient. De Jonge v. Breuker, etc., Co., (1910) 182 Fed. 150.

Section 24 of this Act provides that the copyright subsisting in any work when the Act goes into effect may at the expiration of the term provided for under existing law be renewed by the author if still living, or the widow, widower, or children of the author if the author be not living, or if such author, widow, widower, or children be not living, then by the author's executors, or in the absence of a will his next of kin. It has been held that the proprietor and assignee of the author of a copyrighted musical composition is not entitled to renewal of the original term of his copyright by force of section 8. White-Smith Music Pub. Co. v. Goff, (1910) 180 Fed. 256, affirmed (C. C. A. 1911) 187 Fed. 247.

COSTS.

' Vol. II, p. 276, sec. 823.

Marshal's fees. — The prevailing party in a suit in a federal court is not entitled to tax against his opponent as a part of his costs the fees of the marshal for serving subpænas on witnesses residing without the district and more than one hundred miles from the place of trial. U. S. v. Southern Pac. Co., (1909) 172 Fed. 909.

Mileage of witnesses.—The prevailing party in a civil action in a federal court is entitled to tax as a part of his costs mileage for his witnesses for the distance necessarily traveled by them from any point to which a subpœna would run, viz., from any point within the district, and for not exceeding one hundred miles for witnesses coming from without the district. U. S. v. Southern Pac.

Co., (1909) 172 Fed. 909.

Costs for drawing pleadings, decrees, etc.

United States Supreme Court equity rule
25 provides that in order to promote brevity, etc., the regular taxable costs for every bill and answer shall in no case exceed the sum which is allowed in the state court of chancery in the district, if any there be, otherwise it shall not exceed three dollars for every bill and answer. R. S. sec. 913, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 561, declares that the forms and modes of proceeding in suits of equity in the Circuit and District Courts shall be according to the principles, rules, and usages which belong to courts of equity, except when otherwise provided by statute or by rules of court in pur-suance thereof. It was held that in the absence of an express rule of the Circuit Court dealing with the taxation of costs in equity, such court had power to allow costs for the drawing of the pleadings, decrees, and order of court in accordance with the established practice as authorized by a state statute, and that such allowance was not prohibited by section 823. Matheson v. Hanna-Schoelkopf Co., (1904) 128 Fed. 162.

Partnership accounting. — The discretion of a court of equity in a suit for a partnership accounting in which a receiver is appointed does not authorize an order requiring the defendant and the sureties on his cost bond to pay to complainant, under the name of costs, items paid from partnership assets for services and expenses in administering the fund, nor any other items not within this section and R. S. sec. 983, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 291, providing what shall be included as costs in and form a portion of a judgment or decree against the losing party. McIntosh r. Ward, (C. C. A. 1907) 159 Fed. 66.

Vol. II, p. 278, sec. 824.

On a trial before a jury. — The phrase "on a trial before a jury," as used in this section, contemplates not only an examination and hearing of evidence before a jury, but a determination of the question at issue, or a final submission of the cause for such determination, so that, on a case on trial before a jury being settled pursuant to a stipulation before submission, no docket fee is allowable. Howler v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1909) 166 Fed. 828.

Depositions. — The provision regarding depositions refers to depositions taken out of court to be used on the hearing of the cause, and has no application to evidence taken either in court or before a master on a reference. Kissinger-Ison Co. v. Bradford Belting Co., (C. C. A. 1903) 123 Fed. 91. Compare Matheson v. Hanna-Schoelkopf Co.,

Attorney's fees for taking depositions can be taxed in a federal court under this section only for such depositions as were "admitted in evidence" in the language of the statute. U. S. v. Venable Constr. Co., (1904) 158 Fed. 833.

Counsel fees. — A federal court of equity has power to make an allowance for counsel fees to a complainant who, as a joint owner of a fund or property, has maintained a suit for its preservation or protection, where it has been brought within the custody or control of the court, such allowance to be charged thereon; but the power is discretionary, and will only be exercised where it is clear that a direct benefit has resulted to the property or those interested therein. Cuyler

Vol. II, p. 285, sec. 968.

Imposed as penalty for colorably invoking jurisdiction. — The right or duty of the Circuit Court to penalize a plaintiff recovering less than five hundred dollars by requiring the payment of defendant's costs, under this section, depends upon the same facts which authorize the court to dismiss the action under Judiciary Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 137, sec. 5, 18 Stat. L. 472, 4 Fed. Stat. Annot. 371, and such penalty should not be imposed unless it appears to the satisfaction of the Construction. — This section is not inconsistent with R. S. sec. 989, 3 Fed. Stat. Annot. 46, which provides that "when a recovery is had in any suit or proceeding against a collector or other officer of the revenue for any act done by him . . . in the performance of his official duty, and the court certifics that

v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., (1904) 132 Fed. 570.

Construction of order dividing costs.—
Where the libelant is the prevailing party in a suit in admiralty, but for equitable reasons the court directs that the costs be divided and paid by the parties in stated proportions, such order should be construed as including the statutory fee for libelant's proctor, which in ordinary course would be taxed as costs, but not a fee for respondent's proctor, which, if taxable under this section, is only so against his own client. The L. F. Munson, (1904) 127 Fed. 767.

Action for violation of "twenty-eight hour law."—On a recovery by the government in an action for violation of Act June 29, 1906, ch. 3594, 34 Stat. L. 607, 1909 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot. 43, known as the "twenty-eight hour law," a docket or attorney's fee of forty dollars is taxable against the defendant under the provisions of this section. U. S. r. Southern Pac. Co., (1909) 172 Fed. 909.

"Discontinued."—Where, pending trial to inverted the state of the section.

"Discontinued." — Where, pending trial to a jury, the case was settled pursuant to stipulation before submission, it was not "discontinued" within the meaning of this section. However v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1909)

166 Fed. 828.

Docket fees in consolidated suits. — Where two suits are brought in a federal court between the same parties which are consolidated for trial, but separate verdicts are returned, two attorney's docket fees of twenty dollars each are taxable against the losing party. U. S. v. Venable Constr. Co., (1904) 158 Fed. 833.

court. either from the declaration or on the trial, that the damages were laid in the declaration at a sum in excess of $2,000 for the mere purpose of giving colorable jurisdiction to the court and without any expectation of recovering more than such sum. McCarthy v. American Thread Co., (1906) 143 Fed. 678.

An action by a receiver of a national bank to recover assets is not within this section. Murray v. Chamber, (1907) 151 Fed. 142.

there was probable cause for the act, . . . or that he acted under the directions of the . . . proper officer of the government, no execution shall issue against such collector or other officer, but the amount so recovered shall . . . be . . . paid . . . from the treasury." their effect being when construed together to limit the claimant in such case to an action for loss or damage to his property while in the custody of the officer, and to convert the judgment recovered therefor into a claim against the government, where the court certifies that the officer acted either upon probable cause or under the directions of a superior officer. Agnew v. Haymes, (C. C. A. 1905) 141 Fed. 631.

Certificate of reasonable cause. — On judgment for claimant of property seized by officers of the customs service for forfeiture on the ground that it was fraudulently imported, a certificate of reasonable cause should be entered by the court as provided by this section, although the verdict of the jury was clearly right, under the evidence, where it is affirmatively shown that the officers who instituted the proceedings acted in good faith and on reasonable ground of suspicion. U. S. v. 83 Sacks Wool, (1906) 147 Fed. 747.

Vol. II, p. 289, sec. 973.

One claim void, others valid. — Where one claim of a patent was adjudged void in a suit for infringement, the complainant was precluded by this section from recovering costs, although other claims were held to be valid and infringed, unless a proper disclaimer as to the void claim was entered before the suit was brought. Fairbanks v. Stickney, (1903) 123 Fed. 79, 59 C. C. A. 209.

Where disclaimer unnecessary. — This sec-

Where disclaimer unnecessary. — This section applies only where a disclaimer is necessary to save the patent. National Electric Signaling Co. v. De Forest Wireless Tel. Co.,

(1905) 140 Fed. 449.

Costs of appellate court. — The provision of this section and section 4922, Rev. Stat., 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 598, that when judgment or decree is rendered for the plaintiff or complainant in any suit at law or in equity for infringement of part of a patent, etc., no costs shall be recovered unless the proper disclaimer was entered in the Patent Office before the suit was brought, applies only to costs in the trial court, and not to costs on appeal, the allowance or refusal of which is to be determined by the appellate court in . view of the special circumstances of the case. Thus, where the court below denied all relief and dismissed the bill, which action was reversed on appeal as to certain claims of the patent, complainant was awarded costs in the appellate court. Kahn v. Starrels, (1905) 136 Fed. 597, 69 C. C. A. 371. See also Johnson v. Foos Mfg. Co., (1906) 141 Fed. 73, 72 C. C. A. 105.

Vol. II, p. 289, sec. 974.

Reversal of count carrying costs — affirmance of other counts. — Where a defendant was convicted in a criminal case in which the court had discretionary power to impose upon him the costs of prosecution, and the court imposed separate sentences on different counts of the indictment, under one of which he was required to pay the costs, on a reversal by the appellate court as to such count only, and the issuance of a mandate affirming the judgment as to the other counts, but directing the trial court to sustain the motion in arrest as to such count, that court had no power to modify the judgment as to any of the other counts, by adding the imposition of costs. Morris v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1911) 185 Fed. 73.

Action under "twenty-eight hour law."—
The defendant is subject to the payment of costs by this section in an action by the United States to recover from a carrier the penalty imposed by the "twenty-eight hour law" (Act of June 29, 1906, ch. 3594, sec. 3, 34 Stat. I. 607, 1909 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot. 45), for confining live stock more than twenty-eight consecutive hours. U. S. v. Southern Pac. Co., (1909) 172 Fed. 909.

Vol. II, p. 291, sec. 983.

Default. — Where, after a libel in admiralty had been filed, respondent made default, and settled the case out of court, it was held that he was not entitled to have a release executed on such settlement filed in satisfaction of a judgment recovered against him by default, except on payment of costs authorized by this section. Naretti v. Scully, (1904) 133 Fed. 828.

Partnership accounting. — See under this title, vol. 2, p. 276, sec. 823.

Vol. II, p. 294, sec. 1.

Appellate proceedings in forma pauperis.—
The right to prosecute a writ of error from a Circuit Court of Appeals without giving security for costs is not given by this Act as the Act does not apply to appellate proceedings. A Circuit Court of Appeals cannot. without statutory authority, permit the prosecution in forma pauperis of a writ of error sued out of that court. Bradford v. Southern R. Co., (1904) 195 U. S. 243, 25 S. Ct. 55, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 178; Bristol v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 129 Fed. 87; In re Bradford, (C. C. A. 1905) 139 Fed. 518; Taylor v. Adams Express Co., (C. C. A. 1908) 164 Fed. 616.

Poverty of petitioner. - Where libelant, in a proceeding in admiralty for collision resulting in the loss of libelant's sloop, tackle, apparel, and furniture, alleged that by reason of his poverty he was unable to defray the expense of litigation, and prayed that process might issue and be served in forma pauperis, as authorized by this section, and there was no proof that libelant's sworn statement as to his poverty was false, the fact that he purchased the sloop for $500 was held to be insufficient to establish that he possessed property at the time the suit was instituted, or had acquired any since that time, justifying the court in requiring him to give security for costs. The Our Friend, (1904) 131 Fed. 395.

Creditor of bankrupt. - A creditor who objects to the discharge of a bankrupt may prosecute his objections in forma passeris by virtue of this Act, which gives any citizen entitled to commence "any suit or action in any court of the United States," such right on making the required showing. In re Guilbert, (1907) 154 Fed. 676.

Attorney interested. — Where plaintiff's attorney was financially interested in the result of an action brought in the federal court, it was held that the plaintiff could not obtain an order permitting him to sue in forms pauperis, as authorized by this Act, without a showing that plaintiff's attorney was also unable because of poverty to give security. Phillips v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1907) 153 Fed. 795.

Vol. II, p. 294, sec. 2.

Showing required.—A showing to obtain leave to maintain a suit in admiralty in forma pauperis, although made in conformit to rules of the court long in force, must also conform to the requirements of the Act; but when process has issued without such showing, and a motion has been made to require security for costs, libelant may be permitted to supply the omission, as contemplated by this section. Donovan v. Salem, etc., Nav. Co., (1904) 134 Fed. 316.

Vol. II, p. 294, sec. 4.

Construction. — The provision of this section authorizing the court to dismiss an action brought thereunder in forma pauperis if satisfied that the alleged cause of action is frivolous or malicious, applies to cases where the affidavit of poverty is filed simultaneously with the filing of the writ. O'Connell v. Mason, (1904) 132 Fed. 245, 65 C. C. A. 541, affirming (1903) 127 Fed. 435.

"Brought under."—An action is "brought under" this section when the filing of the writ, declaration, and affidavit is simultaneous. O'Connell v. Mason, (1903) 127 Fed. 435, affirmed (1904) 132 Fed. 245, 65 C. C. A. 541.

Assignment of attorney. — Where plaintiff had secured counsel under a contract for a contingent fee, who had commenced the suit, filed pleadings, and prosecuted the case through two mistrials, plaintiff was not thereafter entitled, on the making of an application for security for costs, to an order rescinding his contract with his attorney and permitting him to sue in forma pauperis and to the assignment of counsel by the court. Phillips v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1907) 153 Fed. 795.

Dismissal of action when plea of poverty found untrue. — Where, on a rule to give security for costs, a plaintiff has interposed an affidavit of poverty, the action will be subsequently dismissed, on a rule taken for that purpose, where it is shown by the proofs that the allegation of poverty is not true. The plaintiff, having invoked the provisions of the statute relieving from the requirement to give security for costs, is bound by its other provisions, which require the court to dismiss the action if the plea of poverty is found to be untrue, and cannot interpose the constitutional right to trial by jury thereto. Woods v. Bailey, (1903) 122 Fed. 967.

COUNTERFEITING AND FORGING.

Vol. II, p. 299, sec. 5415.

Intent. — In a prosecution under this section for passing false or forged national bank notes, knowledge that they were falsely made is an essential element of the offense, and there must be some evidence of such knowledge, circumstantial or otherwise, aside from proof merely that the spurious note was passed. Gallagher v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1906) 144 Fed. 87.

Unauthorized signing of bank notes. — The unauthorized signing of names to notes of a national bank, purporting to be those of the president and cashier, constitutes the crime of forging such notes, under this section, whether the names so signed are in fact those of the president and cashier or of fictitious persons. Logan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1903) 123 Fed. 291.

Effect of statute making forged notes redeemable.—The fact that national bank notes to which the signatures have been forged, and which have been put in circulation, are made redeemable by statute, Act July 28, 1892, 27 Stat. L. 322, ch. 317, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 129, does not relieve one who forges the names of the president and cashier of a national bank to genuine but unsigned notes from the crime of forging such notes, as defined in section 5415. Logan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1903) 123 Fed. 291.

Vol. II, p. 300, sec. 5418.

Offense against civil service. — An actual financial or property loss need not be charged or proved in order to make out a cause under this section of forging vouchers required upon examination by the Civil Service Commission of the United States, certifying to the character, physical capacity, etc., of the applicant, and presenting the same to the commission. U. S. v. Plyler, (1911) 222 U. S. 15, 32 S. Ct. 6. See also U. S. v. Curley, (1903) 122 Fed. 738, affirmed (C. C. A. 1904) 130 Fed. 1.

Sufficiency of instruments to form basis of charge. - When a false instrument or affidavit is so palpably and absolutely invalid that it cannot defraud or inflict loss or injury under any circumstances, it may not form the basis of a charge of forging it, or of uttering it, or of transmitting it to the officer to defraud the United States. But if under any contingency it may have the effect to deceive and defraud, it is sufficient to found a conviction of such an offense upon. Such an instrument or affidavit is sufficient if it is apparently valid on its face, although extrinsic facts may exist that would render it void or ineffective if genuine. It is not in-dispensable to a conviction for transmitting a forged affidavit to an officer to defraud the United States, or to a conviction of forgery, or of uttering a forged instrument, that the affidavit, the forgery, or the uttering shall be sufficient in itself, without other evidence or acts, to win the controversy or to accomplish the object of the wrongful act. It is enough that it may under some contingency aid to bring about that result. Neff v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 165 Fed. 273.

Homestead application. — In U. S. v. Mc-Kinley, (1903) 127 Fed. 166, it was held that the forgery of homestead applications and affidavits, with intent to thereby obtain title to public lands of the United States, constituted an offense, under this section, although the land was described as "in township 24 south of range I east," without naming the meridian, where in fact all the townships in the state were numbered from the same meridian, and the description was therefore sufficient to identify the lands to the officers acting on the papers, and such papers were capable of effecting the intended fraud.

Forged instruments erroneously received in evidence. — A forged instrument or affidavit regarding a material fact erroneously received in evidence by the officers of a local land office in the trial of a claim to land within their jurisdiction may deceive them and defraud the United States, and hence may form the basis of a conviction under section 5418, because a patent issued upon it by the land department would be impervious to collateral attack, and the United States would be estopped from avoiding it and from recovering the land even by a direct attack after the title to it passed to an innocent purchaser. If the land and the claim were beyond the jurisdiction of the land department, the transmission of such an affidavit to its officers could not defraud the United States nor form the basis of a conviction under that section. Neff v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 165 Fed. 273.

Separate offenses. - This section covers three offenses: First, the making of any forged or counterfeit deed or other writing for the purpose of obtaining any sum of officers; second, the uttering of any such forged or counterfeit paper with intent to defraud the United States, knowing it to have been so forged; third, the transmitting or presenting to any office or officer of the government any such writing, with knowledge that it is false or forged, with intent to defraud the United States. Such offenses are separate and distinct, and proof that a defendant forged papers purporting to trans-fer the right to an additional homestead, which is a vendible right, and sold and delivered the same to another for a considera#### tion paid to him and without any agreement or understanding with the purchaser with respect to the use to be made of them will not support an indictment under the third subdivision of the section, for transmitting such papers or procuring them to be transmitted to a land office with intent to defraud the United States. U.S. r. Fout, (1903) 123 Fed. 625.

Forging of affidavit by pensioner contesting wife's claim to half of pension. — The forgery of an affidavit by a pensioner, to be used in contesting his deserted wife's claim for one-half of his pension, as authorized by statute (Act March 3, 1899, ch. 460, sec. 1, 30 Stat. L. 1379, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 673), is not an offense within this section. U.S. r. Swan, (1904) 131 Fed. 140.

Vol. II, p. 305, sec. 5430.

Construction. — The provision of this section making it a criminal offense for any person to have or retain in his control or possession "after a distinctive paper has been adopted by the Secretary of the Treasury for the obligations and other securities of the United States, any similar paper adapted to the making of any such obligation or other security, except under the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury or some other proper officer of the United States," includes the having in possession without authority of the distinctive paper itself and of similar paper adapted to the making of government obligations and securities; and it is not sufficient to warrant a conviction thereunder to prove that defendant has in possession paper which might be used to make counterfeit obligations or securities, although it might not be adapted to the making of government obligations or securities. Krakowski v. U. S., (1908) 161 Fed. 88, 88 C. C. A. 252.

Vol. II, p. 307, sec. 5431.

Construction. - In U. S. v. Provenzano, (1909) 171 Fed. 675, it was held that it is a crime under this section either to pass, utter, publish, or sell any counterfeit obligation of the United States, if done with intent to defraud, or to attempt to do so with like intent, or to bring such a counterfeited obligation into the United States, with intent to pass, publish, utter, or sell it, irrespective of an intent to defraud, and also to keep in possession or to conceal any counterfeit obliga-tion or other security of the United States with like intent.

Separate offenses. — Under this section a person may be convicted of a separate offense for each one of the obligations therein described which he keeps in possession with intent to pass. Logan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1903)

123 Fed. 291.

Note of state bank.—In U. S. v. Beebe, (1906) 149 Fed. 618, it was held that a person could not be convicted of passing a counterfeit United States note under this section where the note passed was a genuine note issued by a state bank, unaltered, although it may have been worthless and may have #### had some resemblance by reason of its color to a United States note.

The words "intent to pass, utter, or sell," in this section prohibiting the bringing into the United States, with intent to pass, publish, utter, or sell, any forged obligation of the United States, means to dispose of the same as genuine, and thus defraud the taker or takers. U. S. v. Provenzano, (1909) 171 Fed. 675.

The words "with like intent," as used in the part of this section prohibiting the bring-ing into the United States, with intent to pass, publish, utter, or sell, or keep in possession or conceal, any falsely made, forged, counterfeited, or altered obligation of the United States, refers only to the intent to defraud, and not to the intent to pass, publish, utter, or sell, so that an indictment charging possession with knowledge of the counterfeit character of the obligation was not defective for failure to charge an intent to pass, publish, utter, or sell the same, in addition to an intent to defraud. U. S. v. Provenzano, (1909) 171 Fed. 675.

Vol. II, p. 310, sec. 5457.

"Falsely." — In Kaye v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 177 Fed. 147, it was held that the adverb "falsely" in the opening line of the section qualifies only the verb "makes," since the verbs "forges" and "counterfeits" carry in themselves the idea of falsity, and hence the intent to defraud is only an element of the offense of having possession with intent to use, etc.

Vol. II, p. 314, sec. 1.

Intent. — In Kaye v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 177 Fed. 147, it was held that this section establishes two offenses, to wit, the making and having in possession any mold, etc., and that the intent is material only with reference to the having of such things in possession, and not as to the making thereof.

Indictment. — An indictment under the first clause of this section which makes it a criminal offense to make any die, hub, or mold in the likeness of any die, hub, or mold designed for the coining of any of the coins of the United States "without authority from the Secretary of the Treasury," must aver the want of such authority, and a general averment that the die, hub, or mold was "unlawfully and feloniously" made by defendant is not sufficient. Wroclawsky v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 183 Fed. 312.

CRIMES AND OFFENSES.

Vol. II, p. 321, sec. 1014.

Prosecution by information. — This section relates to preliminary examinations and has no application to prosecutions by information. U. S. v. Baumert, (1910) 179 Fed. 735.

Issuance of subpoenas. — Under R. S. sec. 1014, which authorizes United States commissioners to act as examining and committing magistrates in criminal cases in any state "agreeably to the usual mode of process against offenders in such state," a commissioner in New York, sitting as a magistrate, has power to issue subpænas for witnesses, criminal magistrates of the state being given such power by statute; but under Code Crim. Proc. N. Y., sec. 618, which in effect provides that no person shall be obliged to attend as a witness out of the county of his residence upon a subpœna issued by a magistrate unless on an order indorsed thereon by a court or judge on a showing made, a commissioner has no power to compel the attendance of a witness by a subpæna issued by him at the instance of a defendant, and served outside of the county where the hearing takes place, unless an order therefor is obtained from a federal court or judge in conformity to the state practice. U. S. v. Beavers, (1903) 125 Fed. 778.

Justice of peace.—A justice of the peace in a state has power, and it is his duty, upon complaint being made to him of the commission of a crime in the Indian Territory, to issue a warrant for the apprehension of the offender. Roberts v. Brown, (1906) 43 Tex. Civ. App. 206, 94 S. W. 388.

Civ. App. 206, 94 S. W. 388.

Validity of bond. — Under this section all proceedings for holding an accused person to answer to a criminal charge before a court of the United States are assimilated to those under the laws of the state in which the proceedings take place, and the sufficiency of a bail bond taken in such proceedings is to be determined by the law of the state. U. S. v. Zarafonitis, (C. C. A. 1907) 150 Fed. 97, 10 Ann. Cas. 290.

Review by habeas corpus. — In a habeas corpus proceeding for the discharge of a prisoner committed by a commissioner under this section, to be held for trial for an offense against the United States, the court will not review the finding of the commissioner where the evidence is conflicting, but if it finds that all the evidence taken together does not support a finding of probable cause the commissioner's ruling may be disregarded and the defendant discharged. Pereles v. Weil, (1907) 157 Fed. 419.

Indian Territory. — In Simon v. U. S., (1903) 4 Ind. Ter. 688, 76 S. W. 280, it was held that this section relative to ball in criminal cases had no force in Indian Territory, it being inconsistent with Mansf. Dig., ch. 46, Ind. Ter. Ann. Stat. 1899, ch. 20, and where one was arrested and committed in the central district of the Indian Territory, and gave ball for appearance in the United States court for the southern district, it was held to be proper that an action on the ball should be commenced in the southern district, and summons therein served in the central district.

In Douglass v. Stahl, (1903) 71 Ark. 236, 72 S. W. 568, it was held that the United States courts for the districts of Indian Territory were courts of the United States within this section.

Not applicable to Porto Rico. — In re Kopel,

(1906) 148 Fed. 505.

REMOVAL OF ACCUSED TO TRIAL DISTRICT.

"Offense against the United States."—A conspiracy to violate the "bucket shop" law, Act March 1, 1909, ch. 233, 35 Stat. 670, of the District of Columbia, is an offense against the United States within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Campbell, (1910) 179 Fed. 762.

The District of Columbia is a district of the United States within the meaning of R. S. section 1014, authorizing the removal for trial of a person charged with an offense against the United States to the federal district where the trial is to be had, although this section was taken from the Judiciary Act of 1879, when the District of Columbia was not in existence. Benson v. Henkel, (1905) 198 U. S. 1, 25 S. Ct. 569, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 919; U. S. v. Hyde, (1904) 132 Fed. 545, affirmed (1905) 199 U. S. 62, 25 S. Ct. 760, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 90.

The Supreme Court of the District of Columbia must be deemed a "court of the United States" within the meaning of this section, authorizing the removal of a person charged with an offense against the United States cognizably by a court of the United States to the federal district where the trial is to be, in view of the Act of June 22, 1873, 18 Stat. at L. 193, ch. 396, making applicable to the court of the district the sections of the original Judiciary Act from which section 1014 was taken, and of the powers given to that court as a court of the United States by D. C. Code, 31 Stat. at L. 1189, ch. 854, making applicable to the district all general Acts of Congress "not locally inapplicable." Benson v. Henkel, (1905) 198 U. S. 1, 25 S. Ct. 569, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 919.

Preliminary hearing. - Though numerous officers are given authority by this section to hold the preliminary hearing of one arrested for removal to another district for trial, it is preferable that he should be taken before the nearest United States commissioner, who should first be reasonably satisfied as to the identity of accused, and should then fix his bail, or if he is charged with a nonbailable offense, or cannot or refuses to give bail, should commit him to await the action of the judge of the district as to awarding a war-U. S. v. Yarborough, rant of removal. (1903) 122 Fed. 293.

In an examination before a commissioner under this section of a person charged with an offense against the United States in another district, it is necessary to determine whether such an offense has been committed, and whether there is probable cause to believe the defendant guilty. Pereles v. Weil, (1907) 157 Fed. 419.

Indictment. - In Price v. Henkel, (1910) 216 U. S. 488, 30 S. Ct. 257, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 581, it was held that allegations charging a conspiracy by which an employee in the bureau of statistics in the department of agriculture was to give his co-conspirators advance information of the official cotton crop reports, and a conspiracy to bribe such employee for the same purpose, sufficiently show, for the purposes of a removal, under this section, to the District of Columbia for trial. the commission within the district of offenses against the United States. To the same effect, see Haas v. Henkel, (1910) 216 U. S. 462, 30 S. Ct. 250, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 569.

One good count in an indictment under which a trial might be held in the federal district to which a removal is sought is enough to support an order for such removal in a habeas corpus proceeding. Price v. Henkel, (1910) 216 U. S. 488, 30 S. Ct. 257, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 581.

Indictment prima facie. — In proceedings to remove a federal prisoner for trial to the district where the offense charged was alleged to have been committed, the indictment is prima facie evidence of the commission of the offense. Beavers v. Henkel, (1904) 194 U. S. 73, 24 S. Ct. 605, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 882; In re 73, 24 S. Ct. 605, 48 C. S. (11. ed.) 882; 18 Fe Runkle, (1903) 125 Fed. 996; 18 re Benson, (1904) 130 Fed. 486, affirmed (1905) 198 U. S. 1, 25 S. Ct. 569, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 919; Pereles v. Weil, (1907) 157 Fed. 419; U. S. v. Barber, (1907) 157 Fed. 889. It is not overcome by a bare denial under oath by the accused that he committed the offense charged. Mexican Nat. Coal, etc., Co. r. Frank, (1907) 154 Fed. 217; U. S. v. Campbell, (1910) 179 Fed. 762.

In proceedings to remove a federal prisoner for trial to the district where the alleged crime was committed, it was held that the fact that evidence introduced failed to establish facts sufficient to constitute the offense charged did not impair the credit of the indictment, nor entitle accused to a discharge, since there may have been other and more persuasive evidence before the grand jury than was offered in such proceeding. In re Benson, (1904) 130 Fed. 486, affirmed (1905) 198 U. S. 1, 25 S. Ct. 569, 49 U. S. (L. ed.)

Indictment not conclusive. - Evidence tending to show that no offense triable in the federal District Court to which the accused is sought to be removed has been committed by him in that district, cannot be excluded in the removal proceedings, on the theory that a certified copy of the indictment and proof of the identity of the party accused furnish conclusive evidence of probable cause. Tinsley v. Treat, (1907) 205 U. S. 20, 27 S. Ct. 430, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 689.

Sufficiency of indictment.—The commissioner holding the preliminary hearing of one arrested for removal to another district for trial should consider whether the indictment or complaint, in substance, leges an offense against the United States, resolving doubts in favor of the government, but should leave to the judges of the district questions as to the jurisdiction of the tribunal to which removal is sought. U. S. v. Yarborough, (1903) 122 Fed. 293. Of similar effect is In re Benson, (1904) 130 Fed. 486, affirmed (1905) 198 U. S. 1, 25 S. Ct. 569, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 919.

Technical objections. - So far as respects technical objections, the sufficiency of an indictment is not a matter of inquiry in proceedings for the removal, under Rev. Stat., sec. 1014, to another federal district for trial, of a person there charged with an offense against the United States, but is to be determined by the court in which the indictment was found. Beavers v. Henkel, (1904) 194 U. S. 73, 24 S. Ct. 605, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 882; In re Benson, (1904) 131 Fed. 968.

Impeachment of indictment. - The sufficiency of the indictment as evidence of probable cause in proceedings for the removal to another federal district for trial, of a person there charged with an offense against the United States, cannot be impeached (if impeachable at all) by evidence tending to show that the grand jury did not have testimony before it sufficient to justify its action. Beavers v. Henkel, (1904) 194 U. S. 73, 24 8. Ct. 605, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 882.

Different counts charging offenses in different places. — Where, in proceedings to remove a federal prisoner to the District of Columbia for trial, certain counts of the indictment alleged offenses committed there, it was held to be immaterial that other counts and the evidence in such proceeding disclosed offenses committed in another state. In re Benson, (1904) 130 Fed. 486, affirmed (1905) 198 U. S. 1, 25 S. Ct. 569, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 919.

Application for warrant. — It is preferable that application for warrant of arrest of one for removal to another district for trial should be made to the nearest United States commissioner. U. S. v. Yarborough, (1903) 122 Fed. 293.

Arrest. — A person found in one district, wanted for trial in another district for an offense against the United States, should, on a warrant issued in the district where he is found, be arrested (1) where an indictment has been found against him in the other district; (2) where on examining trial he has been held over by the committing magistrate in the other district to stand trial; (3) where a bench warrant has been issued for his arrest by a federal court of another district; (4) where a verified complaint of an offense committed by him in another district has been made before a judge or committing magistrate in such other district; and (5) where such verified complaint is made before such officer in the district where accused is found.

U. S. v. Yarborough, (1903) 122 Fed. 293. Probable cause. — A commissioner on the preliminary examination of one arrested for removal to another district for trial may not require evidence of probable cause of guilt, where accused has been previously indicted in the district in which he is wanted, or has had a previous preliminary examination there or in the district from which he has fled, or a bench warrant without an indict-ment has issued for him, but, where there has been merely a complaint made against him before a committing magistrate, he, on offering evidence creating a substantial doubt as to the existence of probable cause to believe him guilty, is entitled to have the government required to furnish further evidence. U. S. v. Yarborough, (1903) 122 Fed. 293. Evidence of probable cause, in proceedings to remove a person to another federal district for trial, afforded by an indictment charging him with an offense against the United States, is not rebutted, even if subject to rebuttal, where the rebuttal testimony is negative and for the most part confined to general state-ments, and the accused claims his privilege, under the state practice, of exemption from eross-examination. Beavers v. Haubert, (1905) 198 U. S. 77, 25 S. Ct. 573, 49 U. S. cross-examination. (L. ed.) 950.

The prima facie case for the removal to another federal district for trial, of a person there charged with an offense against the United States, which is made by the production of certified copies of indictments for con-spiring against the United States, is not overcome by the introduction of copies of indictments found by a court of the district where the accused resides, which lay the locus of the conspiracy in that district. Hass v. Henkel, (1910) 216 U.S. 462, 30 S. Ct. 250, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 569.

In U. S. v. Campbell, (1910) 179 Fed. 762, it was held that probable cause for a finding that persons accused of conspiracy to violate the "bucket shop" law, Act March 1, 1909, ch. 233, 35 Stat. 670, in the District of Columbia, participated in the overt acts committed there, warranted their removal.

Return by commissioner. — The commissioner holding the preliminary examination of one arrested for removal to another district for the trial should transmit to the judge hearing the application for warrant of removal a statement of the proceedings had before him certifying the fact, if it is a fact, that accused admitted his identity, otherwise giving in narrative form the evidence on that subject, certified with the rest of the record, which should include all evidence heard, all papers considered, and a statement of the decision of the commissioner. U. S. v. Yarborough, (1903) 122 Fed. 293.

Issue of warrant. - Under this section authorizing a warrant of removal only where an offender has been committed in a district other than that where the offense is to be tried, a warrant for removal may not be issued before commitment of accused. U.S. v.

Yarborough, (1903) 122 Fed. 293.

Removal from district of residence. person indicted for the same offense in two federal districts, one of which is the district where he resides, may — at least, with the consent of the court of the latter district be removed, under this section, to the other district for the trial of the offense committed there. Hass v. Henkel, (1910) 216 U. S. 462, 30 S. Ct. 250, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 569; Price v. Henkel, (1910) 216 U. S. 488, 30 S. Ct. 257, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 581.

Notice of application for warrant of removal. — One arrested for removal to another district for trial should be given seasonable notice of the time and place when application will be made for the warrant of re-moval, and apprised of his right to be present before the judge and to resist the application, and with the papers laid before the judge should be a return by the marshal showing when and how the notice was given. U. S. v. Yarborough, (1903) 122 Fed. 293.

Successive applications for removal. — The decision of a United States commissioner refusing to commit a prisoner for removal to another federal district for trial on a criminal charge does not render the question of the right to such removal res judicata, but ordinarily, in the absence of special circumstances, it should be held to be conclusive on the same facts. U.S. v. Haas, (1906) 167 Fed. 211.

Local practice not controlling. - Local practice under which one indicted for a crime is not entitled to a preliminary examination prior to the trial on the merits has no application to the proceedings under this section, for the arrest and removal to another federal district for trial of a person there charged with an offense against the United States.
Tinsley v. Treat, (1907) 205 U. S. 20, 27 S.
Ct. 430, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 689.

Right to speedy trial. - Constitutional rights of the accused to a speedy trial of the indictments pending against him in a federal Circuit Court are not violated by the prosecution, with the consent of that court, of proceedings to remove the accused to another federal district for the trial of an indictment there found against him. Beavers v. Haubert, (1905) 198 U. S. 77, 25 S. Ct. 573, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 950.

Effect of pending indictment in district from which removal is sought. — The prosecution of proceedings to remove to another federal district for trial a person there charged with an offense against the United States is not an unlawful interference with the jurisdiction of the federal Circuit Court in whose custody the accused is then held to await the trial of indictments pending against him in that court, where such proceedings are had with the consent of that court. Beavers s. Haubert, (1905) 198 U. S. 77, 25 S. Ct. 573, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 950.

Vol. II. p. 334. [Marshal to take prisoner to nearest officer.]

Extradition proceedings. - Under this Act a person arrested for extradition must be brought before the nearest court commissioner or the nearest judicial officer having jurisdiction, for a hearing, commitment, or taking bail for trial, notwithstanding those parts of the Act of Aug. 12, 1848, ch. 167, 9 Stat. L. 302, and of R. S. sec. 5270. 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 68, which provide for bringing the accused in extradition proceedings before the justice, judge, or commissioner who issued the warrant of arrest. Pettit v. Walshe, (1904) 194 U. S. 205, 24 S. Ct. 658, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 938.

Vol. II, p. 337, sec. 1024.

Election of counts. - Where the different counts of an indictment, while charging different offenses, all relate to the same transaction, so that the evidence offered to sustain one is also admissible under the others, the court may properly refuse to require the government to elect between them. McGregor v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 134 Fed. 187. Election of counts. — The government cannot be required to elect between counts of an indictment which charge misdemeanors of the same class, although under some of the counts the punishment may be imprisonment in the penitentiary; but under this section such counts may be joined and tried together. Hartman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1909) 168

Fed. 30.

"Which may be properly joined."—It is not intended by the phrase "which may be properly joined" to limit the joinder or consolidation to charges which might have been joined at common law, but merely to vest the trial court with discretion to refuse to permit a joinder or consolidation where it would prevent a fair trial or be unjust to the defendant. Dolan  $\tau$ . U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 133 Fed. 440.

Offenses held to have been properly joined. - Separate indictments against the same defendants, charging severally conspiracy to defraud the United States, embezzlement from the United States, and presenting false claims against the United States, where the alleged object of all of the acts charged was the misappropriation of a fund appropriated by Congress to be expended in a specified way, relate to the same transaction, within the meaning of this section, and may properly be consolidated for trial thereunder, where it will facilitate the trial and will not be to the prejudice of defendants. U.S. v. Greene, (1906) 146 Fed. 781.

In Dillard v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1905) 141 Fed. 303, it was held that counts charging a defendant with the forgery of Chinese du-plicate certificates, with the uttering of such forged certificates, and with violating R. S. sec. 3169, 3 Fed. Stat. Annot. 594, as an officer in the revenue service, by negligently and designedly permitting the commission of such offenses, may properly be joined in the same indictment, since they cover "acts or transactions connected together."

Charges against the same defendants for conspiracy to defraud the United States, based on R. S. sec. 5440, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 247, and for receiving money from their alleged co-conspirator for aiding to procure a contract from the government, and for services rendered in relation to the same, based on sections 1781, 1782, 1 Fed. Stat. Annot. 712, 6 Fed. Stat. Annot. 606, defendants being clerks in a department, and such charges all relating to the same transaction, were held to have been properly joined in different counts in the same indictment under section 1024. McGregor v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 134 Fed. 187.

Under this section counts for using the mails to defraud in violation of section 5480, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 973, and for conspiracy to commit such offense, under section 5440. 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 247, where based upon the same transaction, may be joined in one indictment. U. S. v. Clark, (1903) 125 Fed. 92.

In U. S. v. Cardish, (1906) 145 Fed. 242, it was held that two counts, each charging the same defendants with the burning of a different building, may be joined in an indictment for arson.

Indictments held to have been properly coasolidated. - Indictments charging offences of the same nature and degree and based on the same statute may be consolidated for trial under this section. Krause v. U. S., (C. C.

A. 1906) 147 Fed. 442.
Indictments against the same person for conspiracy to defraud the United States by means of illegal entries of public lands by different persons are for the same class of offenses and may properly be consolidated for trial. Olson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 133

Fed. 849.

In Dolan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 133 Fed. 440, it was held that separate indictments against the same persons under R. S. sec. 5427, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 213, each charging them with having aided and abetted a different person in using a false certificate of citizenship as evidence of a right to vote, the acts charged being the furnishing of such false certificates for the use of such persons by the defendants, all of which were made by them at the same time, charge acts or transactions connected together, and may properly be consolidated under this section.

This section authorizes the consolidation for trial of indictments for using the mails to defraud under section 5480, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 973, notwithstanding the fact that such indictments charge offenses not committed within the same six months and which could not be joined in one indictment under the latter section, and in the aggregate more than the three offenses which may be so joined. Booth v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 154 Fed. 836.

Peremptory challenges when indictments consolidated. — When a number of indictments against the same defendants charge similar offenses of the same degree, based on the same statute, and which might have been charged in separate counts of the same indictments, their consolidation for trial places them in the same category as if they were separate counts of one indictment, and the defendants are entitled to only the same number of peremptory challenges. Krause v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1906) 147 Fed. 442. Discretion of court.— The question of the propriety of joinder in a given case is left to the discretion of the court. U. S. v. Eastman, (1904) 132 Fed. 551.

For other cases under this section, see U. S. v. Eddy, (1905) 134 Fed. 114; Ew p. Peeke, (1906) 144 Fed. 1016.

Vol. II, p. 340, sec. 1025.

Immateriality in form of averment. - This section precludes the necessity that any one of the essential averments in an indictment shall be made in any particular form, no matter how that form may be sanctioned by precedent and long usage. If the averment appears in any form, or may by fair construction be found anywhere within the text of the indictment, it is sufficient. U.S. v. Howard, (1904) 132 Fed. 325.
Omission of date. — In U. S. v. Howard,

(1904) 132 Fed. 325, it was held that an indictment for subornation of perjury under R. S. sec. 5393, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 705, which charged that the offense was committed "on - day of December, 1893," was defective, but, the date not being of the essence of the offense, the defect was one of form only, and was cured by section 1025. Grand jurors not qualified.—Statutory disqualifications of grand jurors cannot be regarded as a mere defect or imperfection in form within the meaning of this section. Crowley v. U. S., (1904) 194 U. S. 461, 24 S. Ct. 731, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 1075.

Negative pregnants. — In Horn v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1910) 182 Fed. 721, it was held that the fact that denials of the truth of alleged false representations in an indictment were in the form of negative pregnants did not render the indictment fatally defective under this section.

Repugnancy. — An indictment for spiracy to defraud by the use of the mails, in violation of R. S. sec. 5480, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 973, as amended is not bad for repugnancy because it charges in the same count that the defendant conspired to defraud "by dealing and pretending to deal" in what is commonly called "green articles" and "spurious Treasury notes." Lehman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1903) 127 Fed. 41.

Duplicity. — Where in a prosecution for cutting timber from the public domain, defendant was not prejudiced by the fact that the indictment charged that he cut the timber with intent unlawfully to export and with intent to dispose of the same, it was held that the conviction could not be set aside because of such duplicity. Morgan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1906) 148 Fed. 189.

Averment of time. — The averment of time in an indictment is a matter of form, not generally material, and in view of this section as well as under the Oregon statute (adopted by rule in the federal courts in that state), which provides that the precise time need not be stated, it has been held that an indictment alleging the time of commission of the offense as "on or about" a day named is sufficient, except in cases where the time is an ingredient of the offense. U.S. v. Mc-Kinley, (1903) 127 Fed. 168.

Sufficiency of pleas.—It is not essential that a plea to an indictment in a federal court for irregularities in the procedure should aver that the matters therein set forth were prejudicial to defendant, which is merely a legal conclusion; but facts showing such prejudice must be averred and proved under this section, which applies as well to irregularities in procedure as to defects of form in the indictment. U. S. v. Cobban. (1904) 127 Fed. 713.

Following language of statute. — Where an indictment for combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law (Act July 2, 1890, ch. 647, sec. 3, 26 Stat. 209, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 344), was uncertain as to some of its allegations, owing to the fact that the offense was first charged in the language of the statute, and the purposes and objects of the conspiracy were not fully stated until after the overt acts were described, it was held that the defect was one of form, and not of substance, not prejudicial to defendant, and therefore immaterial under this section. Tribolet v. U. S., (1908) 11 Ariz. 436, 95 Pac. 85.

Indictment not duly found and presented. This section has no application to an indictment not duly found and presented; the defect in such case not being one of form, but of substance. Renigar v. U. S., (C. C. A.

1909) 172 Fed. 646.
Particularity. — A want of particularity in describing the offense intended to be charged by an indictment cannot successfully be urged as a ground for reversing a conviction, where such indictment specifically states the elements of the offense with sufficient particularity fully to advise the defendant of the crime charged, and to enable a conviction, if had, to be pleaded in bar of any subsequent prosecution for the same offense, in view of this section. New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1909) 212 U. S. 481, 29 S. Ct. 304, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 613. Indictments held sufficient. — Under this section, providing that, so far as possible, consistent with assuring accused a fair and impartial trial, the court shall disregard form, imperfection of statement, and unimportant defects which do not reasonably tend to prejudice accused, an indictment is sufficiently certain if it alleges facts sufficient to enable accused to make his defense, and to plead the judgment in bar of any further prosecution for the same offense. Clement v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1906) 149 Fed. 305. An indictment charged that defendants, with others, conspired to obtain from the government certain specified tracts of land open to homestead entry by procuring certain named persons to enter the same by means of false proof in respect to their residence on

Vol. II, p. 344, sec. 1033.

Cases not capital. - Since this section providing that a person indicted for treason or a capital offense shall be furnished with a list of witnesses, to be produced three days before the trial on the indictment for treason and two days before the trial of any other capital cases, limits such right to trials for treason and capital offenses, it impliedly authorizes the examination of witnesses in trials in the federal courts for lesser crimes without such witnesses being previously disclosed to accused. Balliet v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 129

Vol. 2. p. 345, sec. 730.

Jurisdiction of state. — A state may extend its orders for the distance of one marine league from low-water mark, and make the region so annexed as much a portion of the state as any other part of its territory. v. Newark Meadows Imp. Co., (1909) 173 Fed. 426.

District of jurisdiction. — In U. S. v. Newth, (1906) 149 Fed. 302, it was held that a District Court of the United States was not deprived of jurisdiction to try a defendant, arand improvement of the land, and with respect to the intent with which and the purpose for which the entries were made, and in pursuance of such conspiracy and to effect the object thereof defendants caused and procured C. to make the homestead proof in respect to the land entered by him, and the final affidavit required by homestead claimants, including a statement that his family consisted of himself and wife, and that they had resided continuously on the land since first establishing residence thereon, which proof was subscribed by C. and certified by defendant W., and that each of the defendants knew that the proof was false, etc. It was held that the indictment was sufficient. Jones v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 162 Fed. 418.

In Rinker v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1907) 151 Fed. 755, it was held that an indictment, under R. S. sec. 3893, 5 Fed. Stat. Annot. 839, as amended by Act of Sept. 26, 1888, ch. 1039, sec. 2, 25 Stat. 496, for depositing an obscene, lewd, and lascivious letter in the mails, was not bad because it alleged that the offense was committed "on or about" a given date, where it showed that but a short time elapsed between the writing of the letter and the finding of the indictment; the defect being one of form only, by which the defendant was not prejudiced.

For other cases under this section, Pooler v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 127 Fed. 509; Pooler v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 127 Fed. 509; O'Hara v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1904) 129 Fed. 551; Brown v. U. S., (C. C. Prosecutions in Alaska. - This section applies only to treason and capital cases tried in the courts of the United States, and not to felonies for which prosecutions are had in a territorial court of Alaska, under the Alaska Code of Criminal Procedure. rested within the district, charged with the commission of an offense on board an American vessel on the high seas, under this section, which provides that such offenses shall be cognizable in the district where the offender is found or into which he is first brought. because such defendant was first arrested in Alaska, the courts of which are not vested with jurisdiction to try offenses not committed within their territorial jurisdiction.

Place of apprehension. - Under this section providing that the trial of all offenses committed upon the high seas shall be in the district where the offender is found or into which he is first brought, an offender is to be tried in the district where he is apprehended, unless he is taken into custody while at sea, in which case he is to be tried in the district into which he is first brought. But to be "brought" into a district within the meaning of the statute, one must be first apprehended, and it is not enough that he merely "arrive" in the district. Thus, where an offense was committed on the high seas and the offender was not taken into custody until he was found and apprehended in one of the districts of California, it was held that he must be tried in that district, although the vessel on which the offense was committed had previously touched at Hawaii, and a complaint was filed and a warrant of arrest—which was returned unexecuted because of the offender's departure from the district of Hawaii before its attempted service—was issued there. Offense committed in several districts.—An offense against the United States committed in more than one district is, under this section, cognizable in either district. Hass v. Henkel, (1910) 216 U. S. 462, 30 S. Ct. 249, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 569.

slaughter, provided there is evidence in the case to sustain such a verdict. U. S. v. Densmore, (1904) 12 N. M. 99, 75 Pac. 31.

Construction.—This section is not referable, for the purpose of ascertaining the state laws applicable, to the date when it was first enacted, in 1825, but to the date of the adoption of the Revised Statutes, in 1878, by sections 5595 and, 5596, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 140-142, of which the prior act was superseded and repealed. In no event could such section relate back to an earlier date than April 5, 1866, when the old act was substantially re-enacted. U. S. v. Tucker, (1903) 122 Fed. 518.

This section and Act July 7, 1898, ch. 576, 30 Stat. 71, the former of which provides that in case of any offense committed in any place ceded to and under the jurisdiction of the United States, "which offense is not prohibited or the punishment thereof is not specially provided for by any law of the United States, such offense shall be liable to and receive the same punishment as the laws of the state in which such place is situated now in force provide for the like offense," and the latter of which contains similar provisions respecting offenses committed in any place jurisdiction over which has been retained by the United States or ceded to it, etc., "the punishment for which offense is not provided for by any law of the United States,' are neither of them limited to the fixing of punishment for offenses expressly created by the federal laws, but they apply to and make punishable any act committed in such places not so provided for, but which is an offense under the laws of the state. U. S. v. Franklin, (1909) 174 Fed. 163.

Vol. II, p. 356, sec. 2.

Construction. — Punishment in the federal courts as an offense against the United States, but only in the way and to the extent that such offense would have been punishable if the territory embraced by the government reservation where the crime was committed had remained subject to the jurisdiction of the state, is what was intended by this section adopting such punishment for offenses committed in places under the exclusive jurisdiction and control of the United States as the laws of the state in which such places are situated now provide for a like offense, the punishment therefor not being otherwise provided for by any law of the United States. Delegation of power by Congress. Franklin v. U. S., (1910) 216 U. S. 559, 30 S. Ct. 434, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 615, it was held that the claim that power of legislation is unconstitutionally delegated to the state legislatures by the act adopting such punishment for offenses committed in places under the exclusive jurisdiction and control of the United States as the laws of the state in which such places are situated "now provide" for a like offense, the punishment therefor not being otherwise provided for by any law of the United States, is too clearly unfounded to serve as the basis of a writ of error from a federal Supreme Court to a Circuit Court.

Plea of limitation by demurrer. — A defendant indicted for an offense against the United States, not capital, cannot avail himself of the defense of the three-year limitation by demurrer, where the indictment does not show on its face that defendant is not within the exception of persons fleeing from justice created by section 1045. In such case the proper practice is for defendant to file a special plea in the nature of a plea in abatement, or to avail himself of the defense by evidence under the general issue. U. S. v. Brace, (1906) 143 Fed. 703.

Offenses subsequently created. - This section applies to all misdemeanors constituting offenses against the United States, whenever added by Congress to the list of statutory crimes. U. S. v. Central Vermont R. Co., (1907) 157 Fed. 291.

Law limiting time in which grand jury must act. — In U. S. v. Cadarr, (1905) 197 U. S. 475, 25 S. Ct. 487, 49 U. S. Code, sec. 939, that under such circumstances, unless the court enlarged the time, "the prosecution of such charges shall be deemed to have been abandoned, and the accused shall be set free or his bail discharged, as the case may be," but that this section must be deemed to operate merely as ending the pending prosecution, and not as repealing pro tanto the general statute of limitations contained in section 1044.

Conspiracy. - A special plea of the statute of limitations is not good as against an indictment charging conspiracy to restrain or monopolize trade, in violation of the Sherman Act of July 2, 1890, 7 Fed. Stat. Annot. 336, by improperly excluding a competitor from business, although the conspiracy is alleged to have been formed on a special date, which was more than three years before the finding of the indictment where such indictment, consistently with the other facts, alleges that the conspiracy continued to the date of its presentment. Stat. Annot. 300, an averment of payment, on certain dates within three years of the filing of the indictment to procure false application, final proof

"Fleeing from justice." - Where a person charged with crime against the United States in the courts of one federal district, when found elsewhere, resists removal to such district, with intent to avoid the jurisdiction and process of the court therein, such action constitutes a fleeing from justice, which, under this section, takes away from him the privilege of pleading the statute of limitations, and, until he submits himself to such jurisdiction, the statute does not run in his favor as against prosecution for any offense charged to have been previously committed in said district. U. S. v. Greene, (1906) 146 Fed. 803, affirmed (C. C. A. 1907) 154 Fed.

Person resisting extradition. - Although, under the extradition treaty of 1890 between Great Britain and the United States and the laws of Canada, a person whose extradition is sought by the United States from the Dominion of Canada has the right to oppose his extradition by legal proceedings, he is nevertheless, during the pendency of such proceedings, a person fleeing from justice, within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Greene, (1906) 146 Fed. 803, affirmed (C. C.

A. 1907) 154 Fed. 401.

To constitute one a "person fleeing from justice," so as to prevent the running of the statute of limitations against a prosecution for a criminal offense against the United States under this section, it is not necessary that he should have left the United States, but it is sufficient that he had left the district in which the offense was committed when it was sought to apprehend him therefor, and was found in another district, in which he did not reside, under circumstances indicating a purpose to evade the authority of the courts having jurisdiction. Greene v. U. S., (1907) 154 Fed. 401, 85 C. C. A. 251.
